Better than the law of 1890? There were mistakes in the law—no great bill with 3,000 items can be passed without having some mistakes—but, my countrymen, whatever mistakes there were in the law, the over errors crept into that law, every one of them was in favor of the American home, the American citizen, the American factory, the American farm. But of the 600 industries discovered in the law of 1894 not one of them is in favor of the American people. They have not even, by accident or blunder, made any mistakes in favor of American enterprise, American industries or American homes.

Ah, but they say: "Our tariff law is better than the Republican law because it reduces duties." So it does reduce duties. Governor McKinley then explained, clearly and simply, that reduced duties means greater imports, and every article imported displaced their equivalent product, and when home production decreased, workmen became idle, business became stagnant, and hard times speedily resulted.

When you diminish the tariff you do it for only one purpose—that is, to encourage importation. What is it done for? That is the objection they make to the law of 1892, that we encouraged importation. Well, we did. We discouraged the importation of every product that we could produce at home that we might find employment for our labor at home, and give to the farmers and to the United States consumers of the products of their farms.

Cheap Things and Cheap Times.

Ah, but they say we get things a little cheaper. In three months this country or in six months? Does the farmer want less price for his wheat, or his corn, or his barley, or his sheep, or his stock? Are not prices low enough, farmers of Minnesota? Does the merchant want the prices of the articles he sells come down in price? Does the workingman want less wages? Who wants cheap cheap things?

My fellow citizens, nothing is cheap that comes from abroad to the American people [Applause.] No product of agriculture is cheap from abroad if it leaves the American producer to rot in the ground. No manufactured article is cheap to this country if it takes from the workingmen of this country a day's labor. And the old men in this audience, if they will let memory sweep back, will recall that when things are the cheapest men are the poorest, and that when the prices of articles are lowest labor is the hardest to get, and that is the trouble now. But there are a good many people living now who did not live under the old Democratic seasons free trade tariff prior to the war. The old men had the experience and the young men have to have it, and are now enjoying it. And experience, my fellow citizens, after all, is a form of instruction the most efficient and enduring. Sometimes we have to go through the school of adversity. We have been attending that school for the past 18 months. The tuition has been free but the ultimate cost has been very great. It has been a short session, but a hard one. I believe its lessons will be practical and permanent.

Necessities Taxed, Luxuries Free.

Governor McKinley then showed that the new Democratic tariff law reduced duties on whiskey, leaf tobacco and Havanna cigars, which were sarcastically referred to as "prime necessities." The articles on stationary, paintings, pearl buttons, opium for smoking and other "necessities" have been reduced.

Well, now, of what does their free list consist? They put on the free list articles which, according to the importations of the preceding year, would amount to $40,000,000, and $18,000,000 of this was the farmers' wool, of nearly half, $20,000,000 of it was lumber; $5,000,000 or more it was manufactured articles, and $10,000,000 or more of it was paintings and statuary. Your statuary is now free. An article of necessity? But your statuary, an article of luxury, is taxed.

This is not all, my fellow citizens. They have destroyed the splendid commercial treaties made by the administration of President Harrison with the Southern and Central states, made under the provisions of the law of 1890, which opened up the market to the flour, and the incon and the hams of the farmers of the United States; a trade with Cuba that ipcreased $14,000,000 in a single year, principally agricultural products; and with Brazil that increased $6,000,000 in a single year, principally agricultural products.

Lost Confidence Must Be Restored.

My fellow citizens, our chief trouble now is to get confidence back in the people. Our chief embarrassment comes from this lack of confidence, and not from the money of the country. Some people think our trouble is the money. All the money we have got is good. Our trouble is to get it in circulation among the people. The banks are full of money. Money was never less employed than it is today, and what we want is something to set it out. The way to get the money is to create a demand for the labor and the products of the people. For when labor is employed wages are stopped, and wages are one of the chief factors in the distribution of money.

The Democratic party is the most remarkable party in history. It is for anything to get power, and then it is never for anything which got it power. It was for free silver in 1892 in some of the states, and when it used to have the home of representatives, and we had the senate and the presidency, they used to go through the idle ceremony of passing a free silver bill, but since they have got into power and can do with silver as it, what they want to do with it, instead of giving to the country what is in many of the states the leaders of the Democratic party said would be done, they have given to silver the worst blow it ever received.

Well, could you expect, my fellow citizens, any other course? Why, when they pointed? Why, who elected Mr. Cleveland and a Democratic congress? Every body who was dissatisfied voted for him, and everybody who voted for him has been dissatisfied ever since.

Soldiers Are Worthy of National Care.

Not only my fellow citizens, has this administration interrupted the prosperity of the country, but it has to some extent interrupted the patriotism of the country. It has been cutting off and suspending the pensions of the soldiers that the people advocated excessive pensions; but I believe every man who served in our war and was disabled is entitled to a pension from the government of the United States. And I believe that when a soldier has once been put on the pension roll of the government, and that pension granting authority—he must not be put off until after the fullest investigation, in open, broad daylight, and every opportunity given to meet face to face his accusers and the witnesses against him, and then if he is unworthy to be on that roll, every patriotic citizen in the land would approve. But there must be no presumption of fraud against him. Why, they sometimes talk about the soldiers as though they enlisted in the service of their country for good and valuable consideration. No, sir! No, sir, there is not an old soldier before me today, who, when he took an oath to serve his country in war, ever thought of a pension. And certainly he didn't enlist for the paltry pittance that was given him. He enlisted from the purest and the highest motives of patriotism—that no harm might come to the republic. And I am constantly resent, with all the earnestness of my nature, any attempt to rob the tattered veterans of their pensions by the charge of dishonor upon the men who preserved the Union and saved the flag. [No braver or more unselfish army ever lived or ever sembled than ours. And no army was ever engaged in a nobler cause than that one which engaged the volunteer army of the republic.

And $2,000,000 or more of men, when Abraham Lincoln said, "Come and help save the republic," more than 2,000,000 men answered, "I do." And to say that those men went in to loot the country [applause] across the great marble capital at Washington [applause] is to say that splendid review of that magnificent army conducted by the close of the war, stretched across that historic avenue, was a procession of looters large enough to be read by every returning soldier, in these seven years.

"There is one debt that this government can never pay, and that is the debt it owes to the men who saved the Union."

That was the true patriotic sentiment at that time, and it is the true one today. And the voice of this country says that sentiment shall not be abridged.

My fellow citizens, no party can long stand in the way of the prosperity of this country. With all the great natural resources, with the genius and enterprise of the people, no party can long obstruct the pathway of our progress and progress. They may retard it, they may check it, as they have done and are now doing, but the party that interferes with the prosperity of the people will get out of the way of its prosperity. That is the work we are engaged in tonight. That is the work we are engaged in this hour. And every Republican victory yields a step nearer to that splendid confidence and that restoration of prosperity which we left in 1892.

Major McKinley closed his address by appealing to Minnesota to re-elect Governor Nelson and rol up the old-fashioned Minnesota majority for all Republican candidates.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Lee Shaffer and Alphonso Gallmette, her husband, of Polk County, Minnesota, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, bearing date the 1st day of December, 1892, and filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Polk County, Minnesota, on the 2nd day of January, 1893, at 11:45 o'clock a. m. in book 64 of mortgages, on page 437.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of said principal sum of $500.00 and the interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and payable to the owner and holder of said mortgage the sum of $600.00 for principal and interest to date of this notice, and no proceedings have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following described lands and premises covered by said mortgage, to-wit: The south half of the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section thirty-six (36) in township one hundred and forty-eight (148) north of range forty-three (43) west of the fifth principal meridian, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at the front door of the court house in the village of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Thursday, the 29th day of November, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the court house in the village of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Thursday, the 29th day of November, A. D. 1894, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, to pay said debt and the interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and payable to the owner and holder of said mortgage, on said mortgage the sum of $600.00 for principal and interest to date of this notice, and no proceedings have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following described lands and premises covered by said mortgage, to-wit: The south half of the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section thirty-six (36) in township one hundred and forty-eight (148) north of range forty-three (43) west of the fifth principal meridian, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at the front door of the court house in the village of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Thursday, the 29th day of November, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public auction to the highest bidder,

INTO THE GORGE

A Freight on the Rock Island Jumps the Track at Sleepy Hollow, Ia.

THREE KILLED, ONE INJURED.

Soo Limited Goes Through a High Trestle Near Rhinelander, Wis.

SEYMOUR, Ia., Oct. 9.—A westbound fast freight on the Rock Island jumped the track at Sleepy Hollow, a small station near here, at 6 p. m. Twenty freight cars followed the engine into the gorge and Engineer Geraldine Nolan, Fireman Marshall Lower and Head Brakeman Charles E. Demary, all of Trenton, Mo., were instantly killed. Conductor Sam Vainbook was injured.

WORK OF WRECKERS.

Soo Westbound Limited Goes Through a Trestle Near Rhinelander.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 9.—A special to The Wisconsin from Rhinelander, Wis., says: Nothing but unaccountable good luck prevented the worst passenger wreck of the year on the Soo line. The Boston-Minneapolis Limited westbound, which leaves here at 1:40, went through a trestle between Hazelhurst Junction and Brndley. The stringers and piles had been sawed after the eastbound Limited passed the place an hour and forty minutes before. The rails were left with no support, and the engine crashed through. They were going 35 miles an hour and instead of dropping into the opening the engine struck the solid track beyond, and turned clean over, down the embankment. The engineer, James Hatch of Minneapolis, was thrown 20 feet ahead. He sustained a broken leg, bad cuts on the head and badly bruised body. He will recover. Charles Cotterill, the fireman, was pinned under the heavy engine, which was terribly smashed. Up to noon they were still working to release his body. He was instantly killed. The baggage car and sleeper left the track, but none of the occupants were badly hurt. The trestle is some 20 feet high.

EXCEEDS LAST YEAR.

Iron Ore Movement From the Head of the Lakes Is Very Large.

DULUTH, Oct. 9.—Some very heavy transactions in iron lands are being made and the outlook is better on the ranges than in a long time. The movement of ore continues larger than was expected. The ore shipments through the Soo canal to Oct. 1 were over 2,000,000 tons more than for the same period last season, being 6,350,000 tons. Besides Escanaba's shipments have been greater than ever. The ore movement on the lakes amounts to 5,300,000 tons, or within 200,000 of what the lower lake people said in the spring it would be. From now on the movement will be very large. Last month's business was double that of September, 1893, being 1,040,000 tons.

PUSHING THE SURVEY.

The Government Getting Much Data For the Mississippi Canal.

DULUTH, Oct. 9.—Major Clinton B. Sears, the government engineer, has sent out an exploring party under charge of John Krey, a local engineer, to get data for use of the surveying parties on the canal routes, between Lake Superior and the Mississippi river. They will go up the Brule on the south shore of the lake, in Wisconsin, spend a little time around the head waters of the St. Croix, which connect with the Brule, and then return to Lake Superior via the Amnicon river, also in Wisconsin, but close to Superior. Major Sears says he will not explore the St. Croix, as the government has already surveyed it thoroughly.

Whisky Killed Him.

REDWOOD FALLS, Minn., Oct. 9.—Excitement was created in the village of Sanborn when it was discovered that Ed McIlliny, who was employed by the railway company, and working with the surfacing gang, was dead in bed at the hotel. The evening before the man had been on a spree, and for a while it was thought that death might have been caused from injuries received in a row, but the coroner's jury brought in a verdict, "that death came through the excessive use of whisky."

Stubble Fires Do Damage.

IOWA FALLS, Ia., Oct. 9.—A fire set to burn a stubble field just south of Goldfield got beyond control and proved to be a serious matter. Over 200 tons of hay in the stack were consumed, and a number of farmhouses and other buildings were only saved by hard work of the neighborhood. The fire broke out the second day and was only subdued by a shower that prevented further danger.

A Grafton Woman Drowns Herself.

GRAFTON, N. D., Oct. 9.—Mrs. E. Filbean, who had but recently been returned from the Jamestown lunatic asylum, supposed to be cured, drowned herself in Park river. Her body was found in six feet of water. She had been in the asylum about 15 months, but had been in poor health for a number of years. She leaves a husband and three children.

Burned His House.

GRANTSBURG, Wis., Oct. 9.—When John Wansch, the defendant in the trial for shooting his wife's brother, last week, arrived home after the trial, he found his house with all its contents in ashes. He at once returned to this place and will have several persons arrested on a charge of arson.

LORIN W. COLLINS.

Candidate for associate judge of the supreme court is a native of Massachusetts. His father was one of the early settlers of the town of Eden Prairie. Heunepin county, removing his family there in 1854. Young Collins studied law in the office of Smith & Crosby, at Hastings. He enlisted in the Seventh Minnesota infantry and became a first lieutenant. Discharged with his regiment in 1865 he immediately located at St. Cloud, where he practiced law until 1883, and was then appointed district judge to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. James M. McKelvey. At the 1884 election he was elected district judge, and in 1887 was appointed associate judge of the supreme court, a vacancy having occurred upon the decease of Hon. John M. Berry. Judge Collins was elected to the position in 1888, having a majority of 48,895, several thousand more than any other man on the ticket. While practicing law at St. Cloud, he was several times elected county attorney in the democratic county of Stearns, and was also sent to the legislature for the sessions of 1881-1883. No other member of the supreme court, and no other candidate for a place in that court, now does or ever has resided north of the Twin Cities. He is a fine and able ax mark on your ballot after the name of Loren W. Collins.

At the last presidential election Benjamin Harrison was retired from the office of president of the United States by the voice of the people—and now they are sorry that they spoke" in that way and are only waiting for a chance to correct their big mistake. They can partly correct this error next month.

EVERY indication points to a complete and thorough republican victory this fall, but that is no reason why every republican should not vote just as hard to make it overwhelming as he would work in a closer election. The verdict this fall should be emphatic, and it will be if every patriot does his whole duty. Let us "rally on the colors," boys, as in olden times, and make the rout complete.

ONE of the effects of the Wilson tariff bill will be to put a stop to our trading with foreign nations under the reciprocity relations. Guatemala was one with which this country enjoyed a profitable trade, shipping barbed wire and agricultural implements in great quantities, all of which is now cut off. It sometimes requires experience to teach the people a plain truth, and the tariff question seems to be a case in point.

GOV. MCKELVEY met with a magnificent reception in Duluth on Monday, as in fact he does everywhere. Now there is nothing particularly magnetic about Mr. McKinley that calls forth such enthusiastic crowds, but it is owing to the republican principles that he represents and the fact that people were tired of a democratic government and are impatiently waiting a chance to spank their views at the polls. The verdict will be emphatic next month.

KNUTE NELSON is pre-eminently a man of the people. Born of poor parents, he early acquired that habit of self-reliance that has stood him instead so well and made him so valuable as a public official. He is also running on the right platform, a platform guaranteeing equal rights to all with special privileges to none, and he will be re-elected governor next month just as sure as the people are faithful to their own best interests.

JUDGING from surface appearances, populism has nearly lost its grip in these southern counties, for there does not appear to be anything like the enthusiasm that was manifested in the start. But it will not do to bank upon outside appearances always, and in this case there is an undercurrent that will surprise any who may happen to think that the victory is already won. There is yet much hard work to be done before the cobwebs of error are entirely swept away.

THERE to his office-seeking popensities, Ignatius Donnelly is working like a beaver to be elected United States senator, and it is rumored that he is making commonplace with the democrats everywhere it is possible in order to accomplish his object. With all his brilliant attainments Mr. Donnelly is as thoroughly a selfish man as ever lived. The farmers' alliance was formed as a business organization to better the condition of the farmers—something like the grange, and Donnelly, after it had become of sufficient importance, thought he saw a chance to further his political ambitions, so he brought to bear upon it his brilliant attainments and evolved what until he saw that it was getting too big for him to handle, then he strangled it, leading the poor remnant that was left into the people's party. Had he been sincere, earnestly seeking to ameliorate the condition of the farmers there is probably nothing that he could not have had, but farmers are not all fools and they soon caught on to Donnelly.

JUDGE COLLINS OR ANOTHER JUDGE FROM THE TWIN CITIES, WHICH?

IF any man can tell us any good reason why Judge L. W. Collins, one of the most efficient members on the bench, one of the hardest workers and a man from the country should be supplanted by a lawyer from St. Paul (a city that already has the bench and bar by a majority) who has not had one quarter of the experience that Judge Collins has; we say Hauy man can tell what good reason exists for such a change he will do something that has as yet not been done. Take the record of the bench, and Judge Collins has one to be proud of. If he has not handed down more decisions than any other member then we are mistaken; the decisions that he has handed down are sound to the core and accepted as authority. Take the life history of the man and point out if you can one act that would call the blush of shame to the cheek of manhood. If the election depended upon Stearns county, the judge's home county, there would be no question as to the result—he would be elected by an overwhelming majority, and Stearns county is democratic. In that county he has never been beaten for any office for which he was ever nominated, because the people of Stearns county know the thoroughly and respect him accordingly, and if the people of the whole state knew him as well there would not be a shadow of a doubt as to his election, even with the two opposite parties united in the effort to take him from his seat on the bench and give it to a St. Paul politician. The JOURNAL has no doubt as to the election of the whole republican ticket, except possibly the one point, and there is no more important one on the ticket. We believe, however, that the judge will be elected also. If the voters are thoroughly acquainted with all of the reasons why he should be and all do their duty.

POPULIST INCONSISTENCIES.

The Fargo-Argus shows up some of the inconsistencies of the populists on the money question as follows:

During their boasting in hand expression to use in relation to politics, but no other words will fit the statements made in the Barnes County Populist, over the signature E. J. B., as to the circulation of money in the United States. This populistic falsifier, and he appears more brazen than the average of his class, tries to show relation between the alleged reduction in circulation of money in the United States and the falling price of wheat. He states the money in circulation in 1868 to have been $704,756,113, or $21.47 per capita, and presents a table showing steady reduction to $360,260,702, or $8.17 per capita in 1893, and claims a steady corresponding reduction in the price of wheat from $1.49 in 1868 to 53 cents in 1893. But over states the amount of money in circulation in 1868. It was $680,103,601 or $18.39 per capita. His statement is false in every line and figure for every year mentioned. Aug. 1, 1893, the circulation was $24.02 per capita made up as follows: Gold coin, $416,000,000; silver standard dollars, $56,223,989; subsidiary silver, $64,007,129; gold certificates, $87,611,029; silver certificates, $330,188,399; treasury notes, act of July 14, 1890, $143,774,138; United States notes (greenbacks), $334,394,464; currency certificates, $7,855,000; national bank notes, $195,134,397; making a total of $1,011,695,017. In addition to this there was $612,869,632 in the treasury. These are the official figures. They are accepted as true by the financial agents of all countries, by all men engaged in banking or in general business; only the populist writers and speakers ignore them, taking from them sometimes an item here and there which can be tortured into the appearance of fitting their theories. The United States money alone exceed the sum he gives us the money circulation; the silver and silver certificates exceed it and gold by far surpasses it. There is no the of reasoning which justifies his statements; there is no attainable data on which he can base, and yet he is that kind of trash on which those seeking to make populists by their treatment of the money question feed those who listen to them.

HONEST PRINCIPLES NEEDED.

No political party ever presented to the voters a cleaner, better man than the people's party of this state has done in the person of Sidney M. Owen. The republican party recognizes this and fears the result. Attempts have been made already to blacken his character, but it has resulted in failure. No taint of corruption attaches to his name and it may be relied upon that every moment of his life and every part of his career, public and private, have been investigated.

The above, taken from the Norman County Herald, presents one of the stock arguments of the populist papers, that party should be entrusted with the government of the state. They seem to forget that all they have said of the good qualities of Sidney M. Owen as a man, can with equal truth be said of Knute Nelson, and for that matter, of Gen. Geo. L. Becker as well. They ignore the fact that it is party principles and not men that count in this contest. Because Sidney M. Owen is an honest man does not atone quality him for the office for which his party has nominated him, as he must, if elected, carry out the policy of his party as laid down in the platform, and as he is fully in accord therewith. It is very reasonable to suppose that he would strive to do so if he is honest, which we are willing to concede. The experience of that party, whenever they have gained temporary control, has proved that their policy is not for the best interests of the country. One point alone is enough to illustrate. The experience of the democratic party for the last eighteen months shows plainly to the dullest intellect that a free trade policy is the wrong policy for the United States, and the populists are as much free traders as the democrats are. If that is not enough to convince the intelligent voter that the populist idea of government is wrong, then take the results they have accomplished on the money question. All they accomplished there is to drive out capital from the states in which they have had control, and this is decidedly against the best interests of the masses through work. Their financial policy is all embodied in the idea that the more dollars they create—without regard to their value, the better chance the coining passes will have to accumulate dollars. Well, if we concede that point, the fact stares us in the face that an unlimited issue of dollars would necessarily depreciate the purchasing power of each dollar proportionately. Take wheat, for instance. You might as well say that the more wheat a farmer raises the more money he will make. But is that a true theory? Does it not depend more on the price he gets for that wheat? If the price of wheat could be fixed by act of legislation at one dollar per bushel, then we grant that the more wheat a man raised the more dollars he would get, but it is not and cannot be, neither can the value of a dollar be regulated in the same way. Both are governed by another law and the more wheat beyond a certain amount that is raised, the less the price will be. The populist party is formed upon the theory that all of the evils that exist can be legislated out of existence if you only put the right men in to accomplish it. You might as well try to regulate the morals of humanity in the same way, for a great many of the evils complained of spring from the bad morals of humanity. Every man at the coming election should vote for the men he considers to be honest and clean he must be governor of the state.

THE McKinley meeting at St. Paul on Saturday evening was one of the largest of the kind that St. Paul ever saw, and she has seen some big crowds.

THAT "Honest Bob Dunn" will be elected state auditor goes without saying if the majority of the people appreciate good, honest, faithful work in their behalf—and we believe they do.

FARMERS will do well to destroy any Russian cactus or thistle they may find this fall. They are liable to a good deal of trouble in the southern counties of North Dakota, and only need a little neglect to gain a strong foothold here.

THE Progress, an independent weekly paper published at Minneapolis, in its last issue publishes a comprehensive write-up of the republican state ticket, with an elegant portrait of each candidate on the ticket. While independent in politics, Progress is very evidently progressive.

PROF. A. W. HENRY, of the Wisconsin experiment station, says that wheat at $18 per ton is worth more for feeding than oil meal at $23 to $25. The present market value of wheat is considerably less than $18 per ton, and all authorities seem to agree that at present depressed prices the lower grades of wheat are worth more to feed than to sell in the market.

ONE effect of the passage of the Wilson tariff bill, in which the farmers of the Northwest are directly interested, is the practical exclusion of American flour from the Cuban market. The Washburn-Crosby Company, of Minneapolis, recently received information from their Philadelphia agent to the effect that a consignment of flour sent them some time since for transmission to Cuba had not yet gone, and as all the blockhead never would, as the Cubans have ignored the reciprocity treaty and raised the duty on flour from $1 to $4.75 per barrel. And yet they say the 53d congress did nothing during a session of a year's duration!

IF the voters in the state outside of the twin cities are true to their own interests, Lorin W. Collins will be elected associate justice by a record breaker. Not with standing the pops and dems have combined against him, and the further fact that the twin cities will do their best to seat a man from their locality. The country is entitled to one place on the bench, at least, and should have it.

THERE is no reason why party fealty should influence any populist to vote for John W. Wilks for associate justice. Mr. Wilks is a life-long democrat and his election would be a democratic victory. Mr. Willis is a good man, and while that fact alone should not weigh much, yet when it is a fact that every judge on the bench except Judge Collins, comes from the twin cities, it is a fact that has, or ought to cut something of a figure.

NOT long since there was a "brilliant" event in St. Paul—the opening of a brewery and the Globe gave a great, long, glowing account of the affair, and the many prominent business men who were in attendance. Among that number, however, the Globe failed to mention J. W. Wilks, the democratic candidate for associate justice, who it is said took a prominent hand in the "opening." Possibly the Globe did not feel flattered.

THE Alliance Advocate, a populist paper published at Heaning, in Ottertail county, urges its readers to vote for Judge Collins, for associate justice, saying that big cities always try to get the lion's share upon the supreme bench and in this case are trying the same game. While he does not mention names the inference is too plain to be misapprehended, when he says that the country is in danger of losing the only representative it has on the bench. Judge Collins is the man he means.

AND this is a sample of the milk and honey we are to have when the democrats got in! The New York state superintendent of banking in his annual report says the amount of money held by savings banks in his state on deposit July 1, 1894, was $12,000,000 less than on July 1, 1893. It has required $12,000,000 of money among the working people of New York state alone, saved during republican administration, to help out in one year of democratic rule. The savings banks may be said to be the financial pulse of the working people, and this ebb is not reassuring for the future prosperity during the milk and honey regime.

THE father of the new tariff bullies been in England, where he was given a royal banquet, feasted and toasted like a lord. In the course of his remarks he took occasion to allude to the increased activity in English manufactories under the Wilson tariff bill and complimented the author of the bill in whose honor that banquet was given very highly What a difference between the reception of Mr. Wilson and the manner in which McKinley was treated in 1892. He was pursued, hooted and burned in effigy—but then he has originated a bill calculated to benefit America, and Wilson's tariff bill benefits England. That's the difference.

There can be no doubt that Hale's Sure Cure Cough syrup is a relief and cure for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Coughs, Colds and for throat and lung troubles, for if not druggists would not repeat their orders, and their customers would not use it and give it their endorsement. It must be good or else the Haller company would not and could not guarantee it. F. L. Kermott is authorized to refund money for every bottle proving unsatisfactory.

Are the good qualities possessed by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Above all it purifies the blood, thus strengthening the nerves, it regulates the digestive organs, invigorates the kidneys and liver, tones and builds up the entire system, cures Scrofula, Dyspepsia, Catarrh and Rheumatism. Get Hood's and only Hood's.

J. H. Rothwell, druggist at Trambell, Neb., writes Jan. 8, 1894: "Gentsd I have sold your Haller's Sure Cure Cough Syrup, your Corn Cure, Barb Liniment and your Pain Purgatyzer on the warrant to do as represented or refund the money, and he is said to the great credit and reliability of your preparations, that none have been returned—all had given good satisfaction." These superior remedies are sold and guaranteed by F. L. Kermott.

Albert Tice was in from Mentor on Tuesday. Talking about county division he said that the people about Mentor do not favor the idea of cutting the county up into fragments. They do not like the Nelson county idea because, they say, that while no doubt some of the county will be divided on a north and south line, this proposed county does not ran far enough west to suit them.

RESIDENCE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

I have forty desirable lots in Jerome's addition, which I offer for sale at reasonable prices and on terms to suit purchasers. These lots have 50 and 100 feet frontage, and are situated on high land, where good dry cellars can be got, and an abundance of pure water can be procured at a depth of from 15 to 25 feet. Jerome's addition is the healthiest and prettiest portion of the city. Not a single case of typhoid fever has ever been reported there, and this is no doubt owing to the good water found every where on that addition. PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, Executive Department.

Whereas, pursuant to Chapter one hundred and forty-three (143) of the General Laws of 1893, "An act to provide for the creation and organization of new counties and the government of the same," a petition was filed with the secretary of state, on the 22nd day of September, 1894, praying for the creation of a new county out of territory now being in Polk county, and state, to be named Red Lake county, and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at the northwest corner of township No. 154, of range 45, running thence south along the township line between ranges 45 and 46 to the southwest corner of township No. 153, of range 45; thence east along the township line to the northwest corner of township No. 152, of range 44; thence south along the township line between ranges 44 and 45 to the southwest corner of township No. 152, of range 44; thence running east along the south line of said township No. 152, range 44, to the northwest corner of section number 5, in township number 150, of range 43; thence running south along the section line to said township number 150, range 43, to the southwest corner of section No. 32, township 150, range 43; thence running east along the township line between township number 150 and 151, to the east corner of township number 150, range 42; thence running south along the township line between ranges 41 and 42 to the northeast corner of township No. range 40; thence running east along the township line between township 148 and 149, to the range line between ranges 39 and 40, in the said county;

And whereas, said petition has been duly considered, and found and certified to as conforming in all respects to the provisions of said law;

Now, therefore, I, Knute Nelson, Governor of the State of Minnesota, do hereby order that the said petition be presented to the county board by the said petitioners, by whom it is alleged and proclaim that the question of the creation of the new proposed county of Red Lake, be submitted to the voters of said Polk county, at the next general election to be held in this state on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1894.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the state of Minnesota to be affixed. This 7th day of October, A. D. 1893.

(Great Seal) KNUTE NELSON,
Governor.

Attest: F. P. Brunn, Secretary of State.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a certain mortgage dated the 25th day of June, dated the 16th day of July, A. D. 1892, and duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county of Polk and the state of Minnesota, at 9 o'clock a. m., on the 23d day of August, 1892, in Book of Mortgages No. 56, page 199, whereby Samuel H. Hunter and Martha J. Hunter, mortgagors, mortgaged to E. F. Pierce the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter (a 40 acre tract) and the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter (a 40 acre tract) and the west four and four-tenths (4 4-10) acres of the south one hundred and forty-eight (148) rods of range forty-three (43) west, and containing one hundred fifty-three (153) acres, in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, by which default said power of sale has become operative, and no suit or other law or otherwise have been instituted to collect said debt or any part thereof, and there is now claimed to be due on said mortgage the sum of $173.15 at the date of this notice.

Notice therefore is hereby given that by virtue of said power said mortgage will be foreclosed and said lots sold at public auction by the sheriff of said county, at the door, on Saturday the 6th day of October, 1894, at 10 o'clock, at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston, in said county, to pay said debt and interest taxes and for attorney fees and disbursements allowed by law.

Bert Duntley went down to the twin cities last week, returning on Sunday morning.

Governor Nelson arrived in the city on Monday morning, and took the train for the north.

P. M. Ringdahl, after a severe illness with typhoid fever is getting able to be around again.

John Kennedy, a young man aged about 25 years, died last week of consumption and was buried on Friday.

E. O. Flunders has resigned the clerkship of the town of Crookston, and Capt. L. C. Couverette has been appointed to succeed him.

Halvor Halvorsea, residing east of Mallory, and aged 17, died at the Crookston hospital of cancer of the liver Wednesday morning.

The most important question before the people of Polk county this fall seems to be the question of division—"to be or not to be."

Chris Hanson last two stacks of millet on Tuesday last. It is thought the fire originated from sparks from a passing threshing engine.

Will Peterson takes T. G. Thompson's place in the California Wine House while Thompson is off on a wild goose chase in Dakota.

Sheriff Grundysen and A. R. Holsten went over to Fisher on Saturday evening to take a little politics to the brethren of the populistic faith.

A regular sap snow set in on Sunday morning, making getting about all day quite a difficult task. Liable to be with us for awhile now.

W. A. Sarsolliet, will open a lumber yard at St. Hilaire. He received two car loads of lumber on Monday as a starter. So says the Spectator.

Butchers and others who have made a study of such things freely predict that pork will sell in this market next spring as high as ten cents a pound on foot.

A hunting party left for Rugby Junction, N. D., Saturday morning. In the party were T. G. Thompson, Theodore Grenhaigh, A. G. Anderson, A. C. Schmidt and A. E. Furrin.

Chief Moose Dung's old log cabin on his claim north of Thief River Falls burned Monday morning. The origin of the fire is supposed to be from some campers who passed the night there.

Notwithstanding the rains last week very much plowing was done. The rain has improved the condition of the ground for plowing, but there has not as yet been enough to fill up the wells.

George A. Webster, who has a contract for making a road in Marshall county came down from Stephen on Monday night to hire four teams, four horses to the team, to help him on the contract.

Geo. McIntosh, who has been running a threshing rig in the vicinity of Beltrami all the fall, was in on Tuesday. He says grain has turned out remarkably well in that neighborhood.

Moses Biel, whose farm is on section 10, in Fairfax, reports a yield of 16½ bushels of wheat per acre, this year, but at present prices of wheat it does not pay, and he will next year sow but a few acres of wheat unless the prospects change very materially. He will sow barley, oats and flax, he thinks.

Deacon Ayers went down to St. Paul and Minneapolis last week for a visit with friends and relatives, his first visit in seventeen years. Expects to be back in time to vote the straight republican ticket and against division.

Mr. G. L. Read and wife of Chicago, who have been in the city the past six weeks visiting their daughter, Mrs. C. H. Sauke, returned home Wednesday evening. While here Mr. Read sold his farm near the city to John E. Chilbaek, the purchase price being $6,000.

James R. McLean, a well known farmer of Drayton, N. D., had the misfortune to break his back this week. He sat on a load of grain and drove into the barn, the door being low, caught and crushed him with the above result. He was still alive at last accounts.

Grains are becoming quite plentiful in this market and the price is very reasonable—only 25 cents a bushel. That must have an extremely small margin for the people who raise them, after deducting freight and commissions—almost equal to wheat we should say.

We have been told, and we have reason to believe, that in the territory designated as Nash county, a large majority of votes will be cast against division. This is quite natural under the circumstances as few, if any, would be benefitted to the extent of their extra taxes, even. Even East Grand Forks seems to have practically given up the fight.

Gen. Manager C. H. Warren and Supt. Jenks were in the city Sunday looking up matters concerning the Great Northern road. Among other things looked after was the building of a bridge over Sixth street. A steel structure is to supplant the wooden affair now doing duty there and this will permit the removal of the piles that now obstruct the middle of the wagon road.

Of the experience of a prominent farmer at Fisher, the Bulletin says: "Wm. Skinner received by freight over the Great Northern, on Thursday last, fifty-one bushel baskets, to be used by him in gathering his crop of potatoes. Friend William diversified his crop this season, planting generously of corn and potatoes, and as a consequence the low price of wheat does not interfere with his sleep at night."

The East Grand Forks Review says: Grand Forks has had another robbery which may end in murder. Last Saturday afternoon some boys playing in Riverside Park heard cries for help down on the river bank. E. C. Elwood heard the cries also and hurried down to the river bank where he found a man stretched out on the ground with his head badly pounded. The victim is in a critical condition. The thieves are still at large.

A hunting party left for Rugby Junction N. D., on Saturday morning. In the party were T. G. Thompson, Theodore Greenhaigh, A. G. Anderson A. C. Schmidt and A. E. Larsen.

Work on the Catholic church at East Grand Forks, has already commenced. The building will be 40 x 100, brick foundation, from the floor to the peak of the roof, 42 feet, and to the top of the tower will be 80 feet. The contract price is $4000. A furnace will be placed in the building. J. W. Ross is the architect, and A. J. Stonfield has the contract for the brick work. The building will have a southern exposure, and the site is one of the finest in the city.

One great objection to the project of division is found in the fact that the proposed division into four, would leave each and every one of the counties altogether too small, and that the last alone is enough to set many within the four prospective counties against the scheme, and should unite every one within the limits of what would be left of Polk county solidly against it. With the exception of the towns on the east side, not one would ever be able to acquire any additional territory.

The Moorhead Weekly News indulges in the following pleasant little notice of the republican candidate for Superintendent of schools in Polk county: Miss Ida K. Hancock, who was graduated from the State Normal school of the city in the class of 1890, has been nominated by the Republican party of Polk county as their candidate for county superintendent of schools. Miss Hancock has been assistant to the county superintendent for the last two years, we understand, and has performed her duties with credit to herself and benefit to the cause of education. After graduating at the Normal school Miss Hancock taught in the city school of Moorhead and gave excellent satisfaction. The News has every reason to believe that if the voters of Polk county should elect Miss Hancock to the office named they would not regret it, but on the other hand would be well pleased with her service and would desire to retain her in the position for a longer time.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES AND ANDREW J. CURTIN DEAD.

The Former Succumbs to an Attack of Heart Disease at His Home in Boston. Curtin Was in Feeble Health For Some Time and His End Was Long Been Expected.

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—Oliver Wendell Holmes, the well known poet and author died at his home, 296 Beacon street, at 12:10 p. m. Heart failure was the immediate cause of his death, though the doctor has slowly been failing for the last four or five years. An asthmatic difficulty also assisted in the final breaking down of the aged "autocrat." Ten days ago Dr. Holmes returned to his Beacon street residence, from his summer home at Beverly Farms. Before that time, slight symptoms of improvement in his condition were noted and the removal was thought advisable. It proved, however, very fatiguing and the doctor did not regard his former condition. Last Friday, a sudden attack of heart failure suddenly siezed him, which, with the long-standing asthmatic trouble, prostrated him. But during the morning he had apparently recovered. After the physicians had gone, however, the doctor was siezed with a severe spasm and before medical aid could be called, he had passed away. He was unconscious for a short time previous to his death. Around his bedside were gathered the members of his family, Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., the only surviving son; Mrs. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., and Edward J. Holmes, nephew of the poet. Although the poet's death occurred shortly after midday, it did not become known until a late hour at night.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was born at Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 29, 1809. He graduated at Harvard college in 1829 and began the study of law, which he soon abandoned for that of medicine. After taking his degree of M. D. he spent some time in the hospitals in Paris and other European countries. He returned to Boston in 1836 and began practicing. In 1838 he was elected professor of anatomy and philosophy in Dartmouth college and in 1848 was elected to a similar professorship in the medical school of Harvard university, from which he retired in 1882. But it is chiefly as writer that Dr. Holmes is known, as early as 1831, his contributions appearing in various periodicals, and his reputation as a poet was established by the delivery of a metrical essay entitled "Poetry," which was followed by others in rapid succession. In 1857 he began in The Atlantic Monthly a series of articles under the title of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," which were followed in 1860 by the "Poet at the Breakfast Table," and in 1883 by "The Newport Polio." As a writer of song, lyrics and poems for festive occasions, he has long occupied the first place. The latter years of his life have been spent in quiet retirement at Beverly Farms, except occasionally by a lecture to the Harvard students.

HIS DEATH LONG EXPECTED.

Andrew J. Curtin, Pennsylvania's War Governor, Dies at Bellefonte.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Oct. 8.—Ex-Governor Andrew G. Curtin died at 5 o'clock a. m. His end was peaceful, he having been unconscious during the last twelve hours of his life. All the members of his family were at the bedside when he passed away. Mr. Curtin had been in feeble health for some weeks, but his condition grew serious on Thursday last, and from that time he sank rapidly. He was caused by old age—the ex-governor being in his 80th year—combined with nervous prostration which, upon reaching the vital point in the brain, ended his life. When the case first took on a serious aspect, physicians were summoned, but they then abandoned all hopes of recovery, and the death of the old war governor was not a surprise.

DETECTIVE AND TRAMP.

The Officer Feeds a Famishing Vagabond and Gets Few Thanks.

There was in this tramp's appearances a suggestion of the lathargy that follows a gorging with free lunch and copious libations of beer that bailed his piteous story of not having had anything to eat "since yesterday morning." The shades of night were falling fast, and that may have to some extent accounted for the mistake of the bum in selecting as the object of his whining appeal McCluskey, one of the best known of the Central office detectives, who was "sleuthing it" along the Bowery.

"You are my dinner and supper for yesterday and breakfast, dinner and supper today. Come with me," said McCluskey, and he led the way into a greasy little beanery from the door of which hung a dingy sign announcing "regular meals, 8 cents." Had the vagrant known what was in store for him he would have never crossed the threshold except under forcible persuasion. "Give this man his yesterday's dinner," said McCluskey.

A slice of boiled beef, a boiled potato, two slices of bread and a cup of muddy coffee were soon set up. Slowly the tramp attacked the meal, and McCluskey waited. When the dishes were clean, the detective beckoned to the waiter and said:

"Bring the gentleman last night's supper."

The order was repeated. The tramp began to suspect something, but he thought it the better to eat his part. Perhaps his eccentric benefactor would give him the price of a bed. Vain hope! The supper disposed of McCluskey ordered "the gentleman's breakfast."

"See here, pardy, I never eats but one meal a day," the latter demurred.

"It is not enough. You told me you were starving, and as an officer of the New York police force it shall never be said that he allowed a fellow man to starve." And the detective displayed his badge.

"Supposin I won't eat?" said the tramp sullenly.

"Then you take no ride. See?"

The trapped bum saw, and he ate his breakfast, known in prison lingo he managed to dispose of his dinner. Nature would stand no more.

"See here, pardy, I couldn't eat any more, not if I got two years for it," he pleaded in genuine distress.

McCluskey had had his fun, and he excused his victim the supper. As the tramp rolled himself out of the place he paused at the door, and with a malevolent glance in his eye said hoarsely, "I'll get even with you for this, you big ——!"—New York Advertiser.

CHILE FOR PROTECTION.

Premiums to Be Paid to Foster the Growth of New Industries.

Through the bureau of American republics of the department of state we learn that the Chilean government has recently taken up the question of industrial progress and seeks the co-operation of the local agricultural, mining and manufacturing interests. In order to augment the productive manufacturing power of Chile, the Society For the Promotion of Industries has suggested to the government that the sum of $600,000 be disbursed annually for a number of years in premiums for the establishment of certain industries, to be divided as follows:

Iron and steel, capital of producing a certain number of tons of iron per annum.....	$200,000
Cotton mill.....	50,000
Woolen factory.....	50,000
Mixture of potash factory.....	25,000
Paper and pasteboard factory.....	25,000
Glass factory.....	25,000
Chemical factory.....	50,000
Sack factory.....	50,000
Hat factory.....	25,000
White paster factory.....	25,000
Match factory, wax or wood.....	25,000

This attempt to foster and develop the production of manufacturing enterprises in Chile is to be supplemented by extensively advertising the possibilities of that country in these several directions. To the manufacturers in the United States it opens up a prospect for further competition, especially in South American trade, which is of equal interest to both labor and capital.

Hog Cholera in Illinois.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., Sept. 22.—Hog cholera is raging in different localities in McLean county and the animals are dying in large numbers. Several thousand pigs have been shipped in here from Welmaka and they are all said to be infected with the disease. Either the disease was brought with them or caused by the change in the climate.

AN AMUSING ADVENTURE.

A Stupid Corporal, an Embarrassed Colonel and a Tactful Woman.

A superior officer of the —th garrison was some time ago the hero of a most amusing adventure, Colonel Z—had received from Mme. V—— an invitation to dinner, but on the day appointed, and just as he was about to start, he was seized with a violent attack of neuralgia and decided to forego the pleasure in store for him. The colonel wrote a letter of apology, called his orderly and said:

"Here, you will give this letter to Mme. V—— and then go and fetch me my dinner."

Here the plot commences. Guy set off after carefully secreting the letter in his breast pocket along with his tobacco pouch. He arrived at Mme. V——'s, delivered his message and stood as rigid as a statue. The lady of the house was surprised and inquired what he was waiting for: Guy replied:

"The colonel told me to fetch him his dinner."

Mme. V—— saw the man's mistake, gave certain orders, and the servants handled the faithful linesman a pile of dishes emitting fragrant odors. Moreover, Mme. V—— added a half dozen of shampagnes into the soldier's pocket and said:

"You will serve this to the colonel at dessert."

Guy came back, and, upon my word, the restaurant seemed to have provided such a host of good things that the colonel got up and took his seat at the table. Over the soup he slowly began to recover his appetite, to his no small surprise. The side dishes made him quite ravenous, with the entrees his palate disappeared, he was stupefied at the roast meat and dumfounded at the game, and still his wonder grew at the marvelous dishes supplied by his chophouse keeper.

"Guy, you will bring something cans out. The colonel in despair thought the matter over and then gave his orderly 10 francs, telling him to buy a bunch of flowers and present it from him to Mme. V——. Then our colonel, satisfied that he had done his duty, went on trying circumstances, settled down in an easy chair and composed himself to sleep. An hour and a half later the door opened, and Guy walked in and gravely deposited two 5 franc pieces on the table. The colonel questioned him with some anxiety.

"The lady paid for the nosegay," said the honest warrior, apparently well pleased with the general turn of affairs.

Mme. V—— receiving the bouquet, had given the soldier 2 francs by way of a tip, on receiving which the latter simply replied:

"It isn't 4 francs, please, ma'am; it is 10 francs."

Colonel Z—— was confined to his bed for three days, to the great alarm of the whole of the garrison.—Progres Illustre.

A Queer Copper Mine.

"There are many kinds of mines and numerous invasions for working precious metals," said Professor L. R. Waring of Omaha, "but the strangest one I ever heard of is at Butte, Mon. When mines were first discovered in that locality, it was found that the water contained in the bottom was so strongly impregnated with copper in solution that coats of all kinds were quickly deposited by the affinity of iron for the iron. For a long time the water pumped out of the mine went to waste, as no method was known of extracting the copper from it. After awhile a discovery was made that it being used to good advantage. Some one thought of their way into the small stream. In a short time it was noticed that they had every appearance of being strands of pure copper, so thickly were they covered with the same. Then he put in a series of reservoirs and tanks and this little gully where the water ran. These he filled with all the old metal he had in the town, including old burial boops. At the end of six months he found that the old junk was rotted and stroyed, and in its place was a sedimentary deposit in the bottom of the reservoirs which was 95 per cent copper."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Sogue" In Parliament.

The Encyclopedia Britannica is authority for the following account of the speeches delivered in the house of commons by the elder Pitt, afterward earl of Chatham:

It is related of him that once in the house of commons he began a speech with the words, "Sugar, Mr. Speaker," and then, drawing a smile to prevail in the audience, he paused, looked fiercely around, and with a loud voice, rising in its notes and swelling into vehement anger, he is said to have pronounced again the word "sugar" three times, and having thus quelled the house and extinguished every appearance of levity or laughter turned round and disdainfully asked, "Who will laugh at sugar now?"

Two Guides to Happiness.

Here are a couple of guides to happiness which some wise person has lately discovered: "For a fit of passion take a walk in the open air. You may then speak to the wind without hurting any person or proclaiming yourself to be a simpleton. For a fit of idleness count the tickings of a clock. Do this for one hour, and you will be glad to pull off your coat and go to work like a man."

Verdi war a very handsome youth, and in spite of his forescore years retains a large share of his former good looks. He is spare, rather tall and walks with a pronounced stoop.

"What is a house without a baby?" asked a lady writer, and an old bachelor editor replied, "It is comparatively quiet!"

SHE SPOKE TOO SOON.

Discovering That She Had Made a Mistake, She Apologized.

In front of Trinity church a stylishly dressed young woman stopped from the sidewalk directly in front of a team of heavy horses attached to a well loaded truck. She was endeavoring to get a sight of a cable car gripman and did not see the rapidly moving truck bearing down upon her. Assuming correctly that she would see her ground to earth, but one of two fashionably appearing young fellows with slightly undish proclivities rushed to the curb, and lifting the woman by the arms quickly swung her around and landed her out of danger on the sidewalk.

She, all unconscious of her dangerous predicament, turned on the young man sharply with an indignant, "How dare you, sir!" and looked as if she were contemplating an assault on him with her parasol.

The young fellow looked surprised, and then, taking off his hat, bowed and, with an "Excuse me, madam," passed on with his friend.

She turned toward the street again and for the first time observed the truck, which now stood in her path. The driver of this calmly remarked: "That dude saved your life, lady. Why don't you scratch his eyes out?"

The woman, for the first time realizing her narrow escape, hurried after the rapidly disappearing youths, who had nearly reached Rector street by that time. Touching her rescuer's arm, she quickly apologized for her rudeness and thanked him for his timely act.

"Don't mention it, please. The pleasure is entirely mine, I assure you," was the response. Two bots were doffed, and the blushing woman was left on the sidewalk with a humiliating sense of her previous rudeness.

"Beastly queer things these girls are, Harvey," said one to the other as they disappeared in the nearest beanery to the L station.—New York Advertiser.

NATURE'S CRUELTY.

The Ichneumon Fly Makes Its Natural Enemy Serve Its Purpose.

The ichneumon fly of Ceylon is the natural enemy of the spider. This insect is green in color, and in form resembles a wasp with a marvelously thin waist. It makes its nest in a hole in vertical clay and then goes on a hunting expedition. Its victims are invariably spiders of various kinds, but all are captured in the same mode of treatment. A scientific writer describes some insect which effectually paralyzes the luckless spider, who is then carried off to the nest and there stowed with a ball of moist clay. Another and another victim is brought in to this chamber of horrors. Then the ichneumon fly proceeds to deposit her eggs, one in the body of each spider, which can just move its legs in a vague, aimless manner, but can offer no resistance.

This done, the fly returns to her work as a mason. She closes the nest door and builds up the entrance to this ghastly cell. Then she commences a new cell, which she furnishes in like manner, and then closes; then she adds yet another cell, and so on until each larger store of eggs are all provided for, and the fly's work in life being accomplished she dies, leaving her cell tenanted at last in safety. In due time these horrid little maggots come to life and find themselves surrounded by fresh meat ready. Each poor spider is still alive, and his juices afford nutriment for the ichneumon grub till it is ready to undergo the chrysalis stage, thence to emerge as a winged fly fully prepared to carry out the same cruel work. Nature seems to regard to spiders.—Ashton Reporter.

A Burning Mountain.

At Wingen, in New South Wales, about 200 miles from Sydney, is a burning mountain, one of the most remarkable sights to be seen in Australia. It is to be seen by night and is supposed to be a large coal seam which has in some unaccountable way become ignited and has been burning for many years, certainly long before the advent of the white man in this portion of the colony. The course of the fire can be traced for considerable distance by the numerous depressions or chasms occasioned by the fusing of the rock and earthy matter which the coal has been consumed. Smoke is continually issuing from the sides of the mountain, and in the vicinity of these openings the surface is hot and has a dry, parched appearance, while sticks thrust into these openings are very readily ignited.—Indianapolis News.

Meyerbeer.

Meyerbeer was so nervous and "edgety" about his works that when they were in course of preparation or rehearsal or performance he never gave himself or any one else concerned a moment's peace of mind. He was constantly making changes or alterations in the score and would sometimes write a passage in three or four different colored inks in order to try the different effects, and then could not make up his mind which was the best. He worried over his opera, "L'Africaine," to the very last, retouching and polishing, even while it was in rehearsal, that the self imposed labor made him ill, and he died before the first public performance. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Aye, man," remarked the weaver, "ye hae gien him an awfu' death."—Tit-Bits.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Legislature of the State of Minnesota has passed the Chapter one of the General Laws of 1893, for the submission to the people of the State, for their approval or rejection as the general election to be held on the 6th day of November A. D. 1894, the following proposed amendments to the constitution, viz: (1) of Article Nine (9) of the constitution.

This section to be amended now reads as follows:

Section 1. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and all property on which taxes are levied shall be valued at its cash valuation, and be equalized and uniform throughout the state. Provided, that the legislature may by general law or special act, authorize municipalities organized to levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon the same, according to the benefits to the property to be derived from such improvements, or both, without regard to a cash valuation, and in such manner as the legislature may prescribe. And provided further, that for the purpose of defraying the expenses of hay scales and weighing in any city or municipality having a population of five thousand (5,000) or more, by a special order or assessment upon the fixed feet of all lands fronting on any water main or water pipe, laid by such city or municipality within certain limits from either side of such water main or water pipe, to be thereof without regard to such values of such property, and to empower such city to collect any such assessments or fines, or penalties for failure to pay the same, or any fee for the use of any weighing or measuring machine by municipality in regard to the use of water, or for any water rate or fee for use.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

It is proposed to amend Section 1 of Article 9 of the above quoted section of the Constitution by adding thereto the following proviso:

And, provided further, that there may be levied and collected such a tax upon all inheritances and bequests, legacies and gifts regardless of every kind of property passing to any natural person or corporation. Such tax shall not be less than one per centum nor more than five per centum, progressive, but shall not exceed a maximum of five per cent.

The purpose of the proposed amendment is to clothe the Legislature with authority to levy the following subjects:

1. Inheritances. 2. Devises. 3. Bequests. 4. Legacies. 5. Gifts.

1. The said proposed amendment contemplates that all inheritances, devises, etc. to be based at certain amounts to be determined by the Legislature, shall be subject to taxation.

2. The tax shall be graded or progressive, but shall not exceed a maximum of five per cent.

3. In other words, it is proposed to confer upon the Legislature authority to tax the above subjects, either by appropriate machinery to any extent, not in excess of five per cent of the amount thereof.

4. Legislature may, if such authority is conferred, prescribe a higher rate than five per cent, applicable to all inheritances, devises, bequests, legacies and gifts regardless of the amount thereof. In other words it is proposed that an inheritance of Five Hundred Dollars be taxed at the same rate per cent as an inheritance of Five Thousand Dollars.

5. It is proposed to create a new taxing with the amount of the inheritance, devise, or the value of property passing by the gift, and the rate of taxation may be uniform as to any particular inheritance, bequest, etc. Thus, if said inheritance, bequest, etc. amounts to Five Dollars may be taxed at a certain rate per cent, and if it amounts to Ten Dollars, a different rate per cent, and if it amounts to Fifty Dollars, and a still different rate for the third class, and so on, and so on, ad infinitum. In other words it is proposed that the rate shall be prescribed by the Legislature.

6. The amendment is drawn by the proposed amendment is defined generally "to be a burden imposed by the government upon persons or property for public purposes, whether of real or personal property, or upon the exercise of a privilege or franchise." Taxes on the transfer of intestate law, or by any deed or instrument of conveyance, to take effect only after the death of the grantor."

7. The power of each state is claimed to rest upon the fact that the right to take property by devise or descent is not a natural right, but is a privilege which the state may grant or withhold, or it is argued that the state may justly attach to such subjects a reasonable tax.

8. Similar legislation has been in force for some years in Pennsylvania, Ohio and other states.

9. The said amendment is proposed for the purpose of submitting the question as to the validity of such legislation in the absence of express constitutional authority.

Here's the Idea
Of the Non-pull-out Bow
The great watch saver. Saves the watch from thieves and fall—cannot be pulled off the case—costs nothing extra.

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and the bow fits the groove, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

Can only be had with cases stamped with this trade mark.

Jas. Boss Filled Watch Cases are now fitted with this great bow (ring). They look and wear like solid gold cases. Cost only about half as much, and are guaranteed for twenty years. Sold only through watch dealers. Remember the name

JUST LEAVE PEKIN.

MINISTER DENBY WARNS AMERICAN CITIZENS TO FLY.

Pekin, Its Says, Is Certain to Be Attacked by the Japanese, and Women and Children Should Be Sent to Places of Safety—A Decisive Battle Expected in a Few Days.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—A Shanghai dispatch says: United States Minister Denby warned the American residents of Pekin that the city is certain to be attacked by the Japanese, and he advises that all the women and children be sent at once to places of safety. Already many of the wealthier natives are departing and many others are making preparations to follow their example.

THE CRISIS AT HAND.

End of the Japan-China Trouble Looked For Soon.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The crisis of the China-Japan war is looked for within the next 10 days or two weeks by these most interested and best informed on the contest. The legations of the two countries are expecting daily to hear that the decisive battle has been fought. This is based on the fact that the Japanese have been gradually closing in around Pekin, and the invading army is compelled by force of circumstances to strike their blow at once or not at all. The intense cold which comes on about the middle of October makes this imperative. The Japanese climate is very mild even in winter, and the Japanese troops are wholly unprepared for the rigorous climate about Pekin, which is due within two weeks. The Chinese look upon this as one of their defenses, and the Japanese fully appreciate that it compels them to concentrate their campaign for this year into the next few weeks, and if possible, days. For that reason they are expected to make heroic efforts to decide the contest at once. They are without heavy clothing, camp equipments, etc., for a campaign in the latter part.

A Battle Imminent.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 8.—The advance guard of the Japanese army has crossed the Yalu river and formed a new camp. A battle is believed to be imminent.

THE CZAR IS WORSE.

High Officials Hurrying to the Side of the Russian Ruler.

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—The Schlesische Zeitung publishes a dispatch from St. Petersburg which says that a sudden change for the worse has taking place in the condition of the czar. The dispatch adds that the minister of war has ordered prayers for the preservation of the life of the czar to be offered up in all the garrison and regimental churches. This order is said to be due to a telegram received direct from Livadia, and stating that the czar's illness has taken a disquieting turn. Fainting fits are reported to have supervened and to have rendered an operation immediately necessary.

In conclusion it is stated that court dignitaries and other high functionaries have hurriedly started for Livadia.

FATAL DETROIT FIRE.

Six Men Killed and Ten Injured by Falling Walls.

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—Six men are dead, ten are more or less injured and $60,000 worth of property was destroyed by the burning of Keenan & Job's five-story furniture establishment on Jefferson avenue. The dead, all of whose bodies have been recovered from the ruins, are:

MICHAEL H. DONOHUE, lieutenant of Chemical Engine No. 9.

J. R. DELY, fireman.

JOHN W. FAGET, pipeman.

JULIUS CEMMINS, pipeman.

MARTIN BALL, pipeman.

FREDERICK BUSSMICS, electrician worker and substitute fireman.

BODIES WASHED ASHORE.

Fifty Victims of the Recent Storm Found Around Key West.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 4.—A special from Key West says that 50 dead bodies, victims of the wrecks occurring on the reefs during the recent storm, have been washed ashore on the islands around Key West. The dead, it is stated, are evidently sailors from the vessels destroyed, although the length of time which has elapsed since the storm has rendered the bodies unidentifiable, through decomposition. The probabilities are that many more of those ghastly evidences of the hurricane's fury will be brought to light in a few days.

WENT INTO THE RIVER.

Bridge Supports Sawed and a Passenger Train Wrecked.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 8.—A special to the Evening Wisconsin from Tomahawk, Wis., says: Train wreckers sawed the supporting timbers of the Soo railroad bridge at Tomahawk Junction, and the westbound passenger train was wrecked. The engine plunged into the river. The body of the fireman is buried under the engine. The engineer had two legs broken. No passengers were injured.

Name of a Severe Hurricane.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—The steamer Gaelic brought news of a severe hurricane, which according to the Kobe Chronicle of Sept. 11, caused widespread destruction. The cyclone swept on to the northeast afterward wrecking Logtesk. Many vessels are supposed to have been lost. Marianapol, was practically blotted out of existence.

Cockran Not a Candidate.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The World says that Congressman Bourke Cockran will not be a candidate for renomination. He announced his determination to do so May 1.

LITTLE ROCK DEVASTATED.

The Arkansas City Visited by a Destructive Cyclone.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 4.—A terrible cyclone struck this city at 7:20 p. m. and almost devastated the business portion of the city. Several people are known to have been killed and injured, while it is feared scores of others have met the same horrible fate. The main portion of the business center is practically in ruins and the amount of damage is incalculable. The total property loss will probably approximate $500,000. The cyclone was accompanied by a terrible storm and the stocks of goods in those business houses which were unroofed, though not otherwise wrecked, were destroyed by water. The storm struck the state penitentiary, which stands on a hill in the western part of the city, with fearful force, destroying the dining room, tearing down the stable and shops, unroofing the main cell building and demolishing the warden's office. Several convicts were seriously injured, one of whom died an hour afterwards.

ARABS MASSACRED.

News of Serious Fighting by Belgians in Africa.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Exchange Telegraph company announces that the African mail has brought news of serious fighting between the Arabs and Belgians in the Congo state. It is alleged by these advices that the Belgians claimed a truce after heavy fighting and that they have massacred in the Arabs and massacred them without quarter.

Another account says that the Arabs, commanded by Chief Rumiliza, after a truce agreed upon a conference which was unsatisfactorily commenced, fell immediately afterwards, the Arab powder magazine exploded. This caused both sides to suspect treachery and fighting between them was resumed. The Arabs were surrounded on all sides by the Belgians and were nearly all massacred. Chief Rumiliza succeeded in escaping, but the great majority of his followers perished. Over thirty chiefs were numbered among the slain. The Belgians captured 300,000 lakhs worth of property.

HAS BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

The Czar Suffering From That Malady, According to His Medical Attendant.

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—A correspondent of the Associated Press has had an interview with Professor Leyden, the distinguished specialist, who has just returned from Spala, where he has been in attendance upon the czar in conjunction with Professor Zacharin. Professor Leyden, replying to the request of the Associated Press for a definite statement as to the nature of the illness of the czar, said distinctly:

"His majesty is suffering from Bright's disease." He added, however, "that the disease is, as yet, in mild form though there is no doubt that Nicholas II. is laboring under a serious difficulty in breathing."

Work of the Fish Commission.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Commissioner McDonald, of the fish commission says that despite the difficulties experienced in the work of propagating and rearing fish, owing to drought and excessive heat, the work of the season has been large and will compare favorably with the records of past years. Over 6,000,000 fish of various kinds have been hatched and loosed under the auspices of the commission.

Missionaries Apprehend No Trouble.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—In response to an inquiry regarding the safety of missionaries in China, the London missionary society has received a telegram from Bankow, stating that all the missionaries are well and that the apprehend no trouble.

A QUERY.

When Nellie's silent, I am puzzled.
Queer, sir! sir!—
One day I asked her what it was
A man could give and still retain.
"Oh, dear," said she, "another case."
And sighed as if she were in pain.

When Nellie speaks, I am mazed.
Queer, sir! sir!
"I can't imagine what there is
That you can give and still retain.
Commodious seem to be your bin."
"My word," said I. She sighed again.

I thought one day I would propose—
My queerest vein.
I told my love and asked her hand.
She coyly blushed and sweetly said:
"You wish it? You may have by hand."
Upon my bosom dropped her head.

Alas, doth man reap what he sows?
My query sire.
When her I asked to set the day.
She pertly said: "This land is mine,
For I can also give away
A thing, yet keep it—draw the line."

SCENES IN NAPLES.

Some of the Incidents of the Street Life of the Neapolitans.

The commonest people of Naples seldom buy anything from the stores or shops, but patronize peddlers and street hawkers almost exclusively. At the portable kitchen booths a bill of fare is offered to the hungry wayfarer that is laughingly reasonable in price and varied in kind. Besides the ever present macaroni the principal articles of food are the frutti di mare, "sea fruits," including mussels, polypi and sea spiders, all regarded as most tempting delicacies by the ever hungry lazzaronis.

Then there are roasted fishes of all kinds, cakes dumplings, so called spighe, and finally the national meat food, called braciuola, which is really a dumpling or cake made of lamb meat and lard. Snail soup is another delicacy as well as cheese with worm holes in it. Like all southerners, the Neapolitans show a marked fondness for sweets of all kinds, and they would be quite lost without their portion of struffoli, a rather tough cake made principally of honey. Then nothing appeals to the lazzaroni appetite so insidiously as the famous Easter cake of Casatello, which is sprinkled most temptingly with fluid pork fat, and in which whole eggs are baked, shell and all, a questionable dainty to uneducated palates.

The lazzaroni women are seldom beautiful and generally not even good. They are usually poorly built, with swarthy complexions and irregular features. Now and then one finds a pretty pair of eyes of great beauty, but rarely. The Neapolitan women are not to be compared with the women of the country as seen in Rome and in the Campagna, whose trim figures, graceful movements and frequently charming if fascinating faces so often greet the eye of the traveler. Their fullness of form, proud bearing and fine profiles are not conspicuously absent in the wives of the lazzaroni. And how could it well be otherwise? Are they not "beasts of burden" for "beasts of burden?" Are the women not the real "working animals" much more than this?—Home and Country.

One Way of Saving $ Cents.

I heard a good story that brings out Russell Sage's leying up for a rainy day hobby. It seems that Russell seldom if ever misses the directors' meeting, except every day in the Western Union building, after which he is not averse to an inexpensive cigar, and just here it is not amiss to suggest that Russell should smoke tobies, which would furnish his tobacco solace for the small sum of three for five, which is just in his line. While at the cigar stand, fishing around his not at all fashionable overcoat for the requisite coin, an acquaintance arrived and plunked down 15 cents for an imported weed. The cunning old speculator of the destinies of Well street laughs saw an opportunity here to make a turn in the cigar line. Three cents a dime, he laid it beside the acquaintance's 15 cents and then suggested to said acquaintance to order two for a quarter. As the brand the gentleman wanted retailed for 8 cents straight or two for a quarter the fogy Russell secured a 15 center to 10 cents. This is given in accuracy, as there is no saying anything about the other phase of the deal.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Light of the "Lightning Bug."

Of late the naturalists have been losing sleep and filling a great deal of valuable magazine space in discussing the causes that produce the light emitted by fireflies. As is generally the case where much study and investigation is involved, there is a wide difference of opinion. One school of scientists traces the phenomenon to the nervous system of the insect; another to his respiration, while a third school has prepared an article of 6,000 words to prove that the light is entirely dependent upon the poor bug's circulation. The burden of evidence seems to be in favor of those who claim that the luminous flame is made up of fat globules, which are intermittently acted upon by the oxygen of the air and the phosphorescence is the creature's body.—St. Louis Republic.

The Car Cure.

We do not know, but we strongly suspect, that our electric railways are encouraging the car cure. In one of the towns are gravely discussing the effects of electric railways on rheumatism, and many sufferers take the car cure with regularity and supposed benefit. They get on near the motor as possible and rest longing eyes on the trolley. As a noted and eminent English physician said at the result of his observation "that fully two-thirds of the allments of humanity were purely imaginary," we can readily see how the car cure for rheumatism is very efficacious.—Atlanta Constitution.

The protection afforded to the earth by snow is shown by Ebermayer in the "Influence of Frosts." In one observation the temperature of the air above the snowy was 6 degrees below zero. Under the snow the thermometer stood at 36 degrees.

R. E. Smith brought in four spring pigs on Tuesday that weighed over 200 pounds each, and sold them to Geo. Vine for six cents per pound cash. Such deals help out the light wheat crop wonderfully.

Miss Ollie Halverson has been greatly missed from her accustomed place in the post office during her illness. The JOURNAL is pleased to learn that the little lady is doing nicely and will no doubt soon be able to resume her duties.

Last week P. L. Renue did a land office business. He bought out his partner in the restaurant business, Mr. Krohn, and welcomed the arrival of a sweet little Miss whom he calls "daughter" and it didn't seem such a wonderful week for business either.

Threshing, the little that remains to be done, was resumed again on Tuesday morning. As the weather from now on is liable to be catchy, the farmers will be apt to improve every moment of the time that is serviceable until the threshing is all completed.

August Wentzel was in from the farm on Tuesday, looking pretty slim as the outcome results of a fortnight's wrestle with fever. August says the farmers are improving the opportunity to hush their fall plowing, and are running the soil over at a great rate. The late rains have helped out wonderfully in this particular.

"I don't believe there is going to be much of a shower, after all," said democratic state central committeeman, J. E. O'Brien as he grabbed his grip at the Merchants in St. Paul and started for the depot on Saturday evening last, while the republican clans were gathering for the great McKinley rally and the heavens were lighted up with the glare of thousands of torches.

The Minneapolis Journal had a long cock and bull article about two prominent citizens of Thief River Falls shooting moose out of season, and the Press, of that village in its last issue explodes the whole story, showing that the only foundation for the yarn lay in the fact that a citizen of that village has a few calves which he has captured and is raising as pets. It seems there has been no "wholesale slaughter of moose" as alleged and this fact ignitable to be made painfully plain to the meddlesome individual who started the yarn.

The question of county division is not a political question, although the townsite boomers tried hard to make it so, persuading several town alliance organizations to endorse it, but failed to persuade the populists to make it an issue. That the schemers were bitterly disappointed at their failure to induce the populist party to father their scheme is evident, but they are trying to work it among the various candidates for office by every device known to the scheming politician. The strong-holds of division are in the villages that are indicated as county seats and their immediate vicinity. Outside of this, the principal ones working for it are prospective officials of the new counties. When the schemers failed to get the endorsement of the populist party as a party, they seemed to have lost their courage in a measure and their grip in a large degree, and now they seem to be merely whistling to keep their courage up—they don't expect to win.

COUNTY DIVISION.

Some of the Schemes the Promoters are Adopting to Effect it. as Given by a Correspondent.

THE following communication from John Tollefson illustrates what the JOURNAL has long said, that as much human nature exists in other places as in Crookston—that men are just as grasping in the would-be county seats as anywhere else and the simple act of division does not get rid of human nature. Tollefson's experience shows the thin devices that the county division schemers are working to accomplish their schemes. They are depending upon a tissue of misrepresentation and utter falsehoods hoping thus to prejudice a majority to vote for division. Tollefson is led to suppose that the attacks made upon him are inspired by the meanness and avaricionsness of Crookston collectors, and in case of division his duties will fall off like an old garment and he will have no further trouble in the matter.

SUIT FOR $6,000 000.

Northern Pacific Bondholders After the Villard-Colby Management.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 6.—A telegram was received from Dow & Jones, the New York bankers, stating that the Northern Pacific bondholders' committee has definitely decided to begin suit against the Villard-Colby management for upwards of $6,000,000. The suit is to recover for the alleged wrongful expenditure of Northern Pacific funds in the purchase of connecting lines, equipments, etc. It is the result of the investigation into the charges against Oakes.

HE Chicago Times has a libel suit its hands. Joel P. Bentwole has ought an action for $50,000 for a elious article that appeared in the nes of a recent issue. Joel "sees" sir "mate" and "culls" them.

F populism was as strong all over e state as it seems to be up north re it is possible that the pops ght elect their governor and the delative ticket, in which case the ue state of things would exist as es in Kansas where a farmer can't rove a dollar to save his soul from le in no matter how good his security ay be. Minnesota farmers don't ant that sort of thing in their usiness.

ONE of the most prominent busiss men at Fertile, Knute Opheim, the Republican candidate for treasr. Mr. Opheim is one of the most ccessful among the business men of olk county, and his business habits e such that no better custodian of e treasury could be found than he. the people want honesty, capacity d faithfulness in their office they ill elect Mr. Opheim. No better an for the office was ever nea-ouel.

THE Populistic idea of putting erything in leading strings would e embarrassing after a while and ould have to be changed. They nink that their theories, if they ould be carried out would make the oor rich and the rich poor. As it is poor rule that would work both ways they would have to change the land as soon as they all got the wealth in their hands or the thing would flop back again and they would be again in the soup—where they say) they are now.

IT is said that money is plenty nough in eastern cities and can be had from 4 to 6 per cent, but a lack f confidence prevents its seeking western investments. The policy hat prevents money seeking investment here is suicidal to the best inerests of the country and the farmers of Minnesota are beginning to realize that fact. It is a singular act however, that there are some who do not realize the extent of the injury the Populist theory has inflicted on the state and these will vote the pop ticket next month.

FARMERS in this country have every reason to take heart and rejoice in the signs of returning prosperity. The first one will occur on November 6th, when the American people will arise in their wrath and administer such a rebuke to the party in power as they richly deserve for their attempts to destroy American interests and legislate for England. After that takes place, business will revive, the products of the farm will be in better demand, and the farmer will be one of the first to feel the effects of the revival.

WHEN you see a man so thinskinned that he will refuse to read Republican papers, you see a man so deeply dyed in prejudice that he has actually lost his reasoning powers, for the time being at least. Such a man has forgotten that government is for the best interest of those governed—ALL OF THEM—not a few only and he is so fully imbued with the idea of class legislation that he can think of nothing else. He is a populistical bigot who thinks the government should be run in the sole interest of the particular class that he happens to belong to.

THE position of judge of the supreme court is one of the most important to the people and yet it is a fact that very many are so little impressed with this fact, that, after they have voted for the governor, the congressman, the legislator, a favorite coroner and a few other offices making they totally neglect to vote on the candidates for supreme court judges. This position should be removed as far as possible from politics, but as long as it is not, men should be independent enough to vote for their own interests—vote for the best men for the position. This fall one of the ablest judges on the bench, Loren W. Collins, of Stearns county, is named to be his own successor, and he is the only man on the bench who resides north of St. Paul. Should he be defeated the country would be practically without representation on the bench and one of the ablest judges on the bench would be retired, which would be very unfortunate for the state and especially the north half, that would thus be left wholly without representation.

LOREN W. COLLINS.

Northern Minnesota's Candidate for Associate Justice of Supreme Court.

A Few Incidents in the Life of this Patriotic Citizen and Upright Judge.

Of Northern Minnesota's candidate for associate justice the St. Cloud Journal Press says: Judge Collins is a native of Massachusetts. His father was one of the early settlers in Hennepin county, Minnesota, living there in 1852. After receiving a common school education, young Collins commenced the study of law in 1861 in the office of Smith, Smith & Company at Hastings Minn.

Enlisted in the Seventh Minnesota Infantry in 1862 and served three years, both as a private soldier and a commissioned officer. He commenced the practice of law at St. Cloud in May, 1865, was four times elected county attorney in Stearns

LOREN W. COLLINS.

Democratic county Saterans; was a member of the legislature during the sessions of 1881 and 1883; and April 17, 1883, was appointed district judge for the Seventh Judicial district by Governor Hubbard to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge McKelvy. He was elected district judge without opposition in the November election in 1884, and was appointed associate justice of the Supreme court Nov. 17, 1887, by Governor McGill, upon the decease of Justice Dunn. He was elected associate justice at the election held in November, 1888, ensuing, receiving a majority of more than 46,000 over his opponent.

Northern Minnesota, regardless of party, feels a local interest and personal pride in the re-election of Judge Collins. He is the only candidate for the Supreme Court on any ticket whose residence is north of Minneapolis, and a failure to re-elect him would leave more than half of the state without a representation on the Supreme bench. The injustice of this apparent to every resident of Northern Minnesota. Judge Collin's record upon the bench has been such as to fully justify the demand of his re-election. His ability, his fairness, his honesty, are unquestioned, and both fairness us to locality and the spirit of non-partisanship in the judiciary call for his re-election to the place he now fills on the Supreme bench.

Will Dollar Wheat Return?

Under this head the Duluth Herald has the following encouraging words to say:

"The price of wheat is low and there are so many people who believe that a new basis of values for agricultural products has been established that talk of "dollar wheat" seems almost nonsensical to most people. There are some who have formed men in the grain trade, however, who are of the opinion that a large rise in wheat may soon be expected and that dollar wheat may not be a baseless dream, but become a pleasant fact. It is to be hoped that the predictions of these deciders will be verified and that the farmers will reap the great benefits which would attend a return to the higher figures. The prosperity of the farmer would be a stimulus to general prosperity, and the higher the price for wheat the better for all the people of this country.

A prominent Chicago grain firm has recently issued a conservatively prepared circular regarding the countries' crops and the outlook for future wheat values. Their statistical premises are derived solely from standard official sources, and their conclusion that long before another harvest wheat prices should experience a marked advance, appears to be solidly based upon indisputable facts. This circular points out that the government's September crop report indicated a yield of 1,100,000,000 bushels of corn, the smallest crop since 1874. This smallest of all corn crops is 350,000,000 bushels less than the short crop of 1890, and follows two other short crops that together gave us 850,000,000 bushels less corn than the two crops that preceded the crop of 1890. This will account for our extremely small visible supply, for the empty cribs and elevators at country stations and for the fact that now, two months before our new crop becomes available, Illinois is the only state that has any old corn to spare. The oats crop revenue nor and is 650,000,000 bushels.

Now while the wheat crop is the only one which was not seriously curtailed by last summers drouth, what are the real conditions of supply and probable requirement? On the basis of the government estimate figuring annual food requirements at four and two thirds bushels per capita on the basis of the latest estimate of population made by the United States department, viz: 68,-700,000, the following result:

Wheat in farmers hands March 1, 1894	154,000,000
Visible supply March 5, 1894	75,500,000
In country elevators, flour, etc., March 1, 1894	56,500,000
Government estimate, crop 1894	415,000,000
Total	691,000,000
Exports from March 1 to Sept. 1, 1894	76,000,000
Spring seed crop 1894	15,000,000
Winter and spring crop, crop, 1895	415,000,000
Consumption for food for four months from March 1 to July 1, 1894	107,000,000
Consumption for food for twelve months, July 1, 1894 to July 1, 1895	320,000,000
Amount left for export, visible and invisible supply and for animal food	91,000,000

In other words we have on Sept. 1 at our disposal, 94,000,000 bushels of wheat over and above our food and seed requirements. At our present rate of exportation, viz: 5,000,000 bushels per week, our exportrequirements for the forty remaining weeks of the crop year would amount to over three our entire available surplus, without making any provision whatever for a visible supply, which should be at least 20,000,000 bushels or for wheat in country elevators, and flour in dealers' hands, which in our figures just given are estimated at 56,000,000 bushels a year ago, or for a hushel in farmers' hands, or for the amount now being used for animal food, variously estimated by those best posted as nlready from 1,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels per week and constantly increasing.

The feeding of wheat, which is the new and undetermined factor in the crop situation has not only assumed these huge proportions, but is rapidly increasing. New England and the middle states are not only feeding their own wheat but are buying all round lots from the west for feeding purposes. Country mills are busy grinding it into feed and from Kansas to Maine consumers generally are using it to the exclusion of all wheat available. All this must make a hole in the stocks, and if the depletion of the stocks takes place in accordance with the statistics quoted, fl wheat may be seen again in the not distant future.

For Judge of Probate.

The republicans could not have named a better candidate than Prof. J. Walseth. Prof. Walseth is now a practicing attorney at Fertile and has been so long enough to be entitled to drop the "Prof." which distinguishes a man who when he was engaged in teaching in the public schools, and by which he is best known. The office of probate judge is one requiring the best legal talent to properly fill, and Mr. Walseth, with his long experience as a teacher and his legal acquirements seems publicly fitted for its arduous duties. Mr. Walseth has been a resident of Polk county for thirteen years and in that time has made many warm personal friends, and every one who knows him speaks words of hearty commendation of him as a man of ability and honesty, and the JOURNAL predicts that he will pull a big vote—expects to see him elected, in fact, and feels nssured that in that case the business will be in good hands.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

On Tuesday Evening, October 19th, at the Opera House, Crookston.

Hon. Frank M. Eddy will Address the Meeting on Political Issues.

HON. F. M. EDDY

Will address the citizens of Crookston and vicinity on the political issues of the day. Let everybody turn out and listen to the address by the next congressman from the seventh district of Minnesota.

"He's All Right."

The Marshall County Leader, the Populist paper published at Stephen, has the following words to say of Governor Nelson. A. J. Clark, the editor, knows just what he is talking about: "The state of Minnesota has had governors—including Ramsey, Marshall, Davis, Pillsbury and others, who have made national reputations and who will be written in history as "great men" and leaders of their day, but neither Minnesota nor any other state has ever had a governor that had or deserved the confidence, respect and love of its constituents, of the entire people of his state to a larger degree than Governor Nelson has. There is in fact, no fight on the election of governor in this campaign, and those who think that there is, are not even a little bit posted. Governor Nelson's plurality will be from thirty to fifty thousand."

Haldor E. Boen.

"The Duluth Record sizes up our congressman in the Seventh District as follows: Hon. H. E. Boen, the Populist congressman from this district, was in Duluth Wednesday. Haldor did not have much to say, but he thought the Republican principles of speeches alleged to have been delivered by himself in Washington. Haldor might well resent such all his trouble and weary miles of travel. The people of this district have been unrepresented long enough, and this year a man of ability—a man who is conversant with the principles of sound government—Hon. Frank M. Eddy, will be the chosen representative of the seventh district."

Donnelly's Ambition.

Speaking of Donnelly's ambition the Le Sueur News says: "Ignatius Donnelly advises his people to let all the offices go except those of senator and representative. He wants the other offices to be bartered and traded off for votes for the legislative tickets so that Washburn can be defeated for re-election to the United States senate. Donnelly is a candidate for Washburn's seat, and is willing to sacrifice the rest of the ticket in order to get votes that would be favorable to his election, but he will never succeed."

Bancroft's Treatise on Government.

What is it? It is a large volume written by that renowned historian, Geo. M. Bancroft, upon every conceivable subject that a politician wants to know, in fact a man has no business to pretend to be a politician unless he has a copy of it in his library for reference. The average man wants it in order to know whether the political spankers that he hears are giving him the straight tip—in fact no library is complete without it. It is an invaluable book for the youth of our land, and every parent of a growing family of boys should have it. C. B. Southwell is the agent for the work in this city and will call on you. You will miss it if you fail to look it over carefully. [27-8]

W. H. McNeil took the train for Lakota on Tuesday morning. He did not say so but it is surmised that he is on a wild goose hunt as he chose a pleasant day for the trip—with no snow-storms pending.

Death of Angus McIsaac.

Angus McIsaac, aged 65 years, died at his home near Euclid, Sept. 30th of inflammation of the stomach.

Mr. McIsaac was born in Cape Britain, 1829. In early life he engaged in the lumber business in New Zealand, and was very successful. Selling out his interests there he went to Cape Britain and engaged in the mercantile business but failed. He then removed to this country in 1882, where he resided until his death. Mr. McIsaac was a man of good, sound business principles and was noted for love of truth. He was honored and respected by all who knew him and he died trusting in his Savior and was buried in the cemetery at Red Lake Falls according to the rites of the Catholic church. He leaves a wife and many friends to mourn his loss.

The Wrong Doctrine.

Speaking of the teachings of the Populist candidate for governor, S. M. Owen, the Minneapolis Journal very aptly makes the following points: "Hon. S. M. Owen is trying to commend Populism to the people of this state, and labors during his present tour to show that, with Populism in power the country would have nothing to fear.

If the country has nothing to fear from Populism then the Populists have not really subscribed to their own platform. The platform means disaster to the country. Mr. Owen himself has declared that the government became it pat down an insurrection last summer which defied United States laws and assumed to override roughshod over them, and make a mockery of all government. In Colorado the Populist governor had an opportunity to show fealty to law and order, and he deliberately promoted and stimulated armed insurrection. If S. M. Owen becomes governor of this state after openly declaring his sympathy with insurrection, what have the people of Minnesota to expect from him B While he is governor there occurs an insurrectionary disturbance?

Again, the Populist gubernatorial candidate has declared that he is in favor of free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1. He tells his hearers that there is a great scarcity of silver money, and that what they need is free silver coinage. Mr. Owen's policy carried out would have this effect. The $1,200,000,000 gold in the country would disappear and the remaining $1,100,000,000 of silver and paper would drop in value one half, and every dollar in Mr. Owen's and every other man's pockets would be reduced in its purchasing power to 50 cents. Mr. Owen and his party in advocating free silver coinage ostensibly in behalf of the "toiling masses," are advocating a policy which will give us a currency redeemable in silver exclusively, and a dollar of which will be worth more than the bullion value of silver bullion. The toiling masses would find that their money would lose 50 per cent of its purchasing power.

It is because the principles of the Populists are so pernicious to the whole country and will promote lawlessness and financial loss and confusion, that no man in this state should allow himself to be deceived for a moment by the sophistry of demagogical Populist orators. Confusion, corruption, lawlessness and mob rule wherever Populism has triumphed. The party has had sufficient opportunity to show its qualifications to govern, and it has shown itself utterly unfit. Let not fire to the lay about the press which destroyed 15 or 20 tons of hay and the press. The press cost $300 a year ago and is a total loss. A person who could be guilty of such an act of vandalism should be kept in the penitentiary at Stillwater at the expense of the State.

The Saugstad colony started from the Great Northern depot on Wednesday morning, for their new home in the wilds of British Columbia, 500 miles by water and land, from Vancouver. They go to Winnipeg via the Great Northern, thence by the C. P. R. R. to Vancouver, thence by steamer about four hundred miles, thence the best way they can for 100 miles overland to the place of their destination. If they don't get sick of their job very soon we miss our guess.

DEMOCRATS FAVOR FOREIGNERS.

Secretary Carlisle Stretches the Law to Squelch American Interests.

The attitude of our secretary of the treasury, Mr. Carlisle, in desiring to accommodate the foreign manufacturers and the importers of foreign goods is quite in keeping with the free trade policy of his party. Were it otherwise we should be surprised at nothing. The following extract from a recent Washington dispatch:

"Secretary Carlisle is especially anxious to find some law of construction by which he can admit goods which under the present law are dutiable and are now in bond, but which become free under the new tariff law, into the United States free of duty without subjecting the owners to the expense of exporting them and then reimporting them."

It is very evident that the German tariff bill did not authorize what Secretary Carlisle has since permitted. Had the new law been explicit in so doing there would have been no occasion for the secretary of the treasury to be "especially anxious" to oblige his foreign friends. An honest man would not have sought a quibble or a subterfuge to evade the law. A true American would have executed the law as he found it and would have been glad of the opportunity that served to benefit Americans by prolonging the chance for the employment of American labor in the manufacture of American goods.

The public prominence that has so repeatedly been given to this Democratic official's inordinate desire to save a few dollars for foreign manufacturers, while at the same time wrestling a few dollars from the unfortunate American importers, is significant as well proof that the exact reading of the law has not been put into execution. It was undoubtedly the original intention of the free traders to grant to foreign manufacturers the special privilege that the treasury official has gone out of his way to yield. But through one of its many "inconsistencies and crudities" the original intention of the bill was defeated, and a muddlesome official has transacted a very dirty piece of business. His action should be tested in a court of law.

How Tariff Reform Was Accomplished.

PEOPLE SPEND THEIR SAVINGS.

Money Drawn From the New York Banks That Was Put Up During Prosperity.

The bank examiner and superintendent of banking has prepared his annual report upon the savings banks within his jurisdiction. It is of interest because it shows that the amount of money held by savings banks in this state to the credit of depositors on July 1, 1894, was $12,000,000 less than on July 1, 1893.

Out of the 31 counties in New York state there were only three that showed any increase in deposits, showing that the result of the threat of free trade was as widespread as it was disastrous. But even this does not represent the true condition of the people in the Empire State. The amount of money deposited in the savings banks during the year ending June 30, 1894, was $37,400,000 less than the people deposited the previous year, so the total amount withdrawn in 1894 was $54,400,000 greater than the total amount deposited in the same year. Here are the details:

A Curious Amusement.

A curious amusement is being indulged in at present by the inhabitants of Carlsbad. This consists of hunting or catching butterflies by means of a net and the electric light. Nightly, at every electric lamp, are to be seen three or four persons looking out for butterflies, which are attracted by the light. The trade has assumed very large development, even since last year.

J. M. Stephens took his hay press out into the country to bale a lot of hay, and had just got safely at work when on Monday night the press was destroyed by fire. Mr. S. says appearances indicate that somebody deliberately set fire to the hay about the press which destroyed 15 or 20 tons of hay and the press. The press cost $300 a year ago and is a total loss. A person who could be guilty of such an act of vandalism should be kept in the penitentiary at Stillwater at the expense of the State.

TALE OF CRIME.

Robinson Confesses to the Murder of Attorney Gibbs at Buffalo.

HIS WIFE FIRED THE SHOT.

Gibbs Made a Hard Struggle for His Life—The Criminal Record.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 16.—Clarence Robinson, the convicted burglar in the county jail here, made a confession which confirms what his wife had already told the police and answers all doubt about the murder of Montgomery Gibbs, the Buffalo attorney, in April last. When Deputy Superintendent of Police Cusack and District Attorney Benedek of Buffalo arrived here during the morning they were armed with the confession which Mrs. Robinson had made to the Buffalo police. They went at once to the jail and were shown into the corridor where Robinson was. The prisoner was asked to tell the officers what he knew about the Gibbs murder. After two hours' questioning the prisoner broke down completely. Bowing his head upon his hands he began to sob. Then

He Told His Story.

"When we arrived in Buffalo last spring," he said, "we were in want. We lived first at 190 East Eagle street in Buffalo, but during the week before the murder we had a room at 146 North Division street.

"When we started out that night Sadie wore men's clothes and we each carried a 32-calibre revolver. She had a British bulldog and mine was of the Smith & Wesson pattern. We walked along Delaware avenue and passed seven or eight persons. Gibbs approached us from behind and said to Sadie, 'here comes a swell guy.'

"He looks too big for us,' she answered.

"With that he had almost reached us, and, leveling my revolver at him, I ordered him to throw up his hands. Instead of doing so he struck me with a cane or umbrella. Then he grabbed my right wrist and we had a Fight for the Revolver.

When he laid hold of my wrist the revolver was fired, but the bullet went into the air. A moment later there was another shot and the bullet entered Gibbs' left arm. He fell toward me and we clinched. Then it was that Sadie pulled her revolver and shot him in the head. He dropped and we started to rob him, when we saw somebody coming. We skipped out, climbing over the hedge fence and, running between two houses, we separated and met on a back street. Then we walked around the block and took past the place of the murder, but on the opposite side of the street. They were looking him into a wagon as we went by."

In her statement to the Buffalo police Mrs. Robinson claimed that Robinson had and that she did not use her revolver. Turnley Abrams has the statement or two persons, however, to whom Mrs. Robinson admitted that she fired the shot which killed Gibbs.

The authorities here have promised to defer the sentence of Robinson for 10 days in order to give the Buffalo court a chance to pass on his confession. If he is indicted he will be delivered to the authorities of Erie county, N. Y., for trial.

JEALOUSY THE CAUSE.

An Alabama Man Murdered and His Body Placed in a Box.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 16.—Near Glen Allen, J. F. Allison, a prominent jeweler of Jasper, was shot from ambush and killed at an early hour of the morning. Allison, it is reported, had gone from Jasper with a young lady who lived near Haw River Tank. He was passing near the house of the young lady's aunt when, it is supposed, by a jealous lover. The body was placed in a box by the murderer, a blanket thrown over it and a tag with Allison's name and address attached. No arrests have been made, though one man is suspected.

Fatal Quarrel Over Land.

PERRY, O. T., Oct. 16.—E. T. Hand, professor of the Kildare high school, shot four holes through George E. Rumsey, formerly mayor of Arkansas City, Kan., near here. Roher died instantly. Both men were contestants for the same piece of land and the killing was the result of a quarrel over it. After killing Roher Hand started to give himself up to the officers and became insane. He screamed and could be heard for miles. Both men were prominent.

Tried to Cremate His Landlady.

HAZELTON, Pa., Oct. 16.—John Huddock of Jeansville set fire to the boarding house drunk and tried to kill John Struko. The latter fled. Huddock then destroyed the furniture in the house. He afterwards locked Mrs. Struko with her three children in a room and set fire to the building. Neighbors with difficulty rescued the woman and children. The house was partly destroyed. Huddock was arrested.

His Residence Blown Up.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 16.—A Commercial Gazette special from Vinemont, Ind., says: The residence of Joseph Furrier, colored, was blown up by dynamite. No one was killed, but the house was wrecked. No clue to the dynamiters can be found and no cause is known for the crime.

FITZ FLUKES.

He Refuses to Sign the Articles in Their Present Shape.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—After receiving by mail a copy of the fighting articles from New York, Bob Fitzsimmons declared he would not sign them in that shape. He objects to fighting for the championship belt put up by a sporting paper, as he considers it put up for advertising purposes. Also to the size of the gloves, which should be five ounces, the same used by Corbett, Sullivan, Mitchell and himself. Also to the club's naming the referee unless the clause is inserted that he shall be satisfactory to both parties. Fitzsimmons said: "I don't know anything about the Florida club, but I hear that Corbett's backers, the Dwyers, are behind it, and as he has had everything his own way so far, I think I should at least have a say as to who shall be the referee."

WILL BE NO OPPOSITION.

Neither the Governor Nor Legislature Will Interfere With the Fight.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 16.—Jacksonvillians shall be a radical change in public sentiment there will be no opposition to the proposed fight here between Corbett and Fitzsimmons. Mr. Richardson, one of the principal backers of the Florida Athletic club, is reported to have said that the new club would not have conducted its scheme if there was any chance of opposition by the governor or hostile legislation at Tallahassee next spring, so the opinion here is that the backers of the club have been given inside assurance that they have nothing to fear from the legislature. Governor Mitchell's failure to stop the Corbett-Mitchell fight last winter will, it is thought, deter him from any attempt to interfere with the Corbett-Fitzsimmons affair when the time comes, if ever it does come, for it to be pulled off.

FOR TRAIN WRECKING.

Detectives Gather in the Men Who Ditched a Grand Trunk Train.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Oct. 16.—The particts suspected of wrecking the Chicago and Grand Trunk train here on the morning of July 16, during the strikn excitement, and who were the cause of killing Fireman Crow and injuring almost 20 persons, have at last been arrested. Saturday Stanley Knowles, Joseph Bodwig, George W. Johnson and E. M. Jewett were placed in custody here on charge of the result of the efforts of five Chicago detectives. Knowles had been given positions on the road as part of the plan for the capture. Finally the detectives cornered him and accepted from him a confession to the effect that the crime was committed while the men were desperate over the strike and their failure to prevent the trains from running. Jewett and Bodwig are held in Chicago and will be brought here. The other two are held in hiding here by the detectives.

Wreckers Have Confessed.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Detective Sutherland said that Knowles and Bodwig, two of the accused Grand Trunk wreckers have confessed. Sutherland said George W. Johnson, a Battle Creek switchman, also accused, has been arrested.

General Harrison's Tour.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 16.—General Harrison appeared at the breakfast table looking and said he was ready for another day of speech making. At 8 a. m. the special train bearing him and his party left over the Air Line for Indianapolis. Stops were made at New Albany, Jeffersonville and other points where meetings had been arranged.

CHINESE DIVIDED.

A REBELLION BREAKS OUT NEAR HANG KOW.

The Rebels Attack Government Buildings and Defeat Government Troops—Two Mandarins Killed—Russian Troops Reinforced.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A dispatch from Shanghai confirms the report telegraphed to the associated press that rebellion has broken out 100 miles from Hankow. The rebels are fairly armed and very reckless. They attacked the government buildings, which were feebly defended by loyal troops. The latter were soon defeated and many of them were killed; many others joined the rebels. Two mandarins were killed. The province is almost denuded of troops and the rebels are daily gaining strength. It is expected that they will advance on Woo-Chang, province of Hoo-Pee, of which Hankow is the capital. The garrison at Woo-Chang has gone to the coast and the place is therefore practically defenseless.

GERMANY WILL CO-OPERATE.

Her Refusal to Interfere Will Not Affect the Protection of Europeans in China.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—A dispatch to The Times from Berlin says that Germany's refusal to interfere in the Chino-Japanese trouble does not affect the question of protection to Europeans in China, in which she will fully co-operate. The German commander in Chinese waters has already been authorized to dispatch a small body of marines to protect the legation at Pekin. If there should be any trouble it is believed that the moral effect of even such a small body of European troops would effectually check a Chinese mob.

WAR PREPARATIONS.

Russian Troops Being Reinforced and Made Ready to Move.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—It is announced here, in a dispatch from St. Petersburg, that the Russian troops in the towns, villages and passes on the Chinese frontier are being greatly reinforced, and that large quantities of provisions and war material are constantly arriving at these places. Everything, it is added, is being prepared for a forward movement into China, if this should be decided to be necessary.

Putting on the Best Face Possible.

LONDON, Oct. 16 —A dispatch from Shanghai says: It is reported that in consequence of the projected 1,000,000 pound, 10 per cent loan to be guaranteed by the imperial customs, Chinese agents abroad, have been instructed to put the best face possible on the recent Chinese reverses and to represent the fleet as being active and efficient.

MORE JAPS LANDING.

Shanghai Reports Say That Forty Thousand Are Now on Chinese Soil.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 10.—Various local rumors are in circulation here, the most prominent being that 40,000 Japanese have landed near Shanghai Kwan. Tia telegraph wires have been cut, thus hindering communication. A report, classed here as reliable, says that the Japanese have landed near New Chwan, gulf of Leo Ton. A letter received here from Tien Tsin says that during the progress of a review of troops on Friday last, the China Merchants Godown volunteers protected the settlement and are now patrolling the streets from sunset to sunrise.

It is reported that several Japanese warships have been sighted off Chefoo. A dispatch received here from Tien Tsin reports British and Russian ministers have arrived there, and that they will proceed at once to Pekin.

A report which reached here says that after a skirmish north of the Yalu river Tuesday, the Japanese outposts were driven across the river.

It is announced here that repairs to the Chinese fleet have been completed at Port Arthur, and that the fleet will proceed to sea at once.

Shan-Hai-Kwan, where the Japanese are reported to have landed 40,000 troops, is directly on the railroad connecting Tien-Tsin to Moukden, and is of great strategic importance. The opinion has been expressed that if Shan-Hai-Kwan is captured there is nothing to prevent the Japanese from marching on Pekin. A Japanese fleet was reported to have been sighted off Shan-Hai-Kwan on Sept. 28.

CHINA HAS ENOUGH.

Negotiations Opened With Japan for a Peaceful Settlement.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 12.—A rumor is current here that the Chinese government has commenced negotiations with Japan for peace. China, it is said, has offered to acknowledge the independence of Korea and to pay a war indemnity to Japan.

The Czar Will Dis Slowly.

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—According to the Lokal Anzeiger, a Vienna physician, who is fully informed by St. Petersburg doctors, states that the diagnosis of the czar's complaint wavers between cancer in the renal region and inflammation of the kidneys. All the doctors agree, however, that the said will be either speedy nor sudden, but that death will come after a gradual decline.

Powers Will Confer.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—The Journal says that it learns that a conference of the representative powers will soon be held at Pekin, with the view of appointing a board of arbitrators to settle the war between China and Japan.

Lockwood Is Mum.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 15.—Congressman Lockwood, nominee for lieutenant governor on the regular and Independent tickets, still refuses to say whether he will permit the use of his name on the third ticket or not.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Ingvald Knutson, a single man, dated January 1st, A. D. 1892, to Thomas Gunnerude, as mortgagee, to the Northwestern Security Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 1st day of January, A. D. 1892, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 15th day of January, A. D. 1892, at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 47 of mortgages on page 42.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $400, payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of ten per centum (10) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note, and has since been duly assigned by said mortgagee to said mortgagee.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Security Loan Company, a corporation, has elected and hereby does elect to declare the whole sum of said mortgage debt due, by written assignment dated October 2nd, A. D. 1894, and recorded in the office of the said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, on the 3rd day of October, A. D. 1894, at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 64 of mortgages, on page 170.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $400, and interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $444.33 being the amount of said principal and interest computed to the 1st day of November, A. D. 1894.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the premises described in said mortgage and hereinafter mentioned, to-wit: The northeast quarter (N½E¼) of section twenty-seven (27), all in township one hundred and forty-six (146) north of range forty-four (44) west of the fifth principal meridian, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder therefor for cash at the front door of the county court house in Crookston, Minnesota, on Thursday, the 29th day of November, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, which said premises are described as the property which will be sold to pay said mortgage debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and the insurance (if any), the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, including the attorney's fee stipulated and agreed to be paid in said mortgage and allowed by law.

D. 1894, and recorded in the office of the said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, on the 3rd day of October, A. D. 1894, at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 64 of mortgages, on page 170.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $400, and interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $444.33 being the amount of said principal and interest computed to the 1st day of November, A. D. 1894.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the premises described in said mortgage and hereinafter mentioned, to-wit: The northeast quarter (NE¼) of section twenty-seven (27), all in township one hundred and forty-six (146) north of range forty-four (44) west of the fifth principal meridian, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder therefor for cash at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Minnesota, on Thursday, the 29th day of November, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, which said premises are described as the property which will be sold to pay said mortgage debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and the insurance (if any), the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, including the attorney's fee stipulated and agreed to be paid in said mortgage and allowed by law.

The jury in the case of George Peck against the City of St. Paul, for damages for injuries sustained by reason of a defective sidewalk, visited the sidewalk in question, and while viewing it one of their number broke through and his companions were compelled to help him out. The jury went back and promptly returned a verdict of $5,000.

David Ramaley, stab printing expert, has prepared the state ballot and ordered 800,000 of them to be printed. As required by law a sample ballot was posted in the office of the secretary of state. Mr. Ramaley thinks that at least 270,000 of the 325,000 voters of the state will deposit their ballots on election day. Two years ago there were 267,398 votes cast for presidential electors.

A case was argued before the supreme court which brings into question certain of the provisions of the Australian election law. The contest is over the regularity of some votes in the Third precinct of the Fourth ward of the city of Winona, where the chairman of the board of election clerks marked 150 ballots for alleged illiterate voters, while the law specified that no one person shall mark more than three ballots.

Wheat Destroyed.

HANLEY FALLS, Minn., Oct. 18.—Fire at Wood lake, believed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed the elevator and warehouse of the Pacific Elevator company. There were 18,000 bushels of wheat in the elevator, a greater portion of which is a total loss.

ANOTHER BIG HAUL.

Pacific Express Company at the Dalles, Ore., Robbed of a Large Sum.

THE DALLES, Ore., Oct. 16.—The Pacific Express company's office in this city has been robbed of $14,000 or $15,000. The money was sent here from Portland and arrived Saturday night. F. N. Hill, express agent and two officers took charge of the money as soon as it arrived, taking it to the express office.

Details of the robbery are very meager. It is thought that the robbers came here on a train with the treasure box and knew where it was consigned and the contents, and followed it up after it arrived. They made easy work of capturing it. C. Tibbits, the company's driver, sleeps in the express office, but on the night of the robbery he was attending a ball and did not return until 4 o'clock. The robbery was evidently committed between 11:30 and 12:30 Saturday night, while Tibbitts was absent. There is no clue to the robbers.

GOT AWAY WITH $30,000.

The California Train Robbers Made a Big Haul.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 13.—Over $30,000 was the value of the booty secured by the train robbers who held up the Central Overland between this city and Davisville. They secured four sacks of coin. Three were full of gold. In one was the less valuable, white metal. Two of the sacks contained $20,000 each and the other the sum of $10,000. The fourth sack was full of silver and it is presumed the full booty of the express was between $31,000 and $33,000.

CAN'T CUT SALARIES.

Important Decision at, Omaha by Judge Woolson.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 12.—United States Circuit Judge Woolson has decided that the receivers cannot cut the salaries of the employes of the Omaha and St. Louis (Wabash) road.

Judge Woolson in his decision recites the doctrine laid down in the recent decision of Judge Caldwell that "the employes must be paid fair wages even though no dividends be paid," and holds that this rule must govern, always keeping in mind the general rule that a court must turn the road out of the hands of the receiver just as soon such a thing can be safely done.

AGAINST MONEY LOANERS.

Minnesota Supreme Court Renders an Important Decision.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 11.—Judge Buck of the supreme court has handed down the first decision of the term, and it is an important one to the loan agents and their victims in this state. The court holds that loaning money through agents who charge usury and collect the interest under the guise of pretended services rendered the borrower, constitutes a void transaction. The decision is in affirmation of one made by the district court at Duluth.

MR. OAKES WAS WISE.

Judge Jenkins Commends the Northern Pacific President.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 16.—Judge Jenkins' decision in the United States circuit court confirms that portion of Special Master Carey's special report which exonerates Director Oakes. The judge commends at some length the conduct of Mr. Oakes, both as an official of the Northern Pacific road, and receiver of the company.

The question of ordering the receivers to bring suit against certain directors to recover unlawful gains is left for future decision.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

A Score of Rollers Blow Up in Rapid Succession at Shamokin Pa.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Oct. 11.—Four men were killed, two fatally injured and several others painfully burned by a disastrous boiler explosion that occurred at the Henry Clay colliery. The entire steam supplying plant of the mine, consisting of 36 boilers, was mostly demolished.

Raising a Million.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The Advertiser says that the racing men are raising a fund of $1,000,000 to defeat the new constitutional amendments to be voted upon this November. They are anxious to defeat the amendment because it prohibits gambling of all kinds in the State of New York and will even prohibit pool selling on all tracks in the state.

Wisconsin Y. P. S. C. E.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Oct. 16.—Five hundred delegates are in attendance upon the Wisconsin state convention Y. P. S. C. E., which began during the day. The opening services were conducted by Rev. J. T. Chenoweth of Sheboygan. A reception to the delegates and supper were afterwards given.

Commissioner of Pensions Reports.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The report of Commissioner of Pensions Lochren for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, has been submitted to the secretary of the interior. The amount paid for pensions during the year was $138,894,461, leaving a balance in the treasury of $35,305,713 of the appropriation.

Bayard in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Hon. T. F. Bayard, United States ambassador to Great Britain, returned to America on the American line steamer City of Paris. Mr. Bayard was met at the dock by a number of Delaware friends.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Dennis Cronin and Adolph Gunst, his wife, of Polk County, Minnesota, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, bearing date the 17th day of November, A. D. 1893, and filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 6th day of December, A. D. 1893, at 2:40 o'clock p. m. and recorded on page 536 of Mortgages.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1900, principal sum, and $95 interest from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of ten (10) per cent per annum, payable semi-annually according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and the coupon interest notes mentioned and described in said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the American Loan and Trust Company, a corporation, by assignment dated the 16th day of April, A. D. 1894, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1894, at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 64 of mortgages on page 536, &c.

And whereas the said Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the American Loan and Trust Company, a corporation, by assignment dated the 16th day of April, A. D. 1894, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1894, at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 64 of mortgages, on page 536, &c.

And whereas default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1900, and interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1894, and there is now due and owing on said note and mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of $1087.50 being the sum of principal and interest, and the sum of $100 attorney's fee as in said mortgage stipulated, and no proceedings have been had to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and thereon recorded and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following described premises, to-wit: The north half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼NE¼) and north half (½) of section twenty-six (26) in township one hundred and forty (140) north of range number forty-one (41) west, containing one hundred sixty-four and 50-100 (164.50) acres more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Minnesota, on Thursday, the 6th day of December, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, to pay said debt and interest thereon, and the taxes, if any, the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, including the attorney's fee in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid as foreclosure thereof.

IF our Populist friends consult their own best interest in the matter of supreme court judge they will cast their votes for Judge L. W. Collins.

THERE is nothing like experience to convince one of great truths. The object lessons this country has had on the tariff question ought to be fully convincing.

THE Minneapolis Journal says: "The Seventh district woods aren't quite so full of populists as they were. Since Eddy went gunning for votes he has been fetching 'em in big bags full. Boen finds it harder running on a record than without one. And his record is so full of holes!

THE Democrats object to a protective tariff "because it controls a man's personal liberty," they say. Most men had rather have a steady job at good wages than so much "personal liberty," and not a cent for the pocket. Protection to home industries is the true American motto.

THE JOURNAL does not regard the rank and file of the populist party with any vindictive spirit, as they are for the most part simply misled—but for the leaders, those who hope to profit from the sufferings of the people we have not got any time—not a minute. They don't care a continental for the country if they can but gain their own ends.

MAYOR EDGETT, in his speech at the opera house last week appealed to the patriotism of his audience, to American citizenship, and clearly and forcibly set for our duties and privileges. He also showed how the evils the farmer has complained of can be remedied, in a practical, business-like manner. He showed wherein the free coinage of silver would not raise the price of wheat and urged his audience to vote for their own interests, showing them clearly that those interests are fully cared for by the republican party.

How do you like that era of cheap goods the Democrats promised you? At the corresponding rate of wages it seems to keep a poor man figuring more closely than ever to make both ends meet. Under the McKinley bill we used to get from 20 to 22 pounds of sugar for one dollar—now we get 16. Yet the Democrats promised to make great reductions in all the substantials of life when they came into power. The only thing they have fully succeeded in reducing is the wages of the laboring man and the price of farm products.

IN this world of trials and tribulations it is a very easy thing to promise—to find fault with the existing state of things, and it is hard enough to get along sometimes even when one is disposed to look upon the bright side of things and to make the best of them as they occur. What wonder, then, if farmers, whose lot has not been the most encouraging for the past ten years, should find their lot harder to bear after listening to the grumbling of some demagogue, who hopes through their ills to gain some office or other. The damage such pests have done is incalculable.

THE Farmers' Alliance, when it went into politics, demanded farmers for official positions. Afterward, when it went into the Populistic camp, it was not quite so particular on this point, but did insist on efficiency. It seems to the campaign to have yielded that point also in many counties, to such an extent that, should the Populistic ticket be successful in the state there would be the biggest howl you ever heard in some counties, and what a combination of circumstances the legislative body would be! They have some candidates who actually don't know enough to pound sand.

A TIME FOR PATRIOTISM.

At the time when the nation's life was threatened at the hand of treason then we found men enough to go forth upon the emasculated field and do battle to save the life of the nation. This was patriotism. At this time, when the prosperity of the nation is in danger from the machination of cranks and lunes, when social lan under the guise of "reform" is rampant in the land, threatening not only the prosperity but the very life itself of our country, when the ship of state is bounded by pirates who threaten to so steer her course (if they can get control) to dash her upon the hidden rocks that lie in waters that appear to be fair and smooth—at such a time the country has need of another band of patriots in sufficient numbers to save her from destruction, as did that band of devoted heroes in the sixties. There is just as much need of high-minded and fearless men, as patriotism as there was in those dark days of deadly peril, and today the nation calls for her patriots, her loyal sons to come to her rescue and save her from one of the most insidious foes that ever tried to wreck her. As the last attempt upon her life was made by her own sons, so is this, with this difference, that now there are many rebels from foreign nations trying to instill the poisons of their deadly doctrines in free America, while in the back ground there looms up in ominous silence a tremendous power that only awaits a favorable opportunity to fix its deadly fangs upon the fair fabric of our American liberty and throttle the life out of it. The ship of state is again in danger. The great seas are raging and boiling in their anxiety to engulf her. The low mutterings of the thunders are heard in the distance; the storm clouds are brewing while ever and anon the lightnings flash that hurl the ship becalming the coming of a treacherous storm. The good old ship, which has so long withstood the storms, is now straining and shivering in every nerve, and here and there small leaks can be seen, showing that the seams are beginning to spring and the water to find its way into the hold. All these signs but show the danger that threatens the good old ship of state; but show the need of bold, courageous men to man her, to guide her, to manfully work at the pumps until she rides in the deep, fair waters that lie just beyond the storm area, safe and sound. It is a time for true patriotism; it is a time for action, and the man, who at such a time would not work at the pumps is either a maniac or a monster.

LOOK TO YOUR OWN INTERESTS.

To the thinking man, the close student of the different theories presented by the different parties in the political field, it is clear that the policy pursued by the Republican party is the best one for the true interests of all concerned. But to the unthinking man, to him who scarcely ever takes second thought upon the same subject (and there are many of that class), how is it? If there ever was a time when a man should study up this question in his own interest that time is right now. That there is something radically wrong everybody can understand, but what it is and how to apply the remedy may not be so plain to everybody. And for that reason it behooves every voter to look well into the matter before he decides to vote for every new lean that may present itself promising to work the needed reform. It is a pertinent question to ask "what has this new party done to benefit the country?" If they can show a good record, well and good. It is also a pertinent question to ask of the Republican party, if its record shows that its policy has brought peace and prosperity to the country in a greater degree than any other? If it has, then it is well to bank on that party. Its past record is good evidence that it will continue right along on the same line. The events of the past few months show that the policy of the Republican party on the tariff question is the only sound one, and for this reason, if no other, the Republican party is worthy to be returned to power.

A GREAT SCHEMER.

THOMAS, Ignatius Donnely, is making the supreme effort of his life to be elected to the United States Senate. All his life he has spent his time and talents planning and plotting for self aggrandizement, and at one time he had an opportunity to accomplish something had he been earnest and sincere. That was when the farmers sought through organization to benefit their business, and Donnelly took hold ostensibly to help them, but really to further his political ambitions. He soon saw that to the alliance as a business organization, would not accomplish his purpose, so he deliberately went to work to slaughter the alliance and erect upon its ruins a political machine that would do his bidding. Even that machine after he got it built and not work to his entire satisfaction, and now he advises his friends to drop every thing else on the ticket if need be in order to elect a Populist legislature. Why? Because the legislature elects the United States senator, and Donnelly is right in line for that. He is getting quite old, and realizing that fact as well as the fact that the Populist party is rapidly going to pieces, and will soon be remembered with the things that were, he sees that it is now or never with him. If he can't get there now he never can, and true to his real nature he urges the Pops to throw everybody else overboard and save him. If he can only get to the U. S. senate he can round out his life in satisfactory shape—to Donnelly; but that is the only earthly good that would come of it. Not another person would be benefitted.

DEMOCRATIC ECONOMY (?)

THE Democrats are making a great parade over "a saving of thousands in pension disbursements." And they look to the people of the United States to favor that "saving!" And what does that "saving" mean and what kind of economy? Is it? Suspension money paid out to old soldiers is a debt that the United States owes to the men who took their lives in their hands and went forth to save the Union when its life was imperilled. The government said to these men: "If you will go forth and risk your lives and health for the Union you will only receive $13 per month now, but we will save for you and protect you in your old age and we will see that you do not suffer want as long as this government shall stand and you shall live." The government needed money to carry on the war and borrowed it at a high rate of interest. That debt was placed in a business form, hedged about by voluminous legal documents. It cost the government far more than all the money that would be required to give every soldier now living a sufficient sum per month to keep him above want as long as he shall live, yet that debt was paid in full. The Republicans attempted to pay the debt this country owes the old soldier by passing a general service pension bill, but the Democrats defeated that, and the only thing that could be passed was the law of 1890, that was intended to cover the same point. The Democrats, by miscontruing that law, are preventing men who are justly entitled to pensions from getting them, have cut down some and suspended others, thus "saving to the country thousands of dollars" of a just and honest debt by practically repudiating it! And they call this "economy" and brag about it. There is not a government in the world that does not take better care of its soldiers than the United States has, and yet the Democrats scheme and plan to reduce even this beggarly pittance, that is doled out. If they had their way they would cancel the debt entirely and repudiate the debt entirely and thus make the United States a reproach and bye-word among nations.

POPULISM AND INTEREST.

MEN have complained of the exactions of loan agents, who in times past have managed to exact large bonuses and make big coup out of the necessities of borrowers—but this does not justify the Populist idea of driving out capital altogether in order to get rid of the pestiferous go-between. Today there is nothing that would prevent the average Polk county farmer borrowing all the money he needs, except the fear that capitalists have that the Populist party will gain control of the legislature and pass such laws as will render it impossible to do a safe loaning business in Minnesota. This state of things is not in the interest of the farmers of Minnesota, however much the demagogue Populist speakers may assert that it is. We do not believe that a farmer can afford to pay as high a rate of interest as 12 per cent., but a law that would allow him to pay that if he wanted to is better for his interest than a law that would not allow him to pay over 6 per cent, because such a law would drive out every cent from the state, while the former would induce it to come. Because a man has a right to borrow at a ruinous rate does not imply that he is obliged to do it. It is a fact that a very great deal of the grumbling that has been heard over usurious rates arises not much from a lack of business methods upon the part of the borrower as from any other reason.

IT is somewhat amusing to talk with your wild and wooly average Pop of the rank and file. Reason and a rule, he thinks he is rich in it. And imagines that it is the rank and file in the party that controls things, and he does not seem to see that the party is in the hands of, and controlled by, a set of worse demagogues than ever controlled the destinies of any party before. They feed on and this out, and in their manner in which they have been imposed upon they will drop the Pop idea like a cold potato.

IF men will only use their judgment without prejudice they will soon be convinced that the will schemes of the Populist party are not for the best interest of all concerned. It will pay to think it over.

THE St. Paul Globe, fully believes in keeping up appearances, so in the face of certain defeat it tries to jolly up the boys with fatty stories of "certain democratic victory." The Globe knows better but seems to think that such silly twaddle helps the lost cause. After the election the Globe will spend some time explaining how it happened.

THE less hampered by laws you can make a man the nearer you come to the idea of true American liberty. This does not imply that you must not have good and salutary laws to restrain the vicious elements of society but that it is not necessary to put a law on for every thought, every action of mankind as some of the Populist spokesmen would have you believe.

PREJUDICE for the past few years has cut more of a figure in our politics than it should be allowed to do, and every candid thinker will admit the truth of this statement. Prejudice with nothing to back it is mighty poor argument, yet it forms at least two-thirds of the stock argument of the average populist speaker, and the other third is wild and visionary vagaries. The solid business interests of the country can never be built up on such stuff.

We do not suppose that there is really a farmer in Polk county who does not desire the things that are for the best interests of the country, and we do not believe that there is one farmer in the county who can explain how the aims and objects of the Populist party, if they could be attained, could benefit the people. In a general way they assume that Populist theories would help mankind—a portion of it only, but how or why we have never seen a man yet who was able to explain.

IF you will stop and think a minute you will see that fault-finding or grumbling is the chief plank in the Populist platform, and this very feature is at once the strength and the weakness of the Populist party. Its strength, because, in the natural order of things, it can gain strong temporary headway upon the evils that do exist, and its weakness because the people do not relish that kind of thing as a steady diet, and they soon tire of it and want something reliable—substantial.

IF a man is fully imbued with the principles of the Republican party, he will be proud that he is a Republican, and he will take a strong personal interest in the success of his party—a party that has identified its the interest of good government—of the best government, and he will work hard for the success of that party at the polls every month. Every true Republican is a true patriot and if every true patriot in Polk county will work for the success of the Republican ticket will be triumphantly elected.

ALL over the United states Populism is on its last legs and will hardly be heard from after the coming election but in Northern Minnesota there is more of it than any where else in the country. Our people are slow to catch a disorder but when they do get it they seem just as slow to get over it. The idea of getting something for nothing, of getting two or three per cent money in abundance seems specially exciting to the settlers on our broad prairies but they do not seem to stop and consider how best these things may be done. If they did they would see that the better security a man can offer the better chance he has of obtaining money if he wants to borrow it and if he don't want to borrow money he must have something that will sell for it—and that will produce or yield it. When the people of a country put themselve in an attitude that threatens to make loans insecure, capital is driven away and money becomes scarce. A liberal and just policy toward all is the best one.

AS time wears on, bringing us nearer to the day when the voters of Polk county must decide upon the important question of division it becomes more apparent to the close observer that the sober second thought has reached the majority of the voters and their verdict will be against division. They have had full time to analyze the amphitrites of democratic promises of division and to find little in their glittering stories of benefit to the average taxpayer. It has become apparent to them in the natural order of things that four counties would cost enough more to run to make a very material increase in their taxes and these "good old democratic times" are certainly expensive enough without adding any needless burdens. It certainly is no time to split up into four parts whatever the future may develope.

TO COLLECT THE INCOME TAX.

Superintendent Pugh Has Only $9,000 With Which to Do the Work.

One of the first duties of William H. Pugh, the new superintendent of the income tax, will be to assess himself $4, for the reason that his annual salary is $4,200. Superintendent Pugh is a resident of Cincinnati, where he has a well earned reputation as a criminal lawyer and all round lawyer. He is a brother of ex-United States Senator George E. Pugh of Ohio and has long been an intimate friend of Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle, who gave him his present appointment. This is not the first time that Mr. Pugh has been favored at the hands of Secretary Carlisle, for in May, 1893, he was appointed to be commissioner of customs at a salary of $4,000 a year. The Dockery investigation, however, legislated him out of office.

In entering upon the discharge of his duties Mr. Pugh finds himself seriously handicapped, owing to the failure of congress to provide sufficient funds for the proper execution of the income tax. Congress appropriated only $9,000 for the purpose, although the treasury officials estimated that $500,000 was needed and asked congress to provide that sum. The law specifically assigns the work of collecting the tax to the commissioner of internal revenue, and Superintendent Pugh will perform his duties under the eye of Commissioner Miller. At present Mr. Pugh is busy preparing the literature concerning the tax, compiling old decisions bearing on the question and comparing the new law with the old.

Mr. Pugh served two terms as prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county, O., the county in which Cincinnati is situated and of which it is the county seat. Since then he has practiced his profession in Cincinnati, except when attending to his duties as commissioner of customs. Although a man of between 50 and 60 years of age, he is very active physically and mentally. He has been a Democrat over 30 years and is a member of the Duckworth club, a Democratic association of Cincinnati. The treasury officials believe that the sealed appropriation of $500,000 for the enforcement of the law will be passed at the coming session of congress.

HE IS AGAINST TAMMANY.

An Ohio Man Running For Mayor of New York City.

The municipal campaign in New York city, city the year ensuing, is of interest, and the issue of the struggle between Tammany and its foes is watched with interest everywhere. Colonel William L. Strong, candidate for mayor nominated by the Republicans and anti-Tammany organizations as affiliate with them, was first in the field, and though hitherto unknown as a candidate is well known as a businessman.

He was born March 23, 1827, in Richland county, O., and after obtaining a common school education entered a retail dry goods store in Wooster at the age of 16. After two years there he entered a store in Mansfield, and after some seven years' work there removed to New York city and secured a place with L. O. Wilson & Co., then one of the largest dry goods houses in the city. This firm went to Boss in the panic of 1857, and Mr. Strong went into the house of Farnham, Dale & Co., which for seven years has been the president. He is also a director in the Erie railroad company, in the New York Life Insurance company, the Hanover Fire Insurance company and various minor corporations, is treasurer of St. John's guild, president of the Ohio Society of New York, and active in other social and charitable organizations.

Politically he was originally a Republican, but down to this time has been merely an active worker in the ranks. In the last three presidential campaigns he was especially active in organizing the Dry Goods Trade and Down Town Business Men's Republican clubs.

Those Pimples

Are tell-tale symptoms that your blood is not right—full of impurities, causing a sluggish and unsightly complexion. A few bottles of S. S. S. will remove all foreign and impure matter, cleanse the blood thoroughly, and give a clear and rosy complexion. It is most effective, and entirely harmless.

Chas. Heaton, 79 Laurel Street, Phila., says: "I have had for years a tumor on my liver, which made me dread to shave, as small blotches would break out, the cutting causing me to be a great annoyance. After taking three bottles of S.S.S. my face is all clear and smooth as it could be—appetite splendid. I feel not an ill effect from the cutting. I can't say too much for the use of S.S.S."

RESIDENCE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

I have forty desirable lots in Jerome's addition, which I offer for sale at reasonable prices and on terms to suit purchasers. These lots have 50 and 100 feet frontage, and are situated on high land, where good dry cellars can be got, and an abundance of pure water can be had at a depth of from 15 to 25 feet. Jerome's addition is the healthiest and pleasantest portion of the city, not a single case of typhoid fever has ever been reported there, and this is no doubt owing to the good water found there and the excellent drainage. For further particulars regarding lots, prices, terms, etc. inquire of or address M. R. Brown, Crookston, Minn. [19-35]

PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, Executive Department.

Whereas, pursuant to Chapter one hundred and forty-three (143) of the General Laws of 1893, "An act to provide for the creation and organization of new counties and the government of the same," a petition was filed with the secretary of state, on the 2nd day of September, A. D. 1893, praying for the creation of a new county out of the territory now in Polk county, and which, by a survey made by Jno. Lee Smith, and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at the southeast corner of township No. 154, of range 45, running thence south along the township line between range 45 and 46 to the southwest corner of township No. 153, of range 45; thence east along the township line to the northwest corner of township No. 152, of range 45; thence south along the township line to the southwest corner of township No. 152, of range 45; thence running east along the south line of said township to the southeast corner of section No. 34, township 152, range 45; thence running east along the township line between ranges 44 and 45 to the northeast corner of township No. 152, range 44; thence south along the township line between ranges 44 and 45 to the northeast corner of township No. 150, range 44; thence west along the township line between the townships 150 and 151, to the eastern boundary of Polk county; thence running north in a direct line to the northeast corner of Polk county, and place of beginning, and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at the southeast corner of township No. 154, of range 45, running thence south along the township line between range 45 and 46 to the southwest corner of township No. 153, of range 45; thence east along the township line to the northwest corner of township No. 152, of range 45; thence south along the township line to the southwest corner of township No. 152, of range 45; thence running east along the south line of said township to the southeast corner of section No. 34, township 152, range 45; thence running east along the township line between ranges 44 and 45 to the northeast corner of township No. 152, range 44; thence south along the township line between ranges 44 and 45 to the northeast corner of township No. 150, range 44; thence west along the township line between the townships 150 and 151, to the eastern boundary of Polk county; thence running north in a direct line to the northeast corner of Polk county, and place of beginning, and contained, and found and certified to as conforming in all respects to the provisions of said law.

Now, therefore, I, KNUTE NELSON, Governor of the State of Minnesota, pursuant to the authority vested in me, by the law aforesaid, do hereby direct and proclaim that the question of the creation of the county of Clearwater out of said territory, and the organization of said county, at the next general election to be held in this state on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1894.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the state of Minnesota to be hereto affixed, this 7th day of October, A. D. 1894.

KNUTE NELSON,
Governor.

'TWAS DONE TO DECEIVE

The Statements Published by the County Divisionists Are Fraudulent and They Knew It.

Can They be Trusted After This Bare-Faced Attempt to Deceive the Taxpayers of The County.

Sworn Proof That the Expenses of Running Polk County Are Only $43,794 Instead of $84.183, as Stated.

And That the Average Per Township is Only $584 as Against $650 for Norman, Douglas, Pope and Grant.

So much has been published in the newspapers of McIntosh, Red Lake Falls and East Grand Forks about the cost of carrying on small es compered with large counties that is arroneous and misleading that we think it well to give the facts in a connected form, so that those who desire it may the more easily ascertain the situation.

This will require us to go quite extensively into figures, which are proverbially dry reading, but we hope all will be sufficiently interested in the question of county division to give them careful attention.

The papers named have selected for comparison with the large county of Polk for the year 1893, the four small counties of Norman, Douglas, Grant and Pope, where among the small counties of the state the expenditure has been the least, where scarcely anything has been laid out on county improvements, and where such officers as register of deeds and clerk of court retain the fees they collect as their compensation and receive no salary from the county, while in Polk county, under special law, these officers are paid a salary by the county which is charged up as county expenses, and the fees they receive are all turned into the county treasury.

Besides this, none of the small counties named have any charge for county hospital, as they have no such institution, and a large charge is made against Polk county on that score and no account is made of the fact that this expense is paid back to the county by individual patients or by the towns, villages and cities that send the patients there because it is less expensive than caring for them at home.

The most important omission of the "comparative statement, "however, is the failure to mention that in "expenses for all other purposes" for Polk county is included the sum of $17,563.38, paid for building the county jail and putting steel cells and heating apparatus in the same; something the other counties have nothing like, but will, no doubt, some time build. This, of course, is not a charge that will have to be incurred again by Polk county. It is also incorrect in some other things.

We give here a full statement of the expenses of the county of Polk for the year A. D. 1893:

County Auditor's office	$ 3,960.80
County Treasurer's office	3,184.95
Register of Deed's office	2,966.85
Clerk of Court's office	2,100.00
Sheriff's office	3,580.52
County Attorney's office	1,681.20
Judge of Probate's office	1,658.92
Co. Superintendent of School's office	2,300.00
County Surveyor's office	170.27
County Jailer's salary	600.00
Janitor's salary	840.00
Co. Comm's salary and expenses	1,843.62
Examining insane and conveying to asylum	1,556.00
Light, Fuel & repairs on Co. buildings	849.40
Books, stationery and advertising	4,120.15
County roads and bridges	6,246.41
Postage, express and freight charges	838.17
District Court expenses, including juror's fees, mileage, etc	6,440.61
Justice Court expenses	1,055.47
County Jail expenses	2,105.56
County Hospital expenses	3,504.98
Building new county jail with steel cells and heating apparatus	17,363.38
Total	$72,978.88

Besides the above amount there was paid interest on bonds $6,120.21, and to the sinking fund to pay the bonds of the county $4,230.46, which should not be charged up to running expenses of the county in making comparisons with other counties for the reason that the debt it pays was incurred in former years, for county buildings and bridges which are assets of the county, and we may say in passing, that in case of county division each county will have to pay its proportion of this debt and interest.

To make the comparison fair between the counties named, it must he taken into account that them has been refunded to Polk county of the expenses above stated the following sums:

Board furnished U. S. prisoners	$ 67.85
Collected from Co. hospital patients from city of Crookston for hospital patients adjusted and will be paid before Nov. 1st, 1894	614.11
Monies refunded by city of East Grand Forks for repairs on bridge	325.00
State of Minn. bridge appropriation	450.00
Fees of register of deeds paid to county treasurer	4,070.25
Fees of clerk of court paid to county treasurer	3 093.35
Total	$11,317.56

Taking the total amount refunded from expenses leaves the sum of $63,140.79 as the amount of expenses of Polk county for the year 1893, and deducting from this the extrordinary expense caused by the erection of the county jail leaves the sum of $45,776.90 as the ordinary expenses of the year, and the sum it should have been placed at instead of the sum of $84,183.69, as given in the widely distributed "comparative statement" published by the advocates of division.

This makes the average expense per township $694.37 as against $680.92, the average for the counties of Normen, Douglas, Pope and Grant, if the figures given for these counties by the divisionists are correct, which we will show is not the case.

All the foregoing that relates to Polk county is taken from the financial statement of the county auditor for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1893, except as to amounts owing by the city of Crookston for hospital expenses which has since been adjusted, and board of Norman county prisoners, sad is undoubtedly correct.

We apprehend no one will believe that the compilers of the statement published by the papers we mention were ignorant of the fact that under a special law the register of deeds and clerk of district court of Polk county are required to turn the fees they collect into the county treasury, and that they and their clerks are paid salaries by the county, which is not the case in any of the counties of Normen, Douglas, Pope or Grant. Nor were they ignorant of the fact that the county hospital is nearly self supporting, nor that a large part of what they held out as ordinary county expenses was incurred in erecting the new jail, or that the counties they name for comparison have no assets that require costly bridges, and the amounts spent for county improvements is nearly nothing.

But to have dealt fairly with the matter would not serve their purpose, and they have been willing to lead their aid to deceive the people by publishing a partial statement only when a full one would show the unwisdom of the cause they advocate.

EXPENSES OF A NEW COUNTY.

It is amusing, indeed, to look over the estimates made by writers in the East Grand Forks, Red Lake Falls and McIntosh papers as to the cost of running a new county. Those people do not seem to know that the salaries and fees of their officers are fixed by the general laws of the state, and that the county commissioners will have nothing to do with it, except as to salary of county attorney. That they fix in the first place, but the attorney, if not satisfied can appeal to the judge of district court. We think it is hardly too much to say that a county attorney worth having will not be cut for less than $600 per annum. However even if he was to be attorney, section 893, Kelley's Statutes of Minnesota fixes the salary of auditor, and and section 806 of same that of treasurer and any fairly intelligent school boy will figure out that the salaries of auditors will be:

For Nash	$1,700.00
Columbia	923.54

instead of $720 for each as given in these estimates. For treasurer it cannot be so accurately estimated, as his salary depends upon moneys he collects or receives, but it will be nearly if not quite double the estimate of $600 per annum. Judge of probate is paid according to population, $100 for first one thousand inhabitants, and fifty dollars for each additional thousand or major fraction thereof. This will make for Nash, $450, Red Lake, $450 and Columbia $550, instead of $300 for each as estimated.

They estimate for books and stationery, $400, when any person of experience in these matters knows it will be at lenst $4,000 the first year, as the records relating to the new county will have to be transcribed, and new books bought in which to enter these. And so it is all along the line.

The people who got up these statements know well enough the commissioners cannot fix the salaries of the officers named, and that their estimates are a humbug, but they think the greater part of people who read their papers will not take time to find the facts, but swallow whole all that is given them.

We apprehend they will find the people know more about the situation than these townsite boomers give them credit for.

Though it will not benefit them as much as they seem to think, it is to be expected that most of the people who reside and own property in East Grand Forks, Red Lake Falls or McIntosh would desire to make their place a county seat. Any village would no doubt wish that. But as to the farmers, about all that would result to them from county division would be increased taxation. First would be the greater expense in proportion for county officers; next an expense of from $4,000 to $5,000 per county for procuring the necessary books and transcribing the records, which will be a necessity, and then a new court house and jail to ornament the ambitious city. You need not doubt that this would come. Most of it would be necessary, and all would be proper. They talk about a school district giving their building for a court house should receive no consideration, for no school district or village, or city for that matter, can legally give anything for such a purpose. The county could be made to give it up at any time, and the officers of the municipality who so used its property would be liable to a civil and criminal action for the same. Don't allow yourself to be fooled by that kind of chaff, but vote against the scheme of making four small, ill-shaped counties out of Polk, with a county seat in each of them away off to one side. If you think a division at all best, make one on common sense lines, leaving in each sufficient for a good sized county.

START IN DEBT

The Burden of Debt Under Which the New Counties Will Labor.

As a Result of Division Taxes Will be Almost Doubled.

Each of the Counties Must Pay Their Share of the Present Debt.

Some people seem to have the impression that in case of county division the new county will not be liable for any part of the debt created before its organization. This is a mistake. All such indebtedness is to be paid by the old and new counties in proportion to their assessed valuation. This will be apparent from a reading of the law. Section 14, Chapter 143 of General Laws of 1893 providing for the crestion of new counties is as follows.

"Sec. 14. When there is any bonded or other floating county indebtedness outstanding against any county out of which any such new county has been wholly or in part created, the same shall be paid by such old and new counties in proportion to their respective valuations as shown by the last general assessment) of the portions of the property of the county or counties out of which such new county has been created. Provided: That in case any such county out of which any new county has been in whole or in part created, possesses any buildings erected by the county, the same shall be appraised and the present value thereof by the county in which such buildings are situated shall be ascertained as hereinafter provided, and such appraised value of said buildings shall be deducted from the amount of said bonded or floating indebtedness to be so apportioned, and the remainder of such indebtedness shall only be so apportioned between the several counties; and the amount of said remaining indebtedness (and which equals and represents the said appraised value of said county buildings) shall not be so apportioned among such several counties, but shall be wholly paid by the county which has and retains such county buildings. Each county buildings shall be appraised and their present value fixed and determined by three wholly disinterested persons, who shall be appointed by the governor; neither of whom shall be residents of or owners of taxable property in either of the counties interested and who shall take an oath to honestly and impartially appraise and determine the present value of such county buildings, and they shall file their oath with the secretary of state; and when they have made their appraisal they shall state and specify in the same in writing over their respective signatures, and make said sum and file with the auditor of each of such counties one of said certificates of appraisal; and such appraisal, when so made and certified to, shall be final and conclusive and such certificate shall be such evidence of the same. In making such appraisal said appraisers shall consider the cost of such county buildings and allow for subsequent wear and depreciation thereof and determine the present value thereof to the county."

The present value of the county buildings to the county retaining then is to be deducted from the indebtedness and the balance apportioned among the several counties. What the present county buildings consisting of court house and jail would be worth to a small county is not easy to estimate. The jail anyway is three times the size that would be required.

The bonded indebtedness incurred principally for court house and bridges amounts to $104,500.00 $40,000.00 issued in the year 1883 the balance at various times between the years 1881 and 1889. As no county property but puildings is to be deducted and those we have now would hardly be considered worth more than $25,000.00 to a small county the balance to be apportioned among the several counties would be at least $70,500.00 of the present indebtedness of Polk county. The equalized assessment for 1893 shows the proposed counties would have:

Polk,	$2,190,403
Nash,	1,706,157
Red Lake,	1,2?,1,434

and the balance of indebtedness, $79,500, would he divided as follows:

Polk,	$29,175
Nash,	22,725,
Red Lake,	16,003
Columbia,	11,507

So it is unforunately true that none can start with a clean sheet.

We have given in this sheet the latest official figures as to cost for county purposes of all the counties of the state, their area, population and assessed valuation. We have given from the official financial statements the cost to Polk county for the year 1893 and also of Norman county for that year, and also the statement of expenses of Polk certified to by the county auditor, C. U. Webster. We have pointed out the errors in the "comparative statement" issued by the county division people. We have shown that their estimates of the cost of running the proposed counties is very wide of the mark, and the proportions of the indebtedness of Polk county that each will have to assume; and we have further given some arguments that seemed to us pertinent to this question under consideration.

As to the arguments and comments we have made, each person can of course judge for himself what bearing they have on the case, and we only ask a fair consideration of them. And as to the figures and statements of the law we give under the present circumstances we feel warranted in making a particular appeal to the voters of the county. So much has been issued in the way of statements and statistics by the advocates of county division that we say is false, that the fair-minded man who desires to get the truth but has not the official statistics and statements and laws at to and from which to inform himself may well say I do not know which of your statements to believe; I may as well believe one as the other.

To all such we would say, if you cannot find time yourself to look up the truth, go to your neighbors who are in the same position and agree on some one of them on whom you can rely to find out what are the real facts.

We have in this statement been very particular to give the figures and law correctly and we positively assert that they will not be found to vary from the official statistics and laws. We invite your most diligent search and criticism, and submit the matter to you, confident that whether or not you think division of the county on some lines would be beneficial, your better judgment will tell you that the proposed division, making the counties as small and ill-shaped as this scheme proposes, can only be injurious to all of them and would benefit the proposed county seats much less than they imegine.

Farm produce is gradually going up and soon all the products of the farm will bring a fair price. If the farmers would look at the way pork is going up it is safe to say that more of them will feed wheat to hogs next season.

C. U. WEBSTER,
County Auditor.

CROOKSTON PAYS

More Taxes Than Either the Counties of Columbia or Red Lake.

This City Better Able to Support a County Than They Would Be.

Our Assessed Valuation More Than Columbia County by $200,000.

The City of Crookston pays more than one-sixth of all the taxes of Polk county. Its assessed valuation in 1893 as finally fixed by the state board of equalization was $1,067,818 while that of the whole county was $3,986,626. Outside of county buildings scarcely anything has been expended by the county within the city in improvements in recent years and but little has been asked, so it will be seen that Crookston pays large sums for roads and bridges outside her borders beyond her proportion. We do not hear that any objection is made to this but it may not be out of place to call attention to the fact.

We have heard many expressions of surprise that the people of Crookston do not bestir themselves in the county division matter. While the proposed county seats are all alive raising money, issuing literature and sending out canvassers to gain votes, Crookston has remained passive not even doing anything to correct the false statements that have been so industriously circulated by the boomers of East Grand Forks, Red Lake Falls, and McIntosh.

They expect the people of these towns to be active for division, but they expect the farmers of the county who will have to pay the cost and who have the decision of the matter in their hands, to look into it and learn where the truth lies. They may have been too ready to believe that the tables as to cost of running large and small counties that have been issued and are so incredible in themselves would not be accepted as true until inquiry was made and the truth learned; and that the trouble of contradicting them is superfluous. However that may be it is the farmers who have the votes that will decide the matter and who have the cost to pay and they should take interest in the matter as much or more so as much as the City of Crookston.

HOW IT WORKS.

The claim is made that in case of county division district court expenses would be less, as jurors would have less distance to travel to the county seat. It is a fact that as it is proposed to divide the county the jurors would not have to travel on an average more than half the distance they now do, but it should also be remembered that four times as many jurors will have to travel and receive mileage. They will, of course only have one fourth as long to stay as now, but they will have the travelling to do each term just the same. This would be a considerable item of additional expense. As to sheriff's fees it should be remembered that the sheriff of Polk county under special law of 1891 is only allowed 75 per cent as much for his services as sheriffs generally receive, and is doing work for the county, he receives pay only for miles actually and necessarily travelled. Witnesses and parties to suits have to travel further now, but it is a great advantage to have a long term of court at one place rather than four short terms at various places, for the reason that in a term of few cases all parties and witnesses will find they must be in readiness for their case all the time, as the cases cannot well be set for a day certain. But where there is a large number of cases for trial, an arrangement can generally be made so a party knows the day his case will come on and need not be waiting around for it. It will be seen there is something on both sides of this feature of the case.

Voters should remember to vote on each proposition for county division. There are four propositions, and voting on one has no effect upon the others. A cross opposite "Yes" is a vote in favor of establishing that county, a cross opposite "No" is a vote against that division. A majority of all the votes cast upon a proposition determines whether the county named in it shall be established.

One vote in favor of a proposition will establish the county if no one takes the trouble to vote "No." Let every one keep this in mind, express his wishes whichever way they are on every proposition for the establishment of a new county. This is by far the most important matter to the people of this county as a whole that is to be decided at the coming election. Don't fail to vote on each and every proposition with, a sense of the fact that your are registering your judgment on a matter of great importance.

HE HAS THE NERVE.

DARING OF STAMBULOFF, BULGARIA'S PRIME MINISTER.

Single Handed He Has Held the Russian Empire at Bay for Years—His Wits the Diplomatic Agent—How He Crushed the Panitza Plot.

For what Bulgaria is today she is indebted almost solely to the valor and wisdom and indomitable will of young Stambuloff, the prime minister.

For years he has held the whole Russian empire at bay single handed. The other powers of Europe sympathize with him, but give him no practical support. Open attack and secret intrigue he has alike baffled. Assassination he has defied, though it has often been tried against him.

He has resisted Russian aggression; he has beaten Servia in the field and Greece in the courts; he has made his sovereign's throne secure; he has made Bulgaria a nation and created a national public spirit, and he has, at less than 40 years of age, himself wortlily in rank among the leading statesmen of Europe.

One of his most dramatic passages at arms with Russia occurred during the war with Servia, when the czar "showed his hand" in a decidedly offensive manner. Stambuloff has told many times and seems never weary of telling the story of Slivnitza.

In that battle the destinies of Bulgaria and Servia were to be decided. Prince Alexander had gone out to lead the Bulgarian army in person, leaving Stambuloff in charge at home.

It was a brilliant day, with a cloudless sky and scarcely a breath of wind stirring.

The roar of the cannon was plainly heard in the city, owing perhaps to some peculiar condition of the air or perhaps to echoes from the mountains.

At any rate it sounded much nearer than it really was, and Stambuloff and the others thought the Servians were winning the day and were driving Prince Alexander and his army in upon the capital.

In their anxiety they applied to the Russian diplomatic agent for advice. That gentleman shrugged his shoulders and said it was no affair of his.

"But," urged the Bulgarian ministers, "the Servians are almost at our gates. You could stop them with a single word if you would."

"Yes, but that word will not be spoken, not though they were actually entering the city with your prince a prisoner, as indeed they soon will do. On one condition only will I stop them, and that is that your beggar of a prince shall abdicate at once."

"And that," thundered Stambuloff, "he will not do—no, not for 20 Russias!"

With that Stambuloff sprang into the saddle and dashed away to the battlefield, while the Russian agent sent for his friends to come to his house and help him celebrate the defeat of the Bulgarian armies.

A few hours passed, and then the Bulgarian prime minister got a telegram from Stambuloff, dated on the field of battle, telling of Prince Alexander's magnificent victory and of the utter rout of the Servians.

He hurried with it to the house of the Russian agent, arriving there in the midst of the festivities. And when he told the news the representative of the czar ground his teeth and swore a big oath.

As the world knows, Prince Alexander lost his throne because he neglected to heed the advice and warnings of his prime minister.

Prince Ferdinand is more wise. He puts himself fully in the hands of Stambuloff, making the latter the real ruler of Bulgaria and the chief guardian of the throne.

How daring and vigorous the minister is in his great work has again been shown in striking incidents.

There was, for example, the arrest of Major Panitza, who was at the head of the most dangerous and powerful plot ever organized against the prince.

Stambuloff finally settled the matter by making the arrest himself alone. At midnight he knocked at Panitza's door. The major's wife, with a loaded pistol in her hand, admitted him.

Recognizing him and divining his errand, she raised the weapon to fire. He looked at her, and her arm fell, and she turned away. Then Stambuloff went up to Panitza's room. He found him in bed, a loaded revolver at his side.

"Major Panitza," said the minister calmly, "get up, dress yourself and come with me."

The desperado grasped his revolver. The minister folded his arms and looked at him as Marius looked at the slave who came to slay him. Panitza laid down the weapon, rose, dressed himself and followed his captor to prison.—Melbourne Argus.

TRIMMED HER EARS.

A Philadelphia Society Woman Undergoes an Operation to Improve Her Looks.

A young society woman from Philadelphia underwent a painful operation Tuesday at the hands of Dr. L. P. Pitkin, 137 West Forty-second street, to remedy a pair of ears which she thought were not shapely enough. In reality they were not at all unusual either in size or design, but the young woman thought they stood out too much from her head.

She sat in the chair yesterday afternoon, and with the exception of a few spasmodic little screams submitted to the surgical operation without flinching. Dr. Pitkin made a long incision in the back part of each ear and cut out a V shaped piece of membrane. Then he sewed up the wound and drew the ear back close to the head. When one ear had been fixed up, the young woman looked in the mirror and seemed to think the improvement very slight, but the surgeon assured her that it was greatly improved, and when both had been treated she thought they looked much better. The doctor said he had sewed up the wound and drew the ear back close to the head. Glass Weaving.

The key to the process of making glass curtains, in connection with knit material, consists in operating particular needles of the machine at the right times and allowing others to remain idle, for which purpose a set of chain bars is used, as arranged as to render it possible to command the different needles according to the needs of the process. A chain is made up of bars, links and balls, like those used on the loom for weaving cloth, and there is a lever attached to the shoulder of each needle and extending from the part where the goods circle the needles down to the first bar of the chain, the latter resting in bearings. On the turning of a crank connecting beveled gears motion is imparted through the agency of an upright shaft to the chain cylinder, and every time the yarn is delivered to the needles a revolution is made, the chain bar cylinder presenting a new bar to the levers of the needles, and whenever a ball on the bar contacts on the lever the needle to which it belongs is pushed forward, and a mechanical device causes the needle to operate and form loops, thus knitting. There are, however, blanks on some of the bars, and when these blanks come with the levers of the needles no movement is made.—Upholsterer.

ROGUISH LITTLE MINCH.

The Trick by Which the Famous Race Horse Got His Name.

Many stories are told of Little Minch, the race horse, which indicate that he is a remarkably sagacious animal. Some would assert that he is capable of reasoning, but horse fanciers are liable to distort instinct and pure cunningness into reason and sagacity. It is said that while this son of Glenelg was being transported east after his sale as a yearling he was given a nickname by a railroad engineer that was subsequently applied to the horse, and under it he won his laurels. Little Minch's car was attached to the front end of a passenger train, and the bellcrpe passed through it, the same as it would through a passenger car. The horse was playful, and after several unsuccessful attempts to seize the rope in his teeth the spiteful little creature caught the cord and gave it a hasty jerk. The bell in the engine cab sounded, and the engineer, fearing something was wrong back in the train, made haste to shut off steam and apply his airbrake. After coming to a stop he waited for the astonished trainmen to come up to his cab. They denied that any one had pulled the cord, and the engineer passed the occurrence with the remark, "Maybe the rope caught and tightened while we were going around a curve."

But the mischief loving Little Minch was having a lot of fun in the car. No sooner had the train got under headway again than he again seized the bellcord and gave it another jerk. Once more the engineer came to a stop, declaring that the bell ringing was the work of tramps, but a search for the rido steal ers failed to reveal any, and the train proceeded. With almost human repugnancy Little Minch again seized the rope, but he was not content with one jerks, and the way he pulled that rope was a caution. The enraged engineer slipped back in time to see the horse tugging at the rope, which he had bitten in two by his efforts, as if his life depended upon his ability to tear it out of the train. "Oh, you little mischief! So it was you, was it?" cried the engineer. And the horse stopped and hung his head much as a guilty boy would have done. The story was retold many times, and the animal was named Little Minch.—Chicago Tribune.

Why Are "Dogdays" So Called?

Properly speaking, the "dogdays" last from the 3d of July to Aug. 11. Dogs are then popularly supposed to go mad, but this is a mistaken notion, besides being untrue in fact. Dogs are, strange to say, less liable to rabies then than at other times. "Dogdays" is a translation of the Latin "dies caniculares," the 20 days which precede and 20 which follow the rising of Sirius, the star in the dog. The Romans called "Canicula," or the "little dog." The ancients considered this star to have an evil influence and sacrifices, a brown dog to it in order to appease its rage. Of course it is known that in the course of time Sirius will rise in midwinter instead of midsummer.

How to Make a Good Lip Salve.

Rose salve is very useful in winter to keep the lips from chapping or cracking. To make it mix 3 ounces of oil of almonds and half an ounce of alkanet. Let them stand in a warm place and strain. Melt 1¼ ounces of white wax and half an ounce of spermaceti with the oil and stir it lightly to thicken and add 19 drops of attar of rose.

How We Use the word "Rodomontade."

"Rodomontade" means bragging and comes from Rodomont, king of Sarza or Algiers, in Boyardo's "Orlando Innamorato" and Ariosto's "Orlando Furioso." This word is a most unjust imputation on him, from whose name it is derived. Rodomont was famous as the lover of Doralis, princess of Granada, who afterward eloped with Mandricardo, king of Tartary. In a quarrel he challenged Roger at his wedding and was killed, but there was nothing in either the challenge or the fight to judge him as an eastern Bob Acres—all talk and no courage to fight.

One Coroner's Verdict.

We print the following genuine verdict rendered by an old coroner of Kentucky as an aid to the gentlemen in the same profession in the discharge of their delicate duties:

State of Kentucky, Russell County, ss:

An inquisition taken for the people of the state of Kentucky and county of Russell this 31th day of October, 1854, before Mr. M. W. C., coroner of said county of Russell, upon view of the body of a male man, name unknown, then and there laying dead upon the oath of 12 good and lawful men of the people of the said state and county of Russell and who said on the same come to his death, we the jury do agree, the body come to his death by death unknown. THAT STRAY RYE LOAF.

It Has Made a Tour of the Catskills and Is Now Profusely Tagged.

The stray loaf of German rye bread which arrived at the Rondout office of the American Express company has been making a tour of the Catskills since it left here and looks as though it were for traveling the 200 additional miles. But it had a dozen or more tags added on its Catskill mountain tour.

C. E. F. of Pine Hill, the summer home of Chancellor MacCracken, Professor Henry Morton, the family of the late Dr. Crosby and a score of other well known persons, writes:

If this is a sample of the chutty bread,
Lord pity the poor, for they better be dead.
Go jer'n peace.

Over the signature of Blake, Will, Fred & Co., Bloomville, April 5, 1894, is the following:

This predicat of noble birth,
Now wandering homeless o'er the earth.
You would be floor among the lo-ow,
Was bread and raised with greatest care.
Be kneaded only to be tossed
To learn which side his bread was buttered,
But loafing mand this upper crust
Neglected duty and was lost.
SOMAL.

Oh, may it no'er to us befall,
Such weight to enter in our soul.

Another Bloomvillo tag says:

RECON OR RAIN.—Let the oleomargarine alids this war.

S. B. Champion, better known as "Champ," the veteran editor and proprietor of the Stamford Mirror, tags it as follows:

This loaf to Stamford town did cry
To be exchanged for good old rye.
So gal. Cast it again upon the waters,
For it's no use to our married daughters.
You may think it rather queer,
It's very far west of Deer.
We've milk and honey now on hand,
So send it to some poorer land.

The editor of the Hobart Independent adds the following:

Take it up tenderly, lift it with care,
Pass it on D. H., nor charge even half fare,
Pretend it from rebbers, hasten it on with speed,
Let it stick the globe, nor once miss its connections.

The Grand Gorge agent tags as follows:

Boys, if you're inclined to wed,
Hunt the girl who makes this bread.
Auburn ringlets, eyes of bine,
Dimpled cheeks and heart of true,
Voice angelic, form shining,
Round your heart will strive to woo.
But you'll find long ere your dead
They "don't is it" with this bread.

The Roxbury agent adds the following:

The story of this loaf of bread
By posts has been told,
But now it's here in Roxbury,
The birthplace of Jay Gould.

Station Agent Broderick will retain it for a few days and then send it west on the Hudson River railroad. A large number of persons have visited the express office and examined the mysterious loaf and scanned the 50 or more tags and labels. The proprietor of a New York museum has offered for it, but the loaf will continue on its journey.—Kingston (N. Y.) Dispatch.

QUAKERISM UP TO DATE.

The Latest Concessions to Modern Ideas by the Society of Friends.

The yearly meeting of the Society of Friends has adjourned after having adopted several changes in their usages that will be of very general interest. The rule concerning marriage, that for time out of mind has been regarded with such rigor in the society, has been changed in the direction of liberality. It is now altogether feasible for a member to marry one who is outside the society without losing standing or, in any event, membership in the society. Formerly it was impossible for a member to marry any one not a member of the society without the consent of the meeting, provided the person was a member of any other body. Now, in all cases, if the meeting consent, it can be done in good order. Even if a member marry contrary to the order of the meeting and desire to retain membership, the meeting is now, by the changes in the discipline, permitted to retain him in women's meeting, it may also be observed, in given equal voice with the men.

The new discipline makes a number of other changes. Among the most interesting is one recommending that Friends abstain from the use, cultivation, manufacture and sale of tobacco. A recommendation against the use and sale of liquors has long been in force and remains unchanged, except that it has been extended so as to prohibit even "furnishing any material whereby the testimony against intoxicants is violated."

The testimonies in relation to "plainness" of speech, apparel and behavior remain unchanged. The attitude of the society in relation to slavery is stricken out, and many obsolete expressions are modernized.

The queries have been recast and now embrace 14, the answering of which embraces a statement of the condition of the society on almost all essential points.

One of the changes that has been made is the substitution of the term "free ministry of the gospel" in place of the term "preaching," which is deemed tasteful to many. The testimony against a paid ministry is not changed, but only the name by which it is known is rendered more euphonious.

Peace and arbitration are also advocated.—Philadelphia Press.

Used Opium For Paint.

A rancher on Vashon island, Washington, has his house painted more expensively than any other house in the state. Last fall he found a box which contained 200 pounds of what he thought was a fine quality of fireproof paint floating in the ocean. The paint was packed in small tin cans and bore a foreign label, and as it had cost him nothing he thought he would paint his house with it. The house is now painted inside and out, and in doing so the greater portion of the paint was consumed. The rancher has discovered, much to his sorrow, that instead of fireproof paint he has his house covered with about $8,000 worth of smuggled opium, which was thrown overboard by smugglers.—Portland Oregonian.

WHEN FRUIT FREEZES.

Why Oranges Are Able to Resist Frost to an Extent.

The late Professor Newberry of Columbia college, New York, showed scientifically some years ago how oranges and apples are able to resist frost to an astonishing degree. His explanation is especially interesting to every citrus fruit grower.

The professor showed that it is a law of crystallization or freezing or solidifying that this process depends upon several conditions of the liquid to be crystallized or frozen, by which is meant simply that the liquid is changed into a solid. The law of evaporation has much to do with it, as this itself reduces the temperature of liquid to a considerable extent, as may be discovered by any person who will pour a little ether in his hand and blow upon it, when the greatly increased coolness will be felt. In India water is frozen by exposing it in porous jars to the rapid night winds when the temperature of the air is several degrees above the freezing point.

Ice may be formed in a rellbot crucible by the sudden evaporation of liquid carbonic acid or in a saucer under the receiver of an air pump by the evaporation of it and the rapid absorption of the vapor that escapes by reason of the reduced pressure by sulphuric acid in another saucer.

Again, solutions of various substances, as sugar and crystallized salts, will not freeze at the ordinary temperature at which ice is formed in pure water. Thus a solution of salt requires a lower temperature to become frozen than fresh water does, and it is well known that sugar syrup can hardly be frozen at any ordinary temperature. Further, the tendency under which liquids are held has an effect in the same way. A light tension makes freezing easier, while a high one retards the congelation.

Now, all these facts have a bearing in the case of oranges and other fruits, as well as the sap of trees. Watery sap of very succulent plants freezes much more easily than the sweet and dense sap of the maple or the hickory. Some buds will resist freezing quite stubbornly at a very low temperature, and the resinous covering of the bud scales of trees, as those of the horse chestnut, exert a great resistance to freezing.

The sap or juice of the orange contains a large quantity of citric acid in solution, and a low temperature is required to congeal such a solution. It also contains considerable sugar, and this tends to resist cold. The sap or juice, which exists in this fruit in the proportion of 78 per cent in the orange, is under considerable tension, and this exerts a great resistance to freezing, and finally the sap is not exposed to evaporation because of its tight covering by which it is protected.

Thus an orange must be exposed to a lower temperature than the ordinary freezing point of water before it will freeze. The same applies to other fruits, as apples and vegetables and potatoes, to some extent.—Pomona (Cal.) Progress.

Sullivan County Men Will Have to Pay More Than a Hundred Per.

Twenty-two of the torner residents of Sullivan county were last year interested in a speculation which in 1888, to $640 in 1894, a period of six years. In 1888 there were seven electric railways in the United States. In January, 1890, there were 102 railways in operation and in process of construction. In January, 1891, the number had grown to 231, while today there are probably over 500 cities in the United States equipped with electric roads, many of them of great mileage.—Electrical Review.

Is the Oleander Poisonous?

Whether locality has anything to do with it or not has not yet been definitely settled, but certain it is that in certain portions of the country the oleander, so much admired for its beautiful blossoms, has been the cause of serious illness, and in some cases death has been attributed to a bouquet of these attractive flowers. Several persons were attacked with exceedingly painful throat disorders, with headache, giddiness and violent heart agitation. The dispensatories class it as a heart poison, and one case is attributed to a bouquet of these distressing heart convulsions. Animals are affected by it as well as man. A valuable cow died a few months after browsing on the stalks and leaves. Several cows died from drinking water into which some cuttings of the plant had been thrown, and other animals were very sick from inhaling the smoke from burning twigs and leaves of the plant. They were shut in a small yard, and a breeze carried the smoke directly toward them. In other localities there seem to be no serious consequences attending the cultivation of this plant. Whether immediate surroundings or climatic conditions have anything to do with the effects of the specific home plant would furnish an interesting subject for discussion.—New York Ledger.

[illegible] has just made the following answer to him: "You taunt me with the amount of my income. Perhaps it may astonish you to be made acquainted with the following facts: I live in a locality of easy workingman, and I believe that I work harder and more hours than nine out of ten workingmen, and yet I am compelled, by the expenses incident to my office, to spend £1,000 a year more than my official income."

THE FARMER.

Feed a farrow cow all she will eat to fatten her.

Both large and small fruits do best in a black clay soil.

Good roads increase the value of farms contiguous to them.

A creamery should not be started until the milk of 250 to 300 cows is secured.

Cleanse the feet of your work horses every day, and they will not get dry and hard.

Teach young pigs to drink milk and give them all the skimmilk they can get rid of.

Every farmer should have a good garden and in that case should raise his own seeds.

Success with poultry requires four things—pure water, wholesome food, clean quarters and good care. Try it this winter.

Nearly $3,000,000 worth of potatoes, beans and peas were imported to this country last year. These ought to be profitable crops.

Housewives in orange growing districts are substituting oranges for soup. Thescid in them cleanses woodwork and floors beautifully.

When honey is taken from the hive, keep it in the driest and warmest room in the house. It absorbs moisture in a damp place or a cellar and loses its flavor.

The Japanese Waitress.

"The Japanese waitress is a creature full of kindliness and winning graces," said Lieutenant Walter H. Gibbons, U. navy officer. "I once attended a large banquet in Japan where the tact and courtesy of these individuals contributed largely to the success of the entertainment. Each guest was provided with a pretty, bright, well dressed waitress, with her hair stuck full of flowers and jeweled pins. She never embarked on any duty without first falling on her knee, smoothing her skirt over them and placing her little fist near to the floor as a mark of obedience and respect. She will watch your chopsticks with the closest attention and will occasionally offer her advice as to the most succulent dishes and the best order in which to do them justice."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A BIG TUMBLE IN PRICE.

How the Cost of Equipping an Electric Car Has Fallen Off.

Take the electric railway field, for instance, which is undoubtedly the branch of electrical work presenting the greatest possibilities for rapid commercial development, and consequently offers a constantly growing market for electrical manufactures. Six years ago the price for a complete equipment for a trolley car, including two motors, was about $4,500. This price held for a year and a half and then dropped to $3,850, $3,600 and $3,300, until two years ago it was about $2,380. One year ago $2,000 was the price of the same equipment, greatly improved in quality and efficiency, while today the average price is between $1,000 and $1,200. We have been told of an electric railway manager who desired quite recently to purchase an equipment for a single car. He wrote to seven manufacturing companies and immediately was called upon by seven salesmen, all of whom had paid traveling expenses, to try for the order. The prices quoted ranged from $1,600 to $800. The manager bought the $640 apparatus.

Here we have a decrease in actual working prices from $4,500 in 1888, to $640 in 1894, a period of six years. In 1888 there were seven electric railways in the United States. In January, 1890, there were 102 railways in operation and in process of construction. THE UNDERSTUDY.

SUBACTORS WHO MUST BE READY TO TAKE PRINCIPALS' PLACES.

Delays and Uncertainties They Find In Common Cause—How They Get Through an Entire Season With No Chance to Show Their Powers.

After two years of patient waiting and study a young actress, who was an understudy in one of the principal stock companies in town, gave up her position the other day because during all that time she never got an opportunity to display her talents before the public. She was on the salary list of the company, and as wages are paid 52 weeks in the year by that particular organization it seemed rather like quitting a good thing, but it was not a question of finances with her. She is an actress of recognized ability, and understudying was not particularly suited to her tastes. She had part after part in new plays and reproductions, but the principal somehow or other managed to get through without being ill, or never suffered any mishap, so it seemed as if the actress was destined to become a permanent understudy. This instance is only one of numberless similar experiences showing the trials and tribulations of understudies.

All the big stock companies are well supplied in the matter of understudies, and while they are required to keep a certain number of professionals on hand they have innumerable applications from amateur aspirants for histrionic honors, who are only too willing to serve as understudies on the chance that some accident will take them to the front. Most of these come from the different schools for the training of actors. The understudies receive their parts almost at the same time they are delivered to the principals. They are rehearsed regularly with the company and are presumed to be as well prepared for the first night of a play as the principals.

Manager Charles Frohman's company is probably one of the best equipped organizations in the country in the way of understudies. Eight of these are employed as regular members of the company the year round, and while they are probably not seen more than once or twice during a season they are always ready for any emergency that may arise. Augustin Daly's and A. M. Palmer's companies are also well supplied with understudies, and both have long lists of amateurs ready to go on at a moment's notice in case of sickness or other necessity.

Every big traveling organization generally carries two understudies while on the road. Some companies dispense with their services, however, by requiring the members of the company to make themselves proficient in two or more parts. Thus if the first comedian should suddenly be incapacitated the second comedian jumps in, and so on all through the cast. The understudies who travel regularly with the company are usually a man and a woman. The former understudies all the actors, while the latter is perfect in all the roles. Their salaries and expenses are on a par with those of the leadings.

Although many of the stars now conspicuous in the theatrical firmament began their dramatic career as understudies, it is not often nowadays that the stars themselves are understudied. It is generally assumed that the management of the star is the attraction for the public, and to substitute somebody else is to practice a deception which is injurious to the show. In some instances, however, where the star has had to be replaced by an understudy, the latter has made even a better hit than the star.

Billy Crane was an understudy in the beginning, and Manager Jacobs tells an amusing anecdote of the actor's first experience as an understudy. He served in that capacity with a company that produced "The Daughter of the Regiment" in this city some years ago. Among the parts which Crane had to commit to memory was that of the notary. It was a particularly hard part because the notary had to begin by declaiming a long legal notice. Crane got the part pat, but in order that there should be no possibility of his making a break he copied the process into a book which the notary was supposed to carry. The notary wore a robe that trailed on the floor. In making his entrance Crane's foot became tangled up in the robe and he pitched headforemost on the stage. The book with the prompt lines flew across the stage. Crane pulled himself together in a moment, and without losing his presence of mind began firing the process off. He went through without a break, and his original entrance made a hit with the audience.

One of the most notable instances of understudying was that furnished while Denman Thompson was in the midst of his long run with "The Old Homestead" at the Academy of Music. Walter Gale, whose characterization of Happy Jack, the tramp, was supposed to be inimitable, was ill, and at the eleventh hour the manager heard of Gale's illness. The part was a most important one in the cast, and nobody could be found to take it among the members of the company. Finally a young Irishman named James Fitzgerald, who was acting as dresser to Thompson, astonished that actor by declaring that he would take the part. It seems that he was understudying Gale night after night over in applying. Fitzgerald went on that night and imitated Gale to a dot in everything except the latter's soul racking cough. Young Fitzgerald made a hit and played Happy Jack many times, but his career was brought to an untimely close by an attack of pneumonia, to which he succumbed.—New York Sun.

One of His Pans.

The embonpoint lawyer, Mr. William M. Evarts, is an inveterate punster.

Being at the top of Mount Washington, he began a speech, which the crowd of visitors had begged from him, with this felicitous pun:

"We are not strangers. We are friends and neighbors. We have all been born and brought up here!"—Youth's Companion.

THE QUEEN INDIGNANT.

She Contradicts the Statement That Her Granddaughter Is a Sick Woman.

It very rarely happens that the queen condescends to take any notice of unpublished gossip respecting members of the royal family. The fact that she caused to be telegraphed from Balmoral to the daily Court Circular an emphatic contradiction of the report that the Princess Alix of Hesse recently betrothed to the czarowitz, was taking the waters at Harrogate in order to cure a long standing internal complaint proves beyond question that her majesty was deeply moved and highly incensed at the audacity of a newspaper scribe in daring to suggest that her granddaughter's constitution is unsound. The queen's intuition as a grandmother and a matchmaker is natural and undoubtedly. The czarowitz is himself a weakling, and if it should prove to be true that his affianced bride's health had been undermined in the nursery by the her would beyond doubt break off the match. The probability is that there is nothing organically wrong with the young princess, but it is absurd for the queen to declare that the report of her ailment is "absolutely without foundation." The Westminster Gazette, which gave prominence to the original report, flippantly remarks with regard to the contradiction that "any allusion to the indisposition of any royal person appears to be considered at court as a species of treason, the court preferring that the ailments of such personages shall be ignored until the rattles are in their throats, and when the sovereign or prince or princess happens to be dangerously ill the public are always informed that the invalid is going on favorably, although, as a matter of fact, he or she is at that time going as fast as possible to the grave."

The Gazette then affirms that Princess Alix has been in delicate health for several years past and that she has undergone "cures" at Badenweiler, Schwalbach and other places. The Gazette says positively that the princess would not have buried herself at a small Yorkshire watering place at the height of the London season if she were in perfect health. This is certainly the popular view, and the prevailing skepticism is not likely to be removed until an authoritative statement shall have been made as to the nature of the princess' malady.—London Letter.

TO PROTECT THE HOMEMADE.

An Effort to Restore a Custom In England Which Has Already Failed.

The Earl of Dunlugh has introduced into the house of lords a bill providing for marking foreign goods, which is practically identical with the measure which was recently lumped in the air in commons, and the Earl of Durham, whose energies heretofore have been devoted solely to winning cups and hunting his big income which he derives from his collieries, will help in the patriotic work, designed still further to restrict native industries against foreign competition. The lords may pass the bill, but the commons are certain to reject it, for many Tories as well as all the Liberals believe the existing measures to dise marks are sufficient for all practical purposes. A good many business men of all shades of political belief are strongly of the opinion that the marking of foreign goods has not only failed to help British traders and manufacturers, but has done them serious harm. Foreign customers receiving goods from English shippers marked in accordance with the act with the words, "Made in Germany, etc., forthwith proceed to serve the English middleman's commission by dealing directly with the German maker, and so on, whereas in the good old days when unmarked such goods to be of British make.

Virtue is always very far from being its own reward. Furthermore, according to an indignant merchant who has been "in business" for many years, the enormous quantity of goods which formerly came into England in English ships does not come here at all now, being shipped abroad direct in foreign vessels. In fact, says this critic, the present law is "protection which protects no English industry and only serves to advertise throughout the world the manufactures of other countries."—New York Sun's London Letter.

Justice Among Crows.

A singular instance of justice among crows has been related by M. Rosz at a meeting of the Society Vaudoise de Sciences Naturelles, which is worthy of a place in the "Intelligence of Animals" by Professor Romanes. The observations were made by M. Addor, a notary of Sainte Croix, in France, who saw about 50 crows in solemn conclave in a field. At a given signal they suddenly flew up, croaking with rage and wheeling around some object, which ultimately fell to the ground and proved to be a dying crow. An examination showed that the offender —for such he appears to have been—had been killed by a stroke of the beak in the abdomen, and his body bore the marks of about 50 strokes.—London Globe.

A Question In Arithmetic.

Teacher—If a turkey weighs 12 pounds and costs 25 cents a pound, how much does the whole turkey cost?

Tommy—One dollar and twenty cents.

Teacher—But suppose turkey costs 20 cents a pound, how much does it cost then?

Tommy—When we don't buy any."—Texas Siftings.

The Advantage of Light Heads.

"I come of a very old family," boasted Bathina as the party sat around the table at the club lying about their ancestors.

"I suppose they were in the ark with Noah," sneered Smith, who affects to despise those who claim a long line of ancestors.

"They didn't have to get into the ark," interrupted Simpson, who dislikes Bathina; "the family is so light headed they floated like corks."

HOW AN ENGLISHMAN LIVES.

The Whole Globe Plays Him Serving Man to Spread His Table.

Without being luxurious, the whole globe has played him serving man to spread his table. Russia gave the hemp, or India or South Carolina the cotton, for that cloth which his wife lays upon it. The eastern islands placed there those delicacies and spices which were sacred relishes of the wealthy. Amsterdam dowas send him frozen nutton or canned beef, the prairies of America meal for his biscuit and pudding, and if he will eat fruit the orchards of Tasmania and the palm woods of the West Indies produce delicious giffs, while the orange groves of Florida and of the Hesperides compete for his use those "golden apples" which dragons used to guard.

His coffee comes from where jeweled humming birds hang in the bowers of Brazil, or purple butterflies flutter and the Javan mangroves. His fast clipper ships, racing by night and day under clouds of canvas, convey to him the tea from China or Assam, or from the green Singhalese hills. The sugar which sweetens it was crushed from canes that waved by the Nile or the Orinoco, and the plating of the spoon with which he stirs it was dug for him from Mexican or Nevadan mines.

The currants in his dumpling are a tribute from classic Greece, and his tinned salmon or kippered herring a token from the seas and rivers of Canada or Norway. He may partake, if he will, of rice that ripened under the hot skies of Patna or Rangoon, of cocoa, that "food of the gods," produced under the burning blue of the equator. For his rasher of bacon the hog express runs daily with 10,000 grunting victims into Chicago. Dutch or Brittany hens have laid him eggs, and Danish cows grazed the dulcine of Elsinore to produce his cheese, and butter.

If he drinks beer, it is either from Belgium and Bavaria have contributed to it the barley and the hops, and when he has finished eating it will be the 31st assistpi ilats or, the gardens of the Antilles that fill for him his pipe with the choicest smoking tobacco.—Sir Edwin Arnold in Longman's Magazine.

Requisites of the Stage.

One may say. "The requisites of success on the stage are youth, health, good looks, handsome wardrobe and purse, good looks and dramatic instinct." Then it could be replied ifbit if a person possessed this combination he or she would give himself or herself no further concern as to success. It is absolutely so-called success as an income of over $500,000 of government bonds, and that to a person just starting out on a stage career and anxious to make a good living out of it such preliminary qualifications are as remote as the big bank balance to the new beginner in commercial business.

It is really the case that most of the conditions that qualify for stage success have to be worked for. This sort of instruction may not be imparted by professional teachers at so much a lesson, but it proceeds from teachers all the same, whether voluntary or involuntary, since all human beings are continually not only receiving but giving lessons.—Rose Coghlan.

TRAPPING AN AUDIENCE.

How an Eccentric Lecturer Got His Men and Then Pounded Them.

Some years ago an eccentric genius, the Rev. Thomas P. Hunt, used to give temperance lectures. One night he announced that he would lecture at a certain Pennsylvania town. Now, temperance was not in favor in the mining portion of that burg.

The women, however, were all for the "pledge," and consequently on Hunt's first visit not a man showed himself. The benches were pretty well filled with women, though, and Hunt commenced. But instead of temperance he took them to task about the vanities of dress, and the whole catalogue of female follies, but no word about intemperance.

The ladies went homeexearly mad, told their husbands about it and voted old Hunt a regular humbug. He announced he would lecture at the same place the next night. Long before the time appointed the people began to arrive, and when Hunt hobbled down the aisle the building was completely filled with men. An old fellow looked about, chuckled and said in a low voice, "Hogs, I've got you now!"

The audience stared.

"Aha, hogs, I've got you now?" he repeated.

After the crowd had got quiet enough the lecturer said:

"Friends, you wanted to know what I meant by saying, 'Hogs, I've got you now!' and I'll tell you. Out west the hogs run wild, and when folks get out of meat they catch a young pig, cut a strap under his body and hitch him to a young sapling that will just swing him off the ground nicely. Of course he squeals and raises a rumpus, when all the old hogs gather around to see what is the matter, and then they begin operations at their leisure. Last night I hung a pig up. I hurt it a little, and it squealed. The old hogs have turned out tonight to see the fun, and I'll roast you."

And so he did, pitching into their favorite vice with much original relish and gusto.—American Home Life.

When to Wind Your Watch.

During the night your watch is quiet, as it were—that is, it hangs in your vest without motion or touch. If you don't wind it at night, the mainspring is then relaxed, instead of being in that condition during the day. If you forget it in the morning the mainspring remains close and tight all day. It keeps the movement steady at a time when you are handling it, running about the city attending to your daily affairs. A relaxed mainspring at this time accounts for fine watches varying slightly.—Jewelers' World.

WEARY.

I'm old, and the best of life's battles
Has blanched my brown hair till it's white,
And teardrops that sparkle light diamonds
Have stole from my eyes their old light.
And low, where cold markers are pleading,
I laid what the world gave to me;
But high, where the pure ones are waiting,
My treasures again will I see.

Tonight I have heard echoes of music
That floated away long ago,
But some magic spirit has caught them
To chant to me now, soft and low.
I heard an old story tonight, too,
That memory lingered to tell,
Of youth that unites in misery
That crushed hopes and dreams eathey fell.

I've seen an old picture of sorrow—
A vessel that sank in the sea,
But safe in the harbor of heaven
A fair sailor boy waits for me.
I listen in dreams for his footsteps,
I kneel once more on his white hand
As it lifts from my heart life's dark shadows
And points me to a bright land.

A HORSE STORY.

Nothing More Than Might Have Been Expected of a Morgan.

The first Morgan of any remembrance was a chestnut mare scant 15 hands and weighing about 900 pounds. She was one of the get of Justin P. Morgan of Strafford, Vt., on a visit to his wife's relatives at Templeton, Mass., some time about 1830 and was the property of a man who kept her for 10 years or more. This was the first horse I ever sat. She would hold down her head or could halter her in the pasture and stand up by the stone wall for me to climb on her back. She was round as an apple, and with me clinging to her mane she stepped with gentleness so I should not slide off. Could she go? When my father held the reins, hitched to Concord wag on or chaise, she was in the lead. I have ridden her to plow corn. Temple ton is flush 50 miles from Boston and was the home of Hon. Artemus Lee, who always kept the best of road horses. For pastime as well as the money there was in the game Father "acted" with gypsums and sold them at Faneuil Hall market. The pet would be sprung in the morning, the pigeons dressed during the day, and just as evening came on they would be loaded on the wagon and the man's head turned eastward. At daylight the following morning only the remote town would lie between the mare and "Long Wharf." The load sold, she went over to Cambridge and after another night in the home trip. Suffice it to say she fed in her own pasture and drank of the water of Fisher's river that night. This 100 mile journey, performed inside of 24 hours, was made several times in a season, and she came back and with the "crop of pigeons." Grass fed? The mare fed in the summer with the yoke of oxen. A nice specimen of a horse with the barnyard, and she came to the barn whether she worked or not every night. In her two years' work on the road I think the drives he gave old Doll on the returns from Boston were rather hard on the animal. Father was a fearless driver her hard. She wanted to go home to mother and the children, and I let her take her own gait." Doll was a natural roadster, a granddaughter of Bull Rush Morgan.

Some time about the year 1854 it became necessary to procure for a prominent citizen of the town a trotter to jogordy on account of the false testimony that was brought against him in the matter of common law marriage in the old courthouse in the city of Worcester, Mass., the presence of certain witnesses was court adjourned over night. Governeon, I was deputed to seek these witnesses, who lived in the town of Somset, Vt., and secure their attendance at court on Tuesday morning. Midnig t found me on the road with a pair of horses at Hollows Falls. Sunday morni g I called at the livery barn of Charles Townsend down the line and Fitz Williams village, and told him of the necessity for my having a good horse. It was winter, the drifts were deep, and I had got to plunge into the mountains after I left New Fane. Charley leaned me a mare overcoat and I got a pair of robes the cutter a black mare, 14 hands high, weight 850 pounds, remarking as the horse and myself were about to depart this is one of your father's kind. When you leave the river road, lower the check rein, as the drifts will be deep and I don't can have her head, and if you are as attentive to the mare as you used to be when you were minding our own stage horses you will be back tonight all right, and I will set up for you until 10 o'clock."

The mercury stood at about 10 degrees above zero all day. The mare went like a bird. I rested her at New Fane and rested myself by walking up the mountainous hills. Just as I neared the promised attendance at court of the parties I sought I was back at Charley Townsend's. The mare having reached the summit heights; the snow whirled in the cutter and the colder it grew colder; the wind swept the mountain heights; the snow whirled in the cutter and the colder it grew the drifts went the little mare, never making a mistake in her footing and seemingly as fresh as when we took starting out. We got to Saxton's river and she realized she was nearing home, with a smooth road and no snow drifts, she accelerated her joy at the journey nearly done by a sharp whinny, and with uplifted head struck a sharper trot. I send Mr. Townsend word that I would be with him by 9:30 o'clock p. m. I was half an hour ahead of the time allotted. I had driven not an inch less than a hundred miles. My mission had been successful. I "felt good," and up in the Island House, despite the Main law, Charley and I drank a "hot flip," with a repeat. What of the mare? I called on her the next morning before the train left, and she was as fine as silk. Why shouldn't she be? She was a daughter of Gifford Morgan.—George R. Bryant in Horseman.

A LANDLORD'S CONSCIENCE.

Lord Tweedmouth Shows What an Easy Thing Life Is to Get Along With.

Lord Tweedmouth, until recently Mr. Edward Marjoribanks, chief Liberal whip, has just compounded satisfactorily with his constituency, and some Radical newspapers are praising his nobility of soul and fidelity to principle, uncommon in the ordinary mortal and rare in a peer of the realm. It seems that his father, old Lord Tweedmouth, invested ten of thousands of pounds, a part of the huge profits of his brewery, in land in the highlands of Scotland, and thereafter, as he was consumed with a passion for deer forests, in order to increase his stock of game he gradually cleared his land of industrious sheep farmers and small crofter tenants until he was able to drive for miles through his vast estate, known as Guisachen in Inverness, without meeting a single human being or passing one inhabited house.

The present lord, as a strong Radical, has always been opposed to that sort of thing. In fact, he is actually a member of the royal commission appointed to inquire into and report upon the depopulation of the Scottish highlands by landlords of the stamp of the late Lord Tweedmouth. Conscience and political expediency, therefore, alike forbade a member of the Radical government to continue a policy which had reduced to the poorhouse or sent to the plains of Manitoba and the shores of British Columbia hundreds of sturdy Scotsmen and Scotswomen. The natural and proper course for Lord Tweedmouth's fellow would have been to reverse his father's policy and bring the people back to the land. But that would have been a sinful waste of the enormously increased value of the property as one of the best sporting estates in Scotland. So his lordship has decided to sell Guisachen as it stands, which, while easing his conscience, fills his pockets with gold gained out of the spoliation and expatriation of honest men.—Glasgow Letter.

An Octogenarian Wheelman.

A Portland man was in Sanford last week and reports that there resides in the big bicycle there, from the toddler to the gray haired grandfather. He saw Mr. George Goodall, the owner and originator of the plush mills and now about 80 years old, pedaling rapidly along the street on a gymnastic. It was not a bicycle nor yet a tricycle of the old kind, but a special machine, unusually built especially for the old gentleman. It was like any pneumatic tire safety, except that there were two wheels instead of one. They were about two feet apart, and of course the machine would stand alone. The chain passed around cogs on the axle between the two rear wheels. Mr. Goddall is probably the oldest wheelman in the state.—Portland Press.

Crosses In Drawings.

Crosses in drawings, engravings, etc., may be leveled out by following these instructions: Fasten the engraving or drawing by drawing the corners in surface downward on a sheet of paper; on the back place some weight on it and pass it carefully over the part where the crosses have been made until they disappear, and then submit the drawings or engravings to pressure between printer's glazed boards.—Brooklyn Eagle.

TO PREVENT BLINDNESS.

Laws to Punish Nurses For Ignorance and Carelessness In Neglecting Babies.

The State Medical society has done well in calling public attention to the fact that a large proportion of the blindness of the world is due to the disease called ophthalmia neonatorum, and to the well known treatment of this disease by a physician at a sufficiently early period in its course, almost always results in preventing the blindness that would otherwise follow. For this reason the society recommends the enactment of a law that has been already adopted in a number of states, to this effect:

Should one or both eyes of an infant become inflamed or swollen or reddened at any time within two weeks after birth, it shall be the duty of the midwife or nurse having charge of such infant to report the same within six hours to the health officer or some legally qualified physician of the city, town or districts in which the parents of the infant reside the fact that stch inflammation or swelling or redness of the eyes exists.

The proposed statute imposes a penalty for noncompliance. A specific penalty is necessary to make any statute effective, but the value of such an enactment would be mainly to draw attention to the necessity of timely action, since it is impossible that any parent or nurse would willfully neglect the precautions necessary to save a child from blindness if the nature of the case were understood. For this reason the declaration of duty made in the law is enough quoted, if it could be universally circulated, might accomplish almost as much as if formally enacted by legislative power.

The common affection referred to, the "sore eyes" of newly born infants, is one that yields almost certainly to the simple treatment, promptly and skillfully applied, but that almost as certainly goes on to destructive inflammation if neglected, and one of the reasons why so many infants become blind is simply that those in charge of them do not understand that any physician would, with what a serious matter they have to deal.

A legislative enactment would make it easier for health officers and others to bring the subject to general attention and especially to impress its importance upon those who are recognized as nurses or midwives. The greatest number of cases of neglect, however, occur among the very poor, or in the remote country, where those things are left to volunteers and by whic intelligence penetrates slowly, and we shall have to ringlo some stimulation with our legislation to reach that dreadful scourge.—Philadelphia Times.

AMONG THE BEST OF 'EM

A Table Taken From The State Auditor's Report Showing Cost of Running the Counties of the State.

It Proves Conclusively That Large Counties Are Conducted at Much Less Expense Than Small.

And Shows Polk County's Expense Per Capita and Per Township Among the Lowest in the State.

The Statements of the County Division Schemers and Real Estate Boomers Knocked Into a Cocked Hat.

STATE AUDITOR'S REPORT.

The law requires the state auditor to submit to each legislature of the state a report showing the transactions of the state treasury and the business of the auditor's department for the preceding year. The last report issued was in 1892. Another will be made before the legislature meets in January next, but at present we have nothing authoritative from the state officers giving the transactions of the several counties for any year later than A. D. 1891. In that year Polk county did not erect county buildings, and had its ordinary expenditure only, so, though we wish we could give the cost of carrying on the several counties of the state for years later than 1891, for certified to by the state officers, no doubt the figures for that year as well as any, and we give them from the last report of the state auditor.

All the counties in the state are given in their order as to area, that being the most prominent consideration. The counties of Redwood, Cass and Itasca not being then organized, no returns are given in the report as to them, and where a county is partly in an Indian reservation, that part is excluded. The area, population, assessed valuation and amount of tax levy as we have given them are all

Taken From the Official Reports.

The amounts under the head of cost per township are computations of our own, for convenience of reference, and as they are based on the other figures given, any one can readily find out their correctness.

NORMAN MORE COSTLY THAN POLK.

In Norman county in that year the cost for county purposes was $653.21 per township and $1.48 per capita.

The proposed counties of Nash, Red Lake and Columbia are small; very much smaller than Norman county. There is in each just about seventeen townships or 612 square miles. How dear the cost of running such small counties compare with the large counties? There are thirty-five counties in the state (exclusive of Ramsey and Hennepin) that have area less than 355 to 612 square miles, and the cost to them in 1891 for county purposes was $1,318.12 per township, and $1.55 per capita. The average of the fifteen counties nearest the size of the proposed counties and having an area from 576 to 650 square miles was $1,110.60 per township and $1.51¾ per capita.

It will be observed that in the old and thickly settled counties that the cost is less in proportion to population than in the newer and more thinly settled counties. Of the fifteen nearly equal in size to the proposed counties, the four old counties of Dakota, Sibley, Winona and Olmsted pay a county tax of only $1.20 per capita, while Yellow Medicine, Mille Lac, Stevens, Chippewa and Hubbard, five newer counties of that size, have a county tax of $2.04 per capita, which is very nearly Double That of Polk County.

The five counties last named, though the newest of that size, are still much more populous than the proposed counties of Nash, Red Lake and Columbia. If any person wishes to get at the truth in regard to the comparative cost of large and small counties under similar conditions, he can find it from these figures. Do not compare the proposed counties with Norman, which is nearly one-half larger than they are, nor with the old counties of Douglas, Grant and Pope, but compare them with the other counties of the state about their size, density of population and degree of development, and we submit it will be apparent to any person who desires to know the truth that a division of the county would be injurious to all the sections in which it is proposed to divide it.

RELATIVE COST OF RUNNING SMALL AND LARGE COUNTIES.

In view of the county division controversy it will be interesting to make comparisons from the official figures of the relative cost of ruaning small and large counties in the state. In doing this it will be only fair to leave the small counties of Ramsey and Hennepin out of the calculation, as they are made up for the most part of the large cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and for that reason have costly management. Leaving out these and the unorganized counties of the state we find that the average cost for county purposes was in 1891 the sum of $912.38 for each township, and $1.60½ per capita of the population of the whole state. In Polk county it was $552.32 for each township, and $1.40½ per capita of the population.

An English "Water Witch."

A young man of the name of Rodwell, in the employ of the Grinton Coal company in north England, has shown wonderful powers in his occupation as professional "water finder" or "water witch." Professor E. R. Lankester, the great English scientist, stated very plainly in one of the journals that he doubted the attributed powers of either the "witch" or the "divining rod," with which he is armed in all professional operations. The evolved the following from Dr. McClure, the chairman of the Grinton company: "I deny emphatically that the lad is an impostor. He has been tested time and again and has never failed to locate veins of either mineral or water, depending upon what the search was being conducted for. The 'divining rod' which he holds only moves in obedience to the muscular contractions of his hands and arms, and he can use a rod of any kind of wood or material. Something it be what is known as a 'good conductor of electricity.' Another oddity about the lad, and one of which I have never heard in connection with 'water witching,' is this: The lad habitually walks with his hands clasped behind his back, except when as he steps upon the ground directly over a mineral or water he is powerless to unclasp them until he moves away from the region of the lode or conduit."—St. Louis Republic.

Fifty Feet of Rainfall Annually.

There is always more or less grave work concerning the amount of rainfall in the Khasi hills during any storm period. Throughout the United States the amount that falls on any one day rarely exceeds six inches. There are certain portions of the globe, however, that are frequently, and others only occasionally, favored with this water. On the southern slopes of the Himalaya mountains, at an altitude of 4,000 feet, 610 inches of rainfall have been registered in a single year, of which amount 147 inches (12 feet 3 inches) fell in the month of June. At a meteorological station in latitude 18 degrees, near the western boundary of Hindustan, the average rainfall for the 15 years ending with 1893 was 264 inches. In the interior, some part of England, at an altitude of 1,300 feet, the average annual rainfall is 146 inches 111 inches in excess of the mean for St Louis, which is but 37 inches and a fraction.

The wonderful record given above is still more phenomenal when we consider the fact that all the moisture the atmosphere is capable of holding at any one time would cover the entire surface of the globe to a depth of less than four inches should it all be instantly precipitated.—St. Louis Republic.

Could Wait Too.

"Is anybody waiting on you, madam?" inquired the floorwalker.

"Yes, sir," retorted the middle aged matron fiercely. "I reckon they've waited on me as if I weren't go away without stayin fur the 17 cents in change that's a-comin to me!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Oldest Trees In the World.

The big trees of Amaradapura was planted 288 (should be 245, Darwin) years before Christ. Its age is a matter of record, its consistency has been an object of solicitude to several dynasties, and the story of its vicissitudes has been preserved in a series of continuous chronicles among the most authentic that have been handed down by mankind. The yew trees of Fountains Abbey are believed to have flourished there 1,200 years ago. The olives in the garden of Gethsemane were full grown when the Saracens were expelled from Jerusalem, and the cypress of Sarna, in Lombardy, is said to have been a tree in the time of Julius Cesar, yet the boe tree is older than the oldest of these by a century, and would almost seem to verify the prophecy pronounced when it was planted—that it would "flourish and be green forever."—Rhys Davis' "Buddhism."

NASH'S LETTER

The Sage of East Grand Forks Writes on County Division.

A Tissue of Misrepresentations From Beginning to End.

Some of His Statements Stripped of Their Coating of Falsehood.

We observe that W. C. Nash, one of the East Grand Forks boomers, has taken his pen in hand to write on county division for the Review of that city, and a person who signs himself "Tax Payer" seems highly pleased with the effort of Mr. Nash, characterizing it as "a good, common sense article, in which every point bore the imprint of perfect truth so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein," and giving to the voters the valuable information that "the law gives to the new board of commissioners the power, of not only appointing the new officers, but fixing their salaries also," and congratulates the people on the assumption that the salaries will be placed very low. Now, whether "Taxpayer" got his information from Mr. Nash or some one else the fact remains as plain and certain as anything can be that the commissioners have nothing to do with fixing the salaries of the officers they appoint, except, ing county attorney subject to appeal to district judge and county superintendent of schools. The last not to be less than $10.00 for each school district in the county. All the officers will come under the General Laws of the state as to salaries and everything to the contrary is "bosh" Mr. Nash and "Taxpayer" to the contrary notwithstanding. If any person has doubt about it let him look it up and he will find there is nothing in the law that gives any color to that statement. But Mr. Nash goes on serenely and says "there will be no necessity of paying salaries larger than $700 to $800" to auditor and treasurer when the law gives them at least one half more than that.

The office, that of sheriff, is more costly in large than small counties but not to the extent supposed. Reference to the financial statement for 1893 shows that of the expenses of sheriff's office $1286.47 was for boarding prisoners and $2246.06 for the services of the sheriff. If the figures given by Mr. Nash for the other counties are correct they must have been fortunate enough to have no prisoners to board. It needs no argument to show that no amount of county division can lessen the cost of boarding prisoners, unless the new counties are in the way of escaping place their prisoners in a jail from which they can escape whenever they wish and so save all further expense. We suppose Mr. Nash's home city furnishes its full proportion of the boarders at the "Hotel Grandsen" and the county commissioners of Polk county will not be the gainer by the privilege of keeping all that class they furnish to such institutions.

In regard to the office of clerk of court, Mr. Nash is mistaken when he says that officer in Polk county gets a fixed salary in addition to an allowance of fees and that he was paid $8,531.53 in 1893. He gets a fixed salary of $1,500 and is allowed a deputy at $600, and that is all he should have. He got no more in 1893, as he returned the extra $4.25 clerk hire to the treasury. The impression abroad that he received the larger sum is quite excusable from the way the thing is mixed up in the financial report for 1893. Those who attended the convention of the people's party at Crookston will remember that Mr. Mune asked that a committee be appointed to examine and report on the matter, but there was not time taken for it then. The last item in the financial statement under the head of clerk of courts office of $1,465.20 should not have been there at all. It was a bill or statement made by the clerk of the amount of work he had done for the county in the year 1893, and was the work and the fees for the same the county would have been obliged to pay for if the clerk had charged the fees and not by salary, but as it is the clerk did not get a cent of it and the proper purpose of the statement is only to show what would have been the earnings of the clerk for the county under the old system, though people in general may have been misled by this, we submit those like Mr. Nash who pose as instructors are not excusable for failure to ascertain the truth.

Again he assumes that the expenses of running Polk county is $1,122.45 per township, and Norman $537.18 is correct. We are informed that he is one of the persons who got up that widely circulated "comparative statement." If so it is scarcely possible that he does not know it is false as to Polk county, and false as to all the other counties named in it. We give in another place the correct figures from the Norman county financial statement for 1893.

But it is needless to go further discussing any article or statement that is based on assumption so wide of the truth. As those who wish to divide the county cannot make a good showing for their pet scheme on the existing state of things, we should perhaps not be too hard on them for drawing on their imagination for their facts. All that we ask is that others do not allow themselves to be deceived by such fabrications.

A BIG LIE NAILED

How the County Divisionists Expect to Win the Farmers' Votes.

They Deliberately Falsify the Figures in Norman County's Statement.

The Correct Statement and Their False Statement Given Below.

We give below the expenses of Norman county for the year 1893, as given in the "comparative statement" of the county divisionists, and the correct statement of the expenses of that county as taken from its official financial statement of expenses for that year. Tha reader will please to observe the difference, and form his opinion of the way the figures are made so transparant an attempt to deceive. They no doubt and this Norman county financial statement. If they had not they have no excuse for giving figures without is as it can be obtained very easily. We have given in this the payment of interest on bonds and to sinking fund of Norman county, $4,136.71. It is not properly chargeable to current county expenses as it represents a debt incurred in the past, but in the "comparative statement" Polk county is charged up on those items $10,340.67, while no mention is made or account taken of the expenditure of Norman county for the same items in last year. This makes the cost to each township of Normas county for 1893 $771.02, or if we exclude what they paid to sinking fund and interest the sum of $3092.26.

NELSON COUNTY.

Crookston People Favor Its Establishment For Reasons Below Enumerated.

A proposition is before the people to establish a county consisting of the Thirteen Towns, with Fosston as the county seat. That section is thickly settled away off between the Indian reservations, and far from the present county seat, and when the reservation is organized up, which will not be long, the county of Nelson can have attached to it ample territory to make a large county and have all the advantages that a large county gives. There are many things he said in favor of this division on that line, but tha people of the proposed county of Nelson are wide awake in presenting them to the people, and we need not be taken bare to elaborate them. Suffice to say that the people of Crookston strongly favor the organization of Nelson county at the present election, and at some future time will vote in favor of establishing a county from territory in the northeastern part as wall, when the opening of the reservation will make a large settlement in that direction. There is plenty of territary in the east to make large counties there and leave Polk a large county also. Be sure and vote for Nelson county.

THE COMPARISON

With All Its Extravagance of First Class County Buildings,

With Its Expensive Iron Bridges, County Roads and Ditches,

Polk County is Run Cheaper Than Norman That Has Not Any of These.

On comparing cost of different counties we should always bear in mind the different conditions. It is an old saying that there is no two things alike under the sun. No two counties are just alike, Polk County has a larger river over which she has built seven nearly iron bridges. Not only does it cost much money to build these bridges but keeping them in repair is expensive. But few counties in the State are at so great a disadvantage in this respect. Again we have erected fine county buildings all that can be require for many years to come.

The difference in these respects with the counties to the south with whom we are so often compared is so great. Douglas, Grant and Pope have no rivers, and Norman but narrow ones to bridge, and when it comes to county buildings. Norman Grant and Pope have hardly anything worthy of the name, while the old County of Douglas has done but little in that line. We may say also that Grant and Pope are old counties as compared with Polk, and the rate of taxation should be less in an old settled region than in a newer one.

The county of Norman has been much contested upon. Excluding the Indian Reservation, it is a nearly square county of twenty four towns, or a little more, with the county seat very near the middle. As we have said its rivers are narrow, and compared with the Red Lake, cheaply bridged, and all its county buildings have cost less than three thousand dollars. Its inhabitants are a very pensenble people, and there is probably less crime or litigation among them than in any other part of the northwest, and has only one term of court in each year. There is we believe more expense made in these respects by the city of East Grand Forks in a year than in all Norman county. Moreover Norman can scarcely be classed as among the small counties. It is nearly one half larger than the proposed counties of Nash, Red Lake and Columbia, and has less waste land, we think. Still with all these advantages and very close economy on the part of those who have control there it affirm the statistics show its expenditure to be more expensive than that of Polk county. This we think can only be explained by the fact that Polk is the larger, and furnishes the strongest argument in favor of large counties. If Norman is at a disadvantage with Polk on that score how much more would be any of the proposed counties only two-thirds the size of Norman and not equal to Red Lake with the large river to bridge.

COUNTY BUILDINGS.

The Red Lake Falls, McIntosh and East Grand Forks people, in their anxiety to divide the county are trying to make the people believe that $2,000 will furnish all the buildings required for a new county. This is about as near as they seem to be able to get at anything. The sales they will require to keep the records secure will alone cost that much. The people of the Thirteen Towns might be willing for one degree or time like the people of Norman county, with a shack for a court house that is only fit for a horse barn, but in case of a new one we are much mistaken in the people of East Grand Forks and Red Lake Falls if they would not contemplate something more and plan until they had a court house and jail that would cost each county $25,000 or $30,000.

A small county requires a court house as large as a big county, just as much as a small woman needs a house as extensive as her large neighbor, and if our friends in the county fatter themselves that they will not be called upon to pay their share for fine county buildings in these cities if they are made county seats, we opine they do not know the people they are dealing with. If it be said Crookston has manifested the same spirit, that is true. Human nature averages up pretty much the same all over, and Crookston may be as eager to see fine buildings erected within her border as East Grand Forks or Red Lake Falls. But Polk county has all the buildings now in Crookston, that the law authorizes a county to build, and they are fully furnished and equipped and all that can be asked for many years to come, so whatever anyone may whisk there is no further chance to expend money on new county buildings in Polk county, for a score of years to come at least.

Republican principles being the best for the country will prevail and without a shadow of a doubt at the coming election. Faultfinding as a trade will be at discount after the coming election.

Joseph Smith was in from Red Lake Falls Monday wearing a sort of far-away expression in his azure blue eye all the same like the appointment of Dunlavy was not exactly as he would have liked it to be. Mebbe not.

Contrary to general opinion the roads did appeal from the decision of the commissioners in the Stevenson rate case. It is very probable that the commissioners will be sustained, but the new rates will not be operative this fall.

On Monday afternoon a somewhat inebriated individual attempted to go through the doorway at Fred Anderson's restaurant without the formula of opening the door. Fred and his clerk soon convinced him of the utter impossibility of the feat, but not until various and sundry panes of glass were shattered.

There is not one poor stick upon the Republican county ticket—not one person unworthy election to the office for which they have been named. If you wish to have efficiency in your county officials you can not find a better lot than the Republicans present.

No Republican has cause to blush for his party principles and if he be imbued with the proper spirit he has reason to be proud of the record of his party, and he should never neglect an opportunity to speak a good word for the cause he represents.

If the republicans in Polk county are faithful to their trust they can elect their county ticket this fall as well as the balance of the ticket. Republicans represent a principle that is fast becoming universally recognized as the best for the interests of true American citizenship, for that reason deserves to and will win everything in sight if they are but true to the cause.

Party victory is not so much of an object this fall unless it be a victory of that party whose principles are for the best interest of the people. The record of the Republican party shows that its principles, its aims and objects are in the interest of the people, for this reason the Republican party should and doubtless will be victorious at the polls next month.

Speaking of Ignatius Donnelly's services to the People's party, the Minneapolis Penny Press says: "What if the sage should land in the United States senate? There are more unlikely things." But not many more. We have had all sorts of calamities this year, fires, cyclones, a democratic administration, and this would only be one more calamity added to the lot.

The Fisher Bulletin speaks of a well-to-do Norwegian farmer who has sold his farm near that village and will join Rev. Saugstad's colony that is soon to start for a point in British Columbia 500 miles from no where. The colony will consist of 40 or 50 Norwegian families and are to start soon for their new home in the wilderness. We trust that their fondest hopes will all be realized—but we imagine that some at least will be disappointed in the change.

Frank Hawkins will make a specialty of pork packing and is in the market for all the hogs in the county. Before you sell that hog see what Frank will pay you for it. Incidentally also he will be glad of an opportunity to bid on your choice beef cattle and sheep. Remember the place. Beckitt block, Chas. Vine's old place.

O. A. Thorson was over from East Grand Forks on Monday. Speaking of division he said that he believed that a majority in the proposed Nash county was against it, and of the politicl situation he said that the Republican party has made substantial gains and would show up encouragingly at the polls next month. The people are beginning to catch on to the fallacies of the new craze and they will soon be voting in the interest of good government again.

B. C. Jorgenson brought in as fine a sample of potatoes to this office on Thursday as one would wish to see in any year. While the yield per acre was small—only about one hundred bushels per acre, the potatoes are all fair sized and their quality unexcelled, as we know by experience. They are of the Early Ohio variety, which kind seems to do very well under adverse circumstances, such as prevailed during the past summer. It is seldom that so dry a season is encountered.

A threshing crew about three miles out struck for higher wages on Thursday afternoon after threshing about one-half the job the farmer had to do. They had engaged for a stipulated sum for the whole job but flew the track when a little over half done. The farmer promptly came to the city hunted up another crew and the strikers departed without a cent and the most of them had not a thing to do besides laying about town eking out a precarious existence, when they might have had a good job that would have helped them out very materially.

Continually dwelling and harping upon one's private troubles never did remedy the sorrow of the trouble yet and never will. If it was not for the "calamities of the poor farmer," the Populist office-seeker's trade would be gone and he would have to shut up shop. The Farmers' Alliance, had not these demagogues reached in, would have sought to apply a remedy and not kept up a dismal funereal howling that amounts to nothing more than to keep men constantly stirred up. A true man will not be forever humbugged by such driveling idiots.

HONORED BY FRANCE.

James Stokes, the Second American Made a Knight of the Legion of Honor.

James Stokes of New York city, who was recently made a knight of the Legion of Honor of France, is the second American to be thus decorated. Although he is a cousin of Edward S. Stokes, the slayer of Jim Fisk, he has devoted his life to the work of upbuilding the Young Men's Christian association, and France's insignia of distinction was conferred upon him for his services as a philanthropist. Mr. Stokes' father left an estate of about $8,000,000, and the sum has devoted a considerable portion of his share to religious and philanthropic work. About a year ago Mr. Stokes finished a quarter of a century of labor as a member of the American industrial committee of the Y. M. C. A., and for many years he has materially assisted the progress of the association's labors in Europe.

In fact, he initiated the work of the Y. M. C. A. in wicked Paris about 28 years ago by mailing such arrangements that the Paris workers were able to meet in rooms of its own. The ambition of his life thenceforth was to see the day when the Paris Y. M. C. A. should have a palatial building of its own in the French metropolis. Two years ago he undertook to carry out this project, and his efforts have at last been crowned with success. The building now stands at 14 Rue Trevise and was erected at a cost of 1,000,000 francs. Of this amount Mr. Stokes and members of his family contributed 400,000 francs, or nearly half.

Among the other contributors were R. C. Morse, Morris K. Jesup, Thomas K. Cree and Franklin Gayford, all well known American residing in Paris, and Alfred Andre, a wealthy Paris banker, who alone furnished 200,000 francs toward the magnificent structure. The building has a gymnasium, swimming tank and baths, bowling alleys, bicycle track, library, parlors, restaurant, music room and sleeping rooms.

The presentation of the order to Mr. Stokes was made on behalf of the French government by M. Andre, and the interesting event occurred in the big Y. M. C. A. building the recipient had been so active in rearing. In accepting the order he said the presentation was a high official compliment to the great work of the Y. M. C. A.

TEACHING THE YOUNG IDEA.

Moral Sanction a Powerful Factor, but There Are Times When It Fails.

Suppose you are a primary teacher. Do you realize what you must put into your work if you wish to succeed? You must be teacher, mother and nurse to your little charges. You must work with them during hours and for hours after school. You must be ready to catch an idea anywhere and adapt it to the needs of a particular pupil who may be dull, indifferent or disheartened, or even all three, poor little chap!

You must be nurtring in your vigilance over their morals and set them always a good example in manners by being courteous, even if they break your umbrella or spill ink all over your best gown. If you are a boys' teacher, you must be ready at any moment to dress a cut, pick out a splinter, arbitrate in a fight or give a decision on the merits of racers or the ownership of marbles, fish hooks and malodorous bottles of bait. If you can't meet those emergencies, the average small boy will hold you in contempt. If you want to win his love, you must know something about the construction of kites, be interested in the "meriest lookin'" dog that ever invaded a schoolroom and not be too finicky about when he washed his hands last if a pupil should offer you candy.

If you can do all these things and laugh about them afterward, you will probably stand high in favor.

But there is a more serious consideration. You must also have his respect, and this is not always so easily or pleasantly won.

Great stress has been laid upon the efficacy of moral suasion, but there are times when human perversity rises to such a pitch that the most persuasive tongue is powerless to enforce obedience to your will. You may be obliged to pick up a shrieking, fighting scrap of humanity and put him back repeatedly where you wish him to stay till, worn out from the struggle, he succumbs and likes you all the better for having conquered him. There's nothing mean about the small boy.—Mary B. O'Sullivan in Donahoe's Magazine.

TAKEN FOR A GHOST.

An Amusing Experience of a Young Irish Traveler in Ghent.

Many years ago an Irish student, having obtained a traveling scholarship at Oxford, went abroad to see the world, of which he knew little. Crammed with the classics, he had not the slightest knowledge of any modern language save English.

On landing at the sleepy town of Ghent he put up at an old many pagoded hotel and settled down in the evening to see the town. Shortly after 9 o'clock he returned to the hotel through streets ominously silent. He found the doors shut and saw no signs of life within. After making noise enough to rouse the "seven sleepers" he heard the sound of some one moving within.

The door was stealthily unbarred, and some one—whether man or woman he could not tell—holding a dim oil lamp reluctantly gave him admission. Then, barring the door and muttering unintelligible sounds, the figure disappeared. The guest yelled for the waiter and was answered by a mocking echo.

He groped his way up the creaking staircase and felt along the passage till he came to an open door. Thinking it the door of his room, which he had left open to guide him, he entered. A shriek was heard, and a gruff voice called out in French, "Who are you?" He retreated and heard the door angrily shut and bolted.

In a little tinder box he had some cigar fusee and a wax taper. He lighted one of the fusee, but before he could apply the flame to the taper it went out. After exhausting his stock of matches and filling the passage with a strong sulphurous odor he was left in the darkness of despair.

He regained the staircase, descended it and found his way to a subterranean passage. There suddenly he heard a piercing shriek and then a fall like that of a carpetbag. A rushing of many feet was followed by a light.

The feet were those of waiters and chambermaids. The fall was that of a plump English lady's maid. The bearer of the light spoke English, and from him the stranger learned the cause of his rescue.

The frightless attempts to light his taper had covered his fingers with phosphorus from the matches. His gesticulations had rubbed the phosphorus over his clothes, and in the dark passage he glowed with unearthly light. The lady's maid's nerves were upset, and she went into hysterics. Having explained these facts, the waiter showed the guest to his room.—Philadelphia Times.

Postal Red Tape.

The rule of the dead letter office is to make extraordinary effort to return all unsent letters which are found to contain money. But blind obedience to this rule is the basis of an entertaining story. A boy in the Indian school on the Shoshonish reservation, which is about three miles from the postoffice of Union City, Wash., wrote a letter to his brother on Sunday some time ago, inclosing in it a small sum of money.

He also wrote on the envelope that, if it should not be delivered in proper time, was to be returned to the writer. His brother did not call for it, and it was returned to Union City. The postmaster there had not heard of the boy, and on inquiry failed to find him. Accordingly he sent the letter to the dead letter office.

On arrival here it was opened, and it had money in it. It was returned to Union City with a long letter of instructions to find the writer, if possible. After inquiry the boy was at last found and was requested to go in person, claim the letter and receipt for it, and the postmaster had to go through as much red tape as if the letter contained $1,000. The joke becomes evident when it is known that the money in the letter amounted to only a cent postage stamp and a copper cent.—New York Tribune.

How to Be Friendly With Wasps.

A correspondent of the Leeds (England) Mercury bears testimony to the inoffensive behavior of wasps if not molested. He writes: "My favorite garden seat in summer is near an extensive bed of flowers and evergreens. The wasps come to this bed while I am reading, roam over my book or newspaper. My hands and face are at their own pleasure. If I have been eating or drinking anything sweet, they make free with my lips and suck them. They come and go peaceably, and I encourage their companionship by keeping perfectly still. I was never stung by a wasp but once in my life, and then I deserved the punishment, which I provoked. A lengthened experience convinces me that if you remain passive and do not wantonly molest them you may live on the most friendly and sociable terms even with wasps."

Napoleon's Poison.

A curious detail of Napoleon Bonaparte's costume was the religious care with which he kept hung around his neck the little leather envelope, shaped like a heart, which contained poison that was to liberate him in case of irretrievable reverses of fortune. This poison was prepared after a recipe that Cabanis had given to Corvisart, and after the year 1808 the emperor never undertook a campaign without having his little packet of poison.

A SULTAN AT SIXTEEN.

Abdul Aziz of Morocco, His Remarkable Since Mother and His Many Troubles.

A country staggering under a load of debt, a civil war and four foreign nations watching for an excuse to seize his throne and his territory are a few of the difficulties that confront Abdul Aziz, the boy sultan of Morocco, who was elevated to the office upon the recent death of his father, Sultan Muley Hassan. His suspects are full of the warships of England, Spain, France and Italy; his uncle, Muley Ismail, is disputing his right to rule Mahoom at Fes, and he has a one eyed elder brother, named Muley Mohammed, who thinks that if any sultan business is to be done in Morocco he is just the boy to do it. Strange as it may seem, there is at present strength in the fact that four foreign nations are casting greedy eyes at his country. Each nation is like the dog in the manger—if it cannot feed on Morocco boy, it is very sure to prevent any other nation from doing so.

Abdul is only 16 years old, but he has a fair army behind him and the good old constitutional right of lopping off any heads that do not please his eye, and consequently the situation does not daunt him. His mother was a beautiful Circassian woman named Ayesha, who was a slave, but who gained complete ascendancy over the late sultan. She was educated in Europe, speaks Spanish and French and has cleverly used her great power over Muley Hassan to procure the advancement of her son.

Three years ago, when Abdul was only 13, she cajoled the sultan into appointing Abdul viceroy of the kingdom of Fez, with ample maintenance and a court of his own. This step broke the heart of the one eyed Muley Mohammed, who is the eldest son of the late sultan, for his mother was a legitimate Shereefa and not a slave, like Ayesha, the mother of Abdul. The one eyed Muley's protests were unavailing, however, and the old tartan's act was generally regarded as an indication that he desired Abdul to succeed him.

When the sultan's political testament was opened after his death, it was found that Ayesha had won the fight for the throne, and a council of regents was appointed to serve during the minority of Abdul's reign. With his mother behind him there seems no good reason why Abdul should not overthrow all his local enemies. She must be a remarkable schemer and diplomat, for the late sultan had some 2,000 wives and minor others who were constantly plotting to advance the interests of their favorites, but who were outwitted and outgeneraled by the Circassian slave woman.

THE PYTHIAN UNIVERSITY.

It Will Be Erected In Gallatin, Tenn., and Will Cost $250,000.

The Pythian University For the Order Universal now being erected at Gallatin, Tenn., will be the only authorized Pythian school in the country, it is said. The cornerstone was laid with impressive ceremonies on May 2 in the presence of the grand lodge of Tennessee and prominent visiting Knights. The building is to be a four story structure surmounted by a picturesque dome. The frontage is to be 200 feet and the width 130 feet. The structure will be constructed of pollshed stone, with the flooring and marble wainscoting, and will be an absolutely fireproof as it is possible for man's ingenuity to make it.

The main entrance will lead to a spacious rotunda, from which a handsome marble stairway is to wind upward to the floors above. The basement will be a large hall, from which easy access may be had to the society halls on the first floor. The second and third floors will be partitioned off as recitation rooms, and one room will be used as a library on the second floor. The fourth story will contain the lodgeroom and banquet hall. The site of the structure is particularly attractive. It is on a hill one mile north of Gallatin and commands an excellent view of the town and surrounding country.

There are at present 800,000 Knights of Pythias, and the order is constantly growing. Another big building project they have on hand is a state Pythian home which is to be erected soon by the members of the order in New York state. There are $1,000 members of the order in the Empire State, and this year they are paying a per capita tax of 10 cents each, which will furnish $3,100 toward the project. Many lodges have also given substantial aid toward the enterprise. An act incorporating the institution under the name of the Pythian home was passed by the legislature and signed by the governor last year. The home will be a refuge for the disabled and indigent members of the order.

Blood Purified and Pains Driven Out by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I can say with all my heart 'Praise God for Hood's Sarsaparilla.' Three years ago rheumatism terribly affected my hands and feet, mostly in the joints. They became inflamed and swollen. PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Legislature of the State of Minnesota, provided by Chapter one of the General Laws of 1893, for the submission to the people of the following proposed amendment to the constitutional section to be held thereby in November of the present year, an amendment to Section One (1) of Article Nine (9) of the State Constitution.

Said section to be amended now reads as follows:

Section 1. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be equally and uniformly assessed and levy on which taxes are to be levied shall be in cash valuation, and be equalized and uniform throughout the state: Provided, that the legislature may by general law or general authority municipal corporations to levy a tax upon property within their limits for improvements, or upon the property bounding or benefited by improvements, or both, without regard to cash valuation, and in such manner as the legislature may prescribe. And provided further, that for the purpose of defraying the expenses of lat ing out, opening and acquiring any city or municipality may by legislature may, if general or special law, be authorized to levy taxes in addition to the limit of fifty thousand ($50,000) or more, to levy an annual tax or assessment upon the land front of all lands fronting on any water main or water pipe laid by the city, municipality making such improvements, and for supplying water to the citizens thereof without regard to the cash value of such property, and to provide for such city to collect any such tax assessments or dues, a penalties for failure to pay the same, or any fee or penalty for any violation of the rules of any city or municipality in regard to the use of water, or for any water rate due for the same.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

It is proposed by the said act of 1893 to amend the above quoted section of the Constitution by adding thereto the following proviso; viz:

"Also, provided further, that there may be by law levied and collected a tax upon all inheritances, devises, etc., in an amount to be determined by the Legislature, shall be subject to taxation.

The law may be graded on progressive, but shall not exceed a maximum tax of five per cent. Exemptions may be made by the law and upon the Legislature may direct that property named subjects by appropriate methods to any related not in excess of five per cent of the amount thereof.

The Legislature may, if such authority is conferred, prescribe a fixed rate not to exceed one per cent per annum to be at once due and collected from the heirs, devisees, etc., regardless of the amount thereof, in all cases where the property that the inheritance, devise, etc., shall not exceed Five Hundred Dollars shall be taxed at the same rate prescribed for an inheritance of Five Thousand Dollars.

It may provide rates of taxation varying with the amount of the inheritance, devise, etc. The rate of taxation may be made to increase, as the same may augment in value by reason of the increase in the amount or value of the property descended or devised to the heirs, devisees, etc., and may provide rates of taxation varying with the degree of the consanguinity.

4. The portion of such a tax is claimed to rest upon the fact that the right to acquire property by devise or descent is the creature of the law and the state may withhold the right altogether, or may impose such conditions upon the same as may justly attach to such subjects a reasonable tax.

7. Similar legislation has been in force for some years in Pennsylvania and several other states.

8. The said amendment is proposed for the reason that doubts exist as to the validity of such legislation in the absence of express constitutional authority.

CIVILIANS AS AGENTS

NO MORE ARMY OFFICERS IN THE INDIAN SERVICE.

War Department Says It Makes the Army Unpopular—Indian Contract Schools to Be Abolished as Rapidly as Possible, Public Schools Being Substituted.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The war department having become satisfied that the policy of charging officers with duties of Indian agencies has worked to the detriment of the department, has removed the officers already detailed for the services as soon as the Indian bureau is able to furnish civilian agents to fill the places. The objections to the plan are, first, that it tends to make the army unpopular if an officer is zealous in protecting the interests of the government and of the Indians, and, second, that it is bad practice to separate an officer from his command for a long term and impose upon him duties foreign to proper military service. So several of these officers have recently been relieved from duty at Indian agencies and have been sent back to their regiments.

WILL MAKE A CHANGE.

Indian Contract Schools to Be Abolished as Rapidly as Possible.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—It is the policy of the bureau of Indian affairs to discourage the plan of contract schools, in their general sense of denominational schools, and to abandon them as soon as possible. This will be accomplished by transferring Indian pupils as rapidly as can be done from sectarian to public schools. It probably will require a couple of years to carry out this scheme as there are about 9,000 pupils now enrolled in the contract schools.

The change is outlined in an official communication sent by Acting Commissioner Armstrong to the superintendent of one of the largest of these schools, where material reduction in the enrollment has been made.

"I would suggest," says General Armstrong, "to you as well as to all of the religious orders which have contract schools on the reservation, that you prepare yourselves for still further reductions next year, as the tendency now is to gradually do away with contract schools and to place Indian children as far as possible in public schools, where it can be done, and in state agricultural schools and normal schools in different states. The last congress directed the secretary of the interior to report to the coming congress the best means of abolishing contract schools. The only way it can be done is by gradually reducing, and this, I think, will be the final outcome of all controversy and legislation on the subject.

"It is a matter over which this office has no control as it will be regulated entirely by congress."

Finds Gold for Miles on Rainy Lake.

DULUTH, Oct. 16.—Dr. U. S. Grant of Minneapolis, who has been a month with H. V. Winchell in a geological survey of the Rainy lake gold district on the American side, has returned and says that they found gold for a distance of 20 miles. The American side has plenty of gold, but owing to the difficulty in securing titles settlers are giving out as little information as possible.

Demand For Colombian Half Dollars.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The demand for Columbian half dollars is far beyond the expectation of the treasury officials. The indications now are that the supply will fall far short of the demand. At the sub-treasury in New York $50,000 in these coins were exchanged for gold during the first three days they were on sale. The demand in Washington is also unexpectedly heavy.

Attempted to Kill Da Gama.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—A special to The World from Montevideo says the police report that an attempt to kill Admiral Da Gama has been frustrated and that his would-be assassins have been arrested, one a Portuguese, the other a Brazilian. Both arrived three days before from Rio de Janeiro.

An "Around the World" Missionary.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Miss Jessie Akerman, an "around the world" missionary of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, has arrived in Chicago, after a trip of 150,000 miles, which, she claims, is the longest journey ever made by a woman.

Christian Endeavor Convention.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 16.—The annual state convention of the Young People's Society for Christian Endeavor meets at Winona this week. There will be eight sessions of the convention, beginning on Friday afternoon and continuing until Sunday evening, when the convention sermon will be preached by Rev. Wayland Hoyt, D. D., of Minneapolis.

A New Wheat Record.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—At 1 o'clock wheat on the produce exchange sold at 59 15-16c. This makes a new record price. Local bears are talking 55 cents for December wheat in New York.

Says Queen Li Has Gone Crazy.

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 16.—Before the Arawa left Honolulu a rumor was in circulation that Queen Liliokolani had gone crazy. The report is not credited although for several days she had not left the house she is occupying.

McKinley to Visit Louisiana.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 16.—Governor McKinley has decided to accept the invitation of the Republican committee of Louisiana and will deliver a speech at New Orleans on Oct. 20.

Will Settle Out of Court.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—The long pending dispute between the St. Paul Railroad company and the Pullman Palace Car company, involving perhaps $700,000, is about to be settled out of court.

A STREET CAR INCIDENT.

In Which a Chivalrous Little Man Makes a Big Mistake.

He was a little man, but his firm, quick step and erect head showed that he weighed 16 ounces to the pound and had all the confidence of a man weighing 200 pounds.

He stepped on the corner till a street car came along and stepped aboard.

The car was full, and several people were standing. He took hold of a strap and looked over the crowd and saw that several women were standing while a number of men were occupying comfortable seats.

It riled him to see it, and when his eye fell upon a pale faced little woman holding on to a strap, while a large, lazy looking man sat near by, he could not remain silent.

"See here," said he to the big man, "here is a lady standing while you have a seat."

"Yes," said the big man.

"Well, don't you think you ought to give up your seat to this woman, who has probably been hard at work during the day?"

"No."

"You don't?"

"I do not."

"Well," said the little man as he braced himself, "I do, and I am going to yank you clean out of this car."

He grabbed the big man by the collar and proceeded to drag him off the seat, but was interrupted by the woman, who grabbed him by the hair.

"Hold on!" cried the little man.

"That's what I'm doing," said the woman.

"But I must let up on this. What do you mean by attacking me?"

"Look a-here," said the female, "I didn't ask you to get me a seat. Besides I want you to know that man you have hold of is my husband."

The little man let go of the big man, the woman let go her hold on the hair, and order was restored, but the little man was quiet until, he reached the end of his route, when he left the car, when he was heard to mutter, "And such is life!"—Peck's Sun.

EVOLUTION OF NIAGARA.

The Estimates as to the Age of the World Famous Cataract.

Professor J. W. Spencer says the first conjectures as to the age of Niagara falls was made by Andrew Ellicott in 1760. Ellicott believed the falls to be 55,000 years old. About 1841 Lyle estimated the age of the falls at 35,000 years. All of these early estimates were purely conjecture, but they were correct in assuming that the gorge had been excavated by the river. Professor Spencer, in outlining the progress of the falls, says that a little stream draining the Erie basin once fell about 300 feet above the brow of the Niagara escarpment. This stream was not over one-fourth the volume of the recent cataract and consequently excavated the gorge at a much slower rate than at present.

During the early history of the river the waters of the three upper lakes emptied through the Huron basin by way of the Ottawa river. The height of the falls has increased several times. The first episode, represented by a small river falling 200 feet, lasted about 11,000 years. Then the height of the falls was increased to 400 feet and took the present course. The upper great lakes at the same time there was a series of cascades, three in all, the lower gaining on the upper until finally they were all united in one great cataract much higher than that of today.

Subsequently the waters were raised at the head of Lake Ontario, and the falls approximated to the present condition. This lasted a space of 17,000 years from the end of the first episode. The age of the present falls is put at 1,000 years, and the age of the lower gorge is probably occupied by transitional changes of a very gradual character. It is now 8,000 years since Lake Huron emptied into Lake Erie for the first time. The land has risen about the outlet of Lake Erie, and if the present rate of change continues in 5,000 or 6,000 years the waters of the four upper lakes will be turned into the Mississippi river drainage at Chicago.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Do Trees Require Sleep?

In the larger cities, where shade trees are few and scattering, electric lights seem to have no visible effect upon their foliage. In the towns and villages, however, many of which have their electric light systems, the effect is very noticeable, the leaves appearing as though they had been subjected to the blighting breath of a harmattan. The question was recently discussed at a meeting of the eastern horticulturists, the conclusion being that trees need darkness in order that they may sleep, and that being continually, kept awake and active they have been worn out and made prematurely old by the action of the light. That this is probably the correct solution of the mystery of the drooping leaves may be judged from the fact that similar trees in the neighborhood of those affected, though not exposed to the illumination, still retain their color and seem bright and strong.—St. Louis Republic.

Tolstoi and the Czar.

It is said that after the first incendiary articles of Tolstoi the czar sent for him and advised him to desist. "Will your majesty," Tolstoi is reported to have said, "doff for an instant your imperial mantle and judge my works as a mere man? If a single word of my writings offend your majesty's human sense, I will cut off my right hand." Alexander III became very thoughtful, did not reply, and affably dismissed the greatest living apostle of the social Christian idea.—New York Journal.

Husband—Things staid where they were put then.—New York Weekly.

PLAYING THE BUNKO.

AN EXAMPLE SHOWING HOW EASILY THE GAME CAN BE WORKED.

Mr. Sparks of Chicago Introduces Himself to Mr. Walker of Binghamville, and They Have a Friendly Chat—Persons and Matters of Mutual Interest.

"It isn't a difficult thing to be a bunko steerer," said the man in the hotel lobby to a reporter. "Do you see that clean looking old man over there on the settee? Well, that's Mr. Walker from Binghamville. I heard a man call him by name and inquire about all the folks down at Binghamville. I don't know whether Binghamville is in this state or Kentucky or Texas. Don't believe I ever heard of it before, but I can go over there and make him think I know the town like a book. That doesn't signify that he's green or that I'm particularly clever, but it's a fact never theless."

"What if he begins to ask you questions?"

"I'll get out the best way I can. Now, you go and sit in that chair just beyond the big settee, and you can hear the conversation."

"All right. I'll do it, but you'll get yourself into trouble."

"Do you think so? I'll simply sit down beside him, and we'll have a nice chat about old times."

"I beg your pardon, but isn't this Mr. Walker?"

"That's my name, but you've got the best of me."

"I thought I couldn't be mistaken. My name is Sparks. I live here in Chicago. It's been a good many years since I was at Binghamville."

"I expect you would hardly know the place. We've made a great many changes in the last two years. We've just built a new schoolhouse."

"You needed one, sure enough. What did they do with the old one?"

"Why, it's down. It wasn't any account. You recollect the hay barn that stood a little ways east from the old schoolhouse? Well, that burned this summer."

"You don't say so! Let's see, who owned that?"

"Old man Martin. He baled a lot of hay in that place."

"That's so. I remember now. The last time I was in Binghamville I stopped over a couple of days with the Smiths."

"Sylvester Smith, that owned the general store?"

"Yes. He was a nice man."

"He is right if you know him. Kind o' queer at times."

"I noticed that. However, I always got along well enough with him."

"He had a nice family."

"Indeed he had. What are the children doing?"

"You know the oldest girl was married?"

"Yes. I received an invitation to her wedding. How about the others?"

"I guess they're all at home but Jim. He's away to school most of the time."

"By the way, I became acquainted there with a mighty nice fellow. He runs a drug store. I guess you know who I mean."

"Homer Temple?"

"That's the man. He liked to hear a good story as well as any man I ever met."

"Yes, Homer will have his fun. I s'pose you heard of the scrape he got in?"

"I heard something about it, but never got the particulars."

"He got chasing around after a widow over in Brampton, and his wife left him for awhile, but she's back now."

"That's good. Are you going to have a pretty good farm down there soon?"

"The fair's over at Millicent."

"Yes, I know. I'll never forget the time I drove over there with Charlie. We started early"——

"You mean Charlie Henderson?"

"Yes."

"Oh, he was a great hand to go to the fairs. He stays at home more since he got married. You know he married one of the Jenkins girls."

"I guess she's a pretty nice girl."

"She is that. You remember the old man's place on the Brampton pike?"

"Sean past it many a time. He owns considerable land out there, doesn't he?"

"About 800 acres. He traded some of it for town property."

"Humph! He's foolish to do that. From what I know of that country I'd keep all the good farm land I could get."

"That's where you're level headed, too," said Mr. Walker, placing his hand confidentially on the other's. "Those land all through there is bound to increase in value, and we can get a crop there when they can't get it anywhere else."

"I told Sylvester Smith the same thing. A man that's got a good farm down in that country is fixed."

"You're right. You're right. I wish you could get down in that country and see it this year."

"I would like to drop down that way, but I'm kept pretty busy up here. However, I want you to give my regards to all my friends down there and tell them I'm behaving myself."

"That's saying a good deal for a man that lives in Chicago."

"That's a fact. Well, I will bid you goodby, Mr. Walker. Glad to have met you again."

"Thank you. Same to you. Drop in and see me whenever you get to Binghamville."

"Same old place?"

"Same old place."

"Good day."

"Good-day."

Mr. Sparks rejoined his friend at the cigar counter. "Don't you see?" said he. "I didn't take any risks, and yet he'd make an affidavit that I knew all about the town. I think I could go over and borrow money of him."—Chicago Record.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.
AN INTERESTING SKETCH.
Pauline Gaza, seemingly a model daughter, affection as her daughter just troubling into womanhood. Following is an extract: "Our daughter, Blanche, now in years of age, had been for the past two years afflicted with a complaint which baffled the skill of the best physicians. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive this for an indefinite period. We would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but also received no benefit from them. The first of last August she began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine. In a short time she had gained 10 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no one could be more delighted over the health that Miles' Nervine has given our child."
When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort, he sent me a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. E. Gaza, Bethlem, N. Y.

Robert Cochrane brought in some wheat on Monday that Wm. Munch informs the JOURNAL weighed over 62 pounds per bushel. It is as fine a sample as we have seen this fall.

Minneapolis and St. Paul have been shipping potatoes from the state of Washington to supply the needs of the market there. Potatoes retail at 60 cents and are in good demand.

Charles Vlac has sold the Reckitt block meat market to Frank Hawkins and will remain with him a while this fall, but later may conclude to go to California for the winter for the benefit of his health.

W. D. Wilson received a rather unique present one day last week—a live alligator. Wilson thinks all the world of the little pet and proposes to keep it as a companion piece to his long, blue fox-hound.

The walls are up for the first floor of the new hotel and the work is being carried on as rapidly as possible under the circumstances. Four weeks more of good weather would make a vast difference in its appearance.

Except perhaps in a few states the Pops will have no standing at all this fall and in a year or so there will be nothing left of it as a party. This is as it should be; a party that builds upon prejudice has no permanent place as an American institution.

As it was in the time when the greenback party rose, flourished and fell, so it will be later on when the fallacies of the Pops are fully understood. Men will wonder, however, that they could be so hypnotized as to keep it going so long as they have.

Wheat fell off one cent Tuesday morning reaching 44 cents for Hard. More potatoes then wheat were offered last week and were selling at 45 cents. A rumor that they dropped off to 30 could not be traced to its source but there was no warrant for it on the market below.

Sheriff Grandgenet went north on a bit of a missionary tour on Friday evening—loan while this office is in good hands and does not suffer while he is preaching the populist doctrine —for they do say that Deputy-Sheriff Losey is almost, if not quite, as good as the sheriff himself.

County Attorney Houston started south this week to save the country on the stump, from the Populist standpoint. Meantime the business of the office to which the people elected him, is entrusted to the care of a stranger.

Peter Barrette arrived on Saturday morning from Superior on a visit to friends and relatives in the city. He has been away for six years and notes some great changes in our city. Says from what he can see we are better off up here than they are in the part of Wisconsin where he lives.

C. B. Southwell arrived in the city from Grand Forks on Tuesday's freight. Mr. Southwell is the general agent for "Shorey's Treatise on Government," which is, as its name implies, a thorough treatise on this important topic. He sold a great many copies in Grand Forks and is making big sales here. Everybody needs it.

If feeding wheat to hogs for fattening purposes becomes generally adopted it will make some difference in the amount to be thrown upon the market. If it is true that it will net 75 to 80 cents per bushel, even fed to hogs that makes a better market for it than we have just now, and the experience of those who have tried it seems to bear out this view of the case. Farmers should test the matter for themselves and act upon their own judgment.

While the tide of immigration this fall does not particularly set in the nature of a boom, there is a healthy activity in that line, and a few sales each week transpire. There are several land hunters from Iowa and from Nebraska looking about this week with a view to location. As earlier in the season, so it is now that great bargains in choice farms may yet be secured, but if all signs fail not there will be a change by next spring and land will begin to get back to something like its true value.

Everything considered, the prospects this fall are not quite as gloomy as the Populist papers are trying hard to make out. They would have farmers to believe that they are on the verge of bankruptcy, while the fact is that with the exception of wheat, everything the farmer has for sale brings a fairly remunerative price, and had the Republicans remained in power the farmer would have been better off this fall. All he has to do now to bring good times is to see that the Republican party is restored to power next month as far as may be, and complete it in '96.

Bancroft's Treatise on Government is a standard work, valuable alike to the student of political economy and to all who desire to be well posted on the affairs of government. To the busy man who has not much time to spare, it is truly invaluable as a work of reference, and it is a work well worthy a place in every library in the land. It is a work that every statesman in the land will add to his library if he has not already secured it, just as soon as he sees it and comprehends its scope. C. B. Southwell is agent for the city and is taking large orders.

Ed. M. Pederson was up from Nely on Tuesday and dropped in to chat with the JOURNAL man. Says he has got some new ideas on farming from his experience this year. He planted a good patch of yellow dent corn which yielded 60 bushels per acre of fine sound corn. He also planted a good, big patch of potatoes—and dug 150 bushels per acre from it; and he has a fine herd of swine that will soon be in shape to turn off as pork. Ed says if a man can't make money farming in this country he can't make it anywhere in the same line of business.

Poor Digestion

Leads to nervousness, restlessness, peevishness, chronic Dyspepsia and a host of ailments. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the remedy. It tones the stomach, creates an appetite, and gives a relish to food. It makes pure blood and gives healthy action to all the organs of the body. Take Hood's, for Hood's Sarsaparilla cures.

Hood's Pills become the favorite cathartic with every one who tries them. 25c.

An Indian Story.

Especially if it be a good one and full of useful information is always interesting.

I have a book beautifully illustrated, that tells much about the Indians and the northwest, and the miraculous escape of one man from them in the early days.

It tells also of the Yellowstone Park, the greatest wonder of the natural world.

For only 8 cents in stamps and your address, I will send you the book.

CEREMONIAL MANNERS IN JAPAN.

Etiquette Has Become Second Nature In the Land of the Mikado.

Given a highly imitative race like the Japanese, and let one entertaining standard be set before them. Then generation after generation will no change be witnessed. The standard will set like that of the French academy on the language of France. Now, at home in America, we have 80 standards of manners—the reserved and reticent New England manners, the slap you on the back far western manners, the demagogue's manner, the drummer's manners, the cut and dried business man's manners—these and dozens of others might be specified. And it must be admitted by even the most patriotic that the man who should try to model his deportment on all these schools at once would come to a somewhat mixed result.

Nothing of this bewildering complexity has ever existed in Japan. From the mikado at the top to coolie at the bottom of the social scale one undeviating standard has always prevailed. Originally an importation from China, it has been elaborated through centuries of study of the most elaborate ceremonial etiquette till at last through constant practice it has become second nature. No one ever saw anything else, ever dreamed of anything else.

There was one way of saluting a superior, one of saluting an equal, one of saluting an inferior, and one's head would have been cut off had he departed from it. No Japanese child ever saw a drummer—saw only prostrate artisans saluting samurai, samurai saluting dignitaries, dignities saluting shoguns. The whole ceremonial became organized into habit as much as their instinctive habits into our setters and pointers, perhaps the best mannered of our population.

Little girls of 10 will ape one here whose finish of breeding would have awakened the envy of a duchess at the court of Louis XIV at Versailles. Female servants one will encounter at a dinner in the house of a Japanese gentleman whose grace, charm and dignity are the quintessence of Jadylike refinement. "Trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle." The supreme fact is that the young woman of 20 has been doing the thing for a thousand years.—Christian Register.

"Worse Than Four Years of War."

Senator Hoar of Massachusetts has plainly and tersely described what the effect of the proposed tariff will be upon the country, as follows:

"In the cost in money, the destruction of property, the ruin of trade, the misery, the starvation of men accustomed to work for the comforts of life, this bill is twofold worse than four years of war."

Every Republican senator who in any way aids by his vote or countenance by his presence the enactment of such a bill will be contributing to a disaster twofold worse than four years of war." The north must prevent such wanton wickedness; the north must desire the south in the forum as well as on the field.

Hindoo Grades.

The four grades of society among the Hindoos are the Brahmans, or sacerdotal class, who are said at the moment of creation to have issued from the mouth of Brahma; the Kshatrya, or Chattsee, or military class, sprung from the arms of Brahma; the Vaisya, or Bais, or mercantile class from the thigh of Brahma, and Sudras, or Coolies, or servile class, from the foot of Brahma. The business of the Sudras is to serve the three superior classes, more especially the Brahmans. Their condition is said to be improved; they are not to accumulate property and are mulcted by any means to approach the dignity of the higher classes. These divisions are hereditary, impassable and indefeasible.—Brooklyn Eagle.

ROYAL, the Superior Baking Powder.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., February 17, 1893.

I have, within the last month, purchased at the leading retail stores twenty-five samples of Royal Baking Powder, in original sealed packages, and have submitted each one to a careful chemical analysis as to its character, purity and efficiency.

They have been found to be cream of tartar powders entirely free from ammonia and all forms of adulterations and impurities, and to be of the very highest leavening power.

I have never examined a large line of samples obtained by purchase upon the retail market which have shown anything like the uniformity of composition and the very high degree of leavening power which is shown by these samples.

Polk County Journal.

VOL. XVIII. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1894. No. 28.

Another Canard.

The rumor having reached us that the Hon. Geo. R. Roberts, of Stephen, was in the field as an independent candidate for state senator, we addressed a letter to him on the subject and soon received a reply that knocks the "independent" story silly. We were confident that Mr. Roberts was altogether too good a Republican to do any such foolish thing, and this letter fully justifies our opinion. Mr. Roberts says he is doing his best for the election of the Republican ticket straight. Speaking of Judge Collins he said: "If every person knew Judge Collins as well as I do he would get every vote up here. Judge Collins is by far the better man of the two for the best interests of the people, and unless he is elected the great cities get the lion's share of the representation upon the bench to the utter exclusion of the country, which is far from being a fair deal. I shall do all I can for Judge Collins."

It Reads Funny.

And this is what Frank Barnum, in his Sauk Centre Avalanche, has to say on the situation. It sounds funny from such an astute politician as Frank is supposed to be.

"The Republicans are not a little alarmed as to the success of their candidate for governor, since nearly all the leading Scandinavian papers of the state have deserted Gov. Nelson and are urging their readers and friends to vote for S. M. Owen, the Populist nominee. Not only have they repudiated Nelson, but they have also gone back on Bob Dunn, and are doing yeoman work for A. Bierman. The cause of Democracy grows brighter as the day of election approaches, and it is not now a question of who will be the next governor, but the question is, how large will Geo. Becker's plurality be?"

Don't Like It.

Speaking of the address of the "Denver Business Men's Club" the Minneapolis Journal says: "The Pops are trying to belittle the document sent out by the Denver Business Men's League on the blighting effects of Populism in Colorado, but when 5,000 men engaged in every kind of business pursuit, and members of all parties, send out such a report it can't be belittled. It simply reflects the rapidly growing conviction through the country that where Populism has its chance to show what it is and what it can do, it determinedly impairs the public credit by legislation hostile to the investment of capital and arrests industrial progress and state development. A party is known by its fruits, and people who have tasted the fruits of Populist rule don't want any more of it."

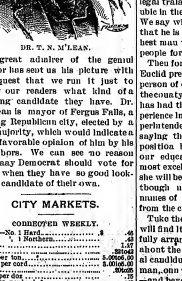
Fergus Falls' Mayor.



DR. T. N. M'LEAN.

A great admirer of the genial doctor has sent us his picture with a request that we run it just to show our readers what kind of a looking candidate they have. Dr. McLean is mayor of Fergus Falls, a strong Republican city, elected by a big majority, which would indicate a very favorable opinion of him by his neighbors. We can see no reason why any Democrat should vote for Boss when there is no good looking candidate of their own.

WHO TO VOTE FOR.

An Array of Candidates Who Need No Recommendation where Known.

Men of Ability and Integrity, in whom you will not be Deceived.

The greatest fault that has been found with the Republican party of late years has been that they were getting a little too negligent in the matter of the make-up of their ticket —sometimes putting on some notorious sticks for the sake of the influence they were supposed to carry in certain quarters. Whatever of truth there may have been in that in the past it cannot be said that they have not consulted the best interests of the people in every essential particular in the make-up of their ticket this year. Take the county ticket, scan it closely and you will not find one solitary stick in its make-up, every nomination was made with a view solely to efficiency and the nominations scattered about the county in such a way that almost every section has a representative—and a good one too. Then we find that St. Hilaire has the candidate for sheriff. In Sam Dalnard we have a representative business man who, if he is elected will fill the office with great ability and creditably alike to himself and to the county. Sam amply deserves the hearty support of every one who wishes to see honesty and ability in that office. Then we have for auditor one of the leading farmers of Polk county, a man of quiet, reserved manners, but a good, level-headed business man, H. B. Davis, of Red Lake Falls, a man than whom no better could be found for the position in Polk county and who should have the vote of every farmer in the county. H. B. Davis will receive a large vote—will probably be elected, and if so the affairs of that office will be in most excellent hands.

For treasurer, Fertile furnishes the candidate, in the person of Kaute Opheim, one of her most successful business men, a man who, having made a success of his own business, knows how the affairs of the county should be managed and he would take a pride in instituting the good opinions of his friends and neighbors who were instrumental in securing his nomination.

For clerk of court, Gentilly comes to the front with a prominent young man, whom she delights to honor, the only French Canadian, by the way, on the ticket, Fay Lanctot, who is peculiarly fitted, by temperament and education for the duties of that office. Mr. Lanctot is one of the best men for that position that could be found anywhere in the county and his election is a foregone conclusion if the voters want efficiency in office. Garden furnishes the candidate for register of deeds in the person of Frank W. Hansen, a prominent young business man. The postoffice address of Attorney J. Walseth, we believe, is Lambert. Mr. Walseth combines qualifications that are needed in that office. While we have nothing to say against Judge Benson—this is not a mudslinging campaign—the people not many years since declared in favor of not over two terms of official life and Mr. Walseth has not had one yet. He would bring to the office a legal training that would be invaluable in the discharge of its duties. We say without fear of contradiction that he is well and beyond the very best man whose name is before the people for the position.

Theo for superintendent of schools Euclid presents a fair aspirant in the person of one of the best teachers in the county, Miss Ida K. Hancock, who has had the benefit of one term's experience in the office of assistant superintendent, and it goes without saying that if she is selected for the position by the vote of the people, our educational interests will be in most excellent hands; and we believe she will be elected. All of the balance, though minor offices, contain the names of leading business men, all from the city of Crookston.

Take the legislative ticket and you will find its make-up equally as carefully arranged and well distributed about the district. The congressional candidate is an exceptionally able man, one who, if sent to Washington —and beyond a shadow of a doubt he will be—will have something of an idea what he is there for, and the ability to know how to accomplish getting what is to be sent there for. In Frank M. Eddy the district has a man of marked ability and he will be elected by a good majority.

The Rally.

On Friday evening of last week the Opera House was filled to listen to addresses by R. J. Montagee, Esq., and our next congressman, Frank M. Eddy. Mr. Montague gave an eloquent address that was attentively listened to, after which Miss Ida K. Hancock was introduced, who gave a brief address, and then Mr. Eddy occupied the time until closing in a speech that was at once a surprise and a pleasure to all who had never heard him speak before.

Mr. Eddy proved conclusively that he is a man whom you do not want to size up when you first set eyes on him, as you will fool yourself, sure as you're born, for there is infinitely more in him than appears at first glance. Mr. Eddy has been constantly on the go ever since he was nominated, making two and three speeches a day and traveling about in the district, and although very much fatigued with his great labors, he at once enchained the attention of the audience and held it until he had finished his talk, and even then they were not eager to go but would have liked to hear him talk more.

Mr. Eddy will make a worthy successor to Knute Nelson and S. G. Comstock in congress, and we shall again have a member from the district can well be proud of.

Campaigning Under Difficulties.

On Saturday evening a squad of Republican speakers started out for the town of Hammond for to speak words of good cheer to the dwellers in that vicinity, but it seems that the elements had conspired against them, and they were obliged to give up and beat a retreat for home. There was H. Steenerson, Lewis Ellington, G. H. Palmer, and Will Lanctot, and Steenerson's trotter, J. L. C. They were along all right until about half way out when the flood gates were opened and the rain descended by the bucketful. When the first bucketful struck Ellington he turned a mournful countenance upon his suffering fellow-conspirators and remarked: "There must be some mistake about this program, boys, this is not a prohibitionist crowd," and the boys responded "not by a jing-dalfalsie aint"—and they all smiled faintly, and the elements got no better very fast. Just then a happy thought struck Steenerson—it was the Pop maxim to "keep in the middle of the road." No sooner was the idea suggested than it was tried, but it would not work; and the only thing to do was what they did do, turn around and trust to luck and the horses to reach home, which after a while they did, the wettest crowd of Republican campaign speakers that the canvass has thus far developed.

Can't Go Populism.

Speaking of W. W. Erwin's attitude, the Minneapolis Evening Journal says:

"The very emphatic denial by "Bill" Erwin, that he has indentified himself with Populism and his statement that he has never been in sympathy with a movement which "proposes to surrender the fields of enterprise and business to thestate," cannot give much comfort to the retrogressive Populist party in the state.

"Mr. Erwin's position is the only one a progressive and public spirited citizen can take. The Populist party proposes just such a surrender as Mr. Erwin indicates. Concurrently it proposes to rob the people of half the purchasing power of their money and enact legislation which will turn the investors of money to states which furnish some protection to capital and enable it to perform its beneficent work for the public. The doctrine which S. M. Owen and his colleagues are promulgating is practically the dogma of extreme socialism, such as was set forth a few days ago by the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes of America, who propose the collective ownership by the people of all means of production and distribution. Under this arrangement not only would all the railways be handed over to the government, but mills, factories, mines, workshops—everything would be held under the management of the government at Washington. That is what the Populist dogma really means and reflection must by any one of ordinary intelligence will unquestionably show him that "collective ownership by the people," as they call it, means simply the paralysis of industrial enterprise, industry and the erection of one of the darkest tyrannies which ever blighted the earth. The Populist program is retrogrede. It proposes to bring the people of this country back to intolerable medieval tyrannies."

$100 REWARD FOR FRAUD.

Farm, Stock and Home, Hon. S. M. Owen's Paper, a Party to the Affair.

Checks for $100 are being handed around as though they were of no more account than the proposed Populist money, and in fact they are not, as they are merely copies, the original having been cashed about the middle of July last by W. T. Cole, of Minneapolis, now foreman of the Journal; and thereby hangs a tale, which is in part as follows:

The firm of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., advertising agents, of New York City, who drew the check, are too well known to newspaper men to need any introduction, but for the benefit of those of our readers who do not know, we will state that their business is to solicit advertising from large concerns, and then place it in a number of newspapers and periodicals with which they do business. In this connection they issue annually the American Newspaper Directory, in which is given the name, address, and amount of circulation of every publication in the United States. These circulation ratings are furnished by the publishers of the various publications at the request of Rowell & Co., and are accepted by Rowell & Co. to their patrons, which guarantee is given by a reward of $100 to anyone proving that they have been imposed upon by an untruthful circulation rating.

In their issue for this year Farm, Stock and Home is given a rating of 30,000 copies, whereas it has been proved beyond a doubt that they issued only 16,800 copies when they were claiming the 30,000.

The object of the fraudulent rating furnished Rowell & Co. by Farm, Stock and Home is probably the greater price they are able to obtain for advertising space, as they could get more than double the price for a circulation of 30,000 copies which they could for 16,800.

It is like a grocery man selling a customer 30 pounds of sugar and only delivering about 16 pounds.

The man in charge of the fraudulent dealings is he likely to be more honest as a public office?

It is reasonable to presume that Mr. Owen knew approximately the number of copies he issued at the time the rating for Rowell was made and if he did it is certainly a matter of interest to the voters who are asked to help to make him governor of Minnesota.

Mr. Owen has always been considered honest, the JOURNAL at least always so considered him, and we confess to a feeling of disappointment at this revelation.

NELSON COUNTY.

How Crookston People Regard the Proposition to Set Off Nelson County.

There has been a growing feeling in favor of letting Nelson county off at the coming election ever since the proposition was made, until, as near as we can size it up, there seems to be a majority favorable to it. The argument is that this territory is bound to go off sometime, sooner or later, and as long as the people more directly affected by the change are so desirous to have it done this fall why not concede the point and allow them to do so, and thus avoid the expense of another election on the question? If it is true that the county is in danger of being divided if the votes in the proposed new county vote for the quadruple proposition, and that it will not be supported, in a city of this size, that we could be wholly united upon any question, but how any person living here could vote upon the question of the county, surpasses our guess. We think a majority will, however, favor letting Nelson county go.

Extensive prairie fires were raging north of the city on Friday night. They came our way have made much headway Saturday night.

WHO'S HIS FRIEND?

A Few Instances of Laws in Favor of Workingmen, and By Whom Passed.

Laws for Recovery of Wages, Protection Against Accidents, &c., &c.

Three parties ask the suffrage of the workingman this fall, in Minnesota. One, the Republican, has passed nearly every law of benefit to the workingman, while another, the Democratic, has opposed nearly all such laws. Then comes the Populists. Their record is not so extensive as the two old parties, but in the states of Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and South Dakota, where they have had a chance to show what they would do when they had the power we look in vain for any legislation intended to benefit the workingman.

The following facts, culled from the Pioneer Press, speak for themselves. volumes for the Republican party in the matter of labor legislation.

Certain employments of children were prohibited in 1890 in nineteen states, of which fourteen were Republican at the time of the enactment of the laws referred to.

In the same year the hours of labor for children were regulated in twenty-three states, of which fifteen were Republican at the passage of the laws. Of nine-nine acts in force in the same year relating in various ways to the employment of children, seventy-four were enacted by Republican legislatures.

Before 1890 twenty-nine distinct acts had been passed relating to the health of employes in factories, of which twenty-one were Republican legislatures. Forty-eight acts had been passed relating to the employment of women, of which thirty-three had been by Republican legislatures.

A system of inspection of factories to enforce the laws for the protection of women and children had been created in 1890 in fifteen states, of which only four had been at the hands of Democrats.

Republican legislatures in New York and Minnesota made it lawful for men in labor unions to unite to advance wages. A Democratic legislature in Texas made that same act criminal.

Laws for the inspection of steam boilers had been passed before 1890 in eighteen states, of which only Maryland and Missouri had Democratic legislatures at the time of their passage.

The blocking of the frogs and guard rails on railroads and in 1890 been secured by laws in seven states, all Republican.

Two states in 1894 had inspectors to look after safety devices on railroads. They were Republican Minnesota and Michigan.

The recognition of Labor as a legal holiday was first made by a Republican legislature. Of the first ten states to make Labor day a holiday seven were Republican and three Democratic. Of the large number found to go off somewhere, sooner or later, and as long as the people more directly affected by the change are so desirous to have it done this fall why not concede the point and allow them to do so, and thus avoid the expense of another election on the question? If it is true that the county is in danger of being divided if the votes in the proposed new county vote for the quadruple proposition, and that it will not be supported, in a city of this size, that we could be wholly united upon any question, but how any person living here could vote upon the question of the county, surpasses our guess. We think a majority will, however, favor letting Nelson county go.

Extensive prairie fires were raging north of the city on Friday night. They came our way have made much headway Saturday night.

Three states, all Republican, before 1890, had made railway companies responsible for the wages due laborers from contractors on their railroads.

Some may object to the foregoing by saying that we must not go back to ancient history. Let us review recent labor legislation that of the last years, 1893, 1891, 1892 and 1893. In those four years in the United States sixty-two acts have been passed relating to the health and safety of employes, of which twenty-three were by legislatures wholly under the control of the Democratic party. Fifty-three acts were passed relating to the hours of work, making Labor day a holiday, etc., of which eighteen were enacted by Democratic legislatures.

Sixty-two acts were passed relating to organization of the labor, boycotts and lockouts. Twenty-seven of these were by Democratic legislatures. Of this last list quite a number were very hostile to labor and should be counted as black marks instead of credit marks. Thirty-eight acts relating to labor of women and children were passed, of which sixteen were by Democratic legislatures.

Eighty-one acts relating to laborers' wages were passed in four years, of which twenty-seven were Democratic. Of Republican laws, all are in the interest of employes, and of the Democratic a number are for the distinct protection of employes. This is especially the case of labor bills in Southern states.

From the preceding summary it can be seen to whom the workingmen are indebted for the great body of the laws in the United States protecting their interests.

COME OFF!

The Times Man Again Indulges in His Pastime of Taking Thro' His Hat.

The Times is jumping on to John F. Knudson's neck in great shape, calling him a dishonest schemer, and classing him with W. G. Hunt. The Times man figured with the Democratic members of the board of county commissioners, putting up a job by which the Times received the county printing at a figure far above what the county could have procured the work for if no job had been put up. We can imagine that W. G. Hunt would have entered into a scheme of this kind with avidity, and in fact would have entered into it, but we don't believe that John D. Knudson would have done so, because we believe he is too essentially honest to do a thing of that kind that would bring big money to himself at the expense of the rest of the taxpayers—he is naturally too honest for that. The chief difficulty with John is that he regards the People's party as the Moses that is to lead the children of Israel out of bondage, and his mind is too lymphatic for him to catch onto ideas rapidly enough to enable him to be the best legislative material that we have. Herein lies the danger of sending him to the legislature, and not, as the Times assumer, on account of natural dishonesty. This fact was clearly shown in his attitude upon the reapportionment question. His action was clearly against the most vital interests of his constituents, but it is perfectly plain that it was not money that influenced John in that matter. He simply followed the idea of party, fealty believing that in some mysterious way or other it would all work out for the best interests of his constituents. Now if he had been composed of the proper material to make a good legislator, of his mind would have been quick to grasp the situation and he would have realized his opportunity to do something that would have been in the real interests of his constituents. If John has not already realized his mistake we believe that he will some day, and when he does we believe he will regret his action in that matter as much if not more than those who had to suffer from his lack of ability to grasp situations promptly. While he is not the best calculated for the position, as are some who are candidates, yet he is entitled to all there is in him—which is honesty. There are some people, built upon the one idea plan, who have acquired the idea that the rights of farmers are the only thing that need any serious attention in the legislature. These people mean well, are honest. They would not steal, they would not lie, they would not cheat, yet they are not broad-gauged enough to be sent to St. Paul to legislate in the interests of all the people. They are honest, yet they can be easily made the pliant tools of designing men and their action, to their constituency, is as dangerous as though they were positively dishonest—but don't forget that they are honest.

Boen Must be Defeated.

The Fergus Falls Journal has this to say of the Populist candidate for congress Halbor E. Boen:

There is no man running for an office in this tate to-day whose defeat is so important to the interests and prosperity of the state as that of H. E. Boen, the Populist candidate for congress. Mr. Boen should be defeated not because he is a democrat, not because he rides on a railroad pass, not because his religious views are at variance with the people of the district, but because he stands for and advocates ideas and propositions which are injurious and hostile to the business welfare and prosperity of the whole Seventh congressional district. The Journal does not believe in the personal warfare which is being made upon Mr. Boen by men within his own party. We have known him personally and intimately for ten years. He is not a drunkard. He is a temperate man, at least he whs before he went to Washington. He is not a mean loafer. He always has been and is a busy man—busy running politics if nothing else. It is undoubtedly true that he rides on railroad passes. All officials do and it is a shame, an outrage upon the people who elect them that they do. It has evil which ought to be remedied ere so long for railroads find this an easy and lawful way of influencing officials it will be done, so in this respect Mr. Boen is no worse than Republican and Democratic politicans, except that he is a representative of a party which has made the abolition of the railroad pass one of its corner stones. If Mr. Boen does not believe in a God, personal or otherwise, in a hell or heaven, that is his right. Religious theory is one of the foundation stones of our federal constitution. It was a desire for religious liberty that drove the Pilgrim fathers to these shores. Mr. Boen is not in congress to legislate on doctrines of religion. Our church conferences and conventions attend to those matters, and of course Mr. Boen would have no place there. Congress is the place where business matters are legislated upon, and we have a perfect right to criticise and praise, attack and defend, the ideas, bills and propositions put forward by him. It is safe to say that no man ever in congress in one session has introduced more absurd, ridiculous, pernicious measures than he, and the worst feature of the whole business is that Boen is too intelligent to take any stock in the measures which he has proposed. He has introduced them simply for buncombe, to hoodwink and deceive unintelligent and unthinking people, and the result has been that in the east, where we have people to think well of us, we have been subjected to ridicule, and the impression left that the Seventh congressional district of Minnesota is filled with idiots and an asylum place to invest money. Hishill to print $2,000,000,000 irredeemable paper money is sure to scare capital out of the district as long as he sits in congress. His resolution to give government tents and government rations to all tramps who may come to Washington, as Coxeyites, is enough to startle any country infested by tramps as the east has been the past year. Enough are begging without inducing more. His bill instructing the secretary of the treasury to withdraw all funds from all national banks and turn them over to man who has stuck in or owes a bank, for the people to use when banks would have to pay what they owed. Hoskins in the height of his glory never advanced anything ranker than this. Such propositions as these are calculated to make people wonder what kind of a country, what sort of people inhabit the great Seventh congressional district. Heaven knows that with half crops and the present price of wheat, times are hard enough. It is difficult enough to get an eastern man to loan money on a Park Region and Red River Valley farm with for three years in succession has raised but a small crop of 45 cent wheat. What can we expect when in addition to these things we have a man representing us in congress proposing measures which will return to investors cheap money instead of good, in case any was returned at all. We need capital to make the great transition which must occur in our methods of farming. We need capital with which to buy stock and to build creameries and factories. We want money to build mills and factories to manufacture our raw materials and the markets which we need to buy. How can we expect people with inve ted to send it here, while, by electing a man like Boen to congress, we are proclaiming to the entire country that we endorse the ideas on business questions. McLean, the Democratic candidate would let the duty on tariff wool so that the Canadian and English friends could bring in all their products free of duty. Knox would legislate on what a man should drink, but thank heaven, like Knox, they will not advocate financial ideas which are ruinous to the communities in which they live.

Bancroft's Treatise on Government.

What is it? It is a large volume written by that renowned historian, Geo. M. Bancroft, upon every conceivable subject that a politician wants to know, in fact a man has no business to pretend to be a politician unless he has a copy of it in his library for reference. The average man wants it in order to know whether the political speakers that he hears are giving him the straight tip—in fact no library is complete without it. It is an invaluable book for the youth of our land, and every parent of a growing family of boys should have it. Call on or address the agent for the work in this city and will call on you. You will miss it if you fail to look it over carefully. [27-28]

And whereas the said Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the American Loan and Trust Company, a corporation, by a written instrument dated October 3d, A. D. 1894, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, on the 3d day of October, A. D. 1894, at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 64 of mortgages, on page 428-9.

And whereas there is now claimed to be due and payable upon said mortgage and note at the date of this notice the sum of $1,200 principal and $360 interest thereon to the date of sale, and $21.60 attorney's fee as provided in said mortgage and note, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage and hereinafter described, viz: Lot number Eight (8) in Block number Seventy-three (73) in Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, according to the recorded plat thereof, at public auction to the highest bidder, on the 3rd day of December, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. in front of the court house in the city of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, to pay said debt and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, including the attorney's fee as in said mortgage stipulated, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of such sale.

INVESTED THEIR ALL.

The Pittsburg Public Stock and Produce Exchange Numbered Many Victims.

WOULD LIVE ON DIVIDENDS.

Many Poor People Had Put Their Last Dollar Into the Concern.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 23.—The news of the closing up by the police of the Public Stock and Produce Exchange, a discretionary pool concern on Saturday brought great crowds of investors from the country into town. Their presence reveals how widespread had been the operations of these concerns and fully confirms the previously published estimate of the number of persons who had invested money in these schemes. The Delayneys, who operated the Public Stock and Produce Exchange, secured their release on bail for a hearing this evening. At the office this morning they announced to their clients that as their books were in the hands of the police they would be unable to pay out any money or transact business except to receive notice of withdrawals of contracts. All the discretionary pools have a clause in their agreement by which they can insist upon a thirty day notice of withdrawal at the option of the managers.

Another One Suspends.

The Consolidated Stock and Produce company, another discretionary pool, did not open its doors Monday morning. Hundreds of investors, who went to the office to withdraw their deposits, were confronted with a notice that the firm had suspended temporarily. Washington Payne, the manager, was not there and no one appeared able to give any information as to his present whereabouts.

Other pools are expected to suspend at any moment, and excitement among the investors is running high. By the books of the Delayneys it is shown that over half of the investors were women, most of them domestics and washerwomen, who fancied that they found and easy road to wealth, and who placed in these concerns. Another class of investors who will suffer severely is composed of men who were thrown out of work by the late financial depression, and who, with their families were living upon the money saved in more prosperous times. They thought by investing in these pools that they could live upon the dividends and thus keep their little capital intact. Many of them find themselves at the approach of winter without a dollar. A warrant is out for the arrest of Washington Force.

TIES AND ROCKS ON TRACKS.

An Attempt to Wreck a Great Northern Train Near Garretson.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Oct. 23.—It has just become known that an attempt was made last Monday night to wreck the southbound freight on the Great Northern railroad, between this city and Garretson. Ties and rocks were so arranged that the engine would run up onto the obstruction and cause a wreck. It so happened that the train for the south did not leave Garretson until the train from the south had arrived. The engine on this train struck the obstruction, tearing away part of the pilot, but did not derail the engine. The railroad's detective has been working on the case for a week, but failing to find any clew to the would-be wreckers has notified the police, and in this way the story of the attempted wreck became known.

Called a Halt on the Standard.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 23.—The supreme court of this state has halted the Standard in its process of absorbing the Independent Oil refineries in the country. A deal had been made to buy out the Producers and Refiners Oil company. John J. Carter of Franklin, Pa., a stockholder, objected and secured an injunction in the Venango county court by which the deal was stopped. The supreme court, without dissuing the questions involved, has made the injunction permanent.

Answer Has the Goun.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The correspondent of The Times at Simla, India, says that the doctors there believe that the symptoms displayed by the Ameer of Afghanistan are due to gouty complications, which may disappear. The correspondent adds that the ameer has instructed his notables and generals to support his eldest son, Prince Habibullah, in the succession to the throne.

Killed by Coal Gas.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Oct. 23.—Merlyn A. Church, superintendent of the Fond Chester Electric Light and Gas company, was found dead in bed at the residence of Mrs. Charles Wentworth, where he boarded. His wife was in an unconscious condition and up to a late hour had not regained consciousness. An investigation showed that they had been overcome by coal gas.

Biscuit Factory Burned.

DETROIT, Oct. 23.—A fire started early in the morning in a warehouse of the American Paper company on West Larned street, destroying in all about $50,000 worth of property.

A DOUBLE HANGING.

ERMISCH AND WONIGKEIT EXECUTED AT ST. PAUL.

They Killed Bartender Lindhoff on May 9 Last, With the Object of Robbery. Both Very Young and Might Have Been Reprieved but For a Murderous Attack on a Deputy Sheriff.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 19.—Charles Ermisch and Otto Wonigkeit, the youthful assassins of William Lindhoff, were hanged at the Ramsey county jail between 8 and 9 o'clock this morning. Those present at the execution were limited to the sheriff and several deputies, a couple of physicians, the ministers who were with the murderers during their last hours, and one reporter from each paper.

The scaffold stood in the narrow alley between the jail and the city hall. A canvas covering prevented people witnessing the execution from high windows of near by buildings, but that precaution was hardly necessary, as the pale moonlight of the early morning was a strong barrier to curious eyes.

The drop fell at 8:07 a. m., and 10 minutes later there were no apparent signs of life. The bodies hung for half an hour, however, that they were cut down and prepared for burial.

Ermisch Tried to Escape.

Ermisch parted with his mother about two weeks ago when she was sentenced to 20 days in the work house for giving her son a revolver. She thought he wanted to kill himself, but he used the weapon trying to liberate himself and companion. He succeeded in getting to the jail corridor, and then met with such resistance by the deputies that his attempted escape failed, but not until he had dangerously wounded Deputy Horst, who is still suffering from a badly injured hand.

The attempt of Ermisch to escape, and the shooting of Deputy Horst created a great sensation, and no doubt was the means of deciding Governor Nelson to let the death sentence be executed. Up to that time the date of hanging had not been fixed, and there was a belief that the governor might place the youth in prison for life.

Wonigkeit Repented and Cried.

Wonigkeit parted with his mother Wednesday morning. The woman could hardly push her hands through the specs in the cell door, but they were eagerly accessed by the boy, while he cried quietly, and said a few words that could not possibly afford the mother the slightest solace.

Were Old in Crime.

The crime for which Ermisch and Wonigkeit were hanged was the murder of William Lindhoff, a bartender. Those two young desperadoes, wearing masks, at about 9 o'clock on the evening of May 2, entered the saloon of L. R. Kohlman, at the corner of Wabasha street and College avenue, commanded everybody in the room to throw up hands and demanded the cash at the bar. Lindhoff refused and started to get his weapon, but was shot and mortally wounded by one of the highwaymen.

Though Ermisch was but 19 and Wonigkeit but 18 it was shown to the court and public that from childhood they had been criminals. They were sent to the reformatory for burglary, and after two years they came back to St. Paul, armed themselves with revolvers and amused themselves on the highways leading to St. Paul by holding up farmers in broad daylight and robbing them of their watches and cash. After a few days of this spree they murdered Lindhoff.

KILLED BY MILITIA.

MOB AT WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., REPULSED.

They Were Trying to Lynch a Negro Rapist Who Was Guarded by Troops—Several Killed and Many Wounded by the Volley Fired.

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., Oct. 18.—William Dolby, colored, who last week ago criminally assaulted Mrs. C. Boyd, aged 55, at Parrotts station station, near here, was captured at Delaware, O., and brought into court at 3 p. m. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary.

An angry mob gathered about the jail Tuesday noon, after Dolby had been identified by his victim, and Sheriff Cook called to his assistance the local militia company. This action increased the fury against Dolby and Governor McKinley was appealed to for additional assistance and troops from Columbus were sent here Wednesday morning, Colonel Coyt in command.

The mob surrounding the jail and courthouse attempted to take Dolby from the officers when removed from jail for trial but were kept at bay by the free use of Bayonets and Clubbed Guns.

After the trial the prisoner was taken to the grand jury room. A mob gathered about the courthouse and it was impossible to get the prisoner through to take him to the train. Sheriff Cook wired the governor to send more troops. The mob grew rapidly in numbers and desperation. Colonel Coyt made a speech asking the crowd to disperse, but it was received with jeers. The mob kept Dolby and his guards prisoners in the courthouse until 8 p. m. and then made an attack. The militia repelled them without firing at first, but as the south door was forced open Dolby and his guards made a run for the south door. This door opens upon the street, which was filled with men, women and children. The guards finally Fired On the Attacking Party.

None of the latter were hurt, but a dozen or more persons in the crowd were struck. Two were killed outright and four more fatally wounded, causing many to flee. The killed are Smith Welsh, aged 16; Jesse Judy and Mack Johnson. William Samms was shot through the bowels and fatally wounded. George Keating, shot through both legs and groin, will die. F. L. Witherhorne, an old and prominent citizen, was shot through both ankles. A fall list of the wounded cannot be had, as they were taken away promptly.

The people are frenzied and threaten to dynamite the courthouse. Additional troops have been ordered from Cincinnati, Columbus, Chillicothe and other points.

BEDE HAS RESIGNED.

The United States Marshal For Minnesota Gives Up His Office.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The attorney general has received a letter from J. Adam Bede, United States marshal, at St. Paul, tendering his resignation, on the ground that he cannot consistently comply with the president's letter of 1888, in regard to federal office holders taking part in political campaigns. His resignation has been accepted.

On a Stumping Tour.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 20.—The Dispatch says: For the past two weeks J. Adam Bede, United States marshal for Minnesota, has been stump speaking for Major Baldwin. After the president issued his letter notifying all office holders to keep out of active service Bede became more aggressive than ever, and he was finally notified to return to his post. He refused and sent in his resignation, and to his great surprise, it has been accepted as stated.

Marshal Bede is at present on a political tour, stumping the state for the Democracy. His subordinates have admitted the fact of his resignation, and the reasons assigned when interviewed, but declined to discuss the matter in the absence of their chief.

CHILDREN CREMATED.

Four of the Family of the Rev. Ross Taylor Burned to Death.

NYACK, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Four grand children of Rev. William Taylor, Methodist missionary bishop of Africa, perished in the elegant home of their father, Ross Taylor, in South Nyack. In addition one man was so badly burned that he can scarcely recover, and two others were seriously injured.

POISONED BY CHEESE.

One Dead and Two Others Ill at Black River Falls.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 20.—A special to The Wisconsin from Black River Falls says the family of Andrew Anderson was poisoned by eating cheese that had been cooked in a brass kettle. One of the victims is dead, and two others are not expected to live.

To Move South Dakota's Capital.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Oct. 23.—A secret movement has been inaugurated to secure the removal of the capital of South Dakota by the next legislature from Pierre to Huron. The Black Hills members, it is alleged, are supporting the move, expecting thus to secure support for their senatorial candidate to succeed Senator Pettigrew. A special from Huron denies the story, while another from Pierre affirms it.

Big Elevator Destroyed.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 20.—The Northern Elevator company's elevator at Portage la Prairie, on the Manitoba Pacific, was destroyed, together with 50,000 bushels of wheat. The loss is $85,000.

Road Withdraws.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 17.—Capitalist H. Road, Indianapolis, Ind., has withdrawn his name as candidate for congress in the third district, and will support Hicks.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Ingvald Gunderson and Ingeborg, his wife, of Polk County, Minnesota, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, of the same place, bearing date the 17th day of November, A. D. 1892, and was duly filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota, on the 5th day of December, A. D. 1892, at 9 o'clock a. m., in book 42 of mortgages, on page 422.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1,000.00, with five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and ten (10) coupon interest notes all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to Geo. Wm. Boyd by a certain assignment dated February 6th, A. D. 1894, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 12th day of March, A. D. 1894, at 11:30 o'clock a. m., in book 46 of mortgages, on page 500.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1000, and interest thereon since November 17th, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1090.00, besides the costs, charges and expenses of this foreclosure, including a reasonable attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the premises thereby described, to-wit: Lots one (1) and two (2) of section number eleven (11) in township number one hundred and forty-six (146) north of range number forty-one (41) west, containing one hundred and fifty-nine and 36-100 (159 36-100) acres more or less according to the government survey thereof, will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, or his deputy, at the front door of the court house in the village of Crookston, in said Polk County, Minnesota, on Saturday, the 8th day of December, A. D. 1894, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgages and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, including the attorney's fee in this foreclosure, and the sum of fifty dollars ($50) attorney's fee as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid in case a foreclosure thereof should be made.

If you want a reliable judge upon the supreme bench see that you vote for Judge Collins. If true worth counts for anything, Judge Collins should succeed himself upon the bench.

The Democrats and the demi-(agnoze)-Pops are trying very hard to show how bad Governor Nelson is abusing the farmers in his speeches this fall. Just as though the farmers could not understand the English language!

Six weeks ago appearances indicated that the Pops would carry North Dakotu, but now everything points to an overwhelming Republican victory; overwhelming when the great change necessary to give them a victory is taken into consideration.

The policy of the Republican party has proven safe and s nure guide in all of the affairs of government. Is not the sure experience of years a better safeguard than the wild, untried theories of visionary demagogues? Of course every body is tired of Democratic misrule.

If there is yet remaining one old soldier who has an idea that he will vote the Democratic ticket next month he ought to read up on the Democratic pension record. If the Democratic party is not a sworn enemy of the old soldier they have every symptom of it.

The people have very ardently made up their minds to take a hand in the coming election—judging by interest manifested in registration. If we may accept the results of the October elections as a criterion to go by, it is easy to figure out which way the wind blows.

The election of S. M. Owen means Populistic supremacy. Populistic supremacy means financial ruin for very many of the people of Minnesota, especially farmers, who have not sufficient capital with which to carry on their business. Are the farmers ready to take that fatal leap?

Since the Democrats came into power the Grand Army has had to expend hundreds of thousands of dollars to care for the sick and infirm members—money that the government owes to the old soldiers and that they would have received had the Republican party remained in power. The old soldiers will again have to take up arms in defense of their rights—this time with the ballot instead of the bullet.

If the people have become sufficiently tired with political jugglery they will strike in their might on the 6th day of next month and engulf the whole gang of political scalawags out of existence. To change from Democratic lack of policy to Populistic incompetency and confusion would be like jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, and would not bring the desired peace to any remarkable extent. The only practical thing to do is to return to a solid, substantial Republican basis.

The Democrats profess great love for the old veteran, at the same time they are planning and plotting to deprive him of all the benefits of all the pension legislation that the Republicans had left on record. Years ago these men cheerfully gave some of the best years of their lives to save the country, and now the Democrats begrudge him a paltry $8.00 or $12.00 per month to keep soul and body together for the few years he has to stay on earth. But that is true to Democratic history.

THE COMING ELECTION.

We devote a good deal of space to political matters, because until election there is no more important subject to our readers. The JOURNAL believes that the welfare of the people is puramount to every other consideration, and it is clearly to their interest to elect the best men who belong to the best party. The JOURNAL sincerely believes that the principles of the Republican party are by far the best for the people. The Republican party believes in promoting the greatest good to the greatest number, and its history since it was founded proves its theories sound and reliable, therefore, the JOURNAL is extremely anxious to see that party victorious and expects to see it, because we believe in the sound undercurrent of public opinion that flows beneath all the froth that scoundrels use upon the surface. The American people are an impressionable people, and for that reason liable to be temporarily carried away with the glittering schemes of some law fad or doctrine, but they seek the best good for the greatest number—they are all right at heart and they cannot be fooled for long at a time, and sooner or later get back on the right track. At last presidential election the people were fooled, sadly fooled, but they have taken their medicine heroically and are only patiently awaiting a chance to give public expression to their opinion. Some of them have been carried away by the syren song of the Populist, but they are coming to their senses, and that political fad will be relegated to the shades where it belongs.

POPULISM AND THE FARMER.

We can see a reason for all Populist candidates sticking to their party—because if they get elected that's where they get their reward, but what earthly good the success of the Populist party will do the average people of the country, we confess puzzles us to figure out. Their wild and visionary schemes would paralyze the business interests of the country and when that state of things exist the farmers and the laboring men feel the evil effects in as great a degree as any other business interest. If indeed not a greater. The Populist seeks to have the government take control of every business interest, the entering wedge of this millennial condition of things being government control of railroads. Manufacturing would be next in turn, then mercantile business and it would never stop until farming was included. And why not? It is just as competent for the government to run all the farms as needed as it is to do all the other kinds of business, and this would be the legitimate result if the Populist leaders could carry out their wild and visionary schemes. Some farmers blindly engage in the cause with an idea that every other interest must give way to that of their particular vocations. They have a sort of a vague, indefinite idea that in some way the Populist party will help the former, but it is simply a blind trust in promises because there is not one single farmer who can give an intelligent explanation of the method or manner in which that party can benefit his business. Experience in the states where that party has obtained control has proved as disastrous to farmers that they are to laboring men, each other in their haste to get back in line with the only true party of progress in the field—the Republican party. Almost every idea invented by the Populist party has been proven fallacious by the wrecks of parties that lie strewn upon the political shores of time, and this party is being fast dashed to pieces upon the hard rocks of experience and practical common sense, and its days are numbered. It will soon follow the Prohibition party that had but one idea, although that idea was founded upon a great truth and sprang from the existence of a great evil.

ITS USEFULNESS GONE.

That the farmers of the country have suffered evils which could be remedied has long been proved by banding themselves together in a mutual organization—the Farmers' Alliance. That this organization righted many wrongs could never have been righted except by organized effort, is also a matter beyond dispute. That the Farmers' Alliance was a beneficent institution history has demonstrated.

But like many other mutual associations, the control got into the hands of men who saw in it a chance to further their own ends, and by fine speeches and a goodly amount of sophistry succeeded in converting a purely mutual organization into a political party. Then the evil days came. No longer were their efforts directed to the betterment of the farmer, but were concentrated on the one object of political supremacy. In some states this has been achieved, but look at those states to-day, and what do you find? The answer is dark and gloomy—taxation increased, public funds squandered and misappropriated, riot and bloodshed, men in high public office who are wholly unequal to the duties thereof. However, incompetence is one of the least of their failings.

As to the "reform" legislation of this new party—what has done? Their principal efforts have been directed against the men of wealth, contemptuously called "aristocrats." They have legislated money out of Kansas, and what is the result? The Kansas farmer to-day who happens to be in need of money, and there is always a goodly number of this class in a new country, is unable to obtain it, or if he does get any, is obliged to pay far greater interest, in one way or another, than he was before the advent of this blessed reform party. Their legislation has pretty much all been of the nature of a boomerang—and has hit the very parties it was thrown to succor.

Were it not for this hostile attitude capital would readily find its way to the farmer, and thereby afford him a competition in the money-loaning business, and consequently cheaper rates. Instead of a few "sharks," there would be many honorable men in the money-loaning business, and borrowers would not only obtain better rates, but would be treated with a great deal more leniency in the matter of extensions, overdue interest, etc. In fact, there would be so many "white men" in the money-loaning business that the "sharks" would be obliged to toe the mark or lose the business entirely. This is not theory, but experience.

One great fault with the Populist leaders is that there are too many playing out professional politicians from the other parties in control. They see a chance in this new party to get some position they could not get in one of the old parties, probably on account of dishonesty or incompetency, and declare themselves the only friends of the farmer and workingman. Beware of such men. They are wolves in sheep's clothing, and would rend you as soon as they got the power they are striving for.

How the intelligent farmer can continue on this suicidal course is more than we can conceive, and we feel assured that enough of them will speak at the coming election in such a manner as will forever send the demagogues and tricksters to the oblivion they so richly deserve.

Mr. Owen, the Populist candidate for governor, raves and wails his hate in his denunciation of corporations for watering their stocks, and then proceeds to water the editorial of his paper in a manner that would cause the aforesaid corporations to blush. "Consistency thou art a jewel."

The Times is doing its level best to elect a Populist governor of Minnesota. Meanwhile 5,000 ballots men of Colorado have issued an address to the American people that is a protest against the condition of affairs brought about by Populistic supremacy. These men know from experience what are the actual fruits of Populism, and they are saying that "next to a Democratic victory the success of Populism is the best thing."

Capt. A. H. Reed has withdrawn from his independent candidacy for congress in the third district. In this action the captain follows the bravery of a true soldier in daring to retreat from a false position into which he had been betrayed, before his action had cost the country the loss of a republican congressman. The captain knows too well that there are too many southern bigots in the saddle already for the interests of the old soldier, and his action will meet with the approval of every old soldier in Minnesota.

The secessionists have about given up the idea that Polk county can be cut into four parts and with the exception of McIntosh and vicinity have about given up the effort. From all over the county the reports come that people have convinced that this is not a very good year to think of increasing theft taxes, which they realize they would certainly do by division. It is possible that a majority favorable to division could be found in the proposed Columbia county—no where else.

The Times assumes that Governor Nelson calls S. M. Owen "a long-haired, wild-eyed populist," and then heroically rushes to the defense of Owen. Well, Gov. Nelson never said that of Mr. Owen, nay more he said that ALL farmers were in the habit of wasting their substance in saloons. Governor Nelson is a rattling good, solid, substantial speech, and he cannot be blamed if the Times young man didn't understand it. A speaker is not supposed to furnish brain-food to an audience and also furnish them the necessary brains to understand it with. The average American audience is supposed to have common sense enough to understand good plain English.

Only a few days more before the verdict of the people will be given at the polls. The Democrats ask vindication for plunging the country into the. hitherto unknown convulsions that have tried the financial institutions of the country and affected the laboring man us well as the capitalist. They ask vindication for trying to thwart the intentions of the government toward the veteran soldier, and they ask vindication for the broken promises they made to the people before the last presidential election. If all signs fail not they will get the kind they richly deserve —and enough of it to last twenty-five years at least.

SPIRITS OF THE AIR
Do They Whisper to PROF. TYNDALL of Hidden and Occult Things?
LEARN YOUR FATE.
Crowds Visit the Famous Seer.

Who foretold the death of Carter Harrison, late mayor of Chicago? Who stood on the docks at Liverpool and called the turns in the city of Boston before she sunk in the Atlantic ocean? Who gave advice to President Cleaveland's death before his term expired? It is Prof. Tyndall, who is accompanied by the press, pupils, medical faculty and scientists generally, as the most distinguished psychologist of modern times. If you are in doubt that he can and will perform all he claims, feel yourself invited to call and he will give you more substantial proof of his marvelous power than you have ever before received from mortal. Don't fail to see him if you are interested in the affairs of life, if marriages, sickness, deaths, changes, travels, divorces, separations, lawsuits, business questions, wills, deeds and mortgages lost or stolen property, hidden treasure, lost or absent friends interest you. If you care to know what you should do to be more successful, where you should go, and whom you should see to buy and sell stocks etc. If you desire to have your domestic troubles removed, your love restored, your bitter enemies converted and called to time by a wand, whatever may be your troubles, suspicions or desires, call on the gifted man and he will send you away happier, wiser and better than before.

What is your vocation in life? How have you prospered? What are your hopes for the future? Every person is especially adapted to some particular business, profession or trade, which may justly be termed the true vocation, and yet more than half of you are fighting against an unknown fate for your fortune and position, which you do not and cannot obtain until you find your true vocation.

If you are contented with your present vocation, you have found your true vocation and success will attend you, but if dissatisfied and all is going against you, it is an evidence that you have not found your true vocation. A visit to Prof. Tyndall will soon settle this all important questions and your true vocation will be pointed out to you, and if possessed of only a moderate degree of brains and energy success will be sure to attend you. His advices you with a certainty by a higher than human power as in the proper course to pursue in life. His discriptions of your friends and enemies are as real as though they stood before you. Call and test the doctor to your heart's content, and you will expect thoroughly satisfied that there is at least one reliable psychologist and clairvoyant now in your midst.

Office hours—to a. m. to 9 p. m. daily and Sunday. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by mail. Letters with one dollar answered.

All business sacred and confidential. Failure to be arranged that you meet no strangers. Sickness, losses, deaths, etc., etc., will be answered from these and all other questions of interest. Remember this is the only visit Prof. Tyndall Lake, has established to the voters of said County, at the said general election to be held in this state on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1894.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the state of Minnesota to be hereto affixed, this 7th day of October, A. D. 1894.

RESIDENCE PROPERTY FOR SALE.
I have forty desirable lots in Jerome's addition, which I offer for sale at reasonable prices and on terms to suit purchasers. These lots have 50 and 100 feet frontage, and are situated on high land, where good dry cellars can be got, and an unbundance of pure water can be procured at a depth of from 15 to 20 feet. Jerome's addition is the healthiest and pleasantest portion of the city. Not a single case of typhoid fever has ever been reported there, and this is no doubt owing to the good water found everywhere on that addition. PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, Executive Department.

Whereas, pursuant to Chapter one hundred and forty-three (143) of the General Laws of 1893, "An Act to provide for the creation and organization of new counties and the government of the same," a petition was filed with the secretary of State, on the 22nd day of September, A. D. 1894, praying for the creation of a new county out of territory now upon the north county, said state, to be named Red Lake county, and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at the northwest corner of township No. 156, of range 45, running thence south along the township line between range 45 and 46 to the southwest corner of township No. 156 of range 45; thence east along the township line between township No. 155 and township No. 156 to range 44; thence south along the range line to the southwest corner of township No. 154 of range 44; thence east along the township line of said township No. 154, range 43, to the southwest corner of township No. 154, range 42; thence south along the township line between township No. 153 and township No. 154 to the southwest corner of township No. 153, range 42; thence west along the township line between township No. 153 and township No. 154 to the northwest corner of township No. 153, range 43; thence north along the township line between township No. 154 and township No. 155 to the northwest corner of township No. 155, range 43; thence running west along the township line between township No. 155 and No. 156 to the eastern boundary line of Polk county; thence northerly along the eastern boundary line of said Polk county to the place of beginning.

And, whereas, said petition has been duly considered, and found sufficient and in accordance, in all respects to the provisions of said act.

Now, therefore, I, Knute Nelson, Governor of the State of Minnesota, pursuant to the authority vested in me, by the law aforesaid, do hereby direct that the question and question of the creation of said county of Red Lake, be submitted to the voters of said Polk county, at the said general election to be held in this state on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1894.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the state of Minnesota to be hereto affixed, this 7th day of October, A. D. 1894.

Mayor Stadervold was down from Fosston over Sunday.

Firemen's annual ball in the McKinnon block this evening.

A number of sheep were killed at the stock yards by dogs on Saturday night.

H. C. Brudick was up from Fertile on Saturday on his way to Grand Forks.

Wheat opened up on Monday at 46 cents—two cents above last week's average price.

Miner Rood was in from Mentor last week trying to dispose of a carload of pickles.

Andrew Steenerson, the Populist candidate for sheriff, spent the Sabbath in the city.

Ole J. Vaule, returned last week from a long absence from the city on a trip to Norway.

Wm. Rox, Jr., was in the city last week. He seems to have escaped from McIntosh somehow.

At the meeting of the fire department last Thursday evening, A. C. Schmidt was elected chief.

The aldermen of the different wards are custodians of the sidewalks since the resignation of the street commissioner.

Sam Furan came up from Austin last week and spent a few days out at the old home at Dugdale, returning on Friday.

Charles P. Hathaway, who has been confined to the house by illness for a fortnight was able to get out again on Monday.

McKinnon Bros. moved out of the block this week, and the room they occupied for machinery will be used by the firemen this evening for their annual ball.

Atty. J. Walseth is meeting with good encouragement in his canvass. He will, with his legal knowledge, fit into the judge of probate office like an old shoe.

What few pops there are left in the state are making a great stir just now. They are clubbing the earth but will be satisfied with a small portion of it—after election.

Jim Creighton tendered his resignation as street commissioner to the council at last meeting and it was accepted. No appointment to fill the vacancy was made.

Hon. R. Sampson went out to Fosston last week to look after his fences. It looks as though he would be the next senator in the 31st district. He is a worker from way back.

All who can spare the time this week have gone to Minneapolis to hear big Tom Reed, of Maine, give his views on the living issues of the day. Tom Reed is a giant physically and intellectually.

The Hallock Enterprise says that J. E. Glidden shipped a carload of turnips to the markets below recently, and they netted him 25 cents a bushel. That's better than potatoes at 50 cents a bushel.

Comrade A. Burnam says that he has got his fall plowing all completed and is now ready for the winter. He has plowed over 320 acres, which, with all the other fall work is a pretty good showing.

Attorney J. Walseth is making friends wherever he goes, and he is getting about the county rightitively. As he is an experienced attorney, he will work into the office of probate judge right handy.

When you come to size up the various county tickets in the field you will find that the Republican party furnishes a square-toed business ticket. It deserves to be elected on its merits—and we believe it will be.

The Democrats seem in high feather because a Scandinavian paper in Minneapolis has sold out to the Pops and comes out for Gwen. One swallow don't make a spring, no they will he able to perceive—after the votes are counted.

The Democratic leaders are amusing themselves at various places throughout the state making speeches. They flatter themselves that they are running a campaign. After November 6th they will find that they were not in it.

Monday morning opened out bright and pleasant after the rain—instead—as many predicted—cold and stormy. The prospects are good for a month or so of open weather—which makes it for more convenient than heretofore.

On Monday morning the Great Northern train arrived from the south at six o'clock sharp—on her new time. The leaving time at night is changed from 10:50 to 8:40, arriving in St. Paul at 7:15 in the morning, which makes it far more convenient than heretofore.

Dr. Danley, Will Hich, John Bergquist, Jim Creighton, Markman and others are preparing for a big hunt out in eastern Polk and Beltrami counties, and expect to start to-morrow. They think they can just about get all the bears killed and get back in time to vote.

It is amusing to see the efforts put forth by the Globe to elect Gen. Becker and S. M. Owen, the democratic and populist candidate for governor. How the Globe can figure two men into one office is a mystery to all unacquainted with the Globe's peculiar methods.

A dead body was found near Maloney on Saturday morning and the coroner notified. W. F. Arnold went down, Coroner Shepard being unable to go. It is said to be a man who was stealing a ride east from Grand Forks on the passenger train on Friday night. In his pocket was a bill of sale for some wood made out to a Mr Cunningham, which is supposed to be his name.

To a man up a tree it would seem as though P. E. Lynne's candidacy for judge of probate was simply for the purpose of re-electing Benson. Of course no one pretends to say but that Lynne, if he could be elected would make a competent official enough, but it is just as plain that he can as soon graft wings and fly as that he can be elected on the Democratic ticket. All he can do is to draw votes that Benson would not get.

Seldom so late in the season is such a severe thunder storm seen as visited this section on Saturday evening. The lightning was almost continuous and the rain fell in torrents for an hour, beginning at 7 o'clock followed by a lull of a few minutes. Rain fell at intervals during the entire night, in vast quantities and must have gone a long way toward filling the ground with water, something that was much needed to supply the wells and streams.

E. T. Atwood was up from Stearns county last Thursday, calling on friends in this city. Mr. Atwood was at one time president of the Farmers' Alliance, when that institution was simply a business organization and he fully believes that if the farmers would maintain the Alliance as a social and business organization great good would come of it. He is one of the most progressive farmers in Minnesota, a man who has made farming pay and a man who believes in his profession. In speaking of Judge Collins, of St. Cloud, will whom, by the way, he is well acquainted and has been for years, Mr. Atwood said that in every farmer in Minnesota knew Judge Collins intimately, the judge would get every one of the farmers' votes, as he is and always has been one of the best friends the farmers of Minnesota have ever had, either in or out of official position. He has been of inestimable benefit to them since he has been on the bench and any farmer who votes for John W. Willis instead of Judge Collins simply don't know Judge Collins. Mr. Atwood said: "I wish I could personally talk with every farmer in the state before election that I might convince them of the great importance to them of this question."

The flooring at the Red River Valley elevator broke down Saturday evening, dropping about 4,000 bushels of wheat to the ground. It was not discovered until Monday. Carpenters were at once put to work to fix it up, and the whole structure will be braced up and strengthened. The damage will not exceed $150.

Capt. M. B. Brown is doing yeoman service for the Republican party on the stump. While the Capt. does not attempt any great flights of oratory, he gets right at the meat of the matter in a plain, straight-forward, practical manner that cannot be misunderstood. Incidentally, he is talking county division on the side, showing that it is not to the best interests of the average taxpayer to have the county cut in four parts. He says if you must have division, content yourselves with cutting off the east side and call it Nelson county.

Authorities differ as to the best results obtained from feeding wheat. Some advocate grinding or crushing it; others say the best results are obtained by soaking it until it sours while others insist that there is nothing like boiling it. It strikes me that it is owing somewhat to the way the individual farmer is situated. If a farmer has facilities for cracking it that method would be all right, but if he has to pay four cents per bushel for grinding, it would seem the better way to boil it. When he has no mill in which to crush it and has no facilities to boil it, soaking may answer every purpose—it would seem to be preferable to feeding it dry and whole. It is a question that every farmer can best determine for himself, governed by the circumstances by which he is surrounded, we should think. It is probable that a great deal of wheat will be fed to hogs and of course every man desires to obtain the best results from it.

MANY PAPERS READ.

Forest Fires Conference Listened to a Number of Addresses.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 5.—The conference on forest fires spent the day in listening to papers and addresses and discussions of the best methods of preventing fires.

Mr. Barrett explained the provisions of a proposed law that will come before the next Minnesota legislature. It provides for state fire commissioners, requires the co-operation of sheriffs and supervisors, provides funds for fighting fires and for indemnity to property owners for loss by fire, places due responsibility on railroad companies in preventing fires, requires lumbermen every year, directs that campers or tourists must clear a 10-foot circle before starting a fire, and put out every spark on leaving, prohibits smoking pipes or cigars in the woods during danger periods, requires hunters to use non-combustible wads when shooting, and directs that meadows or slashings shall not be burned over during the dry seasons.

Botanist McMillan contributed some valuable statistics bearing on the subject under consideration and five minute talks were made by John Cooper of St. Cloud, F. S. Chittenden, C. S. Cairns, Colonel J. H. Stevens, Colonel C. H. Graves and others.

Resolutions Adopted.

A resolution was passed, introduced by Colonel J. H. Stevens, memorializing President Cleveland and requesting him to recommend to congress some measure to protect forests on the lands of the federal government.

Mr. Chittenden introduced the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the governor of Minnesota be requested to call the attention of the next legislature of this state in his message to the great importance of the enactment of a proper law for the prevention and suppression of forest fires, and the protection and preservation of our valuable timber interests.

M'KINLEY AT ST. PAUL.

Ohio's Governor Addresses an Immense Audience.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 8.—Governor William McKinley arrived in this city at 7:10 p. m. from Des Moines. He was accompanied by the reception committee, headed by ex-Governor Merriam, which met the McKinley train at Mason City Junction. Early in the evening there was a torchlight procession in which the governor himself participated. The procession was one of the largest ever seen in St. Paul, over 5,000 people being in line, and extending over a mile and a half. After traversing the principal streets ranks were broken at the Auditorium. Here an audience of 10,000 people were assembled to listen to the apostle of protection. At the close of the address at the Auditorium the governor addressed an overflow meeting at Market hall, after which an informal reception was given at the residence of ex-Governor Merriam. Governor McKinley was the guest of the evening, and the good men of the city and the visiting Republicans were afforded an opportunity to meet him informally.

AID FIRE SUFFERERS.

Recommendations in the Annual Report of Land Commissioner Lamoreaux.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—S. W. Lamoreaux, commissioner of the general land office, in his annual report to the secretary of the interior, makes several suggestions for the relief of the sufferers by forest fires in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. He says:

"The timber affected by these fires on public lands has been left in such a condition that if not cut and disposed of in a short time, it will become worm eaten and worthless, thus depriving the land of the great portion of its value to the settler seeking title thereto. Numerous applications have been made by the sufferers by these fires for permission to cut the timber at once and sell it."

He therefore recommends that congress be asked to give the permission necessary to allow the cutting of this timber and thus prevent the total loss of millions of feet. He also suggests that congress take other necessary steps for the relief of the fire sufferers, following the precedents set in similar cases.

Did the Republicans or Democrats Bankrupt the Treasury?

The statement prepared in the treasury department and introduced into The Congressional Record by the Hon. D. B. Henderson of Iowa shows the following facts concerning the amount of money in the treasury at the beginning of the last four administrations:

President Garfield found a cash balance at the beginning of his term, March 4, 1881, of.....$170,917,439
Grover Cleveland, at the beginning of his first term, March 4, 1885, found.....189,164,000
President Harrison on March 4, 1889, found.....179,827,190
Grover Cleveland, for his second term, March 4, 1893, found.....104,139,287

These figures do not sound very much like a bankrupt treasury. If President Cleveland had, as a cautious man, looked to the foreign sources of revenue by which to have maintained the balances in the treasury, he would not have been wrestling with a deficiency or a bankrupt treasury.

GAVE AND RECEIVED REBATES.

Nelson Morris, J. W. Reinhart and Others Indicted by a Federal Grand Jury.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—The federal grand jury has made a final report of the investigation of the rebates alleged to have been paid by the Santa Fe railroad in violation of the interstate commerce law and returned six indictments against officials of the road and shippers, who, it is claimed, received rebates. One of the men indicted was Joseph W. Reinhart, ex-president of the company and until recently one of the receivers of the road, and one of the shippers against whom a true bill was returned was Nelson Morris, the well known Chicago packer. Joined in the same indictment with Mr. Reinhart was John A. Hanley, general freight traffic manager of the road, who resigned his position about two weeks ago and is now connected with the company. The names of the other persons included in the indictments were not disclosed by the federal officials and will not be until warrants have been served. It is generally believed, however, that the other indictments are against Isaac Thompson, a shipper of Kansas City; G. H. Hammond of Hammond, Ind., another shipper, and a clerk in the employ of the Atchison road, who, it is alleged, made out the rebates.

The maximum penalty imposed on a shipper for unjustly illegal rates is a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment not to exceed two years or both in the discretion of the court.

ANOTHER SEVERE BATTLE

Said to Have Been Fought Between Chinese and Japanese Armies.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—A dispatch received here from Shanghai says that according to Chinese advices, a severe battle has been fought on the lower portion of the Yalu river. The Japanese are said to have crossed the river and to have attacked the Chinese, but, it is reported, after fierce fighting the Japanese were repulsed. Both sides are said to have had heavy loss. The Chinese do not claim a conclusive victory, but they declare that they still maintain their position. The full circumstances of this dispatch is obtainable, but it is thought probable that fighting has actually occurred.

CAMPAIGN LITERATURE.

Work at Headquarters of Both Parties at Washington Practically Concluded.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The work of the Democratic and Republican congressional headquarters, so far as the promulgation of literature is concerned, is practically closed this week. Millions of documents have been sent out from the headquarters, but the managers now consider that the time for literary proselyting is past. At both headquarters apparent confidence is manifested in the result in November, and each side claims a majority of the house. The Democratic managers assert that the situation has improved perceptibly from their point of view with the settling of business uncertainty and the revival of trade, while the Republicans with equal emphasis claim a great reaction everywhere against the Democratic party as a result of the tariff and other legislation of the last congress.

THAT $5,000,000 ISSUE.

Judge Jenkins Refuses to Let a Berlin Bank Have It.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 23.—Colonel Pettit, counsel for Blayton Lyon, informed Judge Jenkins that the Deutsche bank of Berlin would take the entire $5,000,000 issue of Atlantic Pacific receivers' certificates if the court would turn the control of the whole matter over to the Adams reorganization committee. The attorneys for the receivers argued against the proposition. Judge Jenkins refused to permit it and ordered the receivers to dispose of the certificates at the best possible rate.

Ex-Mayor Grant Nominated.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—High J. Grant was nominated as Tammany's candidate for mayor vice Nathan Straus, withdrawn, at the meeting of the executive committee in Tammany hall during the afternoon. The mayor said in the morning that he would not accept a nomination, but changed his mind after a long conference.

Colorado Registration.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 24.—The registration of women in this city is almost as large as that of the men. The total number of names entered on the books, which are now closed, is 61,400. The registration in this county will exceed 70,000.

Reed Not Going to Kansas.

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 23.—A telegram from Speaker Thomas B. Reed informs the Republican committee that he will not be able to speak in Kansas this campaign. He had been booked for speeches at half a dozen points in the state.

Sanborn Will Rulify.

OMAHA, Oct. 23.—Judge Sanborn of the Eighth United States district, to whom was referred the traffic agreement between the Northern Pacific and Burlington systems, has indicated that he will ratify the agreement within a day or two.

CZAR LINGERS.

Condition of the Russian Ruler Practically Unchanged.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The day has produced practically nothing to the point in regard to the condition of the czar. In all the continental capitals and in London there have been streams of callers—officials, dignitaries, ecclesiasts and humble people—at the Russian embassy. To-day, however, little information was vouchsafed and that little consisted of forebodings.

Prayers and masses are incessantly offered from St. Petersburg to Vladivostock and from Rome to Buenos Ayres. The wild rumors reported Sunday from St. Petersburg were repeated Monday in still wilder forms. From Moscow comes a report that there are people there who insist that the czarewitch has and that the czar, in order to compel him to do so, has ordered his immediate marriage to Princess Alix. The Moscowites fear that should the rumors prove true they will have to face the gravest peril possible. That the people crowd the churches to pray for the czar, the fears that the rumor may be true give fervor to the petitions.

The Berliner Tageblatt publishes a telegram from Livadia asserting that the marriage of the czarewitch and Princess Alix will be celebrated Wednesday. This hastening of the ceremony is said to be due to the wish of the Romanoff family heir apparent to marry before ascending the throne and to proclaim his successor.

Princess Alix Arrives.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 23.—Princess Alix arrived at Livadia last night. The czarina accompanied her to the chapel of the castle, where both prayed earnestly that the life of the czar be spared. The czarina looked careworn, her eyes walked without assistance.

IRON HALL RECEIVERSHIP.

Within the Next Ten Days, Judge Winter Says, It Will Be Wound Up.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 23.—The first general report and account current of James A. Fulley as permanent receiver of the property of the Iron Hall was filed in the superior court this morning. The statements of the receiver are very long. Judge Winter made an order directing that the report and accompanying documents to referred to John H. Holliday and George C. Hitt as commissioners, to report as to the method and accuracy of accounting. The court of this report is the first step of several that will be taken immediately by Judge Winters to wind up the affairs of the trust.

Judge Winter says that within the next 10 days the receivership will be practically wound up. There remains in litigation only two phases of the trust. One is the life division, and the other is the payment of mistrued certificates that were issued when the receiver was appointed. To meet these claims $300,000 will be held. A great portion of the remaining balance in the hands of the receiver, probably $250,000, will be held to protect unperfected claims. Of these there are 1,100, and the receiver is now receiving evidence to perfect the claims.

Morton's Coachy Must Go Back.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Judge Lacombe in the United States circuit court has dismissed the writ of habeas corpus in the case of John James Howard, Levi P. Morton's English coachman. Under this ruling, Howard must go back to England.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Legislature of the State of Minnesota be provided by the constitution of the State of Minnesota, for the submission to the people of the State, for their adoption or rejection at the general election to be held therein in November of the present year, an amendment to section 1 of Article Nine (IX) of the State constitution.

Proposed section to be amended now reads as follows:

Section 1. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation, and be equalized and uniform throughout the state: Provided, that the legislature may by general law or special act authorize municipal corporations to levy a graduated tax on real estate based upon the benefits conferred upon such improvements or upon the property thereof by reason of such improvements, or both, without regard to cash valuation, and in such manner as the legislature may prescribe. And provided further, that for the purpose of defraying the expenses of lay ing out, constructing and acquiring any city or village park, boulevard or parkway, the legislature may, by general or special law, authorize any such city or village having a population of not less than 10,000 nor more than 50,000 to assess and collect taxes on property within the limits of such city or village, and to issue certificates therefor as the legislature may prescribe, and may provide for the payment of the same by special assessments upon property benefited thereby, without regard to cash valuation, and may also provide that the payment of such certificates may be enforced against such city or village, and may authorize such city to collect any such tax necessary to pay such certificates, and may provide for the levy of taxes or penalty for any violation of the rules of such park, boulevard or parkway in regard to the use, water, or for any water rate for the same."

PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

It is proposed by the said act of 1893 to amend the constitution of the State of Minnesota by adding thereto the following provision to-wit:

"And, provided further, that the legislature may by law levied and collected a tax upon all personal property, including moneys, bonds and credits of every kind and description above a fixed and specified sum, and may provide for the assessment and collection of such tax and such exemption and may be uniform, or it may be graduated and progressive, but shall not exceed the maximum tax of five per cent."

The purpose of the proposed amendments to the constitution of Minnesota with authority to tax the following subjects, to-wit:

1. Inheritances.
2. Bequests.
3. Legacies.
4. Gifts.

5. The said proposed amendments to the constitution of Minnesota further provides that all inheritances, devises, etc. to or for the use of such persons as to be determined by the Legislature, shall be subject to taxation.

6. It may provide rates of taxation varying with the degree of consanguinity of the testator and the amount thereof. In other words it is proposed that the rate of taxation may be made progressive, beginning at one rate of per cent and increasing to another rate of per cent." In other words it is proposed that the Legislature may be authorized to tax the above named subjects by appropriate methods to any degree of per cent, and may make the rate progressive, beginning at one rate of per cent and increasing to another rate of per cent, according to the amount thereof. In other words it is proposed that the Legislature may be authorized to tax the above named subjects by appropriate methods to any degree of per cent, and may make the rate progressive, beginning at one rate of per cent and increasing to another rate of per cent, according to the amount thereof.

7. The Legislature may, if such authority is granted, prescribe a rate not to exceed five per cent, applicable to any inheritance, devise, bequest, gift, legacy or grant in excess of the amount thereof. In other words it is proposed that the Legislature may, if such authority is granted, prescribe a rate not to exceed five per cent, applicable to any inheritance, devise, bequest, gift, legacy or grant in excess of the amount thereof.

8. It may provide rates of taxation varying with the degree of consanguinity of the testator. The rate of taxation may be made to vary according to any particular degree of consanguinity. For illustration, an inheritance of One Hundred Thousand Dollars may be taxed at a rate of per cent for the first Two Thousand Dollars, a different rate for the next Two Thousand Dollars, and a different rate for each Two Thousand Dollars, and so on, according to the degree which shall be prescribed by the Legislature.

9. The tax contemplated by the proposed amendment is designed to be a tax upon the estate imposed by government upon all gifts, legacies, inheritances, successions and grants of any personal property, whether of real or of any interest therein, passing by will or by the intestate laws, or any part thereof, made or intended to take effect after the death of the grantor.

10. The justice of such a tax is claimed to rest upon the ground that the right of succession to property or the exercise of the privilege to receive such property is the creature of the law and secured and protected by the government, and therefore the state may justly exact such tax subject a reasonable tax.

11. The proposed amendment has been in some years in Pennsylvania and several other states.

12. The said amendment is proposed for the reason that it is not provided in the valuation of property and in the absence of express constitutional authority.

3. Legacies.
4. Gifts.

5. The said proposed amendments to the constitution of Minnesota further provides that all inheritances, devises, etc. to or for the use of such persons as to be determined by the Legislature, shall be subject to taxation.

6. It may provide rates of taxation varying with the degree of consanguinity of the testator and the amount thereof. In other words it is proposed that the rate of taxation may be made to vary according to any particular degree of consanguinity. For illustration, an inheritance of One Hundred Thousand Dollars may be taxed at a rate of per cent for the first Two Thousand Dollars, a different rate for the next Two Thousand Dollars, and a different rate for each Two Thousand Dollars, and so on, according to the degree which shall be prescribed by the Legislature.

9. The tax contemplated by the proposed amendment is designed to be a tax upon the estate imposed by government upon all gifts, legacies, inheritances, successions and grants of any personal property, whether of real or of any interest therein, passing by will or by the intestate laws, or any part thereof, made or intended to take effect after the death of the grantor.

10. The justice of such a tax is claimed to rest upon the ground that the right of succession to property or the exercise of the privilege to receive such property is the creature of the law and secured and protected by the government, and therefore the state may justly exact such tax subject a reasonable tax.

11. The proposed amendment has been in some years in Pennsylvania and several other states.

12. The said amendment is proposed for the reason that it is not provided in the valuation of property and in the absence of express constitutional authority.

H. W. OLSON,
Attorney General.

TRAVELING BY WIRE.

MARVELOUS GROWTH OF THE ELECTRIC TROLLEY RAILROAD SYSTEM.

Can Soon Go by Trolley From the Hub to the Capital—Through Electric Lines Projected—Trolley Mail Cars, Relative Cost of Horses and the Trolley.

The revolution that has been wrought by the introduction of the trolley cars is already counted among the most important overturnings in all the history of material development. Yet it has apparently only just begun.

The first successful trolley railroad was operated by Maurice Flynn, the same who was once so well known the country over because of his relations in New York with Rollin Squire. The city in which Mr. Flynn's railroad was built is one that, so far as I have been able to learn, has not been foremost in any other material advance, Richmond. The pioneer in any line has to overcome obstacles that are as nothing to subsequent travelers along the same road. So it was in the case of Flynn and his trolley. He had to learn how to do many things that have been considered very simple ever since and many devices now "standard" had to be invented, ever which he and his colleagues and his subordinates had many a hot discussion before adoption. For these and other reasons the building of the Richmond trolley line took much longer than was expected, and there were not wanting those who could see clearly from the first that the whole scheme was doomed to dismal failure. In the face of everything, however, the time came at last when experiment were no longer necessary, and the current was permanently turned on to the food wires of the Richmond trolley roads. Ever since that glad day the merry hum of the magic motive power has been heard in the streets of the Old Dominion's capital.

The growth of the trolley elsewhere began on a large scale just as soon as the street railroad magnates began to understand what the new system would do. For a few months Richmond was a mecca for those faithful to the street railroad as a means of getting and keeping riches, and during that time it is likely that the town saw more very wealthy men than it ever did before in a similar period. Here are a few figures that will give some inklings of how the trolley has since seized the "surface roads" everywhere. In 1889 there were in the United States 11,034 miles of street railroad, of which 5,839 were electric, nearly all trolley, and 4,460 miles of steam and horse lines. It will be observed that electricity had already won more than half the field. A year later, in 1890, the proportion was still more striking, for of the 12,197 total miles 7,460 were electric and 8,497 horse and steam. The extension of the trolley has been quite as rapid this year as either of the two previous years, perhaps more so, but the figures are not yet made up, of course.

The slow death of an industry of great importance has come along with this marvelous growth of the trolley—namely, the breeding of the "plain" or railroad horse, otherwise known as the "streeter." Figures concerning this matter cannot be collected with the same ease, of course, as can those showing the growth of a new industry, but here are some facts from the latitude of New York that will serve to give a notion of the general situation. First, it should be understood that the trolley has made less progress in the great towns of New York than in any other large city in the United States. There are cable railroads in Manhattan island, but no trolleys have yet been allowed south of the Harlem river. In Brooklyn, however, the trolley is supreme. In the old days the cities of New York and Brooklyn kept 28,000 horses in constant use, hauling street cars. As the average life of a street car horse is but four years, there was a demand for about 7,000 horses of this grade every 12 months. Now, there is practically no demand, at least for fresh horses from the west, for as fast as the New York lines call for more animals some line in the vicinity is ready to discard its horses and at rates that the breeder cannot resist. I attended a sale of thirty-five horses a short time ago, and the average offerings were no more than $40 apiece, whereas the same grade of horse a few years since would have brought from $150 to $175. The warmoit animals and were disposed of in a lump, for $7 or $8—just what the hides, hoofs, etc., would bring.

The struggle made, when the electric motive power was being introduced, by the storage battery advocates was not very long continued, but it was one of the most expensive contests of the sort on record. It is stated by men who are well posted that the storage battery people spent at least $10,000,000 in the attempt to introduce their plan. It has till lately been supported by the trolley men and most electricians of all sorts indeed that the storage battery fight had been fought to a finish and to the disconfiture of its friends. But only the other day it was announced that a scientific society of Philadelphia had awarded a prize of great value to the inventor of a new battery, which has stood the most severe tests that could be devised. A street railroad man who is interested in several lines told me the other day that the cost of the old storage systems was so much greater than the trolley that it had never been thought worth while to compute the difference with any degree of accuracy. He also gave me some figures showing the comparative cost of building horse and trolley lines, which are here reproduced. The line from the projected corporations, of which these tables were made is five miles long, double tracked and suitably stocked with cars, viz., for operation in a city of 200,000:

HORSE CAR LINE.
Ten miles of track at $5,000	$50,000
Thirty cars at $800	24,000
Three hundred and fifty horses at $100	35,000
Carhouse and barns	60,000
	$169,000
TROLLEY LINE.
Ten miles of track at $12,000	$120,000
Thirty cars at $3,000	90,000
Engines, dynamos, power house, carhouse	180,000
	$390,000

"These tables show that the horse car line required about $150,000 capital, while the trolley needs about $400,000," said the railroad magnate, "so that there must be either a great saving in the operating expenses of the trolley over those of the horse line or a greater earning capacity. The facts show that both these ends are attained. The coal to run our engines does not cost more than half as much as the provender to feed our horses used to amount to, the wages of the motor, engineers, power and carhouse laborers, linemen, etc., are much less than the wages of our horsers and stablemen used to be, and the renewal expenses do not compare with what we had to pay out for more horses every year when they were in use. Besides we get quite one-third more service out of each car, and of course we fifth of the commuting passengers of our motormen and conductors. When we had horse cars, an hour and 35 minutes was allowed for each trip, but now we are obliged to allow only an hour and five minutes. In a crowded city of 200,000 inhabitants one-third more trips means at least a quarter more business, and that amounts to a good deal in the course of a year. We do not even yet know just how much less the renewal expenses of a trolley line are than of a horse car line, but we know the difference is considerable."

It seems to be within bounds to say that the extension of the new power has not begun, and yet the revolution already accomplished in the methods of the country is almost past belief. In every middle class city, in nearly every village between New York being, as already pointed out, the most notable exception—in many of the smaller cities and towns, and even some of the villages, the sweating, knockkneed, trolling car horse and the jolting, overcrowded, one story dog have given place to steadily moving, smoothly riding trolley cars. In place of the driver, profanely urging along a wornout team, there is a self possessed motorman, who shows by his bearing that he knows he can control with the turn of a lever an almost irresistible force and with far greater ease than his yelling predecessor could manage one scraggling team. The streets are cleaner than ever before, for the trolley makes no litter.

But the revolution, though great in the cities, is and will be greater in the suburbs of those great towns and between the smaller ones. Travel in suburban regions, once an intolerable burden, is fast becoming as pleasant as any travel can be. From every great center of population a network of trolley tracks has been begun which will soon extend so far as to intersect with that of the next great center, and so the trolley is destined to rule the whole land after awhile. It will not be long now before the time that is straggling out from Boston will join that about Providence; that will meet New Haven's; New Haven's will meet New York's; New York's will meet Philadelphia's; it will join Baltimore's, and Baltimore's Washington's. Then you may go from the Hub to the capital by wire if you choose, so to do, though, as no through line has yet built, journey will be slow.

NEW YORK'S OPINION.

HER CONGRESSMEN REVIEW THE "SPLENDID NOTHING" TARIFF.

Payne, Ray and Sherman Score the Democratic Legislation—A Surplus of Labor Must Result in Lower Wages—The Prices of Farm Products Must Be Lower.

The advocates of the new tariff bill have made two claims in its behalf. They have asserted that it would greatly facilitate importations, and that this would result in reducing the cost of goods to the consumer. It does not require a prophetic eye to discern that their claims are the strongest indictments that can be brought against the "splendid nothing." Here is the logic in the case: The greater the importation, the less the demand for home products. The less the demand for goods produced at home, the smaller the amount manufactured. The smaller the amount manufactured, the fewer workingmen required or the less the aggregate paid by manufacturers.

The more workingmen out of employment the harder the times, and the harder the times the less money is circulated. Therefore what will it profit the man out of work in this country if England and France and Germany are the more prosperous by reason of increased exportations, even if as the result there is a decrease in the cost of goods at home?

JAMES S. SHERMAN, M. C.,
Twenty-fifth District, New York.

It is difficult to forecast the farreaching effects of the new tariff law. It is certainly to be hoped that some of its disastrous results have been discounted in the past 18 months. Ever since Democratic control of the situation in both of the house and the executive became apparent the universal prosperity then existing has given place to universal disaster and distress such as no pen can describe. This was largely due to the threatened assault upon American industries. Now that we can see the extent of those attacks under the new law we may at least hope that for the next 18 months distress and disaster will not be so universal.

Under the new law it is painfully evident that wages in many branches of industry must be cut down from 10 to 50 per cent, while in other branches the framers of the bill have blundered into fair protection. That this cutting down will be attended with widespread strikes is a matter of the most serious apprehension. Strikes are disastrous enough the striking workmen are in the right. They are doubly disastrous when, as sometimes happens, the whole regimen is in the wrong. There is abundant reason for the fear that the strikes in the cotton and woolen industries will be followed by still others.

The mischief of the reduction in a few industries is that wages will go down in sympathy in other branches of labor.

For example, if wages are higher in one industry, those following a less remunerative calling will offer their services at a lower rate, and so the rates reach a common level. Under the census of 1890 the total wage earnings of all people reach about $10,000,000,000 a year. An average reduction of 10 per cent means a loss of $1,000,000,000 annually.

Taking into account the reductions made in the last 18 months and the further reductions manufacturers will be compelled to make under the new bill, 30 per cent is a low estimate of the reduction of wage earnings sure to follow. Such a reduction would take away one-

The commuting passengers of our people, would destroy one-fifth of our own markets and one-fifteenth the markets of the world. We cannot estimate the loss of our own markets under this bill. It has opened the door for foreign importations. Foreign goods will crowd out the American from our own markets. We cannot see the end, but of one thing we may rest assured—prosperity will return again only through Republican success and Republican legislation.

SERENO B. PAYNE.
Washington.

The effect of the Gorman-Wilson bill cannot be otherwise than injurious to all industries in the land. The reason for this is that of sugar refining and most harmful to all workingmen and women and their families. The new trolley bill aimed to protect all our industries, including the agricultural interests, and all our laboring people. It so operated and gave a new impetus to manufacturing, increased the value of agriculture and gave employment to all who desired it at good wages. The entire country was prosperous, and the people generally were contented.

The Gorman-Wilson bill puts at defiance all principles of tariff for revenue only as well as the true principles of protection. It throws wide open the doors for foreign competition in many directions, while it gives protection to a few favored industries, and will increase and intensify all the evils of class and monopolistic legislation. It is a shameful surrender to trusts and a most shameful abandonment of the rights and interests of the country as a whole.

When this bill comes into operation, our markets will be flooded with foreign made articles, and our mills and factories will be compelled to close or reduce their output. The effect will be disaster to many of our producers and great and lasting injury to the people. The purchasing power of the people will be largely diminished and in this possible way millions will be thrown from profitable employment. The evil will not stop with the reduction in the wages of those who work formerly done here, but hereafter to be done in Europe. If there shall be a great agricultural product by reason of men flocking to the farms, the market prices will fall and the farmer be injured, while the merchants and workmen in the large towns will reap no benefit, for the purchasing power of the farmers will be destroyed.

Sales of goods and of all manufactured articles will fall off, prices must go down, and the workingman out of employment will be unable to purchase at all. It will be a cold day for this country when the president permits this bill to become a law, while trade in Europe will pick up. Her mills and factories will increase their production; her ships will find active employment, bringing back profits to our shores. Foreign prospects are bright indeed, while the clouds of despondency are gradually but surely settling about the American hearthstone.

GEORGE W. RAY, M. C.,
Twenty-sixth District, New York.

Tariff Reform.

Down With the Trusts!

The German tariff bill is the law of the land, and it is to be enforced. It will be remembered that immediately prior to its passage in the senate Senator Morgan introduced a series of resolutions determining the illegality of every combination, conspiracy, trust, agreement or contract between two or more persons that would restrain lawful trade or free competition or increase the price of any marketable commodity. The penalty is fixed at a fine ranging from $100 to $5,000 and imprisonment for a term varying from three to twelve months. The attorney general is directed to institute proceedings through the several district attorneys of the United States. Let him begin. Let him begin with the sugar trust. Let him follow this up with the Whisky trust.

Dan Lamont's Economy.

Notwithstanding all we have heard about the economy in the war department, Secretary Lamont managed to spend $5,000,000 more money in 1894 than his predecessor did during the previous fiscal year.

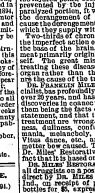
MYSTERIES!
The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.



No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the study of the profoundest research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in a small part of the brain, and a nerve fluid or motive power is the force which operates the nerves which supply each part with power. If the needle will not work the needle will not work. Disease and death.

Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these centers are weakened or destroyed, the nerve force is partially or entirely cut off. The weakened will cause paralysis. Only the inner nerves of the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers, and the basis of the Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is the discovery originating in the organ located. The great success of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the nerves rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

Dr. FLORENCE MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied these nerve centers, and has discovered the most important facts relating to them, and has published them being the facts contained in the above pamphlet, that their derangement and their treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, nausea, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, fits, St. Vitus dance, etc., are symptoms of nerve disease. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by Dr. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

Wm. Musseuf, a German farmer living near St. Thomas N. D., was over last week looking for a good farm to buy. He found one and intends to come over to Polk county to live.

F. E. Scribner left last week for Boston, Mass., his future home. Mr. S. leaves many friends in Polk county who will wish him abundant success in his new home.

A. L. Sparby came up from Watson last week to visit relatives and friends in the city. He has purchased a building in Fertile and his wife has engaged in the millinery business there.

Missionary Strelsrud, from India, will give two lectures at the opera house next Sunday, Oct 28, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon and at 8 o'clock in the evening. No admission will be charged.

Prof. Speechmund, whose ad. appears elsewhere will give an exhibition in mind reading at the Opera house on Friday evening Oct. 26th. He will give an exhibition drive through the streets blindfolded this (Thursday) noon.

Competing for the office should have a great deal of weight if the best interests of the community is the object, but it does not seem to be the case. "He's on the ticket" is all they seek to know of a man's qualifications.

Frank Skinner was not feeling extra well himself last week and soon the trouble developed into a genuine case of typhoid fever. We learn that the doctor succeeded in breaking it up, however, and Frank is now doing nicely.

Aside from Northern Minnesota, Populism is a thing of the past practically, and here it is not as vigorous as it was by half. There are, however, self-deceived victimes enough left to make up quite a vote. We are slow to act up here.

L. J. Carlson was in from Hill River on Wednesday. Says there is too much land in the thirteen towns as yet not proved up on to make division profitable. Mr. C. gives it as his opinion that Hill River will give a majority against division.

Osmoud K. Knudson was over from the westside last week and dropped in to assure the JOURNAL that everything was not as dead set on division as the East Grand Forks people would have us to think. He don't think division will win.

So far as we know Miss Hancock has not announced who her assistant will be in case she is elected superintendent of schools. It is an open secret, however, that Lew Gooler has the promise of that position if Prof. O. McCrillis is elected.

Rudy Bankhardt informs the JOURNAL that his brother Henry was married at Wahpeton last week. Henry has lots of friends in this neck of the woods who are patiently waiting to have a box of Brown's selects tapped at the Cleveland house or somewhere. The JOURNAL extends congratulations.

A much needed improvement is being made at Mentor. The company last week put men on to work to build a new depot, and the Mentorites are getting to feel too nice for anything. Well, they have waited long and patiently, and deserve a good building.

F. M. Eddy was about the city on Friday interviewing our people and getting acquainted. Says he finds matters in the district in a very encouraging condition and thinks the Republican ticket will make great gains, and will win by a good majority.

Mrs. A. M. Ham moved into the house adjoining the Episcopal church, the rectory, last week. Mr. Ham is so busy on the road these days that he scarcely finds time to be home long enough to get acquainted with his family, much less to make acquaintances.

Knute Tedmanson was in from Minnkota Bay on Thursday, shaking handswith his old friends. Says he has made more money from his cows this year than from his wheat and thinks next year he will pay more attention to flax and barley than to wheat.

Prof. McCrillis was in the city over Sunday trying to find out how many votes Miss Hancock will get in this city. He find a very discouraged expression on him when he went away on Monday morning, and seemed to get the idea that he is not in it wherever the lady is known.

Henry Rodman was in from Lambert on Monday on his way to Grand Forks with beef cattle and stopped in the city to chat with old friends awhile. He says that the town of Lambert is utmost solid for Nelson county, but against all other divisions.

Dr. A. A. Just wishes us to say that the report that was circulated that Mrs. H. D. Pinkerton was very low with typhoid fever is erroneous. He was called to LaKota to consult with local physicians in the case of the wife of H. D. Pinkerton's brother. We learn that she died later on.

Halvor G. Dale was up from Nelsville last Thursday. Says they are overwhelmingly against division along the west side and the vote will be almost solid against it. They have an idea that their taxes are high enough already, and do not care to take any such chances of making them larger.

If elected clerk of the court W. A. Linstot will be one of the best in that line Polk county has ever had. Young, thoroughly competent and ambitious, he would strive hard and make such a record as would be creditable and a stepping stone to something better. His prospects of election are good.

What the country needs today more than it needs a single party victory is a stable, settled policy on the part of the government that will ensure a return to the conditions that prevailed before the government changed hands. This condition the Republican party offers and the people of the country will accept it—if they are wise.

Miss Marie Gjertson, who has lately been added to the faculty of the Crookston Normal School and business College, will give an elocutionary recital at College Hall, on Friday evening Nov. 2d. Some of the best musical talent in the city will assist. The proceeds will be devoted to the purchase of books for the college reading room. Program will appear next week.

The elements seem to be conspiring against so much political chinning. It is getting so it rains every Sunday now, which is bad for the flights of oratory that nightly invade the crowded precincts of the average country school house—or would if it was not for the rain. Monday evening's rain did not deter the spielers very much, however; they got there just the same.

A private letter from Sam Godfrey, Oregon City, Oregon, assures his friends of his good health, but gives a rather dismal picture of affairs. From the tone of the letter we are satisfied that the average dweller of Polk county is better off here than he would be in the tinted Oregon country. Sam talks as though, if he was back in Polk county he would not try very hard to get away again.

Shunered along to a fine point the Populist orator employs means "leading-strings for the people, especially the farmers and working men." The Pops act on the theory that farmers and laboring men ought to be under a guardian in order to enable them to do business and they propose to place them under the guardianship of the government. This thinking men in these classes are beginning to resent this espionage over their rights.

As the days pass by the fact that county division is dead beyond all hope becomes more and more apparent. At Mentor, where at one time there was said to be quite a division sentiment growing up, it is now that very few favor it, unless, perhaps, there are some who favor letting off Nelson county, and this is probable. The sentiment all along the west side, except at East Grand Forks, is becoming almost solid against division.

The potato crop, the barley crop, the oats crop and the little flax that was raised this season has helped the shortage on wheat to such an extent that farmers hardly realize that wheat is actually ten cents a bushel less this year than last, in this market. Besides this, more farmers have found a good profit in hunter during the year; those who mads butter in the winter time made more money out of it than those who depended upon summer butter-making, and did not have proper facilities for keeping it during the time when the price was so low last summer. A little ice would have kept it until it reached 20 cents again. In all probability very much less wheat will be sown next spring than last and there will no doubt be a good demand for seed flax and for seed barley as well as wheat, too. Everything a farmer raises promises better than wheat in the immediate future.

Everywhere that F. M. Eddy goes he makes friends, and when he addresses an audience it becomes perfectly plain to his hearers that the Republican party made no mistake when he was nominated. If Mr. Eddy is not elected this district deserves to suffer all the evils that would naturally fall to its share caused by incompetent legislation. Great Scott! it does seem as though we had had enough of the Kittle style to suit the most fastidious taste.

George Berthiaume rather stole a march upon the boys last week when he went over to Grand Forks a bright, promising young bachelor and returned a benedict, having been married to Miss May Peterson, and none there knew that he contemplated such a step. The young lady is well known in this city where she has resided for several years and made many friends. George has grown from boyhood in this city and the young couple start in life under very favorable auspices, with the best wishes of hosts of friends.

Irn McDaniels who has a fine farm about three miles from this city in the town of Lowell, brought the finest sample of corn to title office last week that we have seen yet. It is of the white dent variety, great loug, well-filled ears with as many kernels on each and every cob as can be stuck on, even growing down to the very ends of the ears. He had 300 bushels of that kind of corn and will save plenty for seed to supply all who want good seed corn. To be sure to get some it is better that you apply right now while he is sure to have it.

John Peterson was in from Hill River last week looking up division in the interest of the proposed Columbia county. He thinks Columbia county stands no show and unless Columbia county is allowed to go there is no use in this division question will continue for all time. Says only for that question there would be a regular land slide back to the Republican ranks this fall. Speaking of the Saugstad colony Mr. Peterson says that one of his neighbors, who joined it, came to Hill River a few years ago with nothing and now has a half section of eligible farm land, well improved with a good supply of stock and machinery and intends it all in a very short time in Polk county. He predicts many very sadly disappointed colonists up there ere long and expects to see many of them back again.

Sheriff Grundyseen had an experience down the line last week such as the average itinerant political speaker doth often encounter. He got off the train late one night and was directed to a great barn-like building which he was assured was "the best hall in the town," and in due time he was conducted to bed with a lantern. Next morning, ha avers, as soon as he awoke he observed a great big overgrown gray-back trying to drill a squad of buckwheats, a sort of a dress-parade—so he piled out and dressed. At breakfast, Holston averred that there were 16 flies in his coffee and the Sheriff could not convince him that there were no flies on him. When the sheriff came to pay his bill he was astounded to be assessed one dollar for said accommodations but the landlord gravely assured him it was all right—only 25 cents each for bed and breakfast, as the populist silver dollar was only worth 50 cents and the sheriff went off to ponder, and catch the first freight out, in doing which he sprained his ankle and had to come home for repairs. Ha says patriotism comes high but we must have it.

Assistant Adj.-Gen. J. K. Mertz came up from Minneapolis on the great Northern road on Saturday morning and went out to Fosston, where he organized a post. He returned in the evening and went with a few of the members of Col. Cobham Post and of the W. R. C., for whom he gave a very instructive talk on matters pertaining to the welfare of the Grand Army, after which all present sat down to a fine little banquet provided by the ladies of the W. R. C. The commade outlined a plan that he has formulated for organizing picket posts, composed of members of the post who live remote from the post. For instance Col. Cobham Post has some members living at Mentor, at Fisher and other points too remote to be easily accessible. There are also old soldiers at those outlying points who would join could they receive the full benefits of the Post but who think it is not worth while as it is, and these could join a picket-post and receive the full benefits. The idea is an excellent one and will without doubt be adopted. Notwithstanding the weather was so inclement everybody who made the necessary effort to get out enjoyed it, and it was a pity that every member of the Post could not have been out. Commade Mertz remained in the city until Sunday evening then took the train for Fergus Falls.

A Deliberate Suicide.

On Monday evening a well-known character about town known as Larry Dugan, committed suicide by swallowing a dose of carbolic acid, lying in about three-quarters of an hour. He was in the barroom at about 7:30 and invited them up to have something with him. He mixed whisky as his, and when a small glass was set up he called for a larger one and turning round went into the sitting-room and sat down in a chair just at the left of the door entering it from the hall. His actions soon attracted attention and when the boys crowded around him he began to tell them good bye, saying that he had taken a dose that would fix him and that he would soon be cold and stiff. A couple of the bystanders run for a doctor and soon returned with Dr. Farley, who arrived when the man was almost dead and he expired in a few moments. An ounce phial was found in his pocket and it is supposed that he took an ounce—enough to kill a regiment. The coroner was summoned who ordered the body removed to the morgue where an inquest was held Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Dugan had appeared to be in very low spirits for several days but aside from this no cause for his rash act can be assigned.

Wonders of Mind-Reading

During last week a score of instances of one mind being able to read another by the simple contact of the hands were given by Prof. Tyndall. On Thursday at noon, a committee of citizens took a pin and made a hole in the wall in the Masonic lodge room, then put the pin in a telephone pole at the corner of the Rickett block The Professor, blindfolded, was accompanied by Frank Herts who acted as medium. They shot down the street like mad, until they reached the corner, when the Professor put his hand on the pin immediately, and then rushed off in the direction of the lodge room, where he succeeded at once in putting the pin in the hole referred to. Of course there were a number of skeptics, but at the entertainment at the opera house the following evening a number of these had the satisfaction of personal contact with the Professor, and have since drawn in their horns, and acknowledged that, in fact, so far as they were concerned everything was "straight." A number of tests were given, all resulting in the same satisfactory way.

Does it Pay to Keep Good Stock?

The JOURNAL has always claimed that it does, and has given plenty of home instances to prove it, and here is another. A Polk county farmer who has acted upon this theory last week sold a cow for $35 spot cash, and cows can be had in droves, if you want them, at from $15 to $20 a head. And even that was not a big price for this cow because the animal is a Jersey, capable of making a pound and one-half of butter a day. The man who raises good stock is wise and the man who buys nothing else is equally so.

'TWAS A ROUSER.

Enthusiastic Meeting of French-Canadians, Addressed by F. R. Leroux, of Minneapolis.

A large audience of French Canadians listened Friday evening at the City Hall to a public address delivered in French, by F. R. Leroux, of Minneapolis, state organizer of Franco-American clubs and editor of Echo de l'Ouest.

After having insisted upon the necessity of being organized, if they wanted to be recognized, the speaker dealt with the Democratic party, pointing out its failure to fulfill its platform adopted at Chicago, and showing clearly and forcibly the difference between the two tariffs.

But the hardest blows he struck were on the Populist party.

Having heard S. M. Owen the day before, Mr. Leroux had fully appreciated the wonderful weakness of this windy effort, and said among other things: "What do you think, gentlemen, of a so-called statesman, a candidate for governor of our great state of Minnesota, who, before an intelligent audience, exclaims childishly, 'Who among you are not willing to-day to receive a few silver dollars?' What do you think of a politician who comes before an intelligent audience and pitifully says, 'If a Republican speaker comes to you and says that free coinage of silver would make the sune owners rich, 'nuver'mine I don't care?' Is it not keeping people in ignorance?"

Mr. Leroux showed plainly the tendencies of the Populist party to socialism and anarchy, and finished his speech by relating the insult made to the French-Canadians by Kyle, the Populist United States senator.

Mr. Leroux's speech is considered by all who heard him, irrespective of party, as one of the ablest, clearest and strongest made in this part of Minnesota during this campaign.

Pops Get Together.

The Pops had a gathering at the opera house here on Thursday evening last, which was addressed by E. E. Loumen, Haldor E. Boen and S. M. Owen. Mr. Loumen acted as a fillibuster, saying until the great lights should arrive from McIntosh, and stated he did not intend to say anything, which role he carried out to perfection. He was followed by Mr. Boen, who, although in a somewhat roundabout way, advocated the idea that circulating needles must be based on something more substantial than wind. Mr. Boen's friends should take him aside and properly instruct him before he is allowed to appear in public. It sounds odd to hear a Populist advance this idea. Mr. Owen's speech was much the same as a small boy who struts about and tells his playmates what an will do when he gets to be a man. No arguments were advanced, no records of his party stated, and only the bare assertion made that he would put everything to rights when he became governor. A greater instance of presumption and supreme gall we have never witnessed. And still he seemed to believe that his hearers were a lot of fools who would vote for him simply on his assertion that he would do this and so.

A feature of the evening which was deservedly applauded was the performance of the Fisher Quartet, composed of girls in their teens down to little tots of four or five years. They gave a couple of campaign songs in excellent style, of which the Fisherites might well be proud.

Vote for Bob Dunn.

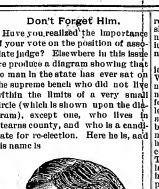
On this subject the Little Falls Transcript says:

"Any voter who appreciates the necessity of having an honest and competent officer in the position of state auditor will vote for R. C. Dunn. Every citizen is interested in preserving the state school lands from fraudulent sale, and Bierman has shown that he is not a safe man for the place. One of the most important results in the state election is to redeem the state auditor's office from the man who now controls it."

Tonight occurs a big meeting at the opera house to consider county division.

Don't Forget Him.

Have you realized the importance of your vote on the position of associate judge? Elsewhere in this issue we produce a diagram showing that no man in the state has ever sat on the supreme bench who did not live within the limits of a very small circle (which is shown upon the diagram), except one, who lives in Stearns county, and who is a candidate for re-election. Here he is, and his name is



LOREN W. COLLINS.

He is not only one of the ablest judges who ever sat upon the bench, but he represents a section of the state that never had a representative on the bench until Judge Collins. We do not believe in discriminating against a city simply because it is a city, but when the country offers a candidate who is by far the best one for the position, we do believe in supporting the country candidate every time. Vote for Judge Collins. who represents the country.

The Democratic Pow-Wow.

A corporal's guard or so gathered at the opera house on Monday evening to listen to a few remniding samples of the great unterrified trying to convince people that the Democrats have done enough to entitle them to continuance in power awhile longer. The first upon the carpet was E. M. Stanton, Democratic candidate for county attorney, who proceeded to administer a rich brown roast to McKenzie, of the Times, for the attacks that sheet has lately made upon him personally and also for his course in the present campaign—supporting the Populist candidate for governor, the Republican candidate for state auditor, the Democratic candidate for sheriff, and the dickens knows what all. He then launched forth in an eloquent talk on Democracy, calling it the party of the people and dealing in platitudes and generalities, but saying nothing in particular that would cause anybody to enthuse to a remarkable degree. He then introduced the Hon. Rufus Hoyt, of New York, who gave a talk upon various things and not much of anything in particular. He was followed by the Democratic candidate for attorney-general, Logan Breckenridge, who thought it would be a grand good idea if the Democrats would all hang together this fall—and we believe they will next Tuesday (or separately). Taken as a whole it was a sort of a cold-blooded affair without much to enliven the general gloom and showed plainly that the Democrats are fearfully and wonderfully at sea this fall—even the Pops had a bigger crowd last week.

County Division.

On county division the Fisher Bulletin says:

"Here are four propositions before the people of Polk county to divide the county. Each one is separate from the other, so far as voting goes, but Nelson county is the only county that stands independent of the others before the people. The propositions to form Nash, Red Lake and Columbia all go together, though on the ballots they will be voted separately, and should be voted thus:

Red Lake county—No.	X
Columbia—No.	X
Nash—No.	X
Nelson—Yes.	X

The reasons for thus voting, to the people of Fisher and its adjoining towns, are plain and simple. The county of Polk is too large, has not large enough or rich enough to be cut up into four. It can lose the thirteen towns that will make a new county without much hurt or harm to the two remaining townships.

But besides those reasons there are many others that should influence the readers of this paper. There is no mistaking the fact that the towns around this village, such as Fisher, Nesbit, Eyeland, Keystone and part of Huntsville do not desire to go to a county with East Grand Forks as the seat of government. And the better will be found for residents up to the limits of the city. This is reason enough why those towns should vote against Nash county, and also against Red Lake and Columbia, with whom Nash is in partnership.

The people of the towns of Eyeland, Andover, Roome, Tyrsil, Vineland, Hubbard and Lowell do not desire to be left in a Polk county no larger than twenty towns, as the four counties partnership would leave them. They will therefore vote against Nash, Red Lake and Columbia. But these towns must also remember that unless Nelson county had been kept in the field, the four counties scheme would have carried. They must also remember that so large a county cannot always be held together, and that to let a small portion like the thirteen towns go is the best way out of a bad job. The people of the southeastern part of the county now want to go as Nelson county. Fosston, for instance, stand, stands pledged to give grounds and build a court house for the new county free of cost. The people down there are for division of some kind, and if they can't have Nelson county, Fosston and the whole batch of them will go for Nash, Red Lake and Columbia, and take 2,000 votes that way. We cannot afford to have that. So the people of Fisher and all the towns named had better work and vote for Nelson county, and thus do what is perhaps fair, anyway, to a number of the farmers who are a long ways from the county seat, and who want a closer association with their county officials.

PINE LAND FRAUDS.

Auditor Biermann, R. C. Dunn and Governor Nelson Posted by the Duluth Herald.

Speaking of the efforts being made to defeat Gov. Nelson and R. C. Daun for auditor, the Herald says:

"The timber thieves are working hard to defeat Governor Nelson and Robert C. Dunn, the republican candidate for state auditor. They know that Governor Nelson will mean the protection of the state timber from their depredations and the collection of other fines for the stolen timber that has been stolen in past years. To prevent this, they are endeavoring with the aid of every device known to political fine workers to secure the re-election of Mr. Bierman, under whose administration of the state land department they have been enabled to rob the state of millions of feet of valuable pine.

Auditor Bierman, if he has been proven, has sold valuable timber at private sale instead of at public sale disposed of it at half the price which other purchasers were willing to pay; has accepted estimates that stated the amount of pine at one-eighth of what it was, and has regularly allowed hard wood timber to be cut under the pine timber rule, and has never taken a single step to protect state lands being robbed and despoiled of valuable pine. The timber thieves are anxious to continue in power the men who have allowed them to fatten and grown rich from their depredations, and have every fever to re-elect Auditor Bierman and defeat Mr. Dunn.

While he was in the legislature Mr. Dunn began a warfare upon these timber thieves which has borne rich fruit. As a result of the inquiries started by Mr. Dunn, the state has thus far recovered $37,500 in cash and a large quantity of timber which has been appraised, while many sales are still pending and others are to be initiated as soon as the data on which to base them is completed. Mr. Dunn's election to the auditorship would undoubtedly result in his being able to ferret out many other cases of pine robberies. He has declared that the scoundrels must be brought to justice and he will spare no effort to see that they are compelled to disgorge the amounts of their stealings. If this good work in behalf of the state, Mr. Dunn has been well seconded by Governor Nelson, who has set in motion the machinery of the law to bring the thieves to justice.

The best interests of the state will be advanced by the election of Governor Nelson and Mr. Dunn. The fact that they are being so bitterly fought by the pine land ring and their agents and satellites should cause every honest man to cast his vote in their favor. We need honest men on guard at the state house."

Of Steenerson's work in Kittson county, the News, of Hallock, says:

"The Hon. H. Steenerson addressed a very able address to a crowded house here Thursday evening. His remarks were well to the point and were well received by the people. Mr. Steenerson addressed the people at Kennedy Monday evening and at St. Vincent Wednesday evening, and was greeted by a large audience. His address at this place was to a packed house and deserves a lengthy write-up, but time and space will not permit. Sufficient is to say that he pulled every Populist argument brought out by Donnelly in the adjoining counties, and has done some wiant personal with Mr. Steenerson and was paid back in full with interest in the evening. Mr. Steenerson was enthusiastically cheered to the finish."

Which go to Prove That S. M. Owen Lacks More Than Wings of Being an Angel.

In our last issue we gave a short account of some of Mr. Owen's business methods, showing that he had been systematically obtaining business by fraudulent representations. We then failed to state that S. M. Owen lays all the blame on his brother, H. R. Owen, and disclaims any knowledge of wrong-doing on his part, so he is concerned, and contends that he is not responsible for his brother's misdeeds. In the first place, this is sheer nonsense. S. M. Owen is the head of the Farm, Stock and Home Co., and undoubtedly knows what the company is doing; and if he does not, is much less of a business man than we took him for.

If he does not know how his own business is conducted, what could be expected of him as governor of the state of Minnesota? ?

If he does know how his business is conducted, what can be expected of him as governor?

He is either dishonest or incompetent, and we are of opinion, from the evidence before us, that he is both.

The following appeared in Printers' Ink, of July 11 last, a weekly paper published in New York City, devoted to advertising, and popularly called "the little schoolmaster of advertising:"

"COMMON SLEEVES.

"The publishers of the American Newspaper Directory, under date of Tuesday, July 3, remitted a check for $100 to Mr. V. T. Cole of Minneapolis. This is the eleventh payment of the reward offered by them for the discovery of a circulation rating in their book shown to be not in accordance with facts, although based on a statement emanating from the office of the paper. A facsimile of the report, proved by Mr. Cole to be false, and the falsity of which is not denied by the paper, is here given.

To the Publishers of the American Newspaper Directory:

No issue of this paper for the period of a full year preceding the date of this certificate has been less than 18,000 complete copies. Today we print 48,000.

Name of paper—Farm Stock & Home.
Town and State—Minneapolis, Minn.
Signature—Farm, Stock & Home Company,
H. R. OWEN, Manager.

Date Oct. 3, 1893.

It is interesting to be told that Mr. Owen is the Populist candidate for governor of Minnesota. In seven years only ten other instances of false circulation reports furnished to the Directory have been reported, although the reward of $100 for every such case is promptly paid as soon as the facts are made to appear."

Printers Ink is in error in stating that H. R. Owen, who signed the above, is the candidate for governor, which correction they made in the issue of July 18.

Another instance of Mr. Owen's philanthropy and desire to relieve the distressed and down-trodden workingman is given in the St. Paul Call of Monday, Oct. 29, where it is shown that Mr. Owen advanced money to the pressmen who printed his paper and was so liberal as to charge him only 28 per cent interest for such accommodation. It would seem from this that he is something of a Shylock himself, and only wants the opportunity to grind the poor, even to the extent of 28 per cent interest.

An Able, Honest Man.

While it is beyond doubt that W. A. Lauctot will be elected to the position of clerk of court, it should not follow that his friends neglect on that account. Over-confidence has defeated many an able man for office, and it is not beyond the possibilities that it might so result in this case. Mr. Lauctot is an able young man, who has won his way in this community, and deservedly stands high. He is an honor to his French-Canadian friends, and a good example of what ability, integrity and perseverance can accomplish. We can assure any who do not know him that they will never have cause to regret having cast their vote for W. A. Lauctot for clerk of court.

Chas. Misner: "There was a three-ring circus at Warren same day I was there, with me and Owen and Boen in the ring. Next week Boen will be Owen in the soup and I will be the only attraction in the combination still in the ring. Watch my smoke."

MATTHEW MARSHALL'S PREDICTION.

The Democratic Policy Must Kill Some of Our American Industries.

It has generally been supposed that Matthew Marshall, the commercial writer of The Sun, was a man of judgment, but people are beginning to doubt this, and with reason. In a recent issue of that paper we find the following:

"Although the protection afforded under the German tariff bill "is sufficient to keep alive most of them" (the manufacturers). He acknowledges that some must die, but this is a matter of little concern because in his opinion "the loss to trade by the stoppage of the rest will be compensated by an increase of activity in the importation of foreign goods." It is fortunate that Matthew Marshall did not attempt to explain, because he couldn't, how the stoppage of any of our manufacturing industries, which means idle people with no purchasing power, can "be compensated by an increased activity in the importation of foreign goods," which simply means sending so much money out of the country to pay foreign wages and to check the distribution of wages here and the purchasing power of our people.

Matthew Marshall then went on to denounce those Democrats who urged the president to let the German bill become a law. He must have had in view The Sun's France-American contemporary, the New York Herald, when he said, "They exhibit the groveling spirit of the Parisian shopkeepers." Further on he stated, "They forget that the advantage which they gain will be temporary, while the injury to the country will be lasting." How can this be if "the stoppage of the rest" of our manufactures "will be compensated by an increased activity in the importation of foreign goods?"

This deliberate contradiction in one paragraph of what was written in a previous paragraph not only makes people wonder if Matthew Marshall is sane, but also if the commercial columns of The Sun are becoming as attorney-at-law and editorial predictions of a wheat famine. The latter never go head hungry. There will always be ample wheat in the world to supply him with a crust. But he should not persistently advocate in his paper a policy for the United States that will make the people go hungry and become dependent upon charities and free soup-houses. It is un-American.

Result of "Free" Coffee.

During the five years of 1868-72 there was an import duty of 5 and 3 cents a pound on coffee. There were imported 1,231,455,087 pounds at a cost of $126,-294,643. On this the government collected a revenue of $55,518,331. At the clamorous demand of the Democratic party this "robber tariff," which taxed the poor man's breakfast cup, was repealed and coffee put on the free list. During the next five years—1873-7—1,676,997,320 pounds of coffee at a cost of $273,982,-977, from which the government derived no revenue. The average price of coffee for the five years of tariff tax was 16 cents and 1 mill per pound. For the five years of free trade was 16 cents and 5 mills. Repealing the tariff on coffee cost the government in five years $55,016,331 in loss of revenue and cost the people $107,105,220 in increased price of coffee. And such is the price of Democratic statesmanship! But you ask, How could this be? When we repealed our tariff Brazil levied an export tax and transferred the $53,000,-000 to her coffers, and the importers formed a "syndicate" and transferred the $107,000,000 to their pockets. No wonder New York importers want free coffee.—See Dewey, Export Duties, 1897 to 1888, page 127.

Get Wages if You Can.

"It is a good thing to have money and a good thing to work for it, but you must be careful not to pay too large a price for it. It is your right to labor for it and your right to get it if you can."

This from the New York Herald's Sunday sermon, Aug. 26, is tolerably amusing when we consider how that sheet has been clamoring for the importation of foreign goods in the interests of its French clients. "Get it if you can" means come down to French wages.

DOWN EAST FARMERS

FEAR CANADIAN COMPETITION WILL GLUT THE MARKETS.

Garden Truck, Hay and Sheep Must Sell For Less Money—A Lone Democrat: Politician Who Still Clings to Grover—Everything For the Tyrats.

I have been spending my vacation in a little country town way down in Maine. The old farmer with whom I boarded was an active politician, and as and I had many discussions. One day I rode over with him to the country store, a mile or two away, and while we were there another farmer came in and greeted my host with, "Well, Miller, ars they going to pass this tariff bill?"

"I dunno," said Miller. "Looks like it."

"Well sir," said the newcomer, "if they do, I've voted the Democratic tickets for the last time."

"Why?" asked Miller.

"Because," was the reply, "it it passes I'll have to sell my flock of sheep. I've been gettiug 38 and 80 cents a pound for wool, but if this bill passes I won't get more'n 15 or 16 cents, and I can't afford to raise wool for that. And that ain't all," he went on. "I can't get so much for my produce if they let the Canadians bring their stuff in here free or at a lower duty than they pay now."

"Do you think that no duty or a lower duty on Canadian farm products would affect you very much?" I asked.

"Well, I should think it would," was the reply. "Some things won't interfere with, but it will make a big difference in the price of my eggs and potatoes and turnips and hay and such stuff. They ought to put up the duty on hay if anything. There's too much Canadian hay comes in here now. And as for turnips, you see, St. Andrew's down there, just across the line, is a great place for turnips, and if them turnips didn't have to pay a duty it wouldn't pay me to raise any."

"Do you get a pretty good price for your produce now?" I asked.

"Well," he said, "there hasn't been as good a market for them as usual the last year, the times are so hard. A good many milk folks here shut down for a longer or shorter time, and that's made money pretty tight."

"Well, then," I said, "you farmers have as much to fear from the shutting down of the mills as from the coming in of Canadian products, haven't you?"

"More. We couldn't sell anything if the mills didn't run. Who'd we sell to?"

"That's just it," I said. "You see, you get just as much benefit from the tariff on manufactures as the manufacturer does. If there weren't any factories, you wouldn't have any market for your produce, so you profit by the tariff on manufactures as well as by the tariff on farm products. You need a tariff on both to protect you."

"Well, that's so," he replied, "though I hadn't thought of it before. I dunno but I'll vote for protection anyhow, even if they don't put wool on the free list and make me sell my sheep."

"There's no doubt that they'll make wool free," I said, "though I didn't know before that free wool would affect Maine much. Is de say enough to see the danger from the coming in of Canadian produce under a low duty, but I didn't suppose they raised wool here."

"They don't much," he said, "though I've got a small flock of sheep. The wool hasn't started on my sheep yet this year, though, and my wife says it's because I voted for Cleveland and free wool."

"Shouldn't wonder," I said.

"I don't think them western fellers who raise wool would kick more'n we do, though," the old farmer continued.

"I guess they do," I said. "You see, politicins against free wool have been sent to congress from 35 states and territories, but you people out in the east are in with this congress. Thetruists have the inside track with the administration."

Just here there entered a man with a Cleveland figure, who, I afterward learned, was a Democratic politician of local fame. Catching my last words, this politician asked in loud, impressive tones, "What is the loss to a few thousand woolgrowers compared to the gain to 70,000,000 of consumers?"

"Ah," I said, "but you must remember that those 70,000,000 consumers are also producers. They produce the articles which the woolgrowers consume. The benefits are mutual, and all have employment and money with which to buy the products of the others. To see the effect as a whole you must apply the same argument to everything. You be consistent, if not wise, you would have to make everything free. Then all your 70,000,000 consumers would soon find that they are producers also. Foreign goods would take the place of home products in our markets until our people, thrown out of work by the ruin of all our industries, would be too poor to buy even the products of European labor."

"We're not talking about 'free everything,'" returned he of Cleveland stature. "We don't want everything free, so we don't have to apply it to everything. We're talkin about free wool."

"Pardon me," I said, "for assuming for a moment that the Democratic party had any use for the level of consistency. There is chance for a whole day's discussion in finding out what raw materials are, as your senate has learned."

"Well, I'm for tariff reform and Grover Cleveland every time," said the politician as, pleading an engagement, he hurried out.

"Tariff reform and Grover Cleveland every time," I mused. "Never the nation or the people." And I, too, went on, followed by the two farmers.

Before That Time, However, the Colonies and the States Had Made Metal Money on Their Own Hook—Historians of Congress In Taking the Matter Up.

It will be a hundred years on Oct. 15 since colined dollars were first issued from the federal mint under our Uncle Samuel's own supervision.

These were not the first coins made for America's use, however. Away back in 1652 the Virginia company issued brass coins from the Somers Islands, now called Bermudas. Of the legal values attaching to these coins little is stated. The material was brass, with the legend, "Somer Island," and "s hogge on one side, in memory of the numerous droves of hogges which were found on their landing." On the reverse was a ship under sail, from which a gun was being fired. In 1646 the assembly of Virginia, whose inhabitants had therefore been obliged to depend wholly upon tobacco as a circulating medium, "having maturely weighed and considered how advantageous a good coin current would be to this colony," decided to issue copper coins of varying values from pennies to sixpence, and for some reason the coins never appeared. Seven years later, in 1653, the colony of Massachusetts did actually issue a coinage, the "mint howes," at which the pieces were made, being established at Boston by an order of the general court promulgated on May 27 of that year. The details of the specifications for this coinage were very quaint, 15 being provided that the "pecess" should be of "XII d, VI d and III d," which should be "of forme flats and stamped on one side with N. E."—for New England—and on the other with the proper notation showing the value of the coin.

They were to be like now starting English money in fineness, each shilling piece "to weigh threepeuny, troy weight, and lesser pieces proportionably." For some reason these coins were not at all satisfactory, and on Oct. 19 of the same year provision was made for the famous "Pine Tree coinage," each piece of which was to bear "a double ring on each side, with the inscription, 'Massachusetts,' and a tree in the center on one side and New England and the date of the coin on the other side." Ten years later a twopenny piece was added to the series, which lasted for 34 years, though none of the coins bore any date save 1563 and 1663, only two sets of dies appearing to have been made.

In 1652 Maryland provided for "the getting up of a mint within the province," but the mint never materialized, and the same is true as to the colonial mint of New Hampshire, which was authorized in 1776. During much of this time coinage for the colonies was issued in the old country. One series of coins so put forth was made by a man named William Wood, who secured a royal patent for coining small money "for the plantations" out of the combinations of metals known as "pinchbeck." One old time chronicler records indignantly that Wood had "the consciences to make 18 shillings out of a pound of brass." This money was so little liked by the colonists that it had to be withdrawn.

Subsequent to the Declaration of Independence, and especially during the nine years from 1778 to 1787 inclusive, when the control of the purse strings of the confederal congress and several of the individual states, including Vermont, Connecticut, New Jersey and Massachusetts. In 1783 a plan for a national coinage was formulated and submitted to congress by Robert Morris, the head of the finance department, though the authorship of this plan is claimed by his relative, Gouverneur Morris. The establishment of a mint was approved by congress during the following year, but nothing further was done in the matter till 1785, when the scheme for a national coinage presented by Thomas Jefferson was adopted.

Eagles and half eagles of gold, dollars, half dollars, double dimes and dimes of silver and cents and half cents of copper were the pieces authorized. An ordinance for the establishment of a mint was adopted by congress in 1786, but it was not till the next year that anything definite was done, when the board of treasury, on the authority of congress, made a contract with Mr. James Jarvis for 800 tons of federal copper coins. As the federal mint was not yet built, these coins were struck at the Connecticut mint at New Haven and the Vermont mint at Rupert. They were singular looking pieces. One side of each bore 13 circles linked together, inclosing a circle in the middle of the coin, while in turn contained the words, "United States" and "We Are One." The other side bore a sundial, with the sun above it, and the inscription, "Fugio" "Mind Your Own Business" and "1787."

In 1792 a code of laws for the establishment and regulation of the mint was adopted, and under this code, with slight changes, the coinage of the United States was struck for 43 years. Eagles, half eagles and quarter eagles of gold, dollars, half dollars, quarter dollars, dimes and half dimes of silver and cents and half cents of copper were the coins minted. It was also enacted that the dollar should be considered the unit of federal money, and all accounts were ordered to be kept in accordance with the decimal system on which the coinage was based. In conformity with the provisions of the mint laws, the Land of Maryland, on July 18, 1794, deposited the mint $30,715 worth of Pendleton coinage to be recoined into federal money, and on Oct. 15 of the same year the first lot of dollars was finished and delivered. There were 1,758 coins in the lot. The ratio established between gold and silver by the early mint regulations, under which these coins were struck, was 15 to 1. The silver dollar was of 892.4 thousandths fineness and weighed 416 grains.

It will be observed that it took the federal government a long time to get down to the notional coinage of money. The question was one that vexed not merely a languid interest in congress, and it was urged against the project that the maintenance of a mint would be a serious drain upon the resources of the federal treasury. Had it not incurred that those unusually powerful political enemies, Hamilton and Jefferson, joined forces in favor of the mint it is likely that its establishment would have been even longer delayed. The first gold pieces were struck in 1795, and gold was coined from that time on continuously for years. For some reason, however, the silver dollar failed to circulate freely, and in 1804 their coinage was suspended until 1840, when 1,000 were struck. Nearly a century after that till 1826, when 300 were issued. After that silver dollars were coined every year, but it was not until 1869 that the number minted any one year exceeded 400,000, and it was not until 1874 that more than 1,000,000 were turned out in 12 months.

In 1817 gold quite disappeared from circulation, and no gold dollars whatever were struck till 1849, after the discovery of the precious metal in California. The money question was found to be quite as troublesome during the early years of the republic's life as it has ever since been. It was frequently up for discussion in congress, and the discussions were quite as bitter and often along these very similar to those of the present day. It was the question of out-of place to enter into details concerning them in such an article as this. The mint at Philadelphia, where the first federal money mint was established, has always been the main coining place of the government as to number of pieces, though not as to value thereof. The gold coinage has been done principally at San Francisco since the opening of the mint there, which followed the discovery of gold. The Philadelphia mint is an extremely interesting institution, especially to the numismatist, for there is to be seen the largest collection of coins in the United States, including specimens of the continental dollars coined by the colonies before the establishments of the federal mint and figured here; of the "broshead" coins of New Jersey, and also there will be and of almost every series of coins ever struck in this country, either by the federal government, the colonies and states, or by private individuals.

To the general public it is likely that the actual making of the coins is more interesting than are the old pieces. The machinery and methods employed at Uncle Sam's mint are of the latest and most approved pattern, and although the processes applied in the making of stamps, presses and dies every time a piece is turned out is something enormous the machinery is perfectly and adapted to its work, and all its parts are so delicately adjusted that the operations seem to go on without any display of power. An orderly, who has been employed about the mint formany years, explained the process by which a shell ona day to a lady visitor, and the explanation was so simple and so characteristic that she printed it. Here is a repetition here may be excused on the same grounds:

"Making money," said the officer, "is just like making cake. You mix the dough. We mix the metal. You roll out the dough into sheets. We roll out the metal into bars. You cut the dough into shape. We cut the metal into coins. Then we stamp them. The metal that is left over is melted up and used again, just as the cook gathers up the cake overs, rolls them again and cuts more cakes."

Could anything be simpler?

How Hindoos Use Their Feet.

Strangers in India are usually a good deal surprised at the curious ability possessed by the Hindoos to use their feet and toes in various industrial occupations. In the native quarters of the towns it is no uncommon sight to see a hatchet seize a piece of meat in his hands and cut it in two with a stroke of his knife held between the first and second toes of his foot. The shoemaker holds the board he is working with his great toe, and the wood turner uses his feet as well with his toes as his hands.

THE vagaries of the leaders among the Pops are becoming more fully realized among the rank and file and the chances of Populistic success are lessening in like ratio. Our common everyday American people are not quite ready to embrace socialism and anarchy.

NEVER since the war has there been a more important election to to the country than next Tuesday will bring. It will fix the destiny of this country for several years at least, and will decide whether we shall run the country in the interest of England or whether we shall run it in the interest of America. Democrats represent England, Republicans, America. Which do you prefer?

THE political situation is full of promise to the Republican party and the outlook today is that it will win a decisive victory. But it will not be for the many and varied interests at stake for Republicans to sit idly down and rest assured and confident because the opposition, driven into a hole is active and desperate and will resort to any and all kinds of schemes to carry their point. What the country needs today to restore confidence is a Republican victory next Tuesday.

IF every farmer in Polk county could appreciate the importance of having the right kind of men on the supreme bench, there would be no farmer votes cast for John W. Willis. The same holds true with other lines of business, and the fact is if every voter would stop and consider the matter, Judge Lorenz W. Collins would get every vote in Polk county. Collins represents the country and the country should stand by Collins in this contest. Vote for Lorenz W. Collins for associate justice.

BEFORE another issue of the Journal the great political battle will have been fought and the victory won—or lost as the people have been sufficiently educated or not. If the lessons of the past eighteen months have been learned aright the result is not a matter of doubt. In that time the utter incompetency of the Democrats to rule has been shown as well as the fallacies of the Populist theory. We believe that the good common sense of the American people will come to the front next Tuesday, and in that case a Republican victory is assured.

THE Democratic policy in the matter of pensions is also on trial before the people of the country. If the country believes in a niggardly policy toward old soldier pensions the Democrats will win. The Democratic party, controlled by the South, occupies a position of open hostility toward the nation's defenders but we do not believe the nation will endure it. Every old soldier should once again buckle on his armor in defense of his rights and we will be sure to win. Simple justice to the old soldier is the watchword of the Republican party.

AS the days pass and the fact becomes more and more impressed upon the Pops and Dems that the people have decided to restore the Republican party to power and that they are not in it a little bit, they are getting desperate and the sir is becoming filled with all kinds of roorbacks. This is the kind of a year when such things don't go. People are tired of democratic incompetency and Populistic dreams and want something more substantial, so they will restore the party to power that gives them that, the Republican party.

THAT GREAT RALLY.

If Populism is not quite dead in Polk county, it will require but a very short time to kill it. Two years ago if the announcement had been made that as many of the good knights of Populism would speak in the opera house as did on Thursday night of last week, a prospective governor, a would-be lieutenant governor, a live congressman, and a would-be congressman, the house would not be half big enough to hold the number of Pops that would have gathered to hear them, to say nothing of Dems and Republicans that would have been curious enough to have dropped in, but as it was there was room enough and to spare. Hon. E. E. Lommen introduced the rocket and tried to show why Polk county should have the honor of making him lieutenant-governor, he appeared well satisfied with his efforts. Then Hon. Haldor E. Boen arose and tried to explain how hard he worked while in congress to make a law compelling water to run up hill and succeeded admirably in convincing people of how much he didn't know about legislature. S. M. Owen then gave his views upon the situation and told what he would do when he is made governor—but that event is so far off that voters present all felt as though they could not afford to wait so they, the majority of them, resolved that as they already had a governor and a kind of a government under Gov. Nelson, they would not forsaken sure thing for a remote possibility, but would cast a good, solid vote for Knute Nelson and the Republican ticket. As a whole, the "rally" which was intended to show the greath growth of Populism in Polk county was a dismal failure. It showed all too plainly that Populism is on the wane if not wholly played out and that the few who really do believe in it (if there are any such) have some other reason aside from the good of the country as the main spring of their actions. The singing by the little girls and Misses in their teens was an agreeable feature of the evening and very favorably commented upon, was in fact the feature of the evening.

THIS has not been much of a lurah boys campaign so far as torch light processions and all such demonstrations are concerned but it has been none the less an earnest one, a campaign full of argument rather than an appeal to enthusiasm. The republicans rely for success upon the good sense of the public.

THE Globe seems to have dropped the idea of electing Owen and is now making desperate efforts to whip Democrats into line for Gen. Becker. The Globe claims Becker's election by a comfortable majority if the Democrats will only stand by him. The Globe seems to have only just dropped onto the fact that its party has a gubernatorial candidate, and last week for the first time, gave Gen. Becker a good and complete write-up. Gen. Becker is a good man all right enough, but every good man can't always be governor.

THE only serious objection to the election of Miss Hancock that we have heard is no objection at all, when we consider the fact that in the discharge of her duties as county superintendent she has fully met and overcome this objection. It is said that a lady cannot attend to the duties of superintendent of schools in the winter time as well as a man could. Miss Hancock has fully disproved this by attending to those duties far better than some men in that position have done, and what she has already done she can do again. Vote for Miss Ida K. Hancock for superintendent of schools.

As long as the world stands there will be, without doubt, men who will make politics a trade, a business, a means of making a living. This class of beings is very liable to be tricky, scheming and full of guile and will be found invariably with the wheels in motion. We remember a few years ago to have heard farmers complain of the republican party that it contained too many of that class of people, and they joined themselves to the Populists to get rid of the "corruption in the republican party" and to the Populist party "corruption" straight came in and followed them—but we don't hear them complainnow. We do not believe in corruption in politics, but the way to get rid of it is not by giving up the party to it but by purifying the whole party. Attend the primaries and select only reliable men to conventions. Nominate only such men as are qualified for office—in fact control the party yourselves and not be controlled by the schemers in it.

THE Democratic and Populist papers are just now howling in great glee because the Scandinavian papers in Minneapolis have sold out to the Pops; and argue from that that every Scandinavian will vote against Knute Nelson. We don't see why that should necessarily follow, because, as a rule, the readers of those papers are intelligent enough to form opinions of their own, and before the flop those papers were profuse in their encomiums of the governor, who must be all right now if he was at the time they praised him. The readers of those papers are well aware of the fact that Knute Nelson is one of the best governors that Minnesota ever had, and the simple fact that one or two newspapers have dropped down to Pops or the fact that Knute Nelson will run is just as good a governor in the future as he has in the past. The fact that they have dropped suggests that some other influence has been brought to bear upon those papers than a sincere desire for the good of the country, and their readers are capable of understanding that as well as anybody. Scandinavians as well as others need a reliable man for governor, and they well know that Nelson is reliable.

R. C. DUNN is being opposed by every pine-land man in the state who is interested in making money out of the pine yet remaining. He must Bob, if elected, (and he will be if the people care a continental about protecting their own interests) will certainly look after the best interests of the people, and of this fact they are pretty well convinced. The pine ringsters know it and they know that it will not be healthy for their plans to have Bob elected, which is the reason that they are using every means to defeat him. They have opposed him all the way through, opposed his nomination in convention, but the will of the people was too strong for them there and Bob was nominated. They have continued to fight him, but again the will of the people will prove too strong and Bob will be elected by a good majority.

EVERY voter who has allied himself with the Populist party has done so with an object in view. With the farmer this object was to obtain relief from the condition of things that seem to bear down harder on the agriculation than up on any other. In this upper country the price of wheat went down below the cost of production, and wheat being the staple production the farmers found themselves in a bad box. The attitude of the Alliance legislature also caused capital to become timid and withdraw from the state, which pinched the farmers. Cunning demagogues took advantage of circumstances to charge all these evils up to the Republican party and actually persuaded many farmers to believe it and in this belief have joined the Populist party in hopes to find in an unlimited amount of paper money the panacea for all the ills that did afflict them. But they begin to see that Populism does not afford the relief they seek, but rather intensifies the evils they complain of and as a natural result they will drop Populism.

Every where that F. M. Eddy goes he leaves a good impression. This is what the Democratic Courier of East Grand Forks has to say of him:

F. M. Eddy, the Republican nominee for congress from this district, spoke at the opera house Tuesday evening to an unusually large gathering of both Republicans and Democrats, with a Populist thrown sandwiched in. Mr. Eddy is a good talker, very forcible in his statements and arguments and to our way of thinking is just the kind of a man this district needs for a representative in congress. He made many friends while here, even a number of Democrats paying much attention.

Of Stevenson's speech at St. Vincent the New Era says: Hon. Adelbert Stevenson spoke at the Republican rally at Reid Hall on Wednesday evening was well attended and turned out very satisfactory to the managers. Capt. Donaldson was the very efficient chairman and made an excellent speech. He named Norton, of Duluth, is the greatest bluffer we ever listened to, he was an engine running with, and feels about everything else did well to clear the track. Judge Cahill and, finally, for senator, was the next to speak; he is a handsome young man, is an excellent speaker and the party did not send a boy to mill when they selected him. Hon. Halvor Steenerson was the last to address the meeting, several times the great Crookston advocate soared into a bunch of history and at other times his speech was on line of deep thought, he spoke strongly in favor of Judge Collins for the supreme court. The greatest applause was in fact Steenerson would have carried the district had he run for congress. It should not be omitted that Mr. H. A. Helmeier, attended strictly and quietly to the business of mixing with the crowd and in picturesque language describing the virtues of Gov. Nelson, Capt. Donaldson should feel proud of his St. Vincent meeting. Rev. N. F. J. Wharton, A. and Mayor Cameron had seats on the platform.

"Furlow Blessed With good traveling accommodations, is the Klud to-day. But good is not enough for the traveling public who are used to luxury when they are at home. They want the Best and up in this country when we say Best we mean The North-Western Line."—Improvement Bulletin, Minneapolis.

COMMUNICATIONS.

County School Superintendent.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Oct. 31, 1894.
EDITOR POLK COUNTY JOURNAL:

As it appears that my motives for supporting Miss Ida K. Hancock for superintendent of schools have been misunderstood by those that do not know, I beg leave to offer a brief explanation.

Mr. McGillis told me three weeks before the P. P. convention, that he intended to try to secure the nomination, that in case he failed he would try for the Democratic nomination, with the Republican endorsement. He said that politics should cut no figure in selecting a county superintendent of schools; that the person best qualified should be elected. He has modified his ideas since, but has failed to change mine. He is a new man in the county, has offered no evidence that he is actually qualified, and has had no experience in the work.

Miss Hancock is far better qualified in every way, and has the enthusiastic support of the teachers of Polk county. The rumor that I am to be assistant superintendent in case she is elected is false. I claim the privilege to cast my support and vote as my best judgment dictates.

Yours Respectfully,
A. A. LOMMEN.

M. R. Brown met with quite a severe accident one evening last week. He was driving along from Mallory toward East Grand Forks when he met a team with a load of wheat. The Captain gave as much of the road as he could without going into the ditch, but it seems the man had no driver and was blind, so kept right along "in the middle of the road," (a populist team, likely,) and the result was an upset for Capt. Brown. His buggy was wrecked and he was considerably bruised up, and such as that he has been obliged to keep pretty quiet, so far. He was on his way to East Grand Forks to talk against division when the accident happened.

There is a phase of this Populistic fever that is a peculiar feature of human nature, to say the least. For instance we know of men who are thoroughly convinced of the shallowness of Populist professions, who know that their success would be the worst thing that could happen the country and yet they will vote that ticket next Tuesday. As a rule these men are men who, while they make great pretenses, are really men of no great depth of character, men who really lead aimless lives, men whom it would never to do to entrust with any great undertaking requiring strict honesty to successfully carry out. You may well look out for a man who will not be honest with himself in politics.

"There is No Royal Road To public favor any more than to learning. This is true, at all events, in America where intrinsic excellence is necessary to secure and retain the popular favor. The reason The North-Western Line is one of the most popular railroads is that its service is not only always up to date but away ahead of the date. In our judgment the St. Paul Line between Chicago and the Twin Cities."—The Excursionist, Chicago.

An Indian Story,

Especially if it be a good one and full of useful information is always interesting.

I have a book beautifully illustrated, that tells much about the Indians and the northwest, and the miraculous escape of one man from them in the early days.

It tells also of the Yellowstone Park, the greatest wonder of the natural world.

For only 6 cents in stamps and your address, I will send you the book.

SENATORS SPEAK.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS AS SEEN BY REPUBLICANS IN CONGRESS.

Obstacles to Be Faced by the American Producer and Manufacturer—No Indulgence In Luxuries For the Laborer. American Goods Must Be Displaced.

There can be no reasonable doubt what the effect of the new tariff law will be upon both the manufacture and the purchasing power of the American people. While there may be a temporary revival of business and an apparent increase of production, the level will soon be reached, and then the evil effects of the legislation will become apparent. The American producer is to face the problem of free wool and free lumber and a tremendous cut on agricultural products and manufactured goods of almost every description. It will not take long for the American sheep raiser to discover that he cannot compete with the climatic advantages and cheap labor of Australia and South America, and wool growing in the United States will practically cease. The men engaged in the lumber business will transfer their capital to Canada, and that country will get the benefit of free lumber. Our farmers and manufacturers will be compelled to engage in sharper competition than ever before with the Dominion of Canada and the countries of Europe and Asia.

Reduced duties on foreign goods will inevitably result in increased imports, and a lessening of the product of American mills and American workshops. As a consequence wages will be reduced in the endeavor to compete with foreign cheap labor, and the purchasing capacity of our people will be correspondingly curtailed.

The workingman who has been receiving $3 per day and indulging in some of the luxuries of life will on $1.50 per day be able to only buy the "common necessaries for his family, and thus merchant and manufacturer both will feel the effects of reduced wages in the inability of the masses to purchase as heretofore.

It seems to me that this will be the inevitable result, and that all classes of our people, whether connected with protected or unprotected industries, will be made to suffer through the enactment of this act of "perfidy" and "dishonor." It cannot result otherwise than detrimentally to American interests, and in due time the Wilson-Gorman bill will be overthrown by the aroused indignation and awakened conscience of the American people. Faithfully yours,

J. H. GALLINGER,
United States Senator From New Hampshire.

The theory of the tariff reformers and of the free traders, whose views are but partially carried out in the Wilson-Gorman tariff bill, is that American production must be decreased. The low wages and manufacturers who have been putting their hands in the pockets of the people must be stricken down, which means that the production of American manufactures must be decreased by the admission through lower duties of foreign goods.

Too many millions of dollars' worth of manufactures in the custom house are awaiting such lower rates. It may be, under the ruling of Secretary Carlisle in the construction of this bill, that such goods will have to be re-exported and reimported in order to secure the lower rate, but to whatever extent these lower duties permit of larger importations to the same extent will American production be displaced. Two hundred and 100 feet frontage, and area situated on high land, where good dry cellars can be got, and an abundance of pure water can be procured at a depth of from 15 to 25 feet. Jerome's addition is one of the most desirable and latest portion of the city. Not a single case of typhoid fever has ever been reported there, and this is no doubt owing to the good water found everywhere on that addition. For further particulars regarding lots, prices, terms, etc., inquire or address M. R. Brown, Crookston, Minn. [19-25]

PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, Executive Department.

Whereas, pursuant to Chapter one hundred and forty-three (143) of the Laws of 1893, "An act to provide for the creation and organization of new counties out of the territory of the unorganized counties now existing," and to secure a State, on the 22nd day of September, A. SUPPLEMENT.

POPULISM MEANS DISASTER

VOTE THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

REPUBLICAN

STATE TICKET.

THEY WANT BIERMANN.

PINE LAND ROBBERS THINK HE IS A GOOD STATE AUDITOR.

They Have No Use for Gov. Nelson and Had Done Because They Put a Stop to the Crooked Work of the Lumbermen and Compelled Them to Pay Back to the School Fund of the State Thousands of Dollars of Which It Had Been Defrauded.

Every timber thief in the State of Minnesota, every man and every corporation that hopes in the future to get state timber that hopes in the future to get state timber from the state's lands without paying for it its full market value is honestly in favor of the election of Mr. A. Biermann state auditor and Mr. S. M. Owen as governor.

This rather remarkable condition of things requires some explanation, and the explanation also affords us an investigation of timber frauds in the past and by the evidence produced in the suits which have compelled restitution to the state forms an interesting and instructive chapter of political history. These facts are now laid before the people of Minnesota in their entirety for the first time, and every voter is asked to study them carefully and to consider well the bearing they have on the coming election.

The subject of illegal appropriation of pine timber belonging to the state was first brought to the public notice a year ago this spring by the state auditor in his report. Auditor Biermann had advertised for some time of the excellent quality of its timber, were indicators at title, and proceeded to investigate into the facts.

Biermann's Deal With Smith & Co.

It was found that Mr. Biermann had been approached by parties desirous of purchasing timber and had been informed that they were willing to pay the minimum price, $1.50 per thousand feet, for pine timber on the Swinging section, that there was not sufficient of it to make a full season's work, and that they would like to purchase the timber on 36 in order to fill out. In his letter of reply accepting the offer the following significant sentences:

"While the estimate is not large, I have no doubt but it will cut double the amount estimated. I do not make it a rule to sell timber except at private sale. As you are willing to cut on 36, now or 16, and it will be to your interest to cut as soon as possible, I will sell you the timber on 36 at $1.50 per thousand and give you until June 1, 1895, to cut and remove the same."

This is a good sample of Auditor Biermann's generous and accommodating disposition. He had no doubt it would cut double the estimate. He did not make it a rule to sell at private sale. He had an idea that this particular section would burn by the following spring if C. A. Smith & Co. did not get it, and they really did get it, not at $1.50 per thousand, as contemplated, but afterward testified it to be worth, not even at $2.50 per thousand and price fixed to June 1, 1895, to cut and remove the same."

This is a good sample of Auditor Biermann's generous and accommodating disposition. He had no doubt it would cut double the estimate. He did not make it a rule to sell at private sale. He had an idea that this particular section would burn by the following spring if C. A. Smith & Co. did not get it, and they really did get it, not at $1.50 per thousand, as contemplated, but afterward testified it to be worth, not even at $2.50, as Mr. Biermann had written, but at $3.

It was the knowledge of these facts that prompted the legislative investigation of 1891, a legislative committee, the appointment of which was suggested by Mr. Biermann himself, consisting of one Democrat, one Republican, at the last moment one Republican, reported in favor of letting the matter drop. Mr. Dunn and Mr. Fleming filed a minority report containing the facts above mentioned. Not satisfied with that, Mr. Dunn then introduced the following resolution, which passed by a vote of 93 to 3 on April 17, 1891:

"Resolved, That the committee of representatives, the governor to take such prompt action as he may deem necessary to secure a full and further investigation in the courts of the said of section 36."

Why Leatherman Hate Gov. Nelson.

These facts speak for themselves. No comment is necessary of hringing to justice the depredations on the pine lands of the state. It is by his faithful discharge of that duty that he has won their active opposition and undying enmity. The governor at once set on foot an investigation which soon became convinced that the transaction was a fraud and a cash value of $100,000 was recovered. Indictments followed, and in connection with the matter, Mr. Biermann's defense was that he had done it right, under the law, to do what he had done.

On the trial of the case it appeared that Mr. Biermann had stated to Mr. Smith, as appeared that there were 700,000 feet of timber, whereupon Mr. Smith replied that there was not that much, and while Mr. Biermann was in Duluth on the 25th and 26th of Dec. 26, 1892, at private sale, set them to work and had the timber cut during it back to Dec. 1, 1893. This was because there had been a legal sale upon that date, and one who did not look into the matter too carefully would have supposed the first of the private sale.

Mr. Biermann's testimony and the timber had been approved and appraised, the state would found that no estimate or appraisal had ever been made.

The court, after hearing the case, canceled the permit, thereby giving back to the state 3,000,000 feet of timber, and fined Smith and the timber which had been cut, worth 34 per thousand, although Mr. Biermann had sold it for $1.50. The case was taken from in favor of the state, and the amount paid over to the state as a result of which suit was $20,000.

The Frauds Were Run Down.

As a result of the investigation instituted by Mr. Dunn, the legislature passed a joint resolution appointed a general pine land investigation committee, which commenced its work at once.

They walked until they saw the extreme of the Smith case.

On the strength of this decision they have since brought a large number of suits. The first were two actions against the H. C. Akeley Lumber company. That involved two different sections of land. The first was one in which the timber had been cut and the trees under a permit issued by the Akeley company. The latter had not been cut but it cancel this permit.

These suits were brought at St. Paul and the lumber companies filed stereotyped demurrer them to Hasen county, where the land in question is situated, and when in the business favorable to themselves right in the county where the company had its home and where the timber was to be cut.

After the motion for change of venue had been decided against the companies the Hasen company offered to settle by paying $20,000 on account of timber already cut on its sections.

This does not cover all the cutting done by the company, but says that on the two sections referred to.

The Akeley company, which held a permit to cut on 36, refused to settle, and the second that was brought was against the state recovered, in addition to the $20,000 paid on account, $30,000 more.

In the meantime the state had brought two actions against the Shevlin-Carpenter company, but to recover the value of 40 logs unlawfully taken, and the second for the cutting of timber on 36. The value of the 40 logs was $200, but had not yet reached $100 timber. The case was tried in Duluth and has not yet been brought to trial.

The Proceedings Against Foley.

About the same time a suit was brought against Cushman K. Foley of Aitkin. The state claimed that, although Foley had a right to take timber from 36 in Aitkin county, described by Auditor Biermann, that he had taken 40 same willful depredation, and refused to himself, had attempted to revive the old permit that had been canceled, and had made no objection to Foley's cutting under it.

Foley put upon the section a stereotyped form of demurrer, but reported to the state that he would not file it, and the case was tried at $2.75 per thousand.

It was claimed by the state that he had stolen a million feet, and sought to recover it on the basis of what the logs would have been worth. He also tried to remove the case to Hasen county, but the court decided that the trial should be held at St. Paul.

On the day before the trial he agreed to pay $7,000 to settle the case, and agreed to pay $7,000 more on the second day, after which he had taken and failed to report.

The cut was 2,000,000 feet, and he claimed the logs and put them in the boom, so that the price for which he settled actually was less than $11.00 per thousand. He sold them by written contract to W. P. Clark of St. Cloud for $6.50 per thousand in the boom.

This is a financial measure of his anxiety to close up the deal without the help of the courts.

Other Cases Are Awaiting Trial.

These cases have been commenced against the Hasen Lumber company, and are now pending, awaiting trial. There are also pending suits against Stephen Nelson, Jr., for 40 and one against Nelson Lumber Co., one against Stephen B. Reynolds and another against F. G. Weller.

The last two cases are small, as far as amounts are concerned.

The state, however, is endeavoring to secure the full value of the timber cut, and the Weller case involves the value of 1,000,000 timber from the cutting lands.

The Nelson case is one in which proof permits the auditor to sell hardwood stumpage, and the sale was made it is contended specifics to sell in whenever opportunity offered, and that the timber was cut by the Nelson Lumber company. Nelson's report has been sold and reported from the land, for the value of the land for future timber is greatly diminished, if not destroyed, when all the hardwood timber has been cut.

The theory of the law is that the hardwood timber belongs to the land, and that the land and the timber will bring a much higher price with the timber than without it, and therefore requires the purchase of the land and will pay to have it.

Large Returns to the State.

The state has already recovered, through the action of Governor Nelson, $37,000 in cash, besides the timber reclaimed. There is an indictment against Nelson, and the two Reynolds, for the supply of cases seems to be inexhaustible.

It is by no wonder that those who are interested in these frauds are bitterly opposed to Governor Nelson's re-election, and that they should leave no stone unturned to defeat him and his associates on the ticket.

Mr. Biermann has justly earned the title of friend of the lumbermen. He has always pursued and are still pursuing and bringing them to justice for their depredations. The Republican Governor and candidate for re-election.

Mr. Owen is the Republican candidate for auditor of state.

It is a small matter, but it is a most startling and shameful story of facts in which every man should be interested. It is a dishonest appropriation of the pine land of the state by men like Weyerhaeuser & Dunn, and devoting himself night and day to their interests, in opposition to the state who he finds that he has least to fear, Adolph Biermann and Edward M. Owen.

LEGISLATIVE EXTRAVAGANCE.

THE RECORD OF THE FUSION LEGISLATURE OF 1891,

When the Populists Scored Control by Fusing With the Democrats—It Was a Reign of Extravagance, Action on Record, and Cost the Taxpayers of Minnesota $162,053.52 Legislative Expenses Alone—Compare It With the Expense of Republican Legislatures—Do the People of Minnesota Want Another Dose of It?

The Democrats and Populists are predicting that they will control the next state legislature. They controlled the legislature of 1891, and the legislative expenses of the session were $162,053.52, or $13,000 in excess of the appropriation made by law, not including a deficiency appropriation of $15,000, in 1893, with the Republicans in control, the legislative expenses were $140,777.54, leaving $222.47 of the appropriation unexpended. In the session of 1893, with the Republicans again in control, the legislative expenses were $139,777.54, or $60.20 of the appropriation unexpended.

Do the people—the taxpayers of Minnesota—want another fusion legislature? If they do not they will have to expect from past experience. The record of the last three legislatures is one to cause serious and well worth the deep and earnest consideration of every voter in the state.

In 1893 the legislative expenses reached $162,777.54, nearly $23,000 over the $140,000 appropriation. The legislature that session was composed of the Republicans in both branches.

The Extravagance of 1891.

During the session of 1891 the Alliance and Democratic members of the legislature formed a combination, and in both the house and senate they had control, electing their own officers and their own committees to suit themselves. Notwithstanding the remonstrances of the Republican minority and the governor, the most wasteful extravagance prevailed in both houses. Under the reported pecuniary, superfluous waste besides scandalous wrongs and stationery by the bundle and all manner of trappings and brica-brac were purchased for the members. Under the cover of the session of 1891 at St. Cloud trip and sundry others. Employes were hired by the dozen, committees were formed and the session came to a close, a session marked by all manner of extravagance, by all manner of waste and willful waste and winding up in a grand carnival of extravagance, the appropriation of $162,053.52, about $13,000 in excess of the appropriation, and a deficiency appropriation of $15,000 was made.

Populism Investigation.

When the session of 1891 opened, with the Republicans in control of both branches, Governor Nelson let it be understood that such extravagance as [illegible] of 1891 would be prevented, and his [illegible] adopted by every [illegible] men of both the house and senate. [illegible] important one, and [illegible] legislature was the investigation of the [illegible] being inaugurated by the Republicans. For perhaps the most important one was the investigation by a committee of the house of the illegal sale of pine lands of a section of school land in Mille Lacs county. This was inaugurated and carried out by Representative H. C. Dunn of Princeton, now the Republican candidate for state auditor, and through the subsequent legislative action of Governor Nelson, in accordance with a resolution presented by Mr. Dunn, and passed by the house, it resulted in the school fund being made richer by $23,000.

This Was True Economy.

The legislature, however, was not cost the state one cent, except a few dollars in the case in witness fees, and the work of investigation was done by Messrs. Dunn and Fleming, gentlemen of the highest reputation who put preliminary to the work of investigation, and the result was a saving to the state of many times the amount of the appropriation.

The Akeley company, which held a permit to cut on 36, refused to settle, and the second that was brought was against the state recovered, in addition to the $20,000 paid on account, $30,000 more.

Wealth Greater and Debt Smaller.

The assessed valuation of all property in the United States, excluding railroad property, increased from $10,002,926,565 in 1880, to $22,084,657,665 in 1890, or 98.86 per cent. Taking the same property in 1880 and 1890 the wealth of the United States in 1880 was put at a little less than $44,000,000,000 or more than $1,000 per capita. In 1890 it was $65,000 capita in 1880, $250 per capita in 1890, and $260 per capita in 1892. And in addition to increase every class and every occupation has made a large gain. The debt in 1880 was $2,090,909 in 1890, and $2,227,462 in 1892, while the population in 1880 was 50,155,783, 62,622,250 in 1890, and 64,934 to 81,722 or 25 per cent.

What It Means to Taxpayers.

The election of Gov. Nelson and S. C. Dunn means the protection of the state school lands and the people from fraud by them. It means that in a few years Minnesota will have a million dollar school fund of any state in the Union. It means that a school tax will not be required, and that schooling outstanding, free. It means that a school tax will not be required.

DISASTERS OF POPULISM.

HOW FOUR STATES HAVE BEEN ALMOST RUINED.

The Disastrous Experiences of South Carolina, North Dakota, Kansas and Colorado—Populist Governors—Bloodshed and Broils, Citizens Shot Down, Riot and Disorder, Business Paralyzed and Credit Ruined—These Are the Consequences of Populist Rule—A Warning Upon Four Fair States—Does Minnesota Want It?

If the voters of the State of Minnesota wish to invite ruin and disaster to lay waste this state; if they want to see riot and bloodshed; if they want to see business stagnation, capital withdrawn by Eastern investors and our credit destroyed, they will vote for Hon. Sam E. Rea for state auditor.

Mr. Rea is the Populist candidate for governor.

Mr. Rea is the Populist candidate for governor.

It is a small matter, but it is a most startling and shameful story of facts in which every man should be interested. It is a dishonest appropriation of the pine land of the state by men like Weyerhaeuser & Dunn, and devoting himself night and day to their interests, in opposition to the state who he finds that he has least to fear, Adolph Biermann and Edward M. Owen.

THE MOST SERIOUS DANGER.

THAT POPULISTS MAY CAPTURE THE SUPREME COURT.

Every Citizen Should Guard Against Such a Calamity—The Election of John W. Willis Would Make the Supreme Court a Populist Machine—Its Decisions Would Be Dictated by Populist Politicians—The Election of John W. Willis Would Make the Stability of Our Contracts and the Safety of Investments Doubtful.

The business men of Denver have issued a circular showing what it has cost the state of Colorado to elect a Populist governor. It is there shown that $500,000,000 of capital has been withdrawn, $200,000,000 of which has been taken from savings banks, while its credit, as well as the borrowing power of the state, has been cut down enormously. It has been reduced to actual bankruptcy. The fear of hostile legislation, capital refuses to enter the state, or to remain there, when already invested, one business man after another failing or going by compulsion. This was the price that had to be paid for the election of Populist governor, of the executive and legislative powers of the state, and the crimes of time legislature he is willing to pay it.

Gentlemen, this is no danger, however; there is a greater which menaces Minnesota than that which has come to the state of Colorado. The Populists have not the power or authority secure control of the governor's office or the legislature, it is rare to have it master of the courts. Against that danger every intelligent voter in the state should be warned and armed. For such crises are remediable. A governor is elected for four years, and he can only be succeeded by another after the same lapse of time. A legislature is elected for two legendes of power in the space of intervening between the elections. In that time, both are restrained from their worst excesses by the constitution and by the friendship of the courts. In two years after the Populists experiment, would be the existence can sweep the worst of its consequences away.

Not so if Populism should capture the Supreme Court of the state. That is the worst fate that can befall an unhappy community. If the Populist candidate for associate justice should be elected this year, he would, with the two members of the court chosen on the fusion ticket by the aid of Populist votes two years ago, control the decisions of the supreme bench in Minnesota. And this means that every one of our contracts would be exchanged for from five to six years to come. It is the most dangerous thing, the most perilous thing that could happen to Minnesota. It is the most dangerous thing that could happen to Minnesota. It is the most dangerous thing that could happen to Minnesota. It is the most danger

Sunday's rain turned to snow toward evening, thus verifying Hicks' predictions and giving Charlie Misner renewed hope and a new lease of life.

A vote for Owen is a vote to establish Populism in Minnesota. Are the people of this state ready to repeat the experiment of Kansas and Nebraska?

On Wednesday night of last week Sam Bearse' stable was set on fire and destroyed together with nearly all its contents. Two horses and a colt were burned up. The loss reaches pretty close to $600 with no insurance to help out.

The Dems paint a dismal picture of the "gloom that prevails at Republican headquarters" in St. Paul. Chairman Hixby seems to be getting fat on "gloom" and next week the other fellows will see where the "gloom" comes in. They will be in the soup.

County division is a dead duck, at least on the quadruple plan. The Nelson county idea may prevail, but that will be the utmost limit that can obtain. The people have caught on to the idea in time to head off the wily schemers and their name is Dennis.

The Minneapolis Journal published a cartoon last week that so incensed Col. Glenn that he went down to the Journal office and made a reidiculous row about it. He threatened to bring suit for criminal libel, but will probably think better of it when the cools off a little.

A. T. Koerner, Republican candidate for treasurer, was in the city last week interviewing his friends. Mr. Koerner has been over the state a good bit and reports a very satisfactory condition prevailing in regard to a rousing republican victory next week.

The Fertile Journal (a Populist paper) says that Knute Opheim will make one of the best treasurers Polk county ever had, even if he is a Garfield farmer instead of a Fertile business man. We have said all along that Knute would make a good treasurer. The Republican county ticket as a whole is the best one in the field any way you take it.

Ignatius Donnelly is a man with brilliant accomplishments, so learned that he is universally called "the sage." He has for many years advocated the cause of "the downtrodden laboring man" and it is quite natural to expect that such a man in that length of time should have accomplished some good for the cause he has appeared to champion. But what is it? What good has he ever done? This is not a conundrum but a pertinent question sincerely asked.

J. S. Nichols came up to attend the rally last week, but somehow did not enthuse as heartily as he did once. We have hopes of J. S., because we believe at heart he is a man of good, practical common-sense, and that kind of men cannot be fooled always.

Farmers can do more toward restoring peace and prosperity to the country by voting the Republican ticket next Tuesday than in any other way—and as a rule they will do it. Possibly not all of them in Polk county, but the majority in the United States will, and it won't be long before we will up here.

John J. Ellingson, who is the candidate on the Republican ticket for commissioner in the second district, has been for years chairman of the board of supervisors in his town and is one of the prominent men in the town. The second district would make no mistake if they send John to represent them on the county board.

Business is lively at the stock yards and it is a dull day when no stock train shows up. On Friday one of the men in charge of a train was severely hooked by a wild steer and had to be taken to a hotel for surgical treatment. Dr. Farley attended him and fixed him up in good shape so that he was able to continue his trip.

The change of time on the Great Northern road makes it more convenient for business. It does not seem, however, to help out matters at the post-office much as we don't get our mail any earlier. It does should see that somebody begins to wrestle with the sacks as soon as brought in, a little after six o'clock, and he would find that the post-office patrons would very highly appreciate it.

Not long ago Doc Warninger put a grip containing veterinary tools into his buggy, when he had completed a job in the country, and when he arrived at his stables in this city he drove the buggy into his barn and neglected to take the grip out and care for it. When he went to get the grip it was gone, having either been lost or stolen out of the buggy meantime. One day last week Dick O'Brien came to Ed. Schreader's barn and told Ed. that he had a grip containing veterinary tools that his wife had found in the road on Robert street, and asked Ed. if they were his. Ed. said no, but that he thought he knew whose they were, so Dick brought them to Ed. and they proved to be the lost property of Dr. Warninger. Dick felt quite put out at some insinuations that have been made and says that at the time the grip was found by his wife he was not in the city.

If you think it the part of wisdom to drive capital out of the state and render it impossible for a man to borrow money if he wants to then vote for S. M. Owen. If elected he must carry out the policy of his party, and one of its chief planks is that a farmer don't know enough to know whether it is best for him to have money or not, and they propose to so arrange matters that he cannot get money at any rate of interest.

At this writing the outlook is favorable for many candidates on the Republican county ticket. If not for all of them. About convention time, any man who would have talked like this would have been considered a fit subject for the lunatic asylum but it is not wild today. The Pops made some serious errors in the make-up of their ticket that now they begin to realize, and as a rule they do not confuse over it to a very great degree.

J. J. Roe is the only man on the Republican legislative ticket with whom the JOURNAL man is not personally acquainted. In fact we never have met the gentleman, but we are told that he is one of the brainiest of Norman county's citizens, an old soldier and a man every way worthy to fill the position for which he has been nominated. John Wright, the other Norman county man is all right, an old soldier and an upright citizen. Vote the ticket solid.

Donnelly and Steenerson spoke at Hallock one day last week, Donnelly in the afternoon and Steenerson in the evening. It is said that Steenerson gave Donnelly cards and spades and won the game hands down. Donnelly is one of the most eloquent of men, but even his magnetic eloquence can no longer persuade men to vote against their own best interests. The Populistic policy, if carried out, could bring nothing but ruin and desolation, and the Democrats have given the country a big enough dose of that to last twenty-five years.

The Supreme Court consists of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices. In the coming election a Chief Justice and one Associate will be elected. With a single exception every member of the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota has been a resident of the territory enclosed by a heavy black line in the above map. Also every man who has been nominated by any party for a place in that Court. The exception referred to is Associate Justice L. W. Collins, now a candidate for re-election, whose residence has been St. Cloud for 28 years. If the voters in the North and West believe in taking some members of the Supreme Court from outside the big cities and their influence, they should vote for Judge Collins at the coming election.

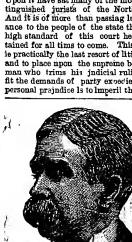
BEWARE OF WILLIS!

He Should Not Be Placed in the Supreme Court of Minnesota.

Obscure and Cheap Politicians Are Dangerous in High Places.

JOHN W. WILLIS IS NOT COMPETENT.

The supreme court of Minnesota is second to no court in the United States. Upon it have sat many of the most distinguished jurists of the Northwest. And it is of more than passing importance to the people of the state that the high standard of this court be maintained for all time to come. This court is practically the last resort of litigants, and to place upon the supreme bench a man who trims his judicial rulings to fit the demands of party expediency or personal prejudice is to imperil the most sacred interests of humanity. A man who has no higher conception of the judicial function than to prostitute his high place to the uses of political mountebanks would be more dangerous on the supreme bench than he would be as governor of the state, for in many possible instances the Supreme Court may set aside the acts of the chief executive.



L. W. COLLINS,
Candidate for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Such a man is John W. Willis, the Populist candidate for associate justice of the supreme court. Finding himself without a practice in the fall of 1893, Mr. Willis allied himself with the most objectionable political element of Ramsey county, and through its aid secured a nomination for judge of the district court. By the same means which encompassed his nomination, he was elected. He has served his masters well, for upon the first occasion in which his services were demanded he laid his honor, his integrity and his good name upon the altar of the gang, and rendered a decision which has made him the laughing stock of the state. It was to the effect that a man might come into court as a witness, swear that he had not voted, but that he wanted to vote, and if he had, he would have voted for a certain candidate, and have this statement checked up as a vote for such candidate.

This decision resulted in the seating of a man who was defeated at the polls, and Judge Willis became still more popular with a certain class of voters. It is a matter of record that Judge Willis' decisions have been overruled in the supreme court in nearly every case where an appeal has been taken. He is so thoroughly repudiated by the bar of his own judicial district, that nearly every lawyer therein is appealing to the people of the state to avert the calamity of his election. Judge Charles E. Flandreau, one of the most prominent Democrats of the state, one of the brightest lights of the legal profession, and a man who was himself an honor and an ornament to the supreme bench, has stated upon a public platform in the presence of candidates for state offices, that no self respecting Democrat can vote to degrade the supreme bench by the election of John W. Willis.

Mr. Willis embarked to the platform and principles of the Populist party, which he promptly repudiated when he found it was likely to defeat him for the Democratic endorsement, and when he declared that he had not expended one dollar to any campaign fund, his check for $100 turned up with the endorsement of the Populist committee.

The legislative department of the state government may be corrupt and no fatal consequences need follow. The executive department may be weak, and the state could survive it. But once permit the judicial department to fall into the hands of political demagogues, and no single industry in the state could prosper. The supreme rights of man would at once become subservient to the demands of political expediency.

There is no question of party involved in this matter, for John W. Willis stands no party, except the party of the first part, to wit, John W. Willis. He repudiated his Democracy at the behest of the Populists, and as readily repudiated his pledges to the Populists. It is simply a matter that involves the honor and credit of a state, and upon which that state if the rights of the people are to be rightly weighed in the balance against the demands of demagogues, will find John W. Willis a weighty master.

In conclusion, we urge upon the voters of the state not to overlook the importance of casting their ballots for associate justice of the supreme court in the right direction at the coming election. The ballot is a long one, and voters should be careful to mark the candidates of their choice clear to the last man.

AND VOTE FOR L. W. COLLINS FOR ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT.

TERRIBLE RESULT OF A SEATTLE HOTEL FIRE.

The Building Was an Old Wooden Structure and Burned Like Tinder—Guests That Escaped Lost All Their Effects. Caused by a Lamp Explosion.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 27.—A fire which resulted certainly in 16 deaths and the injury of three more, broke out in the West Street Hotel, at Columbia and West streets, about 1 o'clock a. m. All the dead are burned beyond recognition, and the coroner declines to allow the dead to remain where they are in hopes that the proprietor could identify the bodies by the location of the remains, the hotel register being saved. The flames broke out so suddenly and so fiercely that the occupants were taken by surprise and men and women jumping from windows in all manner of attire. A sharp explosion was heard in the kitchen in the rear of the second story by S. F. Butler, a son of the proprietor, and immediately the flames began to spread rapidly through the dry inner timber of the corrugated iron building, which is one of a range of 2-story structures. Butler raised a cry of fire which aroused the guests with whom the house was crowded, and a rush for life followed. It was not any too soon, for the flames were rushing through the long narrow halls like invading soldiers attacking a city. In the meantime Officer E. E. Bryant had discovered the flames and turned in an alarm, which brought the fire department to the scene. Then he turned his attention to saving the people who appeared at every window with the flames fast creeping upon them from behind. He found Mrs. Susie Allen and her 2-year-old child at a window on the West street side, the woman crying for some one to save the child.

There Was a Wild Panic,

"Drop the child," shouted the officer. She did so and he caught it safely in his arms. Depositing it on the ground, he snatched a plank and set it against a window. The woman slid down it and suffered no further injury than a few scratches.

W. F. Butler, proprietor of the hotel, was in bed when the fire was discovered, and escaped in scanty attire.

Probably a Kerosene Explosion.

His son, S. F. Butler, was night clerk. He says the fire undoubtedly originated from a kerosene lamp in the kitchen, which was located on the upper floor, near the rear wall. The flames made such a rapid progress that before all the inmates could possibly be aroused, the fire was upon them. Then the people began to drop from the windows on both sides of the building, the flames closely following them. One poor fellow, whose identity is not known, was caught in the rush of the conflagration near the top of the West street stairway and sank down, overcome with smoke and flames. The firemen fought to keep the fire away from the halls, but were driven back and when last seen, the victim's right arm had been burned to a crisp. Two women after water were kept trained on this place and the water fell in torrents on the stairway and was hot enough almost to scald. It was only after the fire department had gotten well to work that the full horror of the affair began to show itself, and by that time the building was a mere shell.

The arrangement of the halls of the hotel made such a labyrinth that in the daytime one unfamiliar with the place would have had difficulty in finding his way about. Many of the lodgers were asleep and overcome in bed, while others rushed into the halls and were suffocated and burned.

FIVE TONS OF DYNAMITE.

Terrible Explosion at Chippewa Falls, Wis.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Oct. 26.—City and vicinity was terribly shaken by an explosion which occurred in a small building on the bank of a lake at a mile from town, where was stored five tons of dynamite. The stuff had been sent here on consignment from a Chicago house to a local hardware merchant. It is presumed that a rifle bullet, fired by a hunter from the lake, lodged in some powder and that the person lost his life. The ground was torn up to a depth for some distance, while trees and fences for many rods were torn and twisted, and numerous trees were pulled out by the roots. The glass in every farmhouse for miles around was shattered. In this city the effect was disastrous to plate glass fronts and windows in a number of dwellings. The shock came while people were on their way to church and threw women and children down and caused several women to faint.

The village of Bloomer, 12 miles distant from the scene, appears to have felt the force more severely than here. The scene of the disaster was visited by thousands.

A handkerchief and piece of a coat sleeve were found about 50 rods away, and they are thought to be part of the clothing of Paul Brohar, an Austrian, who was seen going in the direction of the magazine a short time before the explosion.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

(First Publication Thursday, Oct. 4, 1894.)
(Last Publication Thursday, Nov. 15, 1894.)

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a mortgage given by Estelle Fuller, a single woman, to Wm. Cargill, Jr., C. F. Darling and Wm. Cargill, 3rd, dated November 1st, 1890, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the eighteenth day of December, 1890, at 11 o'clock, a. m., in book "34" of mortgages, on pages 540 to 542, which said mortgage together with the note secured thereby, was duly signed by said Estelle Fuller, and C. F. Darling, and assigned by written instrument, dated the 2nd day of April, 1890, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 26th day of August, 1891, at nine o'clock, a. m., in book 52, of mortgages, on pages 50 to 52.

The amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date hereof is the sum of one hundred and seventy-seven dollars and seventy-seven cents, ($177.77) principal and interest, and the sum of one hundred sixteen and 85-100 dollars, for taxes and interest thereon incorrectly paid by said mortgagee, and Fifty ($50) attorney fees as stipulated for in said mortgage. Notice is hereby given, that the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, viz: The west one-half (w½) of Section thirty-four (34), in Township one hundred and fifty-one (151), in Range forty-five (45) west. Containing one hundred sixty (160) acres more or less, according to the government survey thereof, in Polk county and State of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county, or his deputy, at the front door of the Polk county Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said county, on the seventeenth day of November, 1894, at two o'clock p. m. of said day.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Legislature of the State of Minnesota has provided by Chapter one of the General Laws of 1895, for the submission to the people of the State, for their approval or rejection at the general election to be held therein in November of the present year, an amendment to Section 1, Article 9, of Article Nine (9) of the State Constitution.

The section to be amended now reads as follows:

SECTION 1. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be; and all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation, and be equalized and uniform throughout the state. Provided, that the legislature may by general laws or special acts authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements, upon the property benefited, or upon the property to be benefited by such improvements, or otherwise, without regard to a cash valuation, and to make such regulations as they may prescribe. And provided further, that for the purpose of defraying the expense of improving water pipes and supplying any city or municipality with water, the legislature may, by general or special law, authorize any such city or municipality having a population of five thousand (5,000) or more, to levy an annual tax or assessment, not to exceed in any one year two mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation, levied by such city or municipality within corporate limits of said city for water, for which the citizens thereof without regard to the cash value of such property, and to whatever such city or municipality may be entitled, subject to such penalties for failure to pay assessments or fine, or penalty for any violation of the rules of any such city or municipality in regard to the use of water, or for any other rate due for the same."

PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

It is proposed by the said act of 1895 to amend the said section number one (1) of Article Nine (9) of the Constitution by adding thereto the following proviso, viz:—

"And provided further, that taxes may be levied and collected, actions, and suits instituted, archives bequests, legacies and gifts of every kind and description shown by and specified sum, of any and all natural persons and corporations. Provided, however, such amount so sum may be millions, or it may be graded or progressive, as to the value of the whole or any part of the estate."

The purpose of the proposed amendment is to confer the Legislature power to enact laws in the following subjects:

1. Inheritances. 2. Devises. 3. Bequests. 4. Legacies. 5. Gifts.

1. The proposed amendment confers upon the state all inheritances, devises, and bequests of a certain amount to be determined by the Legislature, and also collects a tax thereon.

2. The tax "may be graded or progressive, as to the value of the whole or any part of the estate."

3. In other words, it is proposed to confer upon the Legislature power to enact laws whereby it may collect appropriate methods to any extent and in arrears for the whole or any amount thereof.

4. The Legislature may, if such authority is conferred, provide a fixed rate not to exceed forever rate, applicable to all inheritances, devises, bequests, legacies and gifts of every kind and description.

5. It may provide rates of taxation varying with the degree of consanguinity, and also with the size of the estate, and may exempt, as absolute to any particular inheritance, legacy or gift. For instance, it may provide that Fifty Thousand Dollars may be taxed at a certain rate for the use of the state, and that all inheritances, at such rate for the next Two Thousand Dollars, and a still different rate on the next Fifty Thousand Dollars, and so on, according to a rule which shall be uniform throughout the state.

6. The tax would probably be void unless the amendment is defeat generally "to be a burden imposed by governmental authority upon the right of inheritance and successions, whether of real or personal property, and also upon the interest therein, passing to certain persons by will, by deed, grant, or gift made or intended to take effect in case of the death of the grantor."

7. The taking of property for the purpose of taxation is not to be considered as taking property for devise or descent in the meaning of the second and protected by the authority; wherefore, the validity of the law could not be attacked on that ground.

8. Similar legislation has been in force for some years in Pennsylvania and several other states.

9. The said amendment is proposed for the reason that doubt prevails as to the validity of such inheritance tax under the present constitutional authority.

POPULIST PROFESSIONS

AND PERFORMANCES,

OR

POPULISM

PRACTICALLY

PRESENTED.

FOR ALL OUR WORKINGMEN

No political party has arisen in the United States that has made so many and so great professions of interest in the working people as the so-called People's Party. That party in the winter of 1891 had practical control of the legislature of Minnesota, and in the winter of 1893 controlled the legislatures of Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska and North Dakota. Would we know the real attitude of Populism to the interests of working people we must study the legislation by this party when and-where it has been in power. We should ask, what did that party accomplish for labor in these states in the legislative sessions controlled by it? What important bills in the interest of the toilers did its representatives enact? How do the party's great professions appear in the light of legislative enactments?

National questions are involved in the selection of congressmen, but in voting for state and legislative officers men should consider alone the legislative power which or in connection with which those officers can exert an influence or for which they can cast a vote. Hence in the pending state contest the importance of the question: What have Populistic legislatures done within state lines for the benefit of working people? This is a critical question, since it is only by a party's past actions that an intelligent judgment can be formed concerning its future. That a fair test may be applied, a comparison is presented of the most important labor bills enacted by the Republican legislature of Minnesota of 1893, with the corresponding ones enacted by the Populistic legislature in the same state two years before, and the similar body of legislation in the four Populistic states named, in 1893.

1. Personal Liberty Bills.—For many years organized labor in the United States has led the way in agitating for legislation in the interests of working people. It has also in other ways fought for the interests and for the benefit of the greater army of unorganized toilers. For this and kindred causes organized labor has incurred the enmity of a certain class of employers who have sought to prevent their employes from forming or joining unions or associations for mutual benefit and protection. To protect themselves and their fellows against these employers organized laborers have asked in many states for Personal Liberty Bills, or Anti-Ironclad Contract Laws,—laws protecting men in the rights to belong to labor unions. The lead was taken in the passage of such laws by the two Republican states of Ohio and Massachusetts. Such a law was presented to the Populistic legislature of Minnesota in 1891. It was defeated. The same law was introduced in the Republican legislature of 1893 and became a law (Chapter 53). Here is the contrast for this state. Many Republican states have enacted similar statutes since the first one passed by Ohio. A few Democratic states have also passed such laws.

But not a single Populistic state has thus recognized and protected the workingman's right to unite for mutual benefit and protection.

2. Union Label Laws.—It is the aim of organized labor to produce only the best class of work and to secure therefor the best of wages. They wish their work to stand or fall upon its merits. To separate their good work from and to distinguish it from cheap and inferior goods they have devised labels to be affixed to the same. Dishonorable dealers wishing to palm off inferior goods in place of the union made began in all parts of the Union to counterfeit these labels. To prevent these wrongs the unions have asked for laws protecting their trade marks as well as those of corporations. It was to grant to a reasonable and just request and protect laboring men in their just property rights, that the Minnesota Republican legislature of 1893 enacted Chapter 24.

No Populistic legislature in 1893 enacted a similar law.

3. Laws Protecting the Health and Safety of Employes.—For over a century all interested in improving the condition of labor have, in European countries, given much attention to measures for protecting the health and safety of employes in factories. The Republican legislature of Minnesota in 1893 enacted one of the most comprehensive and complete factory acts ever enacted in the United States (Chapter 7). It also passed an act (Chapter 69) requiring all street railway companies to protect their employes against the inclemency of our winters by vestibuling all cars used after December 1. By a clause in Chapter 6 the legislature provided for the inspection of railway switches, and so protect switchmen from many of the dangers incident to their occupation. Other clauses in this same chapter authorize the bureau of labor to investigate the mines of the state and report concerning their provisions for the health and safety of their employes. Corresponding legislation was asked of the Populist party in 1892.

But that party or its representatives that year failed to enact any of this body of statutes. Further, no corresponding legislation was enacted by any Populist legislature in 1893.

4. Laws for the Protection of Women and Children.—These are laws which, next to those for the protection of health and safety of employes have ever engaged the friends of the workingmen and all interested in philanthropic efforts for the betterment of their fellows. In recognition of the wisdom and philanthropy of such laws the Republican legislature of 1893 enacted Chapter 66, forbidding minors under 16 years to work in factories or mercantile establishments more than ten hours a day or before 7 o'clock in the morning or after 6 o'clock at night.

We look in vain through the proceedings of Populist legislatures for the same year for any allied legislation.

5. Labor Day a Legal Holiday.—Republican Minnesota in 1893 made, by Chapter 89, Labor Day a legal holiday.

No Populistic legislature in 1893 enacted a similar law or gave like practical recognition to the cause of the toilers.

6. Municipal Ownership and Control of Gas, Water Works, Etc.—The Populist party in all their recent platforms have expressed a faith or belief in the advisability of state and municipal control of all enterprises which in their nature are monopolistic in their tendency. The Republican party has made no professions upon that point. It, however, trusts that all of these social questions from a common sense point of view as occasion arise. They see the wisdom of the principle within certain lines. Within those lines they have always been ready to pass laws and have the state or municipality become the owner of water works and other great properties. It was in this spirit of practical application of common-sense ideas to the ownership of water and gas plants that the Republican legislature of 1893 enacted Chapter 196, authorizing cities and villages in Minnesota to purchase, at their discretion, the plants of private water and gas companies operating within their borders.

No similar law was enacted by a Populist legislature in 1893.

7. Laws Prohibiting Trusts and Similar Combinations of Capitalists.—This is a subject of vital importance, in which the Populists of the United States have expressed great interest. How little legislation they have enacted to carry out that professed interest. The only national law upon the subject was secured by a Republican congress. Minnesota in addition to previous laws bearing upon that question, in the session of 1893 passed Chapter 93. The only Populist law of similar character was Chapter 49 of Nebraska.

The Populists of Kansas, Colorado and North Dakota did not think trusts were of enough importance to require legislating, although they furnish a vast amount of campaign material.

Here are seven lines of legislation, six of which at least are universally conceded to be of great importance, not only to organized labor, but to the welfare and interest of all classes. The Republicans of Minnesota in 1893 recognized the importance of all these vital questions relating to labor and enacted one or more laws relating each subject. The Populists of Minnesota in 1891 practically legislated or passed laws relating to none of these great issues so vitally affecting the rights, interests and welfare of the millions of our nation's toilers. The Populists of Nebraska passed one law relating to one of these seven great subjects.

With that exception it can be said that the Populists of Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and North Dakota have not passed a single law relating to trusts, municipal ownership of gas, water, etc., laws protecting the health or safety of employes in factories, protecting women and children in factories, giving labor the benefit of Labor Day, protecting trades unions in the property use of their labels, or throwing around them the legal right to join labor unions that would as they deemed wise or expedient.

In addition to the foregoing important and long recognized vital acts of legislation the Republicans of Minnesota in 1893 passed a number of other though minor measures. They make up a body of laws which will be found in all the so-called labor laws passed in 1893 by either of the four Populist states to which reference has been made. The Republican party of Minnesota may not have done all for labor that it ought or might. But by what state in the Union has any political party on the whole better record? With these laws before them, which, when allowance is made for their importance, equal all passed by the four Populist states of the West, the toilers of Minnesota will not expect with reason to secure more in the future by elevating the Populist party to the supreme control of the state. Whatever it may have been or done upon other issues, the Populist party with reference to labor legislation, to the bettering of laws in the interest of the working thousands in their own states, has in Minnesota, North Dakota, Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska been a party of Empty Promises and Small Performances. It is an alleged movement for the working people, having in reality no interest in the wool.*

The foregoing statement is based upon the acts of Populist legislatures above passed in review. Those legislatures we find have done much along the lights of men to form labor unions, but making no laws protecting the rights to form them when and as they deem best. That party has shown similar consistency and wonderful judgment and good sense, or rather discrimination, in the choice of its standard bearer, its candidate for governor, Mr. D. M. Owen. He is a gentleman who has for years been running a paper opposing either non-union help while talking about the right of workingmen to form unions. As an agitator he has advocated labor organizations. In his practice, where he had everything under his control, he has done nothing to make his preaching practical. This is exactly on a par with Populistic legislatures of Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and North Dakota have been doing. Does the workingman the choice of the standard bearer of this party of Great Professions and Small Performances. Here is the party for whom and of whom and to whom the workingman considering its legislation can say, as did the Indian of old: "It is all talkee, and no do."

This is Populism practically presented for workingmen. How does it look in detail?

Constables and Miners Fought.

EDINBURGH, Sept. 20.—In a fight which took place between police constables, and a picket of 6,000 men above the Loggan pit, near Motherwell, Lanarkshire, the Britishers marched upon the work with more than a half hearted interest. Their ships spent the greater part of the time at Stirka and Letter Carriers' Convention.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 19.—The fifth annual convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers of the United States began at Arcanum hall with bont 276 delegates present, representing all parts of the country. Mayor Bice delivered a speech of welcome.

Bloom In Broom Corn.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—As a result of the drouth, there has been a sensational advance in the price of broom corn. It is stated that prices are 100 per cent above last year's figures. Brooms cost 60 cents a dozen more than formerly.

North Dakota Wants Nelson.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 20.—Colonel W. H. Robinson of Mayville, chairmail of the North Dakota Republican committee, is in the city and will probably endeavor to arrange some dates for Governor Nelson to speak in that state.

WHEELMEN'S RIGHTS.

Minnesota Supreme Court Says Bicycles Have Some Privileges.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 27.—Among the decisions handed down by the supreme court was one of special interest to wheelmen, involving the rights of the road. The syllabus of the decision is as follows:

1. A highway is intended for public use, and a person driving a horse there on has no right superior to those of a person riding a bicycle.

2. A bicycle is a vehicle, and riding one in the usual manner, as is now done upon the public highway, for convenience, recreation, pleasure or business, is not unlawful.

3. A person cannot be made to pay damages for his acts unless they were done in such manner, and at a time which show that he was acting in disregard of the rights of others. Judgment affirmed. BUCK, J.

CATTLE PERISH.

Nebraska Stockmen Lose Heavily as a Result of Prairie Fires.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 28.—A special to The Bee from Gordon, Neb., says the prairie fire now sweeping over the sand hills in that vicinity are doing immense damage. The flames are traveling with almost lightning rapidity, consuming everything in their tracks. During the night the fire was driven by the wind through the Central portion of Sheridan and Cherry counties. In the track of the flames were the Big Osborne and Spade ranches, and numerous smaller ones. In the morning not a vestige of these ranches remained, except the bare and scorched ground.

At noon the fire is reported to have reached Pullman and the whole country in that neighborhood is a raging furnace. It is not known whether any lives were lost, but thousands of head of cattle have perished. People in the path of the fire are fleeing for their lives, leaving all their property to the mercy of the flames.

Paid a $4,000,000 Claim.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The Minneapolis and St. Louis Railway company has paid to R. P. Flower & Co., as fiscal agents of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway company, $4,000,000, being the amount due the latter company for equipment bonds of the Minneapolis and St. Louis company held by the Rock Island. This payment was provided for under the Minneapolis and St. Louis reorganization plan, and settles a claim of long standing.

Lucania Makes a New Record.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The Cunard line steamer Lucania has arrived at Queenstown, having broken her previous and fastest passage on record by 35 minutes. She made the run from Queenstown in 5 days, 7 hrs. and 123 mins., covering a distance of 2,779 knots.

$20,000 for the Fight.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—A letter has been forwarded by a businessman prohibiting company to James J. Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons offering a purse of $20,000 for the fight, in which they want to take place in Mexico, where there will be no danger of official interference. They want the fight to take place before Nov. 1, 1895.

To Succeed Capriri.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—A dispatch to The Post From Berlin says that Emperor William has telegraphed to Prince von Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst, stathalter of Alsace-Lorraine, requesting him to resume the chancellorship. His majesty also invited Dr. Miquel to succeed Caloneburg as president of the Prussian ministerial council.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with unusual interest: "I caught cold one month, creepy sensation that existed in my back, and I thought it would go away, but the pains until they were more to overcome. I was nervous, could not sleep, had a bad appetite, and was losing in flesh rapidly. I had a racking cough and a pain in my back and around my heart. I was treated with a number of doctors, but continued to languish in misery. I read of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and purchased some. Soon was my prospect. I had been doctoring for a year and a half steadily, but with no perceptible benefit. When I saw advertisements of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Before I got to my room, half a dose had passed before my eyes. I was astonished. I had not had a night's sleep for months, and the nightmare indigestion of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 175 to 127. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in each case. Dr. Miles' Nervine Restorative Nervine is sold by druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Indiana, at prices of price, $1 per bottle, 6 bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

Next Tuesday the American people will decide whether in the immediate future all classes will again be prosperous and happy or otherwise. The Republican party has the true interests of the country at heart and will without a doubt be again called to the front and in '96 will take full control.

The object of every true American citizen is, or should be, to secure the best kind of government for the American people. The history of the Republican party shows clearly that that form that ensures the greatest good to the greatest number is the best form yet devised. Under that form of government the country had peace and prosperity.

For the position of clerk of the court there would seem to be but two candidates in the field, the Democratic candidate having failed to qualify. The Republican candidate, W. A. Lambert is one of the brightest young men of our county, thoroughly well qualified, a man who will be a credit to the judgment of the voters if they see fit to put him into the office.

Of all the confounded ridiculous lies that were ever invented those of the Dems and Pops in their desperation are circulating in regard to Governor Nelson take the cake. They try to make him out everything but a common thief and murderer—would do that if they dared probably. It is singular that in all of his public record some of these awful vicious things did not get out before the heat of a campaign.

John Wright, republican candidate for the legislature is up from Ada this week looking after his fences a bit. John is one of the boys who went forth at his country's call to serve her in her hour of need and again he is ready to answer that call to the best of his ability. He is a man who is fully capable of discharging the duties of a legislator and should he be elected the affairs of this district will be well looked after. Vote for John Wright for the legislature and you will make no common error.

F. R. LeRoux spent some time among his fellow-countrymen in the eastern part of the county last week holding political meetings. He had large and interested audiences—something by the way that no republican speaker could accomplish during the past two campaigns. Mr. Le Roux is confident that there will be a goodly number of republican votes cast there this fall.

Veterans of the late war should remember that to the Republican party they owe all of pension legislation they ever got. This is quite natural when you consider that the South, that produced the Johnnies to be whipped, controls and dominates the Democratic party, and of course are not very anxious to see the boys in blue draw pensions. Remember your friends, boys.

One of the rare treats in store for Crookston people is an old folk's concert, to be given Tuesday evening Nov. 27th, under the auspices of the Epworth League. A large chorus under the direction of Mrs. VanArnam will be the leading feature of the concert, although arrangements are being named for solo numbers and other special features. The complete program will appear later.

The effect of the Democratic tariff upon the business interests of America, is illustrated by the following report of its effect upon English industries: "The shares of the two English iron companies have advanced $750,000 in value since the Democratic tariff was promulgated. These Englishmen regard the tariff as immensely valuable to their trade. Wilson told them his party would do better than that for Englishmen if it was kept in power.

R. C. Dunn, the next state auditor, was in the city on Saturday, calling on his friends. Bob is making a gallant fight and will win, because his public record is such as will commend the people that he is the right man for the position, honest, capable, true and upright, a man who can neither be bribed, bulldozed nor lulled into doing a dishonest action. "Honest Bob" will be the next state auditor and don't you forget it.

Next Tuesday will tell the story for weal or woe, and if every patriotic Republican will but do his whole duty, the victory that will be won will be for the benefit of every citizen of the United States for years to come. If the attempt that has been made to destroy the manufacturing interest of the country is elected the county will at once recover from its present paralyzed condition.

It does not require a very deep mind to arrive at a just decision in the matter of voting next week. All he has to do is to consider the present state of things—the Democracy. Consider the desperate conditions that prevail in Kansas and Nebraska—that's Populism. Reflect upon the conditions that have existed for the past thirty years—that's Republicanism. Then vote for his own best interests. Republicans believe in the greatest good to the greatest number.

Nels M. Johnson came down from Wylie on Monday's train. He says that the town of Black River seems to have been strangely neglected by Republican speakers this year, while the other parties have been very busy holding public meetings and visiting people at their homes. The Divisionists have been especially busy up there but he thinks the town will go almost solid against all divisions except for Nelson county, which he thinks will get a majority. Farmers are becoming tired of raising all wheat and will try something else next year.

The office of county coroner, while not a very desirable nor lucrative one, is quite an important one after all, and should be filled by a capable, efficient careful man, and a man also who resides at the county seat thus avoiding the necessity of paying for a deputy upon every occasion. Such a man is G. S. Chesterman, who is engaged in the undertaking business at J. Y. E. Wyatt's old stand. He is one of our leading citizen prominent in business enterprises, in several societies, notably the Odd Fellows, and just the man in every way fitted for the exacting duties of coroner. Vote for G. S. Chesterman for coroner.

Ignatius Donnelly came up last week to exhibit his corporosity to his admiring dupes, in the hope, no doubt, to make some converts to Populism—some votes to wait upon into the United States senate at Washington. The cheek of that man is truly admirable; after dealing the farmers the dastardly blow that he did, for him now to blandly ask them to send him to the senate! He found the Farmers' Alliance a prosperous business organization of farmers, brought to bear upon it the power of his brilliant mind—and, wrecked it. It has lost all the power for good it ever had since he was placed in the lead. He deliberately boasted once, in a wrathful moment, that he was "a prominent man long before the Alliance was born and would be after it was dead"—and proceeded straight-way to throttle it to death. If he had let it alone it would have kept on in pursuance of the object for which it was formed and would have been a power for good; but Donnelly needed a political machine and in an evil moment he cast his eye upon the alliance—and it withered, drooped and died—but what cares Ignatius Donnelly, if he can only reach the goal of his ambition, a seat in the United States senate?

Deacon R. Bain was up from Fisher on Tuesday calling on old-time friends and enjoying life as hugely as though he was a young man in his prime instead of a man 76 years old. Talking on the political situation the deacon said he had voted the Republican ticket ever since there had been a Republican party, and he sincerely hoped and expected to see it win next Tuesday. "It always has been and is yet the party of the people and while it is possible that Polk county may not have come to its senses yet that is a very small portion of the United States and will cut no figure in general results. I am confident that Minnesota will go Republican."

Ed. Strader, one of the old-timers, showed up last week after an absence of several years, and at once proceeded to make business for the police force and justice court. It seems he was out with the boys celebrating the arrival on his first evening and later one of the boys was reminded "how speedily time passes away in good company" when he looked for his watch and didn't have it. He was also ramluded of that other old saying that "time is money" when he discovered that his money had gone with his time. Ed. coughed up the timepiece, but drew the line on money, as he "didn't know anything about that." The case came before Justice Leslie Holt on Monday but the other fellow failed to make a case and Ed. was dismissed.

The McIntosh Tribune has made a discovery. It now blandly assures its readers that "any votes cast for Nelson county are illegal and void" and then goes on to spin out a long article trying to dissuade people from voting for Nelson county. The Tribune is right and such votes are illegal why should the Tribune worry? It is trying very hard to defeat Nelson county, but if votes for Nelson county are illegal the Tribune would be the very last paper to discover and announce the fact because it is against its interests to do so. It should be plain to voters that if the Tribune will be so giddy on one point it will on others and this should convince them how thoroughly unreliable that sheet is. In that case its columns may well ask themselves what they can believe that they see in that sheet? The Tribune sees that its pet scheme to divide Polk county is doomed to inevitable defeat and is getting desperate.

"I Think Very Hard That the Buffet-Smoking Library Coach on the North-Western Limited between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago is the greatest institution for travel on railway travel I ever ran across—or rather rode in—and I have traveled a few miles myself since I was able to be up and down. That Coach must be a solid comfort to a fellow and makes a long journey a delightfully short one. By all odds it is the best feature of the best train I ever rode on."—The Globe, St. Paul.

Bancroft's Treatise on Government.

What is it? It is a large volume written by that renowned historian, Geo. M. Bancroft, upon every conceivable subject that a politician wants to know, in fact a man has no business to pretend to be a politician unless he has a copy of it in his library for reference. The average man wants it in order to know whether the political speakers that he hears are giving him the straight-up—in fact no library is complete without it. It is an invaluable book for the youth of our land, old every parent of a growing family of boys should have it. C. B. Southwell is the agent for the work in this city and will call on you. You will miss it if you fail to look it over carefully. [27-28]

Autumn Wraps For Ladies.

What promises to be the favorite autumn wrap is a double cape of cloth, very broad and reaching to the waist. The trimming is an inch band of the cloth stitched on the edges with fanciful ornaments in the corners and a turnedover collar of velvet. This, together with the gold cape, are the most general and stylish outside garments for wearing with autumn dresses. Very full capes reaching to the hips are of Astrakhan or moire, with deep revers over the shoulders. Fancy capes for evening wear are made with Van Dykes of the new perforated cloth, eerise or binet. Black velvet capes have satin revers lined with velvet or baby lamb. The McDowell Fashion Magazines contain many points of interest on this important subject. They are the safest guides on all questions of fashion. The price of "La Mode de Paris" and "Paris Album of Fashion" is $3.50 each for 1 year's subscription, or 35 cents per copy. "The French Dressmaker" costs $3.00 per annum, or 30 cents per copy. "Lamode" with its low price, $1.50 per year, or 15 cents a copy is an admirable home magazine. For the accommodation of customers they contain coupon patterns, which as regards styles and prices are unequaled. If you are unable to procure any of these journals from your newsdealer, do not take any substitutes from him, but apply by mail to Messrs. McDowell & Co., 44 West 14th street, New York.

ALL OURS.

Grand Republican Victory Everywhere.

A Solid North and a Divided South.

MAJORITY IN CONGRESS.

Minnesota Will Add Seven to It--Every Northern State Right in Line.

Greatest Victory Ever Heard of in American Politics--Dem's Not in it.

Every northern state and several southern states gave glorious majorities to the Grand Old Party on Tuesday, thus endorsing the doctrine of protection to American industries. Even Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska, the leading Populist states have fallen in to line.

Gov. Waite, of Colorado, the notorious, has been snowed under so far that even his friends can't find him.

New York city elects a Republican mayor, while Morton is elected governor of the state by 150,000 majority.

Kentucky and Maryland, two solid south states, each elect two Republican congressmen, and even Delaware went solidly Republican.

There seems to have been a universal "landslide"--a political upheaval--which has swept the country from Maine to Texas, and from Oregon to Georgia, with similar results to the following:

New York, Republican by		150,000
Pennsylvania,	"	200,000
Ohio,	"	125,000
Michigan,	"	25,000
Illinois,	"	80,000
Colorado,	"	20,000
Wisconsin,	"	35,000

While Polk county does not seem to have contributed very largely to the glorious result, the state of Minnesota is again redeemed, giving a majority of from 30,000 to 40,000 for the Republican ticket. Even Judge Collins, who had the combined opposition of the Dems and Pops, seems to have been elected by a safe majority. The Seventh district sends Eddy to congress, and the only district where there is yet any doubt is the Third, and there Heatwole, Republican, seems to be elected by a good majority.

The JOURNAL has insisted that it is always safe to trust to the practical common sense of the American people, and this result justifies our faith. Later returns will but swell the Republican majorities.

Diversified Farming Pays.

While in the city last week and talking with the JOURNAL man Nels M. Johnson said that while he had not made much money on his wheat crop this year his farming operations had been very satisfactory--far better than any year when he had nothing but wheat to depend on. He has now in the field, raised vegetables, and speaking of that reminds us that he told us he had ventured his potatoes several times freely during the drouth, the result being an enhanced yield, and good-sized potatoes. He raises lots of poultry, and manages to find means to sell in the winter time when they are high, and now has poultry to sell in the markets. Said that he should start up with hogs and sheep and grow into those lines, as he believed they would help out. He is very economical, does his work himself without having a hire, uses oxen till he can buy a team of horses, and in that way he will be an independent farmer one of these days. One remark that he made struck us as very significant when he said that he planned to keep out of debt as far as possible, he avoided it as he would a pestilence and there was a whole sermon in that remark. Very many of our farmers would now be all right had they practiced the same plan.

Human Nature.

Not many weeks ago, in this city a little circumstance happened, that had a merchant, a banker, a money lender, a miller or an elevator man, or any other business man accept a farmer been guilty of perpetrating upon a farmer, no end of a howl would have gone up. The man in question, (we will not insult the respectable farmers of the county by calling him a farmer,) brought a load of vegetables to this city, among which he had a lot of cotton that had been frost-bitten while green, were bitter, small and worthless and these he succeeded in disposing of at the market price, upon assuring his patrons that they were all right, when in fact they were totally unfit for use and he very well knew that fact. What does this prove? Simply that human nature is very much the same in every calling in life, and if a man has a disposition to cheat and steal it does not matter what calling he pursues, he gets there just the same. This man was one of the most bitter Populists in the county, who is loud in his denunciations of millers, of elevators, of railroads, of money loaners, of bankers and of all business men except farmers. He wants to go to the legislature in order that he may regulate every business interest on earth--except farming. It is true the time was when elevator men could take advantage of a deal and make big money--but they never could make a clear 100 per cent. The same is true of other lines of business, but none of them has made a cool 100 per cent on their deals, all of which goes to show that however poor, weak human nature needs something more than legislation to bruce it up and induce it to deal squarely and honestly. The moral side of this question seems by many to be overlooked entirely when looking over the field to find a remedy for such dishonest actions.

The Last Rally.

On Monday night the opera house was filled with an enthusiastic audience to listen to the last speeches of the campaign by Hon. Halvor Steenerson. Mr. Steenerson was in fine form and voice and struck some sledge-hammer blows for Republicanism, which were found to have their effect on the following day. The opera house was well filled with enthusiastic Republicans, Democrats and Populists, and even the boys went wild with enthusiasm, parading the streets and having a regular jubilee. Thus the Republican campaign closed in a blaze of glory, the stalwart Republicans holding high the banner of true progress and marching confidently forward to a victory on the morrow.

STOOD BACK TO BACK.

HOW EARLY TENNESSEEANS ALWAYS FACED THE FOE.

Interesting Reminiscences Recalled by the Approaching Centennial of Tennessee's Admission to the Union--The Home of Presidents Jackson, Polk and Johnson.

June 1, 1796, Tennessee was formally declared a state, and already preparations are in rapid progress for a vast centennial display and exposition at Nashville, to last from Sept. 1 to Nov. 15, 1896. She was the third state admitted after the federal constitution was adopted, and familiar as we are with the desire of rapid growths in the new world it is hard to realize that there is a commonwealth of some 1,000,000 people in an area dominated by the fierce Indians 120 years ago and a magnificent city of 100,000 people on the spot, where, according to Felix Grundy, the pioneers did not stand face to face when they met, but back to back, in never ceasing vigilance against the lurking foe.

"If I am asked," said Grundy in a speech in the United States senate, "to name my first indelible impression, it would be the sight of my oldest brother bleeding and dying under the tomahawk and scalping knife. Another and still another brother went in the same way. A widowed mother, robbed of her all in a night, reduced from affluence to poverty in a moment, rolled to rear and educate her last son--him who now addresses you."

THE HERMITAGE, NEAR NASHVILLE.

Between 1790 and 1794 the Indians killed in the area now included in Nashville and its suburbs one citizen every ten days on an average. In 1787 38 were killed. The next year Andrew Jackson and party arrived. He was a leader in Indian warfare, and then a leading lawyer and judge. In January, 1796, he represented his people in the state constitutional convention at Knoxville, and in the following December he entered congress as the first representative from Tennessee.

The state has given three presidents to the nation--all natives of North Carolina, though Thomas Jefferson, who thought he was a native of South Carolina. Other heroes of whom the state is proud are Sevier, who fought at the Alamo; Thomas H. Benton, Sam Houston, Bell, Coffee and many more, not to mention those of our own day. Now the state purposes to celebrate all these as well as her wonderful achievements in material things. An organization has been completed similar to that for the centennial of the famous Belle Meade stock farm. The director general is Major A. W. Willis, a native of Pennsylvania who came to Nashville as a Federal officer during the war, married a Nashville lady, was postmaster of the city during the Harrison administration and made a record in the office of which all Nashville is proud. Ex-Congressman H. Clay Evans of Chattanooga, also a Pennsylvanian by birth, and all the other officials are men of like standing, experience and energy. The women also have an organization, and the ladies who have The Hermitage in charge expect to take an important part.

The Hermitage, known to all Americans as the home of Andrew Jackson, is 12 miles east of Nashville and is preserved as he left it, save that it is well filled with memories of the old hero and other historic relics. The house is a square red brick standing some distance back from the road, and nearly a broad avenue so densely shaded by heavy cedars and other trees that it seems dark even at midday. This leads to a broad and beautiful lawn in front of the house. Within plain sight and not far away is the tomb holding the mortal remains of Jackson and his Rachel, above whose grave is a slab, bearing the affecting tribute written by her husband and containing this reference to attacks made on her in partisan campaigns:

"A being so gentle and so virtuous slander might wound, but could not dishonor."

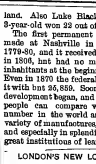
Belle Meade, the most noted stock farm in America, if not in the world, is a few miles northwest of Nashville. It consists of 5,300 acres of splendid land and is the property of General W. H. Jackson and his brother, the ex-senator and present United States circuit judge. There is Iroquois, who won the Epsom Derby, Prince of Wales' stakes and Doncaster over everything in England. Also Luke Blackburn, who as a 3-year-old won 32 out of 34 races.

The first permanent settlement was made at Nashville in the winter of 1779-80, and it received a city charter in 1806, but had no more than 20,000 inhabitants at the beginning of the war. Even in 1870 the federal census credited it with but 26,850. Soon after the great development began, and now its 100,000 people can compare with any equal number in the world as to extent and variety of manufactures, active capital, and especially in splendid buildings and great institutions of learning.

LONDON'S NEW LORD MAYOR.

Promoter of Nine Enterprises, Capitalized at $15,000,000, Which Pay No Dividends.

Sir Joseph Renals, the new lord mayor of London, receives a salary of



SIR JOSEPH RENALS.

$50,000 a year--a sum equal to that paid the president of the United States. On Nov. 8 and 9 he takes the oath of office and the pageant known as the lord mayor's show is held. Like the comic opera character with the great brain and the eagle eye, Sir Joseph was born and educated at Nottingham, where he was for years engaged in the blanching business. He was born in 1843, and 32 years later retired from business with a fortune and removed to London, where he was elected alderman in 1888. During the past year he has been senior sheriff of London and as such was conditionally mentioned as the next lord mayor.

When the aldermen met to choose a lord mayor, however, Renals' candidacy was opposed on the ground that he was not a fit man for the place, it being urged against him that he was the promoter and director of nine big corporations with an aggregate capitals of over $15,000,000, not one of which was paying dividends. Inasmuch as London's lord mayor's office has recently been mixed up in several unsavory financial scandals, the charge against Renals had considerable weight, but at a ballot of the entire guilds the senior sheriff's great brain and eagle eye won the day.

Sir Joseph Whitehead, who was elected lord mayor in 1888 and held the office two years, engaged in disgraceful company promotions and caused a great scandal. Another lord mayor, Sir Henry Aaron Isaac, also assisted in floating five gigantic swindles while he occupied the high position, and Sir Joseph Savory, who was elected in 1890, provided almost as unsavory as his predecessor. Lord Mayor Whitehead. He pledged himself not to join any big corporation during his term as lord mayor, but within a very few weeks after he was installed in office he became a director in a company which, not strange to relate, obtained the contract for lighting London by electricity.

Lord Mayor Renals has been worshipful master of a Freemason's lodge and is an active magistrate and governor of the royal hospitals. In 1891 London's metropolitan and city police had a population of 5,633,328 to look after.

THE WAR OF THE BISHOPS.

Interesting and Complicated Contest In the Evangelical Association.

A recent decision of the supreme court of Pennsylvania ends, so far as that state is concerned, a very curious church war which has been raging for many years with a variety of incidents both disgusting and amusing. The Evangelical Association of German Protestants was started by Jacob Albrecht, a German Lutheran preacher, in 1800 and now has about 150,000 members, with 2,000 churches and 1,100 ministers. It has a publishing house in Cleveland and a theological institution at Napierville, Ills., and colleges at other places, and the titles to all these and all the churches are more or less involved in the many suits in various states.

BISHOP DUBS. BISHOP BOWMAN.

There were three bishops--Thomas Bowman, J. J. Esher and Randolph Dubs, and the fight stood two against one, with Dubs the one. The Dubsites say the fight began 22 years ago in a personal quarrel between Bishop Esher of the Chicago see and Presiding Elder Hostetler of the Elgin district. The Bowmanites declare that it began in Japan in a quarrel between their associations. Bishop Esher went there, investigated and recommended the recall of Superintendent Hartzler. The latter's friends at home denounced the bishop, and he "talked back." His son was son-in-law of Bishop Bowman, and so things were in good shape for a first class row.

Bishop Bowman was finally condemned by a conference and deposed. He denied the validity of such action and attempted to preside at the Des Moines conference. The trustees locked the door in his face, and he and those who supported him organized another conference in the open air amid falling snow. Bishop Esher was also condemned and deposed, but denied the authority of the tried body. Then the other side took a hand, and Bishop Dubs was condemned and deposed for "immoral and unbecoming conduct," so the church was bishopless. The conference, which should have cured the defect, split, and then lawsuits began for the church property. It has dragged on for many years, but the court has ruled for the Esher and Bowman party, and the Dubsites are organizing another church.

AN ENGLISH DAIRY SHORTHORN.

Here Is a British Bull Decorated For a Creamery Fete.

Four miles from Regent's park, London, at Finchley, the Express Dairy company--English, quite English, you know--has a farm. Its business is chiefly milk dairying. Unlike American milkmen, this company does not pin its faith and practice to any one breed of cattle, though the Guernseys are more largely represented among the milk producers than any other breed.

But an odd fact about College farm (Finchley dairy farm) is the Shorthorne figure prominently as dairy cattle there. The head of the herd is a great Shorthorn bull 5 years old, weighing a ton. His picture is shown in our illustration. Fairy King was bred by the queen on her farm at Windsor and is considered something great. How our British cousins ins fix a ball up for a show day will be seen from the picture. Fairy King is garlanded and adorned like one of the sacred bulls in the ancient religious processions.

The Express Dairy company gave not long since what was called a creamery fete. Seven thousand persons were present. They went all over the premises, into every part of the stables, milkhouses, etc. The creamery people just wanted the visitors to see how sweet and spotless everything about their dairy and creamery was. They knew people would buy their milk and butter before any other if they did this. It is to be hinted that our American creameries understood better this kind of advertisement. It would be big money in their pockets. An afternoon might be set apart for the picnic. The creamery and adjacent grounds should be decorated like a lawn for a millionaire's garden party. The visitors should be allowed to see that the creamery which furnishes their milk, cheese and butter is cleanes and sweeter than any of their kitchens at home. The day might conclude with music and games. At the British creamery fete there was a mayoress placed by fifth girls.

Besides the Shorthorn Fairy King there are at College farm a Jersey, a Kerry and an Ayrshire bull. The dairy was especially proud of its Irish Kerry cows.

Dividends at Cheese Factories.

W. M., Hartford, would like to know how to determine cheese dividends by Babcock test. In making the dividend ignore the cheese altogether. There is a certain amount of money to be divided among patrons of the factory who have furnished the fat that went into the cheese. Dividing this amount of money by the number of pounds of fat will give the price or amount to be paid for each pound. Multiply amount delivered by each patron by this price, and the products will be the amount to be paid for each.

This process gives a close approximation to justice, but it is nevertheless true that it is not absolutely exact, for the casein does not vary in exact proportion with the fat--that is to say, 100 pounds of 6 per cent milk will not make twice as much cheese as 100 pounds of 3 per cent milk, nor will 4 per cent milk make one-seventh more cheese than 3.5 per cent milk. They have found in Canada that adding one to the actual per cent--that is, reading 3.5 per cent milk as 4.5 per cent milk and other tests in a similar manner--overcomes this discrepancy to a great extent.--Hoard's Dairyman.

Big Rings For Women.

The latest fashionable freak among women who are blessed with pretty hands is to wear an immense ring, like a Roman Catholic bishop's, on the first finger of the right hand. It need to be considered the height of vulgarity to place a ring on the index finger, but now this decoration is the dernier cri.

Energy and Content.

Energy and content are not opposite terms. It is the lazy man usually who is discontented. When a person really wants to do something in the world and goes about it resolutely, the effort gives a satisfaction that nothing else will. True content is found only with busy people.--Womankind.

EASY FOR JAPS.

More Fighting Near Port Arthur in Which the Chinese Are Defeated.

MANY TRIBESMEN KILLED.

Hundreds of Wazirls Meet Death in a Battle With the British.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 5.—Advices received here from the front show that there has been heavy fighting in the country just north of Port Arthur.

The dispatches received are brief and are silent on some important points. It appears that Field Marshal Oyama divided his forces. While one division landed on the east coast of the peninsula north of Talienwan, another division was detached with orders to effect a landing near Kin-Chow and to proceed thence and join the main body of the army. This operation was a complete success. The Japanese encountered no Chinese warships, and the transports reached Kayesko and disembarked troops, horses and ammunitions in safety. Kin-Chow, which is a walled town, and which was believed to be held by a large garrison,

Was Immediately Attacked.

The outer defences were carried by the Japanese after a few hours' fighting. The Chinese made little further resistance and the Japanese were soon masters of the place. In the meantime the Japanese fleet which had convoyed the transport opened a heavy fire on Talienwan and Kayesko. The Chinese scarcely ceased for many hours. Covered by this fire the ships of the land force attacked and captured Talienwan in a brilliant fashion. The dispatches state that the losses were heavy. They also mention that an important naval engagement occurred Saturday, but give no details.

Up to the time of sending this dispatch there has been no confirmation of the report of the capture of Port Arthur.

BURNED A CITY.

Fung-Wong-Ching Destroyed by the Chinese—Winter Sets In.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—A dispatch to The Times from Tien Tsin says that Fung-Wong-Ching was burned by the Chinese. The defense of the road to Moukden, has collapsed. General Sung, with the remnant of his army, is in the Mathieuling pass, between Fung-Wong-Ching and Linoyany. Winter has set in. Snow has fallen in Manchuria.

The dispatch adds that the Japanese cleverly effected a landing at Pitswo (Kin-Chow) while making a demonstration against the opposite coast of Shantung. They cut the telegraph, thus preventing the news from reaching the Chinese admiral. A Chinese fleet, consisting of 14 warships and a torpedo flotilla, was then started to attack the Japanese, but was recalled. It is believed that the government is reserving the fleet for more important service.

The Japanese entered Fung-Wong-Ching on Oct. 31. A Shanghai dispatch to The Times says that Li-Hung Chang will go to take command of the first Chinese army. Viceroy Liuh of Nankin becomes viceroy of Tien Tsin.

The viceroy of Wu Chang has been appointed to a similar position in Nankin. Judge Huyuff and Major Von Hanneken have been ordered to raise a new army on German lines as the nucleus of a grand army of China.

Seized a British Steamer.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 5.—The British steamer Gaelic, bound for Corea, which sailed from San Francisco Oct. 19 and which was due to leave for Hong Kong at noon, has been seized by the Japanese authorities. It is supposed that the seizure is due to the charge that she is charged with carrying contraband articles of war.

BATTLE WITH WAZIRIS.

British Troops Defeat Natives, But Many Are Killed on Both Sides.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—A dispatch to The Times from Quetff gives details of an attack Sunday morning by Waziri tribesmen upon the camp of the escort of the political officer, who is engaged in the delimitation of the Waziristan-Punjaub frontier. The escort, which was under command of Colonel A. H. Turner, had been awaiting the onset for an hour and a half when it came. The weather was bitterly cold. The Waziris crept up the ravines past the pickets and a fierce hand-to-hand encounter followed. The Goorkhas, who comprised the escort, behaved splendidly against the superior force. Within a quarter of an hour the enemy broke and retired. The cavalry was then able to charge, not, however, before a heavy fire was poured into the camp by a body of Waziris, supporting the attacking party. The tribesmen were pursued several miles and 350 of them were killed. The British loss was Lieutenant Maudkes, 31 soldiers and 23 followers killed, including two native officers, and a few officers and 32 men wounded. It is believed that the punishment inflicted was severe enough to deter the Waziris from further fighting.

Bravo Denver Woman.

DENVER, Nov. 5.—Mrs. James D. Scott, wife of the proprietor of the Capital Turf Exchange, vanquished three burglars who broke into her home after a desperate fight, in which she was seriously injured. The battle lasted nearly 10 minutes, but Mrs. Scott did not faint until her assailants had gone. An hour elapsed before she received sufficiently to give an account of the affair.

Food For Growing Girls.

Cracked wheat, with milk, honey or stewed fruit, is the best kind of breakfast or supper for girls who wish to grow strong and beautiful. There is an immense amount of mineral material in the grain which will strengthen the bones, and also accelerate the action of the bowels, purify the blood, beautify the complexion and impart vigor to the brain and body and energy to the muscles. Corn in the form of hominy is also productive of strength and physical beauty. Not being flesh forming, it is recommended to overwomen for daily consumption in place of potatoes. Hominy croquettes, with macaroniales; hominy cakes, with sweet butter; and hominy with cream, and boiled hominy, with cut peaches, cooked fruit or cream, are all good, cheap and wholesome.

To Reduce the Waist Line.

A man can no forgiven for losing his waist line, but one hates to see his female form divine muffled up in fat. An authority as superfluous flesh says that any one minute can be got rid of by giving 20 minutes a day to the following calisthenic exercise. Hold the legs and upper part of the body rigid as possible, place the hands on the hips and bend forward until the trunk and limbs are at right angles. Do this five times at first, then, when 20 consecutive times. Repeat the movement with the hands at the sides. This exercise will in a few months convert the fat into muscle. It is difficult to get rid of a jowl or shoulder fat, but laziness is the only bar to the reduction of hip and abdominal flesh.

Beauty of Neatness.

The skin is a grand respiratory organ. By absorbing oxygen from the air and secreting carbonic acid it gives the blood its valuable assistance in its purifying work. The same is done in this assistance in the less strain on the lungs. The beauty of texture and the vigorous action of the glances of the skin depend largely upon the care it receives. A woman was, is or can be beautiful without a skin as clean as

THE CZAR IS DEAD.

RUSSIA'S RULER PASSES QUIETLY AWAY AT LIVADIA,

And Grand Duke Nicholas II Reigns In His Stead—The End Peaceful in the Extreme—Brief Biography of the Distinguished Emperor.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 2.—The angel of death, in the shadow of whose pinions the autocrat of all the Russias has been lying for so many days, has beckoned, and the soul of the man who had in his hands the lives and destinies of millions upon millions of men was borne away.

Calmly and peacefully as a sleeping babe, he who by his slightest word could have plunged Europe into a war, the horrors of which would defy description, fell into the dreamless sleep which he feared not. At 2:15 in the afternoon the summons came and a few hours later the thunderous booming of cannon at Livadia and St. Petersburg announced That the Czar Was Dead, and that he who had been the Grand Duke Nicholas reigned in his stead. On lightning wings the news of Russia's loss spread throughout the world, and it is safe to say that everywhere the intelligence created sympathy for the family.

THE CZAR'S LIFE.

Brief Biography of the Distinguished Ruler of Russia.

Less is known of the real personality of Alexander III., the deceased czar of Russia, than of any of his contemporaries among the monarchs of Europe. He has been described as a man of marked intelligence and of stupid dullness, as a man of great kindness and of ferocious cruelty; it has been stated that he personally read the newspapers every day, and that he rarely if ever, glanced at a newspaper; it has been declared that the real facts regarding the condition of his unhappy subjects were sedulously kept from him, and then he was personally well acquainted with their troubles; the cruelties of Siberia, it has been claimed repeatedly, were perpetrated entirely without his knowledge and it has also been said that he has not only been cognizant of these cruelties, but that he has rejoiced in them.

All this being true, it must be obvious to the reader that anything like an accurate picture of Alexander III as he really existed is out of the question. He was the second son of Czar Alexander II. He was born March 10, 1845. His mother was the Princess Marie, daughter of the late Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt.

Nicholas, the oldest son, died April 24, 1865, aged 20, and Alexander became heir apparent. Nicholas was engaged to marry the Princess Dagmar, daughter of the King of Denmark, and sister to the Princess of Wales, and it was the wish of Alexander II., after the death of Nicholas, that Alexander III should take her for a wife. This was done and the marriage has proved a very happy one, notwithstanding the unusual circumstances which led to their union. Czar Alexander II was killed by a nihilist bomb March 13, 1881, and his son ascended the throne immediately as Czar Alexander III.

Physical Strength and Courage.

Alexander III was a man of remarkable physical force. He stood 6 feet 4 inches in his stockings, and it is told of him that he could take a silver coin of the size of a dollar and double it between his thumb and forefinger.

He kept himself in good condition by the most severe manual labor. Like Gladstone, he was fond of chopping down trees, and in the winter time he came to shovel snow paths in his palace grounds.

During the war between Russia and Turkey he showed that he had plenty of personal courage as well as physical strength, and although during his entire reign he was in constant expectation of being murdered he never hesitated to show himself to his people when he thought the occasion demanded it, and he oftentimes was accosted even on the streets while so doing this.

All authorities agree that Alexander III was a very hard worker. He rose as 7 in the morning, and after a quiet stroll through the grounds of the palace partook of an early breakfast, which was followed immediately by seven hours of toil. As soon as this task was finished he plunged into the official business of the day with energy and dogged persistence. His work consisted principally of the examination of edicts, ukases, laws and all sorts of reports on all sorts of subjects, on the margins of which he would write decisions or suggestions with a frankness and an abandon that were refreshing.

These duties were usually finished by 1 o'clock and luncheon followed. After this came recreation in the park and the newspapers. The evenings were frequently given up to the theater or opera.

There were five children and the czar was very fond of them, devising many ways for their entertainment and amusement.

The czar was intensely religious and bicoted, but was accounted strictly honest and sincere. He believed implicitly that he ruled by divine right.

Funeral of the Czar.

BERLIN, Nov. 5.—A dispatch to The Tageblatt from St. Petersburg says that rings were exchanged between the Czar Nicholas and Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt. The same dispatch says that the funeral of the late czar has been fixed to occur between Nov. 16 and Nov. 20, and that the wedding of the czar and Princess Alix will take place a few days afterwards.

UNDER TONS OF BRICK.

Two Omaha Firemen Meet Death in the Discharge of Duty.

OMAHA, Nov. 3.—Just as the men were going to work in the big beef house of the Hammond packing company at South Omaha, at 7 a. m., flames were discovered in the second story and quickly spread to the third and fourth floors. As soon as the fire was discovered, the private fire department of the Hammonds started to fight the flames, but it was discovered that the pressure was so light that it was impossible to accomplish anything. Word was at once sent to Omaha and all the available apparatus was hurried to the scene for, as a high wind prevailed, the fire threatened to spread to the houses of Swift & Co., and to the stock yards. All the efforts of the firemen were confined to keeping the fire from spreading as there was no possible show of saving the big beef house, a 6-story structure, 200x200 feet, which originally cost $200,000 and was filled with valuable machinery and a large amount of beef.

Buried Under Tons of Timber.

The efforts of the firemen to confine the flames to this house proved successful, but only at the cost of two lives. At 11 o'clock one of the walls of the burning building fell, and 4 workmen belonging to the private department of the packing company were buried under tons of timber and red hot bricks. Immediately after the wall fell, efforts at recovering the bodies of the two men were begun, but it was two hours before their remains were found. When taken from the debris it was discovered that both men were still grasping the hose nozzle they were holding when their lives were crushed out. Steele was married only last Wednesday.

The loss on the house property destroyed amounts to $250,000. The loss will be utmost double that amount.

WAIRAIPA WRECKED.

PASSENGER STEAMER WENT ON GREAT BARRIER ISLAND,

In the South Pacific—Few in Boats Escaped—Including Passengers and Crew 134 Persons Are Reported to Have Perished.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Nov. 1.—The Union line steamer Wairaipa, bound for this port from Auckland, N.Z., was wrecked Sunday night on Great Barrier Island, off the northeast coast of New Zealand. The steamer had a large number of passengers and 111 of them drowned. The number of the crew saved is not positively known, but among the rescued are some of the passengers.

The night was very dark and the officers and lookout on the steamer were ignorant of the proximity of land until the steamer struck on the rocks. Captain McIntosh, the master, was on the bridge at the time. He, together with most of the crew, was lost. The sea was rough when the steamer went aground. Attempts were made to lower some of the boats, but several of these were either smashed against the side of the steamer before the lines were cast off, or capsized before they could be laid head on to the sea.

Everybody in the Boats Perished.

Those remaining on board refused to attempt to escape this way. In the meantime the people on shore had gone to the assistance of the shipwrecked people. The steamer had two or three life rafts, and these were thrown overboard, but attached to the vessel by stout lines. Then some of the passengers scrambled down the side and dropped upon the rafts, which were then cut loose. They drifted rapidly in shore and the people on them were taken off by men who went out in the water as far as possible to meet them. A line was finally thrown across the steamer and the breeches buoy rigged. A number of lives were saved by this means. Altogether 111 of the passengers and 23 of the crew were drowned. The survivors have arrived at Auckland.

Passengers Were Asleep.

The Wairaipa struck at midnight when most of the passengers were asleep. They were aroused by the shock of the steamer striking and rushed on deck in great excitement. Life belts were rapidly served out. The steamer, after the shock, settled rapidly and was partly unbhergerd, and this added to the danger and difficulty in getting the lifebpats away. Most of the boats were capsized and their occupants thrown into the water. Many took refuge in the rigging, where they remained until daylight, when two of the crew were lowered with lines, by means of which a cort of breeches buoy was rigged and a number of persons landed ashore. All who reached the shore were attired in the scantiest clothing.

TWENTY-ONE DROWNED.

Steamer Turns Turtle Near Hilford Haven—Rescued.

MILFORD HAVEN, Nov. 1.—The steamer Termoe struck Over rock near Milford Haven during the night. Twenty-one men, including the captain and officers, were drowned. Seven of the crew were saved.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 1.—An asylum for the insane at Jeonkeoping, has been destroyed by fire. Fifteen of the inmates were burned to death.

BOMB EXPLOSION IN LONDON.

Residence in Park Lane Badly Damaged, but No One Injured.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—A bomb exploded during the evening outside a house in Tilney street, Park Lane, two doors from the residence of the Hon. Sir Henry Hawkins, one of the justices of the Queen's bench division of her majesty's high court of justice. The front of the house was much damaged and the windows of houses on the opposite side of the street were smashed. The explosion occurred shortly after 11 o'clock. The house was occupied, but nobody was hurt. The force of the explosion must have been great as the door of the house was blown in and the stone steps shattered.

Justice Hawkins is the judge who sentenced Frederick Guy Deeming, Callen, Joseph Thomas Duncan and Jean Battolls, the Wallaan anarchists, to various terms of imprisonment. He also presided at the trials of other anarchists and imposed sentences of various degrees upon them. It is thought in some quarters that the explosion was an attempt to secure revenge against the judge, but that the author of it made a mistake in the number of the judge's house.

The Cook Gang Again.

PERRY, O. T., Nov. 5.—News comes here by courier from Stillwater that S. J. Dunlap, postmaster at Retford, T., 50 miles east of here, was shot to pieces by the Cook gang. Dunlap owned a store and the gang ordered him to unlock the postoffice safe which he refused to do and they shot him full of holes.

Wisconsin Pioneer Dead.

RACINE, Wis., Nov. 5.—Lucius S. Blake, one of the early settlers of Wisconsin, died suddenly at 5 a. m. of heart disease, aged 80 years. Deceased was one of Racine's millionaire manufacturers and business men.

Secretary Gresham's Health.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Secretary Gresham continues to improve, although he still suffers from a disagreeable cold. His physician has advised him against going to Chicago to-day Tuesday, saying the trip would be dangerous. It is not likely, therefore, that the secretary will make the trip.

DID you do your whole duty as an American citizen on Tuesday? If so, you have no cause to kick, whatever the result.

TWO years ago the country thought it wanted a change, this fall it was sure it did, and "wanted it bad."

LET'S see, last week the Pops claimed the earth—or the state, anyhow; this week they are trying to figure out "where are we at?"

AT noon on Tuesday the Penny Press said: "The Norwegians are going for Knute Nelson and at this writing it looks like Owen will be elected." The next day the Press discovered the significance of the prophecy, the Norwegians "went for Nelson" and so did everybody else.

MEN may be elected, or they may be defeated, and that simple fact does not injure the people. But the defeat of a party whose principles are for the best interests of the people is what hurts. The party that advocates the greatest good to the greatest number is the one the people should support.

OUR space was so fully occupied last week that we failed to notice the fine boom edition gotten out by the Moorhead News. It was a daisy and no mistake, replete with items of interest, cuts of prominent business men and buildings and ought to have netted Bro. Lamphere enough to tide over a long and severe winter—if we got one.

THE Globe will now insist that the reason why Gen. Becker was not elected was because there was not enough democrats to vote for him. Just before the election, a few days, the Globe began to boom Becker and said he would be elected if the democrats stayed by him. The Globe knew very well that he did not stand a ghost of a show.

IF you did not get all you wanted Tuesday don't get blue and mope—in some way it was all for the best though it is sometimes very hard to realize this fact. If you voted as your conscience dictated with a full determination to discharge a sacred duty to your country, you have no need to regret. You may have had a mistaken idea—most of men do at least once in their lives, but that is no killing offence, and you will in time learn the right way if you have an earnest, sincere desire to do so. No true patriot need regret any action performed with a sincere sense of duty.

THE JOURNAL goes to press too soon to obtain anything like full and complete returns from the county, but the indications are strong that the Republicans elect W. A. Lanctot and Miss Ida Hancock. The indications are that the Pops carry everything else. In the congressional district F. M. Eddy is elected by a good safe majority, while the Pops carry the legislative district. Gov. Nelson and the entire Republican state ticket wins with the possible exception of Judge Collins and his defeat is by no means sure—in fact it looks like he is elected by a safe majority. Everything indicates that the Pops are not in it and the Dems are nowhere.

ONE very singular feature of the past campaign was found in the fact that once in a while you would encounter a man of good average mental ability who, while admitting the fallacy of the Populist doctrine, would assert his intention of voting for S. M. Owen. He would admit that the success of the Populist party in Minnesota would be a serious blow to our business interests; he would admit too, that the election of Mr. Owen meant a Populist victory, and admitting all that would still insist on voting for S. M. Owen. In every case this was a Democrat and he could not for the life of him tell why he intended to do so. All that he seemed to know about it was that he intended to do so. Such cases as this indicate a curious feature of human nature, in that it showed a desire to be perverse and do wrong in face of a full knowledge that it was so. It showed a sad lack of desire to fulfill the highest and noblest end of American citizenship—a desire to act for the best interests of the country. It showed a lack of interest in the welfare of the country that is truly deplorable and reprehensible. A man who will deliberately do a wrong act and with his eyes open, has a great deal yet to learn of his duties to society and his country.

THE LESSON OF IT.

The result of the past election shows that the country most emphatically repudiates the Democratic doctrine of free trade, even as W. L. Wilson, the great free trade advocate is swept into oblivion. It shows also that the Populistic ideas, that one few deluded mortals have thought were destined to save the world from annihilation are wholly invisible. It shows that the spirit of American progress still lives and is bound to live while American is solidly American. It shows that the Republican party is the true party of progress, the party of the people and it should convince our misguided Populist brethren of Polk county that they have been in error and where they have made their mistake.

WILL HAVE A ROAD.

Whether the Great Northern road is completed from Fosston to Duluth in the spring or not, there can be no doubt that there will be one built very soon. The Duluth and Winnipeg road, that has been so long on the way is said to be now ready to be extended its line to the valley at an early day. The benefits of a more direct connection with Duluth are more than can be enumerated within the scope of one newspaper article. It will suffice to say that it will place this country upon a plane of prosperity that it has not enjoyed for years and will make every acre in this valley worth far more than at present. That we shall get a road and that at an early day, the JOURNAL is confident, in fact we expect to see one built before another crop is ready to be moved. It will give this country such a boom that the most chronic grumbler we have will wonder what under the canopy he has been growing about all summer. This is bound to be a great country, and that too, at an early day.

CITY PARK.

The city needs, as much as anything else, a park, and now that property is so cheap it seems strange that no move is made by our city fathers to procure the ground for one. The objection has always been that no suitable ground could be procured for a reasonable figure down town where it ought to be and it would not be the thing, they said, to go up on the hill where it is all prairie land. Had they gone up there years ago and set trees that objection would now be over and it would be better to buy property up there now and set out trees than to let the matter drag along until real estate again gets so high to purchase. Some will urge, perhaps, that the city has no money to purchase parks at present; well that is no objection for the city could just as well purchase all the property she needs just as any individual can—on time. Plenty of desirable land could be purchased with a small cash payment that in time would be worth to the city many times its cost and in all that time we could be enjoying a fine park. Something should be done in this matter and at an early day.

The object of this government is not to make or unmake certain politicians, aspirants for office. It is for the best, the highest interests of all the people.

GROVER has mentioned Thursday, Nov. 29th as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer. No doubt it will be all right at that time for the Democratic party to return to quietude by then and the country will be on the high road to prosperity once more.

"There is No Royal Road To public favor any more than to learning. This is true, at all events, in America where intrinsic excellence is necessary to secure and retain the popular favor. The reason The North Western Line is one of the most popular railroads is that its service is not only always up to date but always ahead of the time. In my opinion, this is the Best Line between Chicago and the Twin Cities."—The Excursionist, Chicago.

Common Sense

Should be used in attempting to cure that very disagreeable disease, catarrh. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do no permanent good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Pills cure constipation by restoring peristaltic action to the alimentary canal.

"Thrice Blessed With good traveling accommodations is mankind to-day. But good is not enough for the traveling public who are used to luxury when they are at home. They must have the Best and up in this country when we say Best we mean The North-Western Line."—Improvement Bulletin, Minneapolis.

LAW AND LAWYERS.

A PROFESSION IN WHICH MANY ARE CALLED, BUT FEW ARE CHOSEN.

Difficulties Which Confront Young Barristers—How Literature and Politics Affect the Lawyer's Prospects—He Need Not Necessarily Be a Rascal.

Mr. Richard Devereux Doyle, a prominent member of the Norfolk bar, contributes to The Southern Magazine an article entitled "My Impressions of Law and Lawyers," which will prove very interesting to laymen as well as to members of the legal profession. Mr. Doyle discusses his theme instructively, entertainingly and with judicial impartiality and candor. He refers to the "Confessions of a Young Barrister," by the brilliant Richard Lalor Shiel, as embodying the early experiences of many hopeful and talented young lawyers.

"How many," says Mr. Doyle, "have passed through a similar ordeal of study and preparation, perhaps graduating in the humanities as well as the law, bearing away the prize for eloquence and oratory at some of our great institutions of learning! How many have thought that such talents as theirs were sure to command early if not immediate success, and, alas! how many have been disappointed!" Differing, it may be added, in this respect from Shiel, who passed safely through the depressing period of waiting and probation which tries the soul of the ordinary legal neophyte, and who was the distinction of which he had dreamed at the outset of his career.

Many of this grand army of the disappointed fall, Mr. Doyle thinks, not because they are lacking in "genius talent" which is "frequently of a high order," but "because there are so many other elements that should but do not enter into the calculation" of the youthful aspirant. Youth, for one thing, "is too sanguine and expects too much. Some fail because of their bad personal habits; some by infirm health and too hard study and confinement prostrated down, like poor Kirk White, 'ere life is in its spring;' some are not politic enough to woo the world, but hold proudly aloof, trusting to their talents and knowledge, while the busy world goes bustling by without stopping to look at their credentials." Some stray into the pleasant and flowery paths of literature and some into the seductive field of politics.

"A literary reputation," Mr. Doyle declares, "is perhaps more dangerous than a political one, especially if one is given, like Mr. Wegg, to dropping into poetry. The age is too prolific for a successful combination of law and literature. A lawyer may and should be cultivated, but he must not be known as a litterateur or a poet." Nor will it do for the young lawyer to seek to make himself known by going into politics. To do so "is a risky venture for one who intends to make law the profession of a lifetime, and even a reputation for political oratory is of little if any benefit to a lawyer. The public soon come to regard him as a politician and may be willing to vote with him or for him, but not to give him business."

Turning from the causes of failure to the qualities important to what is ordinarily deemed success, Mr. Doyle summarizes them as follows: "Love of the profession and evident desire to get business and attention to it when in hand; industry and the appearance of industry and good native sense, with an aggressive and partisan temperament. Fluency of speech, eloquence of diction and genuine oratorical talent are useful, but not essential." This paragraph and aggressive spirit, which is also what Lord Bacon calls "boldness," Mr. Doyle considers a very important constituent element of success. "Men 'hire' lawyers, as the expression is among the people, to attend to their business and to fight their battles, right or wrong, and the lawyer who goes into it with thoroughly himself with the client's feelings, believing or making believe that he is certainly right and the other party an unmitigated rascal, is sure to please."

As to the ethical side of the law, Mr. Doyle admits that much may be said pro and con. One of the demoralizing features of the profession is that "a lawyer cannot choose his cases." He is sometimes on the wrong side, the side of falsehood and injustice, and when on the wrong side "there is almost irresistible temptation to express belief in the justice of his cause, and lawyers too often yield to it, thus giving some ground for the popular conviction that lawyers lie for their clients." After all, whether "the law is a noble and elevating profession" depends upon the man." There is nothing in the nature of his profession which compels a lawyer to be a rascal. It has its temptations, but so has every other business.

Many hard things have been said of lawyers, but the censure is nearly all unneed by the complimentary things that they have said of themselves and of their profession. Mr. Doyle declares that "the gladsome light of jurisprudence," and a lack of self appreciation is not in general one of the defects of the disciples of the law. They have, however, the consolation of knowing that in spite of all the abuse to which they have been subjected by satirical writers and poets they are not only useful but essential members of society, and that those who abuse them most are generally the very first to rush to the lawyers to avenge or protect them in their hour of need.—Baltimore Sun.

Theta Orionis

In the constellation of Orion there is a star known as Theta Orionis, which, when viewed through a powerful telescope, appears as a sextuple star, thus presenting the magnificent panorama of seven stars revolving about each other. It is to be supposed that each of these suns is surrounded by planets, and these again by moons.

LITERATURE THE FAD.

An "Intellectual Winter" Contemplated by Leaders of New York's Four Hundred.

New York's swell society, which has been wont to divert itself with the gambols of a Carmencita and the prestidigitations of a Herrmann, has found a new fad which it is for which it calls an "intellectual winter." The pace was set by Mrs. Paran Stevens, the rich, original and possibly eccentric lady journeyed spoken of as "society's goldenhen," and by Mrs. Jordan L. Mott, both inspired by Lady Randolph Churchill. The last two are cousins, and when Lady Churchill was merely Miss Jennie Jerome she exercised a great influence over her family, an influence now greatly increased, of course. In conjunction with Lady Lester-Kaye she quite transformed one section of London society, and now New York swelldom is to have its turn.

There is to be no frivolity. All amusements are to have an intellectual coat. There will be readings from their own works by great authors; lectures on great topics, chiefly historical; discourses on the philosophy of music and such. Possibly, if Willemdom can stand it, there will be dippings into the occult, soarings after the infinite and diving after the unfathomable, with side remarks on the persistence of force and the mode of immortality. All these things, however, will be made as attractive as possible, especially the historic essays, for Froude is Mrs. Stevens' friend, and Carlyle.

Mrs. Jordan L. Mott has long been known in society as an ardent admirer of Napoleon, and her collection of souvenirs of the first empire is large and valuable. Grave historians are to entertain her guests on that era, and it is said she has employed several young writers to make special studies of certain epochs in the great warrior's career. John Jacob Astor will open his magnificent residence as soon as it is completed to literary and every degree of eminence. Two novelists, both popular, though in different ways, will be asked to read in several salons—namely, Marion Crawford and A. Conan Doyle. Mrs. Andrews has secured a great French writer for her parlors. Other ladies have taken specialties in art, and there are a few of more purely intellectual diversions prepared for the winter.

LIVED IN A CHURCH.

Ex-Senator Van Wyck Found an Odd Dwelling Place in Washington.

Ex-Senator Charles H. Van Wyck is known to the country as an active, independent sort of politician who was nominated for senator from Nebraska by two independents for his party associates and was defeated for re-election, charged his defeat to the railroads and became a Populist in the race for governor of Nebraska. He is independent in many other lines than politics, and being pretty well supplied with this world's goods he can afford to live according to his will. His wife is in harmony with him, and their latest amusement has been to live in a church.

A great landmark in Washington is the little old vine clad church at the corner of Eighteenth and F streets, northwest, originally Episcopalian and later used for Swedenborgian services. It was sold about the time Senator Van Wyck's term closed, and he bought it for a little present to his wife. When the family returned to Washington last August, they concluded to "camp out" in their church property and found it so nice that they fixed up and lived in it with much comfort and hilarity.

His old neighbors say that Mr. Van Wyck "isn't pretty, but he's pretty well fixed," as he owns a fine house. He and his wife first divided the auditorium by imaginary lines into parlor, dining room, art gallery and bedroom, and used the vestry for a kitchen. Later they put up some partitions, and so now they were, for how long they did not say.

Their business in Washington is to superintend repairs on their other property there. They have a beautiful home in Nebraska and soon left for that state to pay their daughter in a boarding school, but with a promise to return and occupy their church for some time. Last winter they lived at the Portland hotel in Washington, and Mrs. Van Wyck's entertainments were accounted very pleasant affairs indeed. The senator has grown more radical since leaving office, and his prediction as to the course politics were to take, made immediately after President Cleveland's tariff message in 1887, has been fulfilled almost to the letter.

AMBITIOUS ATLANTA.

SHE IS PREPARING A GRAND EXPOSITION FOR 1895.

Hopes to Rival the Chicago Fair In Some Particulars—Description of the Buildings and Grounds—Natural Advantages of the Empire City of the South.

Atlanta has girded up her loins and worked with a will, all the people as one man, in making ready for her great exposition of 1895. The cornerstone of the Administration building was recently laid with imposing ceremonies, all the officials, all the civic and social orders in the city and nearly all the citizens taking part, and it is intended that just one year from that ceremony the exposition shall open—to wit, on Sept. 18, 1895.

The Administration building, designed by Walter T. Downing of Atlanta, is to have a central hall, 60 by 100 feet in extent, and two side wings, the former with an elevation of 90 feet. It will occupy a commanding position and be probably the most striking feature of the exposition grounds. It is a general imitation of the old southern home, with immense pillars at the front and a southern aspect throughout. The central or double story portion is designed for use chiefly as an art gallery, while the rooms for officials and the press are on the sides.

The other buildings are to be chiefly Romanesque and of the following dimensions: The Manufacturers' building, 870 by 216 and 80 feet high, with a tower reaching 100 feet from the ground —the largest building on the grounds except the great Government building; the Machinery building, 100 by 500 and 65 feet high; the Agricultural building, 800 by 160 and 65 feet high, with a 100 foot tower; the Minerals and Forestry building, 80 by 820, with general elevation of 85 feet and a central octagonal tower 60 feet high; the Electricity building, 91 by 250, and the pavilion of 60 feet, with a 150 foot tower. The grounds are far more diversified in every way than those of the Chicago exposition, and though Lake Michigan is necessarily absent yet it is believed that other features of the topography will more than compensate for that.

The city is 1,080 feet above sea level, and the summers are singularly cool, while autumn is dry and bracing beyond description. The drainage is absolutely perfect. Every rod of ground for a day's ride in any direction from the city is of historic interest. To the west are the blue mountains, to the east and south the gently rolling hills. The city is a happy combination of northern and southern in its structure and includes all civilized races in its population. Owing to the topography, each principal building will occupy a commanding eminence, and from the towers one can see about those fields whose gallant soldierly reputations were made and so many soldierly careers ended just 31 years before.

There will be special features of rare interest, the most important being an exhibit by the colored people. It will be the first of the kind and will be a valuable one for those who have appreciated the freedmen have made. General J. R. Lewis, formerly of the federal army, has taken great interest in the matter, has procured lists of the colored men in the several states who will take action, and these will form state organizations. The special committee in charge of this branch consists of W. H. Venable, owner of the Stone mountain granite quarries; ex-Governor Rufus B. Bullock, General Clement A. Evans, and J. G. Oglesby, president of the Commercial club. Congress has granted an appropriation of $200,000 for the government exhibit, and if practicable the permanent building of the Chicago exposition will be removed and set up in its entirety at Atlanta.

Of the six main buildings, the contract for five was let to Mr. Bradford L. Gilbert of New York, and that for the Administration building to Mr. Walter T. Downing of Atlanta. Mr. Gilbert built the great Illinois Central depot at Chicago, which cost $2,000,000 and is said to have been put through from cornerstone to the crown of the spires in shorter time than any other building of equal size in the world. He is quite an enthusiast over the site and says it gives greater possibilities than any other exposition ground in the world. His design for the Machinery building is rather new in the line of exposition structures. It is to be simple cubs in the interior, giving the largest available space, with an exterior plain, having a touch of the renaissance, and large porticoes, with immense pillars on each of the four sides. "It is my aim," he says, "to construct a building whose size will not be apparent at first, but which will grow on the observer."

Atlanta is a very new city, with—well, by the opening of the exposition its population will be about 100,000, of whom one-third are colored. Though survivors of the Confederate army are now but few in the south compared with the general population, yet there will be reunions of various old commands, and as the yearly meetings of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held at Louisville next September an earnest effort will be made to have the entire body go to Atlanta. If it does, there will be the grandest reunion of the blue and gray ever held.

J. M. Stephens has got another hay press and this time it is one that no darn prairie fires can eat up for him. It is made of steel throughout. Stephens has a large sized idea that the fire that destroyed his first press was not the result of accident, but this one will not go that way.

There don't seem to be as much coal brought in so far, as is usual at this season of the year, whether it is because the season so far has not required it, or whether it is because more wood will be used we cannot say. It looks as though people were figuring on using more wood than coal the coming winter.

Judging from the quantities of lumber that we daily see going out into the country, the farmers cannot all be so destitute as the Populist speakers would have everybody believe. There seems to be more building and fixing up on the farms this fall than usual, which indicates that there is some money left in the country yet.

Those who have raised sheep in Polk county are unanimous in the opinion that it is a paying business, even under the operation of adverse Democratic tariff laws, and would be far more so had the tariff remained undisturbed. They are encouraged to push on in the good work, knowing that the Republicans will soon fix things as they should be.

While property is at low ebb would be a good time for the city to purchase a block for a market square. That is one thing that has long been needed. It is an improvement that would help our home market and be an inducement for farmers to come here to trade. If we want to build up a good home market for country products and encourage diversified farming in the vicinity of our city, there is no better way than this to do it. Purchase a block of land and locate a market house upon it and it would be worth the cost to the city every year. We desire all of the trade in this vicinity, ought to have it and could have not only that but lots of outlying trade that we never do get. If we would make the right kind of an effort to get it. There is no better time than right now to provide for this long felt want.

The average democratic candidate can content himself with the reflection: "Well, I made a far better run than I expected to under the circumstances. Of course, after the way the democratic party has mismanaged things for the past 18 months I could not expect to be elected and after all I made a pretty good run."

Saturday was one of the big days that used to be more frequent a year or so ago—a day when it looked as though everybody living within a radius of twenty-five miles had "come to town." The streets were crowded, scores of teams were scattered about hither and yonder and business seemed to be exceedingly lively. It does one good to see such evidences of life and renewed activity.

The czar of all the Russias has passed away and his son reigns in his stead. If there is such a thing thing beyond the grave he must experience a great relief from the constant dread of assassination which has been his constant companion for several years. That must be a delightful form of government where a ruler is in constant fear of his life. Anarchists thrive on that kind of soil.

On Thursday evening, as Knute Johnson was quietly sleeping in the middle of the road (he's a Pop probably) and otherwise disturbing no one, a hack came along and before the driver realized that he was trying to anticipate Tuesday by riding the Populist party down, he had run right plum over Knute. Aside from a few bumps and bruises the old man escaped injury, and though somewhat dilapidated he is still in the ring. He chooses a different bed to sleep in since.

I now have money again to loan on good improved farms.

THE MIDLAND PACIFIC.

Scheme For a Transcontinental Line From Sioux Falls to Puget Sound.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Major G. E. Hibbard of this city has recently returned from an extensive trip through the Northwest and portions of the Northern Pacific coast. The most important news he brings was of the proposed new Midland Pacific railroad, over the route of which he traveled for the especial purpose of getting a knowledge of that section of the country, in order to make a report thereon to Canadian and foreign capitalists, who were ready to invest in the new enterprise if they should be satisfied of its feasibility.

Major Hibbard is now able to state that the capital, both Canadian and foreign, is satisfied, and that he has therefore been able to enter into contract with United States Senator R. F. Pettigrew of South Dakota, for the building of the Midland Pacific from Sioux Falls, S. D., to Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., a distance of some 1,600 miles. The success is thus assured of what will undoubtedly be one of the great transcontinental routes.

GREAT VICTORY.

The Japs Capture a Chinese Stronghold Near the Korean Frontier.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The Japanese legation has received a dispatch stating that Field Marshal Yamagata has captured Fung-Wang-Chang, a city in the Chinese province of Liautung, near the Korean frontier. The Chinese defending the place fled toward Mantenlang.

The foregoing victory is an important one. It leaves the road open to the Japanese, as the Chinese are likely to offer no further resistance to the advance of the Japanese army.

Japanese Marching on Moukden.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 3.—It is announced that the investment of Port Arthur by the Japanese forces by land and sea has been completed and that the forward movement of both the Japanese armies in the direction of Moukden is being rapidly pushed.

British Warships For Costa Rica.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 3.—It has been learned that the destination of the British fleet, which has been hastily ordered to Southern waters, is Costa Rica, instead of Fern. It is reported that a serious state of affairs exists in Costa Rica, and that the British consulate at Punta Arena, the seaport of San Jose, has been burned and looted and the consul carried prisoner into the interior of the country.

Hog Cholera in Illinois.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 3.—A special to The Republic from Shawneetown, Ills., says: Owing to the shipping of cholera hogs from Iowa into Shelby county the ravages of that disease have been very disastrous in this vicinity. Shippers and feeders here estimate their loss from hog cholera for the past six weeks to exceed $20,000.

In the Bottomless Pit.

President Cleveland informed congressional committee, this morning, that he would not permit himself "to be separated from my party." No, he will not. He will sink, first and head first, into the bottomless pit that he has been digging for Democracy during the past 18 months. They will all sink together. There will be no separation.

THE CIRCULATION OF WAGES.

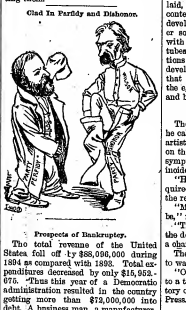
Labor Is Punished to Reward Importers Who Paraded For Gorman.

The burden of free trade is already upon us. How can we lighten it? The rush of importers to secure their foreign goods from the custom house at the lowest rates of duty has told the story. Nearly $10,000,000 worth of foreign goods withdrawn for consumption in less than a week means the sale of nearly $10,000,000 worth less of American goods manufactured in American mills by American wage earners. It means that the distribution of more than $5,000,000 in American wages has been checked within five days.

If this curse continues, there can be but one result. The foreigners are determined to have and to hold our markets. Shall we surrender them? We do not desire—no true American desires—that American wage earners should be compelled to sell their labor in open competition with the cheaper labor of other countries. The workers in the cotton mills of New Bedford, in the flax mills of New York, in the potteries of Trenton, in the glass factories of the west, have entered their protest against a reduction of wages that has been forced upon them by Democracy.

What can be done to lighten the burden? The manufacturers should not be expected to pay higher wages than their foreign competitors and to sell their goods at the same prices. It has been the decree of Democracy that American manufacturers and American wage earners must be crushed in order to reward the New York city importers of foreign goods, who turned out with splendid grandeur in their parade of 1892 to the honor and glory of Grover. It is the duty of all true and patriotic Americans to overthrow this foreign domination. Check the sale of these foreign goods, check the stoppage of our mills, check the stopping of our labor by buying American goods whenever and wherever it is possible to do so. Let the people ask only for American products and insist upon getting them.

Clad In Partldy and Dishonor.



Prospects of Bankruptcy.

The total revenue of the United States fell off $ 88,096,000 during 1894 as compared with 1893. Total expenditures decreased by only $15,953,-676. Thus this year of a Democratic administration resulted in the country getting more than $72,000,000 into debt. A business man, a manufacturer, a wage earner who spent nearly 25 per cent more than his income would very soon become a bankrupt. This is the style of Democratic financiering.

MYSTERIES OF MEDICINE.

Doctors Know What Drugs Will Do, but Not Why They Do It.

"When a person takes a dose of medicine," said a doctor, "he never stops to consider what a wonderful provider nature is. When you consider that we are able to give drugs which will go though the entire system without having any effect upon any part or organ until it comes perhaps to some nerve upon which it expends all its force, it is indeed a miracle of the most wonderful kind. We don't know why it does it, but we know what it does. The progress in materia medica has been wonderful. By provings the specific effects of drugs have been discovered, so that they can be given with specific results. Medicine is gradually emerging from the dark valley of guesswork into the bright sunlight of science.

"The modern physician does not make a mixture of seven or eight drugs, hoping that some one of them will produce the effect desired. He does not take chances upon striking a remedy one in seven. He knows now just what drug will produce the results he wants, and he prescribes that. I attended a man the other day who had not been sick for 20 or 30 years. I went into his room, and after observing his symptoms asked for half a glass of water, into which I dropped a small pellet, a triturate. The old man looked at me after I had given him a dose of it and then smiled.

"'Well, doctor,' he said, 'you treated me for this complaint when I was sick many years ago, and I must say the remembrance of the taste of the medicine you gave me then is still vivid. I don't think that a person could have mixed a more horrible concoction than that was. Now you treat me for the same disease, and the drug is almost tasteless. How do you account for that?'

"'Progress,' I replied. 'And progress it is! Every day increases our knowledge of drugs and our power to alleviate suffering and save human life.'"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

STRANGE HILL THIS.

A Bicycle Will Not Run Down It, but Goes Up Easily.

"There is a hill in Ulster county that bicycle riders find no difficulty in ascending on their wheels; but when their machines won't descend by their own gravity," said a New York wheelman. "This mysterious hill is on the line of the numerous hills on the route between Lake Mohonk and the Hudson river.

"The moment he takes his feet off the pedals to let the machine toboggan down by force of gravity it slows up and begins to wabble, and if its rider doesn't brace up and take it in hand and foot again it will topple over and throw him in the ditch. He has to work the wheel for all he is worth to get it down the hill. On the contrary, the rider will mount the hill with less effort on the part of the wheelman to propel it than it requires ordinarily to move it along on the level.

"The theory is that there must be a big mass of magnetic ore under the surface near the top of the hill which influences the action of the bicycles. However that may be, the fact exists that here is a hill that a bicycle won't run down of its own gravity, and which the wheelman can mount as easily, if not more easily, than he can ride the level road.—New York Sun.

Eggs and Microbes.

Dr. McClintock of the University of Michigan has performed experiments which indicate that eggs may become infected with microbes before they are laid. A healthy hen, after repeated washings in sterilized solutions, was placed in a sterilized cage. As soon as possible after being laid a portion of her eggs were placed in sterilized milk and then in an incubator. All these eggs decayed and swarmed with bacteria. The remaining eggs were taken as soon as laid, and cultures were made from their contents. Some of these cultures tubes developed; others remained sterile. After some days the hen was killed, and with proper aseptic precautions cultures tubes were inoculated from the secretions of the ovidnct. Most of these tubes developed. It would thus seem probable that the putrefactive bacteria entered the egg in its passage down the ovidnct and before the shell was formed.

What He Needed.

The man was melancholy, and when he called on the doctor for advice that artist thought he had his man sized up on the first turn. He told the doctor his symptoms, and the doctor asked a lot of incidental questions.

"How long have you been here?" inquired the physician after finishing up the regular list.

"Much longer than I have wanted to be," replied the patient mournfully.

"That's it. I thought so," exclaimed the doctor brightly. "What you need is a change of scene."

The patient threw up his hands as if to ward off a blow.

"Oh, doctor," he wailed, "I belong to a theatrical company playing a repertory of five act plays."—Detroit Free Press.

Disappointed.

"Our hero sat in the corner of the railway compartment devouring his newspaper," read Miss Myrtle Dolan from the latest acquisition to her paper cover library.

"He wor devouring what?" asked her father, with sudden interest.

"His newspaper," she took says," replied Myrtle.

"Go an wid yes! Ot t'ought 'twor a man ye wor readin about, an now it's the powers, he turns out to be a goat!"—Washington Star.

The Worst Punishment of Crime.

Lawyer—Come, brace up, man. They can't do any more than imprison you for 10 years or so. Your offense isn't a capital crime, you know.

Chinese Teahouses.

The restaurant, or teahouse, in China takes the place of the western clubroom. All the current news and gossip are here circulated and discussed over dice throwing or gambling. One of their games of chance, which we have frequently noticed, seems to consist in throwing their fingers at one another and shouting at the top of their voices. It is really a matching of numbers, for which the Chinamen make signs on their fingers up to the numeral ten.

The Chinese of all nations seem to live in order to eat, and from this race of epicures has developed a nation of excellent cooks. Our fare in China, outside the Gold district, was far better than in Turkey or Persia, and for this reason we are better able to endure the increased hardships. A plate of sliced ment stewed with vegetables and served with a piquant sauce, sliced radishes and onions, with vinegar, two saucers of Chinese mo-mo, or steamed bread, and a pot of tea would usually cost us about 2½ cents apiece. Everything in China is sliced so that it can be eaten with the chopsticks. These we attended learned to manipulate with sufficient dexterity to pick up a dove's egg, the highest attainment in the chopstick art. The Chinese have rather a sour than a sweet tooth. Sugar is rarely used in anything, and never in tea. The steeped tea flowers, which the higher classes use, are really more tasty without it.—Century.

A Town With No Lawyers.

In the town of Obermoinstal, in Saxony, disputes between the inhabitants are so rare that there is no room for a lawyer. A citizen somewhat who applied to the tribunal at Oberweisenthal for the address of a counsel, received the following reply, "We have the honor to inform you that there is no advocate here, but the barber, Fritz Biel, represents the interests of litigants in civil cases."

To tell muskrooms from toadstools, without eating and waiting for results, put an onion and put it with the fungi while boiling cooked. If the onion remains white, eat with confidence; if it turns black, cast it away, if you value life.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Route Disease and Gives Renewed Health.

"O. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I have used several dozen bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla in my family and know its merits. I had a sore on one of my limbs below the knee which baffled the skill and treatment of several physicians. They were uncertain whether to call it erysipelas, cancer, scrofula or blood poisoning. Owing to my old age, they thought I would have to have my leg amputated. It had a running swollen, angry look in small size, and raw as well as painful, with a

...s of the Joe Haines Party—Seventy-three ...ten, Ninety Horses and Mules, With ...$30,000 Worth of Goods, Wiped Out on ...he New Route over the Mountains.

The route was from Marysville along ... right bank of the Yuba river, over ... Sierra Nevada mountains and down ... Washoe City and Gold Hill, a hand... nearly 200 miles. Except in the dead ... winter there were always freighters ... ing and coming. There had been talk ... a road further over the mountains—a ... ate which would save many miles of ... ary hauling and of unloading and re... ading the great wagons—but the ... nighters still stuck to the old trail. ... very mile of it was rough and rugged, ... d many miles of it dangerous to man ... d horse as well as vehicle, but there ... ught be more danger in the new route. ... In the spring of 1863 word was sent ... t that Captain Joe Haines was load... g his 14 wagons for the fall freight... ntary and would be the first to try the ... oad. Some men sagely shook their ... ads and recalled the stories of emi... nts lost in the grim Sierras; others ... plauded the captain's nerve and ... shed him good luck. Six heavy ...rses or mules to a wagon, 14 drivers, ... o bosses, two cooks, five men giving ... sir services free to get out to the Ne... da mines. Twenty-three men and 60 ... ad of live stock, and the value of the ... ods in the wagons was $35,000. ... One spring day the caravan took the ... ad. Word came back from it almost ... ery day until it left the trail leading ... to the pass through which the rail... road was afterward found its way. At ... certain point 18 miles short of the ... nd in the trail the caravan turned ... ay to the north, and then the earth ... trapper saw the wagons among the ... othills, and Indian hunters saw them ... ss down the valleys. After that men saw ... em and lived to tell of it. Days and ... eeks passed by, and the weeks had run ... o months before it came to be gen... ally believed that the Haines outfit ... d met with some disaster. That never ... man had reached it to Marysville and ... ver a man had reached the eastern ... ope meant more than disaster. It ... meant a terrible tragedy.

One searching party followed the ... agons into the foothills and lost all ... ace of them. A second traced them up ... e valley and down another, but at a ... certain point the trail was obliterated by ... further evidences. Winter came, and ... ney were forgotten. Spring returned, ... d the hunters and Indians sent out ... eports that the disappearance of the ... outfit was a mystery beyond them. Then ... o rumor gave out that Captain Haines ... ad safely reached his destination, but ... ould return no more to Marysville. It ... as wartime then, and people scarcely ... nought of aught else but war. In an... ther year all was forgotten, save per... aps by the shippers who had had to re... arns and were hoping against hope.

Two, three, four, five years passed ... way. Old men died; boys grew to ... anhood. The railroad came, and the ... agons disappeared from the trail. One ... ummer's day a hunter who had become ... eparated from his companions sat ... own on a ridge in the midst of the ... ountain range to rest. To the west or ... o the east north there was room ... d the hunter rested he scanned the ... ridges to the east and north. The po... ition of the travellers, the size of the ... ees, the queer configuration of the ... lopes—a dozen signs gave him to under... tand, for he was something of a geolo... ist, that the spot was not as nature ... ft it. He clambered up the northern ... lope and uttered an "Ah!" of surprise ... nce upon a time the ground below him ... nd been a valley rich in grass and ... erdure.

It was a narrow, tortuous valley not ... ver 10 rods wide—a valley connecting ... o larger valleys. To the east a moun... ain reared its head 8,000 feet high—a ... ountain of many mountains. Two ... onsand feet above him had been the ... tarting point of a landslip. Millions of ... ons of earth and rock had been set in ... otion by the rolling over of a stone ... hich might not have weighed a hundred ... ounds. The discharge of a rifle, the ... eigh of a horse, the shout of a man, ... even the feet of a bird resting after a ... light, might have caused the avalanche ... fter a long spell of wet weather. It ... ad rushed down into that narrow val... ey to fill it up as dirt fills a ditch, to ... arry the green grass and the tender vio... ets 10, 20, 50 feet deep. The rush, and ... he roar, and the crash must have been ... errific.

The man looked and descended to the ... rail. To him it was only a point of ... eology. With his own eyes he had seen ... ne of the tremendous changes nature is ... onstantly making in the mountains. ... Ah, what's this? He has been absent ... ess than half an hour, and by during ... hat time the waters from a hidden ... pring have gushed forth from the hill... ide and formed a pond, which is spread... ng and turning along the trail. The ... unter kneels down to drink, and his ... yes rest upon a rusty gun barrel. As he ... pulls it out of the soil he sees the hoof ... f a horse, with a shoe yet firmly hold... ng to it.

Two hours later two men are digging ... away at the bank on each side of the ... pring. They find the bones of a horse, ... he skeleton of a man, the ironwork of ... a wagon. They solve the mystery sur... rounding the fate of the long lost Haines ... party. Dead, every man and horse—... lead since the night they camped in ... hat mountain cove and the awful ava... lanche came rushing down to destroy ... everything in its path! What use for ... others to dig? Men must die, and men ... must be buried. They were buried so ... deep that trees took root and threw out ... great branches above them as they slept. ... Twenty-three men, 80 horses and mules, ... 14 wagons, $80,000 worth of cargo—... only a straw in the pathway of the ava... lanche.—Detroit Free Press.

HESTER IN THE GARDEN.

Pringed with stately gentian stalks,
Out in stripe by narrow walks,
Mistress Esther's garden lies
Prim as Quaker penalties.

Not a blossom's part and part
Sober phiz and carraway.
Modest violet had not,
Keep Miss Hester company.

Morn and eve, in soft gray gown,
Walks she starry up and down,
With her eyes upon the page
Of some quaint old saint and sage.

What a picture—did she know—
Of the shingle long ago!
How her very gumwaia stir
With the scent of lavender!

MORE SALTY THAN THE DEAD SEA.

A Ton of Great Salt Lake Water Holds About 314 Pounds of Salt.

Water of the Great Salt lake varies greatly in its contents of dissolved solids, depending upon the relation between the supply of water through streams and the evaporation. A fair average of total solids dissolved in the water of the lake at its present mean level is from 10 to 20 per cent by weight. But not all of this is common salt, for besides this ingredient the water contains sodium sulphate (glauber salts), magnesium chloride, calcium sulphate (gypsum) and potassium sulphate. A detailed analysis of water taken from the lake in August, 1888, was made by Dr. Talmage. This contained in all 19.56 per cent dissolved solids, of which 15.74 was common salt. Such water would yield of total solid matter 391 pounds to the ton, and of common salt about 314 pounds to the ton.

The Dead sea contains a greater proportion of solid matter dissolved in its waters than does the Great Salt lake. Much discrepancy exists among published accounts of its contents, the fluctuations in composition being due to the same causes that prevail in our lake —viz, the relation between the supply through fresh streams and loss by evaporation. A sample taken from a depth of 1,110 feet carries 26.4 per cent of dissolved solids. This corresponds to 528 pounds to the ton, but of this only 7.66 per cent was common salt, or 151 pounds per ton.

Therefore, though the Salt lake carries a lower proportion of dissolved solids than of all sorts than does the Dead sea, the lake contains more than double the proportion of salt. The chief constituent of the Dead sea water is not sodium chloride (common salt), but magnesium chloride. Strictly speaking, the water of our lake is much "brinier" than that of the Dead sea, common salt being the chief solid dissolved in the lake. Nevertheless the Dead sea is much more highly saturated with solids.—Deseret News.

Meringue Glace "Without Ants."

A man went into the cafe of a Broadway hotel the other day and sat down on a stool in front of the lunch counter. He had been in many of the eating houses, or "bonanzas," in the Bowery and Park row and thought he was familiar with the various terms which waiters employ when spouting a customer's order, but he had a surprise in store for him. When he had finished his luncheon, he told the waiter he would like a meringue glace by way of dessert. The prompt and haughty person behind the counter stiffened his spinal column, and in loud and commanding tones said:

"John, meringue glace!"

One of the menials outside the counter sped on the errand with lightning-like rapidity, and after apparently soaking the delicacy returned with it. On close examination by the customer it was found that numerous small red ants were racing over it. He mentioned the fact to the waiter.

"What," he exclaimed in a horrified tone, "ants? Dear, dear!" Then he called again: "John, John, come here. Look at this! Get a meringue glace without ants!"

"What?" said John in a dazed way, while every man in the room turned his head and snickered.

"Get a meringue glace without ants," repeated the grand and haughty one, with emphasis, "and hurry up about it too."

So John removed the small convention of insects and soon returned with a meringue glace "without ants."—New York Tribune.

Anticipated.

Lord Chesterfield, losing one day asked by Sir Thomas Robinson, familiarly known as "Long Sir Thomas," to write some verses upon him, produced the epigram:

Unlike my subject, now shall be my song.
It shall be witty, and it shan't be long.

The individual was soon turned into a hare and made himself very troublesome to the Duke of Newcastle, continually calling on the minister, and when told that his grace was gone out he would wait to be admitted to look at the clock, or to play with the monkey, in the hope of seeing the duke. But one day the porter, without waiting for what he had to say, dismissed him with these words, "Sir, his grace has gone out, the clock stands and the monkey is dead."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Foreign News From Afar.

By way of a London paper it is learned that an American woman has lately received what must be termed the most original of wedding presents. It is a musical dinner service, of which each plate begins to play a tune when put upon the table. The soup plates are accredited with marches as suiting the temper of the guests at that moment of solemnity, but as dinner progresses and the wine and cordials do their enlivening work the harmonies brighten accordingly till at dessert the covers are ringing out the maddest of polkas and galops.

He Kept Loce.

"Yes, sir," said the clerk briskly, "we have lace of all kinds. Would you like to ask valenciennes or point lace?"

"It's a shoelace I want," explained the customer.—Detroit Free Press.

A CONVENTION OF MOTHERS.

It Decides That a Boy Is More of an Animal Than a Girl.

MRS. J. N. CROUSE.

Seven hundred women recently held a national convention of mothers in Chicago to discuss matters pertaining to the problem of teaching the young idea how to shoot and were so well pleased with the results of their deliberations that they decided to meet annually hereafter and exchange views. The convocation was held pursuant to a call issued by the Chicago Kindergarten college and was presided over by Mrs. J. N. Crouse, president of the Kindergarten association. Almost every state of the union and several territories were represented. The range of subjects discussed was wide and included about everything from the subtle effects of prenatal influences to the baby mind to the deleterious effects of candy between meals upon the baby stomach.

One doting mamma created a sensation by declaring that she put her baby in bed at night, but the sensation died out when she explained that the bag was simply used for the purpose of preventing the youngster from kicking off his clothes and acquiring a bad attack of the ever musical colic. Another mother said that her 5-year-old boy had broken up short everything in the house except the kitchen range, which he was still at work on, and she wanted to know if any girl could be such a "terror" as that boy. "Or is any more of an animal than a girl?" she asked.

As there were 700 women and only about a dozen sacred men in the hall, the convocation found no difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that not only hope of it, but hope of from 0 to 60, no somehow "nearer to primitive nature" than are girls and women.

Dr. Norman Bridge caused a flutter in motherly hearts by declaring the somewhat iconoclastic doctrine that fruit was not good for growing children and that candy was better. Dr. W. W. Jaggard, a specialist in gynecology, also made an interesting statement that it was impossible for a woman to influence the character and appearance of her child before birth, save by paying attention to hygienic rules. Among the interested spectators at the convention were several babies who attempted to informally address the meeting now and then, but were either promptly silenced or carried from the hall.

WAS WITH OLD TECUMSEH.

Gallant Record of President Dodge of the Army of the Tennessee.

General Grenville M. Dodge, who was recently re-elected president of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, has a wide reputation as a gallant soldier and capable railroad engineer. He is a native of Danvers, Mass., and is 63 years old. In 1850 he was graduated from a military academy in Norwich, Vt., and a year later began a promising career as a railroad surveyor. When the civil war began, the governor of Iowa sent him to Washington to obtain arms for state troops, and on June 17 of that year he became colonel of the Fourth Iowa regiment, which he had raised.

He served in Missouri under General Fremont, and early in 1862 opened General Curtis' Arkansas campaign. He commanded a brigade at the battle of Pea Ridge, where three horses were shot under him in the thick of the fight. He was severely wounded in the side, but continued directing the movements of his men until the final rout of the enemy. For his bravery he was made brigadier general of volunteers. In June, 1862, while in command of the district of the Mississippi, he superintended the reconstruction of the Mississippi and Ohio railroad. He was one of the first men to organize regiments of colored troops, and during the Vicksburg campaign he made frequent raids into the enemy's country and indirectly protected the flanks of both Grant and Sherman.

General Grant had a very high opinion of his services and placed his name at the head of his list of officers recommended for promotion. Brave and meritorious conduct at the battles of Sugar Creek and Resaca caused his promotion to major general in June, 1864. In Sherman's Georgia campaign Dodge led the Sixteenth corps, and at Atlanta July 22, backed by 11 regiments, he with the attack of General Cleburn's military corps. On Aug. 19, at the siege of Atlanta, he was so severely wounded that he was incapacitated for service. In December he succeeded Rosecrans as commander of the department of Missouri. In 1866 he left the army, and the Union Pacific railroad was built under his supervision. He served one term in congress and succeeded General Logan as president of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee when Sherman died.

Alaska has a newspaper which is published but once a year.

MAN EATERS OF THE PACIFIC.

Sharks That Are the Dread of the California Fishermen.

The true man eater shark as taken on the Pacific coast is known only as a man eater. The shovel nosed sharks are sand sharks, too cowardly to attack even a yellow dog. The 34 foot shark captured by some fishermen of the true man eater variety (Carcharodon carcharias) seemed to have enough and escape enough to attack anything within its reach. This monster's mouth was wide, the teeth long and sharp, with an inward incline. The stomach would hold a full grown man easily and a good deal besides. The fish became entangled in a net off Point Loma. Two boats attacked the vicious creature and finally succeeded in punching an iron into its vitals. The side of one boat was stoved in by a blow forcible enough to knock one fisherman overboard.

These sharks have been known to attack a small boat, upset it and eat the fisherman. A man eater over 42 feet long has been reported below San Diego. The natives are said to live in fear of this awful fish, which already has the record of having eaten six men. It has been shot frequently, but the bullets have been shot harmlessly with blood. Yet the shark still lives. The tiger shark is as ferocious as the man eater. Another large shark hereabouts is the basking shark. It is taken measuring 15 to 40 feet in length. The skin of one 33 foot long is at Stanford University museum. This skin alone weighs over 1,500 pounds, while the shark's liver produced 185 gallons of oil. These sharks, however, are sluggish, lazy and do not bite people. Their gill rakers are on the whale model. When entangled in a net, they frequently suffocate, as the net restricts the gills.

California fishermen do not consider five foot sharks of much account when from San Diego wharves black sea bass are caught up to eighty pounds in weight, ing 800 to 900 pounds. Such fish are common. They are taken on shark hooks and clothesline. When hooked, the fish is allowed to swim about the bay towing a two inch plank. When he is exhausted, the line is hauled in and the fish killed with an ax.—New York Times.

THE HUMAN LEG.

Scientific Prediction That It Will Deteriorate Greatly in Future Generations.

Our Paris correspondent writes: A French caricaturist has been showing us what posterity will come to in a few generations. The future "veloce man" is from the hips up like the definition of a line—length, without breadth. Below the belt he is swollen out with hard flesh and muscles, and the calves are monstrously big. Professor Yung of the Geneva university, on the other hand, believes that the time is coming when human beings will have no legs to speak of. What with cycling, the great end of civilization now seems to be to enable us to move about without using feet and legs. It is fast getting on to electrical hackney coaches and wheeled balloons. The tendency is to throw all the muscular activity into the hands and arms. Professor Yung believes that the future human creature will have the merest survivals of nether limbs and arms of great length.

Teeth will probably be dwarfed also by the constant use of soft foods that need not be chewed, but as the march of intellect will increase in pace the brain will develop. Of course the standards of beauty with these anatomical modifications will alter. When they do, a person with a set of teeth such as would now excite the admiration of a horse would excite almost seem a beast of prey.—London News.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } In Probate Court.
COUNTY OF POLK. } ss. Special Session.
In the matter of the estate of Oliver O. Bonea, deceased.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, or the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially the greater grass and the electrical structive department of science, and is every where marked as the source and the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus connecting the latter with the vitality of the brain.

Any disease or weakness of the organs is sure their health. The gastrointestinal organs, as shown here, may be said to be the source of the nerve force which is supplied by the cutting nerve system. Whenever the nerve force is lost the body becomes nervous, and the digestive organs fail to perform their functions properly, thus terminating in the loss of vitality, which causes the whole system to suffer. Under the numerous illnesses which undermine the health, the nervous system suffers the most, and the first symptom of which is a loss of appetite, which if neglected, soon results in indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, nervousness, sleeplessness, etc., with the following train of symptoms: Loss of memory, confusion of ideas, dizziness, specks before the eyes, weak back, kidneys, nervousness, sleeplessness

If you haven't got those storm window sup yet, why haven't you?

M. R. Brown was able to be out on Monday for the first time since his accident.

F. L. Kermott is putting his drug store in elegant shape with paper and paint.

Our weather prophets all predict a mild winter. Everybody hopes they are onto their job this time.

You need the JOURNAL, we need your influence. Call in and see what inducements we can offer you.

Landlord Westerberg is having the sewer in Main street extended so as to accommodate the Scandinavian house.

Wheat opened this week at 47—better than for some time. No prospect of its reaching the last year's notch, however.

Will Hlumelsbach brought in a load of dressed hogs to George Vine last week. Says pork beats wheat raising this year.

Harris & Son have removed the old reading room building from the street upon a lot east of the First National Bank.

Thomas and Albert Harris left on Tuesday evening for a business trip to Chicago. Expect to be away till the 20th of the month.

Prof. Strawbridge left for St. Paul on Monday evening, intending to return to Ada in time for court which began on Wednesday morning.

J. M. Palmer and wife drove down from Angus on Thursday and remained over night with friends, returning home on Friday afternoon.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

Robert Nesbit, one of the leading Murrais farmers was in the city last week chatting with friends.

The small boy did not skate on the river on election day this year. At this rate it will be some time la December before he can.

"This is corded pork" said Jon Winfield as our reporter gazed upon a nice lot of hogs that had just come to Geo. Vine's market last week.

The sons of Vera are getting up a grand ball for Thanksgiving evening at the hall. The boys always have a good time when they set out for it.

Wm. R. Poff and Miss Emma Fessenden, of Perdie, were married on Tuesday at the Commercial house parlors, Rev. L. W. Squier officiating.

E. E. Abbott was in from Grove Park on Friday and dropped into our den for a chat. Thinks the division sentiment in that town is about done up.

C. H. Warren, of the Great Northern road was in the city on Wednesday on business with the council in connection with the Sixth street crossing.

Postmaster F. E. LePage rejoices in the arrival of a little daughter at his house on Saturday. He don't care a continental now whether school keeps or not.

The last few days have made a wonderful change in the appearance of the new hotel. It now looks as though the brick work would be completed by freeze-up.

Nup Christianson was down from Melntosh last week chatting with old friends. Mr. C. is of the opinion that the Populist craze is on on its last legs up that way.

Judge Benson went over to East Grand Forks last week to examine one John Gay on a charge of insanity. The man was found insane and committed to Fergus Falls.

The first wood was slow to get to voting on Tuesday morning owing to having to wait for clerks to be procured, those who had been engaged failing to show up.

John Gibonson came down from Euclid last week with some of the finest hogs we have seen this season. Hogs are selling in this market at five and a half cents dressed.

Chas. J. Peterson was down from Wylie last week for the ballots for Black River, for which town he is the clerk. He said that in his opinion the majority favored no division.

Our weather prophet is predicting a reasonably mild month for November based upon the fact that he believes that it will not be cold and stormy, if it should happen to be warm and pleasant.

The nimble six-pence is better than the slow shilling. Cash goes a great ways in these Democratic times. Call and see what you can do on the JOURNAL or write us for terms. We will make it worth your while.

Open weather holds out pretty well this fall, but every morning for a few days past the ground has frozen a half an inch or so, which indicates that the freeze up is not very far away.

The ladies in the city were very much interested in the election, so far as school superintendent was concerned and all day rigs were running bringing in the ladies to vote. The large majority of them cast their vote for Miss Hauseck.

N. D. Barker, advance agent for Le Grave's stereopticon show was in from Grand Forks on Monday to arrange for the show here. It will appear some date this month. They were in G. F. Tuesday night and finished the election returns as received.

At last the long-drawn agony, incident to a political campaign is over and business can now resume its normal conditions. The menace to the business interests being laid at rest we may reasonably hope for a reasonable degree of peace and prosperity.

Lots of hard work has been done by anxious candidates this fall and "what shall the harvest be?" That is now the all-absorbing question. And now the Dems and Pops will spend a few days figuring out how it all happened—and then subside.

Ye olde tolkes concerne at ye Methodist meeting house, situated a stone's throw from ye reare doors of ye JOURNAL printynge house no ye 27th dale of ye month of Novesuber, (which is Tuesday.) Alle ye people of ye city be invited. [29-32]

It is the almost universal opinion of every farmer we meet that very much less wheat will be raised next year than ever before. Oats, barley, corn, potatoes and flax will be substituted wherever the seed can be procured. This will be one drawback, especially as regards flax.

Nels K. Anderson was in from St. Hilaire last week. Mr. Anderson said in relation to the withdrawal from the race for county commissioner, that his neighbors and friends all thought that with two in the field the locality would be liable to lose, so he agreed with Mr. Norland to draw cuts to decide which should run and Mr. Norland won. The people up that way naturally would like a representative on the board once in a while and would stand no show of electing a man if they had two candidates.

Thor. Huldersen was in from Woodside on Wednesday. He says that for a year or so he has been about the only Republican in that town but this fall he sees quite a change and he thinks that by next election most of the boys will be in line again. The JOURNAL trusts that he is right about that.

An enthusiastic Owen man encountered James Greenhalgh, Jr., one day last week and offered to bet the old man $50 that Owen would be elected, but he tackled the wrong lad as the old man called his bluff quietly produced the stuff and asked him to cover it. The Owen man wilted and slipped out in a hurry.

Election day was one of the most quiet of the kind ever held in the city and yet a deep undercurrent was noticeable everywhere and the judges and clerks were all kept busy at their recording the votes. The present system, while it may be a "safeguard to the liberties of the people," is a cumbersome nuisance. It takes a pretty intelligent man to vote correctly.

Never before since the county was settled was the fall so propitious for work as this and yet, for all that there is still some plowing to be done. Very little thing has been lost on account of rain, nothing near like as much as usual, and it would seem as though every acre to be plowed this fall ought to have been plowed before this.

Tim Byrne's speech; at the opera house last Wednesday evening was well attended and everybody was disappointed only in one thing which was the fact that owing to a telegram announcing illness in his family Mr. Byrnes had to leave for home on the 8:40 train. Tim has a way peculiarly his own which always catches the crowd.

One of the rare treats in store for Crookston people is an old folk's concert, to be given Tuesday evening Nov. 27th, under the auspices of the Epworth League. A large chorus under the direction of Mrs. Vandamum will be the leading feature of the concert, although arrangements are being made for solo numbers and other special features. The complete program will appear later.

The brick work on the new hotel now rushed along at a rapid rate during the latter part of last week, and so far this week, and with good weather that part of the structure will soon be completed. The building has now reached that stage where the work done upon it shows up to better advantage than it did in the beginning. It looks now as though it might be enclosed before the ground freezes.

Joe Winfield had the misfortune to hurt his hand badly one day last week. While handling a heavy quarter of Montana beef it fell, lacerating his hand badly and bruising it. Joe regards the accident quite severely as he has an accident policy and he could use the other hand to mark his ballot. Geo. Vine intended to have gone to Perdie that day but owing to Joe's accident he was obliged to put it off.

As soon as possible after the smoke of the recent battle of ballots has cleared away we shall resume our usual winter serial stories. These stories are selected with the greatest care and are worthy a place at every fireside to help while away the long winter evenings. Now is the time to subscribe so as to commence at the beginning of the story. JOURNAL readers have always enjoyed these treats and we can promise them some rich treats in the future.

As a forecast for the future the JOURNAL has it on unpublished authority that the big saw mill that everybody last summer said would be silent next, will run as big a season's cut as it did this. Further it is that Mr. Walker will put crews into the woods this winter and get out a large quantity of logs, and it is said to be the intention to saw them at this mill. This will be another industry that will help to break the force of Democratic "prosperity" which would be missed should it be shut down for the season.

Nels M. Johnson and daughter came down from St. Hilaire last week with a load of produce to sell. Mr. Johnson says that the wheat crop was not extra heavy this year, but he had a fairly good vegetable crop. He brought along some potatoes, turnips, cabbage, citrons, butter and eggs and some fine dressed poultry, and his load brought him far more than the biggest load of wheat he could have hauled would have done. He is satisfied that the all wheat idea is the wrong policy and will pursue a diversified farming hereafter. He brought along a fine Jersey heifer to sell in this market, and has plenty more at home fully as good. He has a nice new-milch Holstein cow at home that he would sell, providing he can get in cash what she is really worth. Mr. Johnson is using oxen for team force and intends to until he is able to buy a team of horses for cash, then he will get a team, and will be the owner of them.

O. Simmons, a farmer living seven or eight miles south, in the town of Russia, dropped in on Friday and said. "I have taken the JOURNAL for over twelve years and like it for its fairness and its fidelity to the interests of Polk county and its readers generally. I always feel that I can rely upon what I see in it, for I believe that you have the interests of the county at heart and will advocate nothing that you are not fully convinced is to our best interests. I think the JOURNAL is sound to the core, politically, and always true to the friends of the people.

Chris Houston informs the JOURNAL that he shall endeavor to raise sheep all the same, though he did meet with a severe loss recently by dogs. He will, however, be prepared to furnish his sheep where protection there is in a good gun until the law provides a better and he says that if any of our readers happen to be the owners of any hird dogs with sheep-killing propensities it would be well enough for them to watch out for them, as he is bound to protect his sheep if he has to kill every dog in the county to do it. No one can blame him for desiring to protect his sheep.

And now you can write to your friends back east and tell them that this country is all right. Tell them that there is no better place in the United States to-day to make money than this same portion of the Red River Valley. Tell them that our people are now very much cheaper than they will be in the near future or will be again in years. Tell them that there is no soil in the United States that equals ours for resisting the drouth—a total failure from that cause being an entirely unknown quantity here. Tell them to sell out down there, bundle up and come on, come to a country where they can realize something from their labors.

During the summer and fall pork has been somewhat scarce in this market, but is now beginning to come in quite freely, and finds a ready sale at 5½ cents per pound, dressed. Once in a while you see a load of corn fed pork brought in and now and then a load of wheat fattened hogs show up in good form, but the most of it seems to be fattened on barley. Wheat makes by far the cheapest feed this fall and those who have used it pronounce it fully as good as corn and makes nice, sweet, tender pork. All who have pork to sell, agree however, that they are making more money on it than they did raising wheat alone.

Friday evening of last week an elocutionary and musical entertainment was given for the benefit of the library of the Crookston Normal School and Business College, in the college hall. A number of well rendered selections were given. Miss Gjertson did herself credit in the "Cooking Lesson," for which she was roundly encored. Miss Helga Holmboe, of Grand Forks, also did good advantage in "The Tree." Miss Holmboe has a well-trained voice of more than ordinary capacity. Mr. Sebastead is master of the very difficult instrument, the violin and was encored to the echo. Altogether a very pleasant evening was spent, and the actors of the evening may rest assured of a larger audience when they again appear before the Crookston public.

The Review of Reviews for November, in its editorial department ("The Progress of the world") has some suggestive paragraphs bearing on the present attempts at "municipal housecleaning" in the great cities of New York, Chicago and San Francisco, and takes the occasion to emphasize certain lessons to be learned from European municipal experience. In speaking of Glasgow's system of street cars, owned and operated by the municipality, the editor points out that this responsibility was not undertaken by the city until the municipal government had been tested with many large enterprises which it had shown its fitness to control and operate successfully; it is now managing its street car service, says the Review, as successfully as the best of our American cities manage their fire departments.

An Indian Story.

Especially if it be a good one and full of useful information is always interesting.

I have a book beautifully illustrated, that tells much about the Indians and the northwest, and the miraculous escape of one man from them in the early days.

It tells also of the Yellowstone Park, the greatest wonder of the natural world.

For only 6 cents in stamps and your address, I will send you the book.

Beware of Ointments For Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucuous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, contains no mercury and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.

The Late Unpleasantness.

THE DAY BEFORE ELECTION.

I am feeling out of sight, sweet Marie,
We will win the coming fight, you hear me,
All the gesture that mean
Say we'll knock those fellows out,
For to-morrow what we shout, sweet Marie,
Is the day after election day.
On next week we'll win the race,
And upon election day
Things will surely come our way,
That's why I am so gay, sweet Marie.

Come to me, G. O. P., G. O. P., come to me,
For I have a little ax, love, for thee;
When you hear the chopping
I will swipe you on the nose,
And I'll smile upon the wreck, sweet Marie.

THE DAY AFTER ELECTION.

In the morn when I awoke, sweet Marie,
Sure my heart was fairly broke, love, to see
The number swept from there to here,
Forty states and maybe more:
And my whiskers off I tore, sweet Marie;
Minnesota, she's a "maybe," sweet Marie.
For the work I've had for hours, sweet Marie,
Three cheers and all that yours
Were cleverly in the grave,
And they lifted me in the mess, sweet Marie.

Murder me, G. O. P., G. O. P., slaughter me;
Take my life, you have the rest, I'll agree.
With the men who make statistics,
Full of warblers on the wing,
Well, I wouldn't do a thing, sweet Marie.
—Michael Joseph Donnelly.

Reads Funny Now.

In the light of what happened on Tuesday, Nov. 6th, the following item pleasantry from the Morning Call of Nov. 2d reads rather funny: "The Republicans are on the run. On next Tuesday they will be completely routed in the state of Minnesota if the Democrats but take advantage of their opportunities and follow up the demoralized and scattered battalions. A panic has stricken the army that has hitherto known only success, and flying, set aside their guns and all else that encumbers, its members are madly fleeing for safety to whatever refuge offers. Thousands are seeking refuge in the Populist camp, and many thousands of citizens are endeavoring to make terms of peace with the militant democracy."

A Persistent Advertiser.

Minneapolis Evening Journal: Dr. H. T. Helmbold who died a few days ago in New Jersey, in the state insane asylum, has not been as conspicuous before the public as he was fifteen or twenty years ago. As an advertiser Helmbold surpassed the experience of his generation when he was in business. By what means liberally he amassed a great fortune on which he retired some years ago. He believed in advertising first, last and all time, in fair weather and foul, in flush times and in times of depression. No human being could escape the appeal of his advertisements. His patent medicines were known and read of all men and the newspapers of the country and of the world were familiar with his check if they had any kind of circulation.

Helmbold spent several hundred thousand dollars a year advertising throughout the world and got back in receipts a good many times more than he paid out.

Helmbold's lavishly enterprising enough to put forth in judicious advertising. And he knew what he would never have been known. He went boldly in and put his money in papers he knew many people would read and he got his reward. Helmbold was a type of the successful advertiser. If a man has anything to sell and wants people to know it, if he is wide awake, he will select the most widely-circulated newspaper he can find in his town and let the public know what he wants. The people who advertise get the business. Helmbold found that out.

Populism, Pure and Simple.

Speaking of the basis of Populism the Thief River Falls Press says: Free coinage of silver is the hope that holds Populism together—the golden fleece of the future, and the charmed amulet that will remove the very interest clause from a farmer's mortgage. It has failed to convince even choice in its words, enough to omit the word "free," that would be some concession to decent honesty. But something for nothing is what is wanted, and so something for nothing is promised. And this is Populism rampant—the crazy notion that a whole people can engage in the nefarious business of cheating themselves by issuing living from their governments mints.

"Our Populist, in the haste and greed for the arrival of the millenium and a more satisfactory place at the public crib, indulges in 'practical' politics to an extent that would delight the heart of the worst corruptionist. They fuse with the Democrats in the south, as they did and the west, in perfect abandon, and in face of the fact that to a Democratic president is due the repeal of the Sherman law, the law that more nearly approached their petition than any they can ever hope to see passed in the future, but that is nothing to them. Their leaders have so infatuated them with the nobility of disinterest that the methods of a common jockey are plain dealing in comparison with the practical 'deals' of the Populistic party. When the leaders are so crooked in their manipulation of the party machinery, to what depth in the minds of their victims may we not expect their example to sink?"

Canadian Excursion.

BUSINESS WILL BOOM

Such is the Opinion of Leading Men on the Result of the Election.

Newspaper Comments on the Great Landslide.

Senator Davis said, among other things: "This election rejects the Democratic principle of tariff legislation, called by whatever name it may be, whether free trade or tariff for revenue only. It retains as the corner stone of American economics the Republican principle of protection. I do not mean that it vindicates any particular measure in its details. It simply decrees the principle. It assures enterprise and capital that they need not fear the threats of President Cleveland and Mr. Wilson that the 'perfidious' and 'dishonorable' tariff act of the present congress is but the beginning of legislation to lower the bulwarks of protection. It settles this: that business can safely adjust itself, as far as practicable, to existing conditions, in the assurance that those conditions will not be made worse than they are. But, on the contrary, may be improved by judicious legislation for previous objects upon those specific points where it is needed."

Albert Koerner, the new state treasurer, expects to visit New York. Treasurer Koerner for his firm, of which he sold: "If the election in this state had gone the other way, there would have been an occasion for going, but now we can do some business, and it is worth our while to begin operations at once."

Judge Flandrean, of St. Paul, a staunch Democrat, rejoices with the Republicans in the overthrow of Populism. Said the Judge: "While the result looks like an overwhelming Republican victory, and that party has strong reason to rejoice over it, still the Democracy has equal cause for congratulation, and I might say more so. We since equality with the Republicans the benefit of the absolute destruction of the Populist party by defeat and followers. What was a standing menace to the credit and business prosperity of our state, as well as to the stability of our institutions, is the preservation of law, order, and the protection of property and liberty. We also divide the benefits resulting from the assurance of a sound currency for our country in the downfall of the silver heresy, which subject the Democracy and the Republicans have not shared."

D. F. Reese, the newly elected clerk of the supreme court, feels that Republicanism has been endorsed, and expresses himself thus: "It shows what the country thinks of the Democratic administration, and it also shows what it thinks of the Republican party and its policy. That party governed the country when it was in power, and the Republican have good reason to feel proud of the confidence expressed at the polls on Tuesday."

Ex-President Harrison is happy, and expressed himself in the following: "A vast minority of our people believe in a protective tariff—never so many as to-day—and a majority do not. They differ as to rates and schedules, but not as to principle. They believe in reciprocity, and the method of getting foreign markets. They believe in a progressive and American foreign policy.

Anent the landslide the Minneapolis Evening Journal says: "While Gov. Waite and the Populists attribute their wiping out to the machinations of the "money power," we the time that Wall street bribed several millions of voters with money to vote the Republican ticket (and that is equivalent to saying that the Pops are all bribable), and Democratic orators affirm that the upheaval was a revenge to the Democratic congress for not adopting the English tariff system, the fact remains that the voters themselves say they acted on their conviction that the Democratic party fails in its ability to govern this great nation, as President Cleveland says, by assertion, and runs for nearly two years brooded down on the land like a great area of low barometer, inducing acute disturbance. The work of Tuesday was due to a determined opposition of the party in power, whose advent to control brought disaster and loss of confidence, and of the Populist programme of debased currency, free trade, the despotism of extreme state socialism. Both are repudiated. And it is useless for Democratic leaders to try to assign any other causes than that of the patriotism and common sense of the voters, who want their country governed on a program of reason and sound business principles, and not made the arena of feather-headed promulgators of the delirious theories of impractical visionaries."

The St. Paul Dispatch comments thus: "When one reflects upon the magnificent record of loyalty to Republican principles which has been enjoyed by the state of Minnesota for many years, not as great as it might be at the phenomenal results of Tuesday in this state. A merestatement of those results shows their remarkable character. The state has been carried by a average majority of 50,000 and it has been carried, not only against each of the two parties in opposition, but against the forces of the two combined. The entire state ticket, seven congressmen and the entire Republican congressional ticket by decisive majorities represent all that could be done under any circumstances, no fewer favorable. The pre-eminence of Minnesota in the national councils of the Republican party has been attested in such a way as to render the state a mighty factor in future national contests. Unwavering in the devotion of its people, to the principles and policies of the Republican party, it has constituted the very cornerstone of Republican loyalty in the Northwest. Its example in the past has been decisive in the present, and the future holds for it no rank as a Republican state which it has not won in the vanguard of the fight for the party's ascendancy."

The Wadena County Journal says: "Now that the campaign is over, let us settle down to the business of saving the country. In the only effective way there is of saving it; by living honestly, soberly, industriously. Move depends on the people than on the officers elected. The single, intelligent, hard-working citizen, who is not warped out of the line of duty by public clamor, is a most admirable person. He is the man who did the right thing last Tuesday, by voting his honest convictions, and he was indeed a wise saying of Abraham Lincoln, 'The Lord must think a great deal of the common people. He has made so many of them.'"

The Minneapolis Evening Journal: "Texas Bixby is right in his belief that the Democrats who voted for Nelson. They deserve all praise; but, of course, it was really a matter of self preservation, after all. About 141,000 people in this state preferred standing on solid rock to walking on rotten planks over an abyss."

Bradstreet's financial review of Saturday last says: "Chicago and St. Louis manufacturers and business men already report evidences of a tendency on the part of jobbers and buyers to purchase for future delivery, and from such iron centers as Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Cincinnati relatively greater steadiness is reported in quotations for the better brands of iron and steel than for some months past.

With reference to the effect on Wall street, New York, the same report says: "The market has developed a considerably degree of speculative strength on the result of the election. The prevalent feeling in New York is not only that the business interests will be spared all the disturbing influence of tariff agitation for several years at least, but that financial and currency problems will be more likely to be treated with conservatism. At the same time the results in states like Colorado and Kansas will, it is thought, have a favorable influence, not only on investors here, but will aid in settling the consilience of foreign capital in our securities."

The Pine Tree Transcript: The certainty of a long era of Republican control in the nation will result in a rapid restoration of commercial confidence, and an increase in industrial activity. The Wilson bill will injure many lines of manufacture and agriculture as long as it remains in force, but business and labor will do the best it can, with the assurance that as soon as public sentiment can effect the laws a better law will be passed. Protection will then be granted northern interests, as well as southern ones, and the United States will again enjoy the prosperity it did previous to the Democratic victory of 1892. The great work of the Republican party is to provide labor at good wages for all who choose to work, and safety for capital that desires investment. These conditions will improve the market for farm products, and a better market means better prices. Democratic control has decreased employment as well as wages in the United States, and the necessary destruction of the American market for farm products has lessened the farming classes. A little actual experience has done more to convince the voters of the error of the Democratic tariff policy than all the warnings and claims of the Republican party could. Not in the generation will the laboring men and farmers again be deceived by the false promises of the Democratic party.

THE WAY THEY VOTED

Summary of Election Returns in the Various States of the Union.

UNPRECEDENTED MAJORITIES

In New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Following is a summary of the results of the election of Nov. 6 in various states. As was indicated by the early returns nearly everything went Republican by unprecedented majorities.

Minnesota elected Nelson, Rep., by 60,000 plurality. The legislature and all the congressmen are Republican.

North Dakota figures so far received indicate the election of Allin and the entire Republican ticket by about 4,000 plurality. Johnson is returned to congress by about the same figure.

South Dakota Republicans elected both congressmen and a big majority of the legislature. Their state ticket has over 15,000 plurality.

Republicans made a clean sweep of congressmen in Iowa, and their plurality on the state ticket is not far from 80,000.

Wisconsin joined the triumphal procession with a plurality of about 60,000. The legislature and all congressmen are Republicans.

The state of Colorado comes up with a plurality of about 20,000 for the Republican ticket.

In Montana, Wyoming and Washington Republicans took everything.

Nevada is very close with probabilities favoring the success of the silver party by a few hundred votes.

California elected a Democratic governor. The remainder of the offices are divided.

West Virginia, the home of William L. Wilson, is solidly Republican, and has elected Stephen B. Elkins to the United States senate.

Ohio's Republican majority was over 150,000. The Democrats elect 2 out of 21 congressmen.

The result in Indiana is extraordinary, the Republicans electing every congressman and carrying the state by about 25,000.

In Pennsylvania the Democrats elect 2 congressmen out of 28. The Republican state ticket has a plurality of over 200,000.

New York gives Levi P. Morton 150,000 plurality, and Strong, Rep., is elected mayor of New York city by from 45,000.

All the New England states went Republican by increased majorities. New Jersey was also captured by the G. O. P. with the possible exception of one congressman.

Delaware and Missouri, two of the states credited to the solid South, also helped the Democracy, the former being completely captured by the Republicans.

Democrats got nothing in Michigan, the Republican plurality reaching about 100,000.

Tennessee, another state classed with the solid South, elected a Republican governor and at least four congressmen. The legislature is in doubt.

Kentucky returned six Republican congressmen, with one, (Owens' district) still in doubt.

Idaho was Republican by 2,000.

New Mexico, Oklahoma and Arizona went Republican.

Oregon elected two Republican congressmen.

Alabama, Texas, Mississippi, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana and Arkansas, the main Democratic, but the Republicans and Pops get a few congressmen.

Kansas, the hotbed of the Populism, returned all Republican congressmen and elected the entire state ticket.

The next congress will consist of about 230 Republicans, 98 Democrats, 1 silverite and 7 populists.

The senate will contain 44 Republicans and 44 Democrats and Populists.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The Keystone State Rolls Up a Republican Majority of 212,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—Returns from the entire state give Hastings an estimated plurality of 212,664, the greatest Republican majority ever achieved in this state. In 1892 Harrison's plurality in Pennsylvania was 66,747 and Hastings' gain over this vote is 145,917. Complete returns will undoubtedly swell Hastings plurality above 240,000, as many of the correspondents were very conservative in their estimates. Not one county in the state elected a Democratic gain. Returns were necessarily late because of the heavy vote polled.

WILSON DEFEATED.

The Author of the Tariff Bill Undoubtedly Beaten.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 8.—Soon after returns began to come in the Democrats conceded the First and Fourth districts to the Republican candidates—Dovener and Howard. Later advices from Logan county, the Democratic stronghold, showed such a falling off in the Democratic vote as Alderson, Democratic candidate for congress, barely carried the county. The Democratic managers then conceded the election of Huling, Republican, in the Third district by a decisive plurality. Although doubt has been expressed as to the result in the Second district, yet the defeat of Wilson was not conceded by the Democratic managers till noon. When it was learned that Marion county, a Democratic stronghold, had been carried by Dayton by 400 over Wilson, the latter's defeat was conceded, but no figures were given. The Republicans claim that Dayton's plurality over Wilson will be not less than 1,000, and if the basis of gains continues will be over 2,000. Returns from counties in Wilson's district show that the Republicans did not cast much more than their usual vote, while the Democratic vote falls short on account of those not voting.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 7.—All but one precinct in Monongahela county has been heard from. Dayton's majority over Wilson is 1,030, a Republican gain of 3,000.

MISSOURI LEGISLATURE REPUBLICAN

This Fact Is Conceded by Governor Stone—Big Republican Gains.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 7.—A special to The Daily News from Jefferson City says that Governor Stone concedes the legislature to the Republicans.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 7.—If the returns which have been coming in late in the afternoon to the state Democratic committee from the country districts continue to the end, Missouri has gone Republican. The Democratic state central committee announces that it is satisfied that eight congressmen have been lost, that the legislature is so close as to be practically lost, and that the Republican candidates for supreme court judge, superintendent of public schools and railroad commissioner may be elected.

Bland Defeated.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 7.—A special to the News from Jefferson City says that Dick Bland is defeated for congress in the Eighth district.

GOTHAM'S OFFICIAL VOTE.

Strong's Plurality Over the Tammany Man 44,906.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The official vote of New York city for mayor is as follows: William L. Strong, Rep., 155,015; Hugh J. Grant, Tammany, 108,778; Lucien Sanial, Socialist, 7,161; James McCullen, Pop., 298; George Gastlen, Pro., 986. Strong's plurality, 44,203.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Complete returns in New York state show the vote for governor as follows: Morton, 668,-712; Hill, 514,873; Morton's plurality, 155,845.

THE PLURALITY GROWING.

Republicans Get Ohio by Over 150,000. Also Nineteen Congressmen.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 8.—More complete returns indicate that the Republican plurality for secretary of state will exceed 150,000. The nineteen Ohio delegation in congress consists of 11 Democrats and 10 Republicans. The newly elected delegates consist of 19 Republicans and 2 Democrats. The Democrats also not concede the election of Song in the Third and Lay in the Fourth districts, their pluralities being less than 100.

ILLINOIS.

Republican Majority in the State Will Be Close to 100,000.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—The returns show continued gains for the Republican ticket. On the state ticket, headed by Hamlin for treasurer, the indications are a Republican plurality of close to 100,000.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Nov. 9.—Finis E. Downing of Virginia, Ills., was in the city and reports that he has lost the Sixteenth district to General John I. Rinaker by about 200 votes. He accepts his defeat philosophically and does not try to explain the landslide. This makes the congressional delegation from Illinois solidly Republican.

INDIANA.

Most Sweeping Victory Ever Won in the State.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 8.—Indiana elects a solid Republican delegation of 13 to congress. Many very conservative Republicans have a majority on joint ballot of 32.

BUTTE, MON., Nov. 10.—Lee Mantle, chairman of the Republican state committee, says: Hartman, Rep., is reelected to congress by 6,000 plurality, and that the legislature, which will elect two senators, will have a Republican majority of 20 on joint ballot.

NORTHWEST IN LINE

Entire Republican Ticket in Minnesota Elected by Good Majorities.

NORTH AND SOUTH DAKOTA,

Iowa and Wisconsin Have Also Piled Up a Big Republican Vote.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 9.—Unofficial returns from nearly every county in the state show Governor Nelson's plurality 60,000 and his majority over both candidates about 3,000. So far as heard from the vote stands: Nelson, 197,228; Owen, 70,611; Becker, 64,149. Later and more complete returns are expected to still further increase the Republican majority.

The congressional districts are solidly Republican. In the First James A. Tawney has a plurality of over 10,000, but the entire vote shows a falling off. In the Second has a plurality of about 14,000 and the returns not all in. In the Third Hextwelle pulls through with about 2,000 to spare, while in the Fourth and Fifth Kiefer and Fletcher lead by pluralities of 9,000 and 11,000 respectively. Towne's plurality in the Sixth is about 10,000 and Eddy's in the Seventh not much less.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 10.—Latest returns wipe out the five doubtful members of the state Minnesota house and senate, and put two of them, the senator in the Ninth district and one of the three members of the house from the Fifteenth, in the Republican column, and give the Populists the remaining three, a senator and two representatives from the Fiftieth. The membership of the two houses is, therefore, as follows:

Senate—Republicans, 46; Democrats, 3; Populists, 6. House—Republicans, 98; Democrats, 9; Populists, 11.

IOWA.

Republicans Made a Clean Sweep in Congressional Contest.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 8.—Late returns show that Republicans have made a clean sweep in the congressional fights, the successful candidates by districts being:

First—H. Clark, Rep.
Second—George M. Curtis, Rep.
Third—David B. Henderson, Rep.
Fourth—Thomas Updegraff, Rep.
Fifth—Robert C. Cousins, Rep.
Sixth—John P. Dolliver, Rep.
Seventh—John A. J. Hull, Rep.
Eighth—William F. Hepburn, Rep.
Ninth—A. L. Hager, Rep. General Weaver is the man defeated.
Tenth—T. Poll Dolliver, Rep.
Eleventh—George D. Perkins, Rep.
Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 9.—Full election returns from Iowa have more than kept up the Republican record. At midnight the Republican plurality on the state ticket promised to be 90,000.

MADE A CLEAN SWEEP.

Wisconsin Republicans Get the Entire Congressional Delegation.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 8.—Complete returns from 65 out of 70 counties in the state gives a Republican plurality of 54,620. This will be increased by the returns to come to between 60,000 and 65,000. The Republicans control the senate by seven majority, electing 20 senators out of 34 and having four holdovers out of 18. The assembly is Republican by 35 majority. The nine congressmen are all Republican, a gain of six. Sanderburg, Rep., defeats Barwig in the Second by 244.

This congressmen-elect by districts are:

First—H. A. Cooper, Rep.
Second—Edward Sanderburg, Rep.
Third—J. W. Babcock, Rep.
Fourth—Theodore Kutz, Rep.
Fifth—S. S. Barney, Rep.
Sixth—S. A. Cook, Rep.
Seventh—Michael Griffin, Rep.
Eighth—E. S. Minor, Rep.
Ninth—Alexander Stewart, Rep.
Tenth—J. J. Jenkins, Rep.

THE LEGISLATURE, TOO.

North Dakota Republicans Get Every-thing Again.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 9.—Chairman Robinson of the state central committee has received returns from nearly every precinct in the state. They give Allin, Rep., for governor, 6,000 plurality; Johnson, Rep., for congress, 2,000; Nichols, Briggs and Fancher, for treasurer, auditor and commissioner of insurance, 4,000, and balance of the Republican state ticket, 3,000, except Miss Bates, for superintendent of public instruction, who leads the entire ticket. Pembina, Walsh and Richland counties, heretofore Democratic strongholds, give Republican majorities. Legislature overwhelmingly Republican.

RICH'S GREAT RUN.

Michigan's Governor Has Over 90,000 Votes to Spare.

DETROIT, Nov. 8.—From the latest compilations of reports from the state it is apparent that Governor Rich's plurality will exceed 90,000. The pluralities on 12 congressmen-elect range from 2,800 to 11,200, the latter being about the amount of Congressman Burrows' plurality. The entire Republican congressional ticket was successful.

MINNESOTA ELECTION RETURNS.

Table Showing the Vote on Governor as Far as Received.

The returns in the state election in Minnesota are nearing completion on the vote for governor and associate justice of the supreme court. Governor Nelson's plurality has reached 26,800 and will pass the 30,000 mark. He now has a majority of 8,911 over all. The returns for associate justice show that Judge Collins has 46,820 majority over John W. Willis, and the indications are that 50,000 will be about Judge Collins' majority when the count is complete. Following are the returns as far as received:

NEXT SENATOR AND SPEAKER.

Both May Come From Southern Minnesota—Early Opening of the Contest.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 14.—Who will be speaker of the next house, and who will succeed Senator Washburn, are political questions pretty well asked in St. Paul and the state at large is interested.

Captain Van Sant of Winona has started on vigorously for the speakership. He has engaged quarters at the Windsor hotel and will be on the ground early to devote proper attention to his cause.

John L. Gibbs of Freeborn county has been speaker of the house before and wants the place again. He has also secured quarters at the Windsor and is in the field for business.

There will no other speakership candidates, but Van Sant and Gibbs are the first to announce themselves for the place. It seems likely that Southern Minnesota will have the speakership.

Next United States Senator.

The story is started that D. M. Sabin will be actively engaged in the senatorship contest, either as candidate or as supporter of some anti-Washburn man. Another story says the southern counties will unite on a senatorial candidate from that section, possibly Congressman Hosmer or McCleary may be the choice.

Anyhow, the senatorial contest will start early, in fact, it is started now, and there will be a hot fight before that six years' job in Washington is parceled out. Groups of political workers are gathered at the hotels every day, in earnest discussion. The advance work is well in hand. Senator Washburn will hold forth with his horse at the Windsor, and also Captain Van Sant and Mr. Gibbs, with their speakership contests. Secretary Berg will maintain bachelor quarters there, and Treasurer Koerner will also join the circle.

ARMY CHANGES.

Transfers to be Made on Account of the Retirement of General Howard.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Secretary Lamont is arranging the transfers among commanders of the army department due to the retirement of General Howard. At present the plan is to make the following changes: General Miles from Chicago to New York; General Merritt from San Francisco to Chicago; General Merritt from the Pacific coast to San Francisco; General Brooks from Omaha to Fort Vancouver; General Forsyth to be stationed at Omaha; General Cook is to remain at Denver; General Wheaton at San Antonio and General Otis at Vancouver Barracks. The only changes which might affect the programme depend upon the desires of General Brooks. He has been telegraphed to by the war department inquiring whether the change will be agreeable to him.

Only Three Changes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—As a result of the correspondence between the war department and the army department commanders, only three changes will be effected by the retirement of General Howard, it was found that some of the generals were not disposed to make a change from their present positions. The only changes therefore will be made are the following: General Miles will go to New York, General Roger to Chicago, and General Forsyth to San Francisco.

THAT BOND ISSUE.

New York Bankers Instil That It Has Been Agreed Upon.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—It is stated confidentially in Wall street that the government bond issue has been agreed upon. Secretary Carlisle, on the story goes, was informed Saturday night of the president's arrangement with New York bankers. To await congressional action would involve too much delay, without any guarantee of favorable results.

John A. Stewart, president of the United States Trust company, who visited President Cleveland in Washington last week, says the amount of the bond issue will be $50,000,000. The issue will be made probably within three days.

Prairie Farmer Has Returns From Every County in Corn States.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The Prairie Farmer says the total number reporting every county in the corn states make the average yield of shelled corn per acre a fraction above 25 bushels. The heavy acreage was planted this year and in the early parts of the season the indications favored a crop the largest ever grown. The midsummer drought in addition to the general damage to the crop resulted in the abandonment of 7,895,000 acres, leaving the acres actually harvested only 78,000,000 acres. This makes the total crop of the present year 1,437,000,000 bushels, including all quantities reported, but not including immature corn on the area cut on. This latter item has no recognized commercial value, but has a feeding value, and its use on the farm practically enlarges the crop to a small extent. The quality of the crop is poor.

Floods in England.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Throughout the south western part of England rivers are swollen, and the lower portions of the towns along their banks are flooded. Traffic on all the railroads in those districts is delayed, and many factories have been closed. In a number of cases bridges have been swept away by the floods.

SILENCED HIM.

Bank Robbers at Silvan Grove, Kan., Enact an Unusually Tragic Deed.

WOUNDED BY THE CASHIER,

His Brother Bandits Finish a Comrade in Most Deliberate Style.

SALINA, Kan., Nov. 14.—Three masked men held up the bank at Silvan Grove, Kan., 40 miles west of here, at noon and one of their number met death in an unusually tragic manner. He was shot by the cashier of the bank, John Galens, and when in a dying condition was perforated with bullets by his own comrades, to save themselves from exposure. The men rode into town on fast horses. They were finely mounted and heavily armed. Their masked faces and flying steeds attracted everybody's attention, but they wasted no time in getting to work. They pulled their horses up with a jerk in front of the bank, and, while one robber remained seated, holding the bridles of the other two horses, in guarding the entrance to the bank, his two companions entered. A citizen who was transacting business at the counter to throw up his hands. The cashier was ordered to turn over what money he had, and to do it double quick. He looked into the muzzles of both revolvers for a moment and then reluctantly complied. It was but a few minutes from the time the bandits turned their horses into the business street before they were again mounted and away with all the ready cash the bank had.

Quickly Complied With Their Command

The moment the robbers were out of the building the the cashier secured his gun, and rushing to the door, opened fire on them as they were galloping away. The bullet from the cashier's gun lodged in the back of one of the fleeing men. He staggered in his saddle for a moment, but nerving himself he kept his seat and galloped on. He was too badly wounded, however, to continue, and before he had gone a quarter of a mile his body swayed to and fro, and finally he Fell Heavily to the Ground.

His two comrades, who up to this time had kept right ahead, pulled their horses up and rode up to the prostrate man, deliberately fired several shots into his body and dashed away. When picked up the deserted outlaw was dead. Nobody knew him and nothing to identify him by was found on his person. Who his companions were is only a matter of conjecture. It is believed they are a scattered portion of the Cook gang, working their way West after having been separated from the main body and driven from their haunts in the Indian Territory. The bank has offered a reward of $200 each for the capture of the robbers, dead or alive. The sheriffs of three counties have organized forces, which are now in search of the bandits. The amount of booty secured has not yet been learned. The bank officials are keeping that quiet.

'FRISCO TRAIN HELD UP.

Mashed Men Get a Small Sum From an Express Car.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 14.—A special to The Republic from Monett, Mo., says: 'Frisco passenger train No. 1, due here at 8 p. m. was held up four miles east of Monett by two masked men and the express car robbed. The amount secured is not known, but it is several hundred dollars, including all local money between Springfield and this place. The robbers boarded the front end of the mail car, which was next to the tender, at Verona, and after the train started they crawled to the engine and commanded the engineer to run to a certain point and stop. After firing a pistol they got off the engine and compelled the engineer to follow them. When they arrived at the express car Messenger Chapman had his gun in readiness, and was about to fire, when Engineer Stevenson requested him to desist, as he was in front of the robbers. The robbers compelled Chapman to give up the keys of the local safe and it was opened and rifled of its contents.

Two Jurors Dismissed.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 14.—Tracey Harrows and Patterson were peremptorily dismissed from the jury in the lynching case by Judge Cooper. The grounds on which they were removed was that they had previously stated that they would hang white man for killing a negro. A new venire was drawn to fill the vacancies.

New Orleans Strike Ends.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 14.—Judging by appearances the labor troubles seem to be at an end. Mr. Saunders, the local agent of the West Indin Steamship line, has collected men to work on three steamships. The police are still on the levee in force for the alleged purpose of protection to the colored laborers.

Parkhurst For President.

DENVER, Nov. 14.—In a sermon on "The Lessons from the Late Elections," at Trinity M. E. church, Rev. Dr. Robert McIntyre called Rev. Mr. Parkhurst of New York the "hero of our country" and expressed the hope to cast a ballot for "that great and good man for president."

Defaulter Gets Five Years.

OMAHA, Nov. 14.—A special to The Bee from Neligh, Neb., says: Barrett Scott, the defaulting treasurer of Holt county, who stole $100,000, was sentenced to the penitentiary for five years.

TALKED WITH THE GRAND LAMA.

Dr. Heinrich Henseldt is said to be the only white man who has conversed with the Hindoo Dalai Lama, or alleged incarnation of Bodhi-Sattva, the avatar, and commonly called the grand lama. Now, if the doctor were a mere adventurer, his story might be passed as a romance, but he is a very eminent scholar; proficient in a dozen languages, and before going to India was for six years lecturer on geology in Columbia college. When Dr. Goldschmidt started on his tour of exploration in Ceylon in 1876, he took Dr. Henseldt with him because of the latter's knowledge of Sanskrit, the sacred language of India and parent of the Brahmanical and Buddhoastanes tongues as well as of Pracrit, Pali and other local dialects. He qualified as a Hindoo devotee and determined to penetrate Tibet. The great plain of that country in which stands Lassa, the religious capital, is some 12,000 feet above sea level, and many months' residence is necessary to enable a traveler to travel there and breathe with comfort. To this difficulty must be added the fierce determination of the people to exclude unbelievers. In 1865 two French missionaries in disguise reached Lassa and returned, but did notsee the grand lama. Others have lost their lives in the attempt. For nuknown ages the visible deity has dwelt in the golden temple unseen, save by his priests. When one dies, his successor is at once discovered by the priests. He is always a boy of less than 10 years, supposed to be divinely selected, and when the divinity enters him he at oncenames the day of his death.

Dr. Henseldt, disguised as a Hindoo, reached the city, and the Dalai Lama sent for him. The doctor found the deity a boy of 7 or 8 months old, and later addressed him at once in German. "The lama," says the doctor, "speaks every tongue. Usually he did not wait for me to speak, but answered my thought just as if I had spoken. He discussed geology, astronomy and various other departments of modern science in a way which made me, with my western education, feel how small my knowledge was. A few days later I saw the Dalai Lama again, and we talked as we had done before, he answering my thoughts. I went away with enough food for thought to last me many years."

We can easily believe that last. The doctor witnessed all the Hindoo miracles and thinks their priests have got on the inside of nature's law and mastered the occult.

A POLITICIAN'S HELPMEET.

Mrs. Thomas C. Platt Is a Woman of More Than Ordinary Ability.

Mrs. Thomas C. Platt is interesting to most Americans only as the wife of New York's ex senator and great political leader, but as Mrs. Ellen Barton Platt she is beloved by a circle of personal friends. Before marriage, and that was many years ago, she was equally attractive as Miss Ellen L. Barston. Now she is the mother of three big sons, of whom two are married, and her most unjoyable recreation is a romp with her little granddaughter and namesake. She has other grandchildren of both sexes, and what with her own sons some of the family are always with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Platt live at the Fifth Avenue hotel in New York city, and their commodious rooms overlook Madison square, but New York often asks why a couple of such wealth and standing do not maintain an establishment of their own. The reason given is that they have had to travel a great deal, and that so long as Mr. Platt remains in politics this hotel is most convenient for him, as it is a sort of social headquarters for Republicans at which Chairman Hosse is for Democrats. She is a tall, matronly woman, with keen dark eyes, dark hair now streaked with gray, a very pleasant face, doubly pleasant when she smiles, a low, sweet voice and a most attractive laugh.

And she does not like to be called "Mrs. Tom" Platt. She thinks women should have the ballot, and that they get it they are certainly entitled to the use of their own names. Neither is she "in politics." She takes a very lively interest therein, because Mr. Platt makes politics his chief amusement, reads the leading papers carefully, knows all his plans and is his trusted adviser. The 12 years they have lived at the Fifth Avenue hotel have been full of experience for them.

THE JAPANESE VICTORIES.

Yamagata Arikomo, an Oriental Von Moltke, Receives Credit For Them.

The series of extraordinary victories gained by the Japanese prove that their army is remarkably well organized or that the Chinese are miserably poor fighters. The Chinese nation seems to be lacking in a sort of dissolving process, the government must crush the people dissatisfied, and therefore lacking in patriotism. Japan, on the other hand, has all the vigor of youth and a newly reorganization nation. Her people are loyal and enthusiastic and her army disciplined and trained up to the European standard. As Li Hung Chang is in disgrace in China, so Japan's most honored official is Field Marshal Count Yamagata Arikomo, who won the great victory recently at Ping-Yang.

It is no exaggeration to call him the Von Moltke of Japan. He is 47 years old, tall for a Japanese and of slender figure. His origin was quite humble, as his father was of a caste which, in Japan's feudal times, could not win high rank. All that is now done away with, and democratic policies prevail. Count Yamagata has been in service or military office since boyhood. His military education was completed in Europe, and before attaining his majority he commanded an army successfully. In 1864, when the government was in a transition state, the shogun, then the ruling power, sent 20,000 men to chastise the feudal lord of the Chosin province, but with only 2,000 men Count Yamagata defeated and scattered the 20,000 before they reached Chosin.

In all the wars of the revolutionary period he took an active part, and after the complete suppression of all rebellions against the new government he was made chief of staff of the Japanese army. In 1890 he was made prime minister, but retired in May, 1891, from the parliamentary system of government was fully introduced. Early in the recent campaign he was made commander in Korea, where he has shown remarkable ability. Of the four Japanese field marshals he is the only one not of princely birth.

An Indian Story.

Especially if it be a good one and full of useful information is always interesting.

I have a book beautifully illustrated, that tells much about the Indians and the northwest, and the miraculous escape of one man from them in the early days.

It tells also of the Yellowstone Park, the greatest wonder of the natural world.

If you only 6 cents in stamps and your address, I will send you the book.

That the Buffet-Stool-ing Library Coach on the North-Western Limited between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago is the grentest institution in modern railway travel I ever ran across—or rather rode in—and I have traveled a few miles myself since I was able to go it alone. THE people demanded honest money and protection to home industries. There is nothing plainer than that.

AND even Donnelly went down in Dakota county where he was a candidate for re-election to the state senate. He will not go to Washington, either.

THE entire New England states have succeeded in electing one Democrat to congress. How lonesome he must feel standing on the brink and viewing that awful wreck.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY will now have to get out a revised edition of the People's party or subside. No doubt he will attempt to revise, as he was never yet known to give up.

JUDGE Oliver, probate judge of Ramsey county, went down in the maelstrom that struck this country on the 6th. He was supposed to be invincible, but he was a Democrat and, well this is a Republican year, you know.

AND now the country will soon get back to its normal condition, and business will take up all along the line, and our Populist friends in Polk county who were so disappointed over the election will before another year be relegated to the debris of Populism as honestly as anybody.

THE JOURNAL assured its readers that Polk county was not the wreck of the United States—that outside of our borders Populism was decidedly on the wane, and that the principles they advocated were not such as to build up a national party upon. The past election justifies our opinion.

THE St. Paul Call remarks: "Those will heal all wounds, and the Democracy, therefore, need not be without hope. There will be plenty of time before the next Democratic victory." We verily believe, that for once, the Call has hit the nail on the head—there will be, indeed, plenty of time.

JOHN L. Gnass is a prominent candidate for speaker in the next house. Capt. Sam R. Van Sant is also a candidate for the same position, it is said, with excellent chances of success. From the complexion of the house we should think it probable that the speaker will be a Republican.

THE St. Paul Call remarks: "The mistake Coxey made was in not getting the Republican nomination. Even a yellow dog running on that ticket, would have been elected. Some of our new congressmen are little better than such an animal." Allowing that the Call is correct, the voters seem to have exercised due judgment and taken the lesser of two evils.

THERE must have been a political Chinese wall about Polk county. Judging from the election returns, that prevented our people seeing what was going on in the world beyond, otherwise they would have discovered that the country did not endorse Populism. Well, it is better to learn by this burst of expression than be obliged to test the theory ourselves.

THE eminent good sense of the majority of the voters in the state was manifested in the election of Judge Collius, who had the combined opposition of the Dems and Pops—but the result shows that there are many sensible men yet in both parties, for the vote shows that many of them voted for Judge Collins. In Polk county there were too many who did not know the judge, or else they were too blindly adherent to party to vote against a party nominee. However the judge is elected all right, which is as it should be.

THE JOURNAL feels like congratulating the people of Minnesota on their good sense in electing Judge Collins instead of such a man as John W. Willis. We wish that we might include Polk county, but there seems to have been altogether too many voters here who were too blindly adherent to party to vote for their own interests. They knew that Judge Collins was the best man; they knew also that he represented the country, and yet simply because the Pops had nominated John W. Willis, a St. Paul man, they blindly voted for him. Their leader, S. M. Owen, used to urge them to be independent and vote for their own interests, but they did not do it this time.

EFFECTS OF THE ELECTION.

From every quarter comes the report of resumption of business operations, and before the year is out we may look for commerce and manufactures to have regained something like the conditions that existed prior to this Democratic assumption of power two years ago. On Friday last the Franklin sugar refinery, at Philadelphia, which also includes the E. C. Knight plant, started up, giving employment to some 2,000 men in the refineries, and the Spreckles refinery will resume this week. Also from Brooklyn comes the report that the sugar refineries there will resume and work on full time. All this country has needed was an assurance that the American manufacturer and American workman would be accorded that protection which would enable them to compete with the pauper labor of Europe, and there will be no scarcity of money to carry on business. But during the past two years capitalists have been very loth to part with their money, and business men just as loth to borrow, as there was no assurance (a positive threat to the country) that the bulwarks of American protection would not be torn down, and European business men invited to take possession of our commerce. But since the late election there is no longer any fear on that score, and hence the renewed activity in business circles generally.

POPULISM—WHAT THERE IS LEFT OF IT.

North Dakota, South Dakota, Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas and every other Populist state has repudiated Populism very emphatically, and the only remnant of it that is left seems to be in the fertile soil of this Red River Valley, where, with mustard, wild oats and other noxious weeds it seems to have gotten a firmer hold than elsewhere in the United States. Clay, Norman, Polk, Marshall and Kittson counties elected Populist county tickets, and the three legislative districts embracing those counties gave three candidates to the legislature. Notwithstanding their unanimity of opinion in those counties the Pops will be exceedingly lonesome in the legislature and will have nothing to do but to draw their salary—they can't even listen to Donnelly, that great hero having fallen outside the outer walls of the citadel. In the senate the Pops will just have five members and in the house nine—but over here they have the consolation of having beaten somebody—they lead the Democrats who have only three members in the senate and nine in the house. The Republicans have 46 in the senate and 96 in the house. In the light of these unbroken facts, what must our Populistic friends in here, who so confidently expected the state to endorse their peculiar ideas think now? It would be absurd to enlarge or to think that the Republicans have bought up the whole country in this wholesale fashion, and this being true, what then is the reason for such a land-slide? It is simply that the great majority of the people do not believe in the Populistic doctrine and do believe in the Republicanism. They are convinced, as never before, that Republican principles are sound to the core, are trustworthy, and they have returned that party to power with an emphasis too significant to misunderstand. The result will be that if the Populist leaders ever again attempt to take the field they must and will entirely revise their platform, bringing it down nearer to a common sense basis. But even in that case it will take years to ever regain their lost ground. We should think that the few Pops left would be utterly discouraged in their efforts to convert the world.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

Now that the smoke of battle has subsided, the Dems and Pops are trying to discover how it all happened. Their astonishment was too great in the first moments of defeat to realize that they had actually been turned down, and that in such a complete and overwhelming manner.

It is not difficult to an impartial observer, or one not entirely biased by party, to see in the recent defeat the working of an outraged people. Two years ago the Democrats promised the millenium if only they were given the power to administer the country's affairs, and on the strength of such promises and an insane desire for change (which they got) they were elected. How those promises were fulfilled is but too well known. There is scarcely a family in the entire United States, from the millionaire to the laborer, that has not felt the blighting effects of the past two years.

During the late campaign the Populists tried the same tactics, in full faith and belief that they would work to blind the fatelligence of the voters a second time. While our people may, to a certain extent, be gullable, yet it was expecting too much to think they could be fooled by the same thing twice in succession.

They had experimented to their heart's content in the matter of political parties, and were glad enough to get back to the party representing true American principles—just protection to American interests and manufactures, a sound currency, proper treatment of those who owe us, to their country's aid when it was in peril, love for the best interests of labor, and a guarantee of their acceptability to England, minding our own business, and letting the affairs of other nations take care of themselves, unless our interests were involved—Republican principles.

Individual judgment is liable to be wrong, but the judgment of a vast people is not to be regarded lightly, but when that judgment is given as the result of cool and careful deliberation, based on experience, is it unquestionable.

It is very evident that bare political promises, especially those of a wild or visionary nature, don't go.

FOSSTON FEELS SORE.

In its disappointment over the results of division the Thirteen Towns, of Fosston, hardly takes a fair attitude toward the citizens of Crookston. We do not blame that paper for feeling bitterly disappointed, but it will do it no good to indulge in wild ravings and wilder threats. The Thirteen Towns all through the fight insisted that the four cornered division was not for the best interest of the people of Polk county, yet now it threatens in two years to divide the county in just that way, simply because Fosston got disappointed in the deal. This is absurd, foolish, and probably Mr. Foss does not really mean half that his words imply. He must know that all who entered into the deal stood by it, and the result would have been far different and not a mistaken idea that some of the voters had early in the day, by which very many did not vote as they intended to. The claim made that "some prominent Crookston men worked against division" may be true, though we do not know of a single case, but if true we are confident that they had never pledged themselves to Fosston. If they did it is the duty of that paper to expose their duplicity and hold them up to the scorn of all honest men. That question was one upon which all men might honestly differ, but any man would be honest if he had given the Fosston people encouragement to believe he would work for Nelson county and then go back on his agreement. We personally know that there were some who were dead set against division of any kind, and we believe they worked against it openly and with no attempt to conceal their actions, but it will not do to make wholesale charges for any reason and make insane threats for the future. We have no doubt that Fosston can see how her deal is accomplished next time if she surrenders the line farther west and takes in also territory on the north that was left out this time. We think they would get more help on that kind of a deal.

The New Yorkers are long-suffering, and have allowed Tammany to rob them of millions and millions of dollars, to say nothing of other abuses saddled on that community by the voracious tiger. But even they have arisen in their might and threw off the yoke, electing the first Republican mayor in thirty years.

It is amusing to see the Populist papers try to explain the overwhelming defeat of that party at the polls. Some assert that it was the purchase of money that bribed voters enough to accomplish the result. The Penny Press, a Populist paper in Minneapolis, makes the following lucid explanation: "At the last moment Minneapolis failed to give Owen the vote expected, and so he was defeated." To which the Minneapolis Evening Journal tersely replies: "That seems to be about the size of it. According to the Penny Press during the campaign, the people were all going to vote for Owen, but just at the last minute they didn't do it, somehow. That is one of the singular things about election that has been noticed before the Penny Press called attention to it—that is, that it is the very people who vote at the last minute that settles the thing."

THE Democrats who favored endorsing Populism, saying that "next to a Democratic victory the triumph of Populism was best for the state" must feel exceedingly blue at this time when they see the fate they have made of their party. If the free-trade principles were sound at the time they won on them, they are sound to-day and just as worthy of fighting for. And if they were sincere in their belief in them, then there is no reason why they should not defend them now. But the fact is plain to be that they were afraid of the temper of the people that they saw was roused to fever heat, and they thought that by combining with the Populists they could prevent Republican success and thus defeat the will of the people. They miscalculated the temper of the people, however. There was more true patriotism in America than they had calculated on. But far better for the Democratic party would it have been had it stood firmly to what they have fondly called their principles and fought it out on that line. In their actions they have plainly shown to the people that it was only the offices they wanted and not the best interests of the country.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

Views of Learned and Judicial Men on this important subject.

Letters were recently written by a well known divorce reformer of one of our Western states to a number of distinguished lawyers and judges, asking their opinions on the following questions:

First—should divorced persons be prohibited from marrying again?

Second—Would not such a prohibition tend to increase the crime of adultery by causing divorced persons unable to marry again, to live in adultery with those they would otherwise marry?

Third—Would public morality be promoted by keeping bound in matrimony men and women who are thoroughly incompetent to each other, and who desire to be divorced?

Fourth—Would not the morality of the marriage relation be better promoted by making marriage more difficult and divorce more easy? The proposed replies were received, which speak for themselves, and our readers are left to make their own deductions:

Hon. John Quincy Adams Brackett, ex-governor of Massachusetts, in reply to your inquiries I desire to say that I am of the opinion that persons who are divorced ought not be prohibited from marrying again, but that on the contrary they should by all means be permitted to do so. A prohibition of such action on their part could not fail to be productive of immorality. Nor do I think that public morality can possibly be promoted by keeping bound in matrimony men and women who have ceased to be congenial to each other, and who desires to be apart. That the morality of the marriage relation would be promoted by making marriage more difficult and divorce more easy, I am not prepared to say. I am yours respectfully,

JOHN A. BRACKETT.

Hon. N. J. Hammond, ex-attorney general of Georgia: In considering the question of prohibiting divorced persons from marrying, or of permitting them to do so, I have assumed that while there may be individual cases in which it might seem advisable to make an exception, the rule in framing a general law I would positively forbid the marriage of divorced persons. For the reason that it would greatly multiply the number of divorces. It would be a much lesser evil than the "increase of adultery" by divorced persons. If adultery is the cause, it should be met by prompt punishment. Then the Scripture says that the man who marries a divorced woman commits adultery. I know of no such penalty to public morality as easy divorces. If persons who are married cannot satisfy peaceably I would provide for their separation, but not for divorces a vinculo matrimonii. The easier and cheaper divorces is the disgrace and curse of the American age. I have thought much on marriage and divorce, and herewith give you my earnest convictions. Respectfully yours,

N. J. HAMMOND.

Hon. Joseph P. Bradley, ex justice of the United States supreme court: I cannot agree with those who would not permit divorce under any circumstances, nor do I agree with those who think that the moral law demands that an injured husband or wife must remain bound for life to live with whom it is impossible to live longer in safety and contentment. Nor do I believe that if the law sets free such an injured husband or wife he or she should be prohibited from contracting another marriage in which happiness may be found. I cannot agree with those who would substitute for divorce a mere separation, for that would subject the innocent party to a perpetual celebacy. Let those who think that a morallowance of divorce contributes to the moral purity of society, look at the family morals of the United States, where divorce is more frequent, with those of France, Spain and Italy, where it is almost practically unknown. Yet divorce should be the last remedy for an unhappy marriage, and every judge from whom it is sought should make sure that there is just cause, and that the difficulties of the parties cannot be reconciled. All such divorce proceedings should be conducted openly.

Respectfully yours,

JOSEPH P. BRADLEY.

Hon. Furman Sheppard, ex-attorney general of Pennsylvania: The questions on marriage and divorce which you propound in your letter just to hand are very grave and important ones, which merit the most serious and earnest consideration. To thoroughly answer them would be necessary to have a complete knowledge of the subject of marriage in its historical, social and theological bearings. I must, therefore, content myself with saying that I am firmly persuaded that most of the trouble arising out of the marital relation is attributable to the abandonment of the sacramental, or, if you prefer it, the religious element of it, and regarding it merely as a civil contract. With few exceptions, to the same legal doctrines applicable to the buying of horses, the trading of cows, the building of houses, and similar transactions. Marriage should be regarded as something higher and holier than the purchase of a pig or the erection of a barn. When there is decay at the root of a tree it is of no use to keep trimming the branches. Very respectfully yours,

FURMAN T. SHEPPARD.

Hon. A. H. Hummel, of New York, member of the law firm of Howe & Hummel: First—A divorced person should not be prohibited from marrying again.

Second—In my estimation, such a prohibition would increase adultery and secret criminal acts between persons who would otherwise become husband and wife.

Third—It is a violence to the natural order of life for two persons who have become disenchanted with each other to be compelled to continue in each others society, and where both parties agree there is no question but that judicial separation should be permitted.

Fourth—This being the case the marriage relation would be stronger while the husband and wife are found of each other, and of more lasting duration.

In one word, I believe that divorce should be granted where the husband and wife feel that they cannot longer live congenially together. This would be better for society, and would cause much paper lives to be led by those in wedlock. There can be no doubt that under such a liberal allowance the number of unfaithful husbands and wives would be greatly diminished, and the more prolific cause of divorce would be removed. Very truly yours,

A. H. HUMMEL.

ENTIRE TICKET REPUBLICAN.

Sheldon's Plurality in South Dakota Placed at 18,000.

SIOUX FALLS, Nov. 8.—Returns from the state show that the Republicans are sure of only 21 of the 125 members of the legislature. A decrease of 20 per cent in the Populist vote is shown as compared with 1892. The total vote in the state is estimated at 70,000. All returns show Republican gains. Governor Sheldon places his plurality at 18,000 against 10,000 in 1892. Pickler and Gamble, Republican candidates for congress, and the entire state ticket are also elected by big pluralities.

Waite Ban Behind.

DENVER, Nov. 9.—McIntyre's plurality for governor is estimated at 10,000 on the basis of returns so far received from all over the state. In Arapahoe county his majority over Waite is 15,196, with seven precincts missing. Waite ran 2,000 votes behind his ticket. The Populists claim the legislature will be a tie on joint ballot, but the Republicans figure on a majority of 19.

Nearly Unanimous.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—This next congressional delegation from Pennsylvania will be 28 Republicans to 2 Democrats. Erdman's majority in Centre county will be nearly 3,000, and Congressman Mutchler claims the election of Hart in the Eighth district by about 350.

On Saturday of last week R. J. Montague received a telegram from Graves & Vinton authorising him to make farm loans. The telegram said that since Minnesota was safely Republican again the company would again risk its money here. St. Cloud has good reason to celebrate the election of one of her most prominent citizens, Judge Collins. It was said to be the biggest time that city has seen for some time.

Some Democrats are disposed to make the claim that the great Republican victory in Minnesota is due solely to the fact that many Democrats voted with the Republicans to prevent a Populist form of government. Well, while we believe in giving all due credit to the Democrats who did so vote, and while we believe many of them did, yet that only added to the size of the landslide—the ticket would have been elected without it, for it is a fact that all of the Democrats who did not vote for Gen. Becker, did not vote for Nelson—very many of them voted for Owen, preferring to see anarchy and confusion reign than to see the Republicans win. What patriotism! What a wonderful interest in the welfare of the country! But those fellows must have very comfortable reflections as to themselves just now and we will leave them to the enjoyment of them.

WOULD END THE WAR

UNITED STATES OFFERS TO ACT AS MEDIATOR

Between China and Japan—No Answer Has Yet Been Received, But It Is Expected the Offer Will Be Accepted by Both Countries.

TOKIO, Japan, Nov. 12.—United States Minister Dun has communicated to the ministry the substance of an important cipher cable proposition received from Secretary Gresham at Washington. It suggests that if Japan will join China in requesting the president of the United States to act as mediator in settling the war he will exercise his good offices in that capacity. A similar proposition has been sent to China. The cable was received by Minister Dun on Friday and was presented to a special meeting of the ministry. An answer has not yet been sent. The proposition presents a grave question to the ministry. They are urged on one hand by the popular sentiment to continue the war and crush China. On the other hand European powers are threatening to intervene. As between these conflicting influences the ministry find great difficulty in reaching a decision on the American proposition, but the prospect is that it will be accepted.

It is learned that four days ago France made a proposition to the United States to intervene.

TWO MORE VICTORIES.

Japs Easily Defeat the Chinese on Their Own Ground.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 12.—Advices from the armies commanded by Field Marshal Count Oyama, now operating on the Liaoung peninsula, confirm the reports of Japanese victories at Chin-Chin (Nin-Chan) and Talienwan. On the morning of Tuesday last one brigade of the Japanese forces captured Chin-Chiu and on the next day Talienwan was bombarded and also captured. A British warship was at Talienwan during the bombardment. After the place was captured the warship started for Che-Foo, which is across the gulf some 85 miles south of Talienwan.

A dispatch from Talienwan, Nov. 7, from Admiral Ito, commander-in-chief of the Japanese navy, says that the squadron left Chiosenestanto on Nov. 6 and on the morning of the 7th was near Talienwan. No firing was heard from the forts and the squadron steamed into the bay, when the Japanese flag was seen flying from the fortifications, the guns of which were dismounted. An officer landed and found only some Japanese guards, who informed them that the commander of the brigade had returned to Chin-Chin. The details of the capture of the place were obtained and a steamer was despatched immediately to telegraph the news of the victory.

The official dispatches of Field Marshal Oyama stated that the Chinese forces at Kin-Chan numbered 1,000 infantry and 100 cavalry, and at Talienwan 3,000 infantry and 150 cavalry. The Chinese made little resistance at either place. They retreated toward Port Arthur. The Japanese lost only 10 men in capturing both places. The Chinese losses were also slight.

CAPTURE OF PORT ARTHUR.

Chinese Made But a Very Feeble Resistance—All Surrendered.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A dispatch here from Shanghai says that the Japanese captured Port Arthur Sunday morning after meeting with a feeble resistance on the part of the Chinese. Port Arthur was bombarded previous to its surrender. The Chinese laid down their arms and yielded themselves prisoners of war. The Chinese commanding officers abandoned Port Arthur during the night of Nov. 4.

It is reported that some of the representatives of foreign powers will start for Pekin immediately.

NEBRASKA'S RATE LAW.

Justice Brewer Declares It Constitutional and Inoperative.

OMAHA, Nov. 13.—The Nebraska maximum freight law, which has been hung up in the courts by injunction for a year and a half, has been declared to be inoperative by Justice Brewer of the United States supreme court. The decision was made public through the United States district court here, the injunction to prevent the state board of transportation from putting the law into effect was applied for on the ground that the law is unconstitutional. Justice Brewer, however, holds that the law is constitutional, but he declares that the rates named in the law are too low, the cut from the rates now charged being excessive. On this ground he declares that the law must remain inoperative until such time as the earnings of the railroads will justify the proposed cut in rates.

Inauguration of Brazil's President.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Minister Mendonca of Brazil, has received the official programme of the fetes and festivals which began Saturday throughout Brazil in honor of the inauguration of a new president on Thursday next. The occasion is much like the quadrennial inauguration of a president of the United States, except that the festivities extend over five days and conclude with the formal swearing in of the new chief executive.

Judge Howe Dying.

REDFIELD, S. D., Nov. 12.—Judge Isaac Howe, defeated Populist candidate for governor, is sinking and his death is expected at any moment, his physicians having given up all hope for his recovery.

End of a Chicago Contest.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Judge Scales has dismissed the petition in the election contest case of George B. Swift against Mayor Hopkins. This closed the contest in the lower court.

SPEED VERSUS SAFETY.

A Sea Captain Tells How and Why He Must Make Quick Time.

A passenger on one of the European liners made a jocose remark to the captain one night as they were chatting familiarly on deck.

"You see captains," he said, "are the only absolute sovereigns now left in the world. For when the ship leaves port, your will is law. Every one on board recognizes your supreme authority. From your decisions there are no appeals. Every life is in your keeping. You are sea kings indeed."

"No, we are lessees of the company managers," was the bluff old captain's reply. "We are under obligations to make fast runs, yet brave to take any risks. It is no longer possible for the captain of a first class liner to exercise discretion.

"Why, on my last run across the Atlantic," he continued, rapidly warming up, "I had bad weather nearly all the way. When the wind was not blowing a gale, there was dense fog, and I didn't dare to run at full speed. The ship was 36 hours behind time in reaching New York."

The captain and the passenger were intimate friends and talked without reserve.

"I went to the main office," the captain continued, "and was received coldly by the manager. He told me that I had made a very poor run. I tried to explain how bad the weather had been, but he listened impatiently. He reminded me that other ships leaving England on the same day had arrived much earlier, although they must have had similar weather. He said that the day for cautious, old fashioned captains had gone by. The reputation of a ship for speed must be maintained, and captains must be brisk and wide awake, or their usefulness would be at an end.

"You may have noticed," the captain said after a pause, "that we have been running at full speed all day in a heavy fog. Your king has been profiting by the reprimand which I received, and he hasn't known a comfortable moment until the fog lifted an hour ago.

"So you see that the kings of the sea are the managers' hondmen. If they are cautious and avoid risks, they are considered sleepy and old. If they are venturesome and the ship goes wrong, then they are condemned as foolhardy. That's the tyranny of the sea, even if we are kings on deck."—Philadelphia Times.

A "Singular" Costume.

They were standing on a street corner waiting for a car. She was American; he was English. She delighted in proclaiming the glories of this new world, but he only elevated his beauty nose and answered every remark with that irritating phrase, "In the old country," etc.

While they were waiting a pair of bloods, a man and a woman, whirled by. The woman was dressed decidedly "up to date."

"Aw!" the Englishman remarked. "Knickerbockers!"

The girl looked in surprise. "Do you mean that woman is bloomers?"

"Yes, but in the old country, you know, we call 'em knickerbockers."

Miss American hardly knew how to answer his inane it all manner. She felt it would be rude to change the conversation too abruptly, so she simply said, "By the way, do you call 'a pair of knickerbockers' singular or plural?"

The Englishman glanced after the retreating bicyclers. "Plural," he said, "as applied to men, but in the case of women—singular."—Boston Budget.

It has been found that pigeons bred in a long low barn fetch a higher price for shooting matches. The birds from early habit, learned in their nesting place, when loosed from the trap start immediately on a long, low flight, instead of wheeling in air, as some pigeons do. The habit makes them more difficult to hit than other birds and enhances their value.

Not Impressed.

"How did Ohlitmer like the sot of the lion tamer?" asked the circus proprietor.

"He was bored to death. You see, he used to be the manager of an opera company with three prima donnas in it."—Washington Star.

Pittsburg was originally Fort du Quesne, then became Fort Pitt, in honor of the great British premier. The Delaware Indians called the place Menachtink, the walled place. The Senecas called it Deondiaga, the forks of the stream.

STARTING HORSES.

SOME OF THE REASONS WHY THIS IS A DIFFICULT BUSINESS.

Why It Is Harder Here Than in Other Countries—Bother of Short Distance—Popular Misunderstandings of Good and Bad Starts.

Starting race horses is a fine art, and the man who fancies he is master of it is convinced until he stands, flag in hand, facing 10,000 persons, and with a dozen or so thoroughbreds, ridden by anxious jockeys, upon the track, each rider doing his best to get an advantage over his fellows. In 19 cases out of 20 it is not the thoroughbred that is to blame for the trouble at the post, nor is it the jockey directly, but it is the owner, trainer or some speculator in the background who has told the jockey to get off in front, no matter what happens, and who has promised to pay his fine or reimburse him for any penalty he may incur in carrying out instructions. It is all very well to sit in the grand stand and criticise the work of the starter. One must try the business himself to appreciate its difficulties and its trials.

It is a much harder task to start race horses as we race in this country than in England, France, Austria or Australia, where the jockey may know at the start, and a length or two advantage when the flag falls does not count for much. With us, and especially of late years, since the system of short dashes has become so popular with horse owners which, by the way, has had such a depressing influence on the improvement of the blooded horse, the style has been to ride pellmell from the start and races are won and lost very frequently when the flag falls. Judgment of pace is fast becoming a lost art, and even our best jockeys now, with very rare exceptions, have no more idea of race riding than to get away well and take the shortest course home in the quickest possible fashion. Consequently every boy becomes imbued with the idea that to win he must get off in front.

The reader can easily picture to himself the scene at the post when there are 10 or 20 horses, many of them ridden by boys not 10 years of age, all of whom have been told—some of them with threats and promises with promises of large rewards—to get the best of the start. Any visitor to our race tracks is familiar with the scene at the post. Half a dozen horses will rush away at a false break when there is no possible chance for an equal start, and no two of they come trotting back and before they have had time to wheel and get into line those that remained behind the first time will dash out and run perhaps a hundred yards, leaving the field mixed in their places. This goes on indefinitely.

The public is also familiar with the sight of one or more horses standing motionless some lengths behind their competitors. The starter has given a call of the horses in advance of the laggards to wait until they have taken their positions. Each boy seems to think it is his bounden duty to walk his horse when those in the rear attempt to move up at a walk and to break away madly if an attempt is made by those behind to come up at a run.

A starter should have a thorough knowledge of racing, should be a man of a high degree of intelligence, be quick of eye and hand and, above all, be of unimpeachable integrity. The issue of many thousands of dollars, often times hundreds of thousands of dollars, is decided by the fall of his red flag, and it is his duty to see that every horse, no matter by whom he is owned, has an equal chance when he leaves the post. Every effort is made to catch the horses in motion and on as nearly even terms as possible. The eye must take in the field in a twinkling, and if the judgment is that the start is satisfactory the hand will act in unison with the eye and the brain.

Very often horses are in bad places, and what might look to be a good start from the grand stand would be a poor one in the judgment of the starter, and the flag does not fall. Criticism follows, and generally it is of the most ignorant and most unjust character. Some horses are quicker on their feet than others and will make a good start look like a poor one through their ability to get under way much more rapidly than their competitors. A good start was the flag drops becomes to the unthinking and ignorant a poor start, and blame is heaped upon the head of the official.

From time to time mechanical appliances for starting race horses have been invented, but they have not been practical and have not achieved success. A swinging gate to be raised by electricity was spoken of some time ago, but fractious thoroughbreds could not be got near it. There are, again, horses that are not to be controlled at times, and collisions with the obstacle would undoubtedly be of daily occurrence. Then, too, it would take months of drilling to get horses to overcome the idea that they were not going to run into the gate. This and many other objections can be raised against this system. A western inventor has patented a gate to be lowered before the horses while they stand at the post, which may be moved away from them at a rapid rate of speed by electric power, the barrier moving onward and upward at the same time.—New York Sun.

Extreme Agony

With Rheumatism—Joints in Arms and Limbs Affected

Blood Purified and Pains Driven Out by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Q. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I can say with all my heart 'Praise God for Hood's Sarsaparilla.' Three years ago rheumatism terribly affected my hands and feet, more in the joints. They became inflamed and swollen. The family physician treated me and for a time I thought I was free from my trouble, but shortly it returned with renewed energy. My heart was affected so that my breathing was suffocating during the attacks of Extreme Agony.

I would be apparently well on going to bed but in an hour I would be awakened by shooting pains in the joints, and could not move without increased pain. Anything applied did not give relief until the doctor recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla, though severe treatment, lessened the pain. During all my trouble I had thought seriously of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Finally I began with the medicine and I simply say that and thankful for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I believe that if anyone troubled with rheumatism or anything caused by bad blood would take a course with Hood's Sarsaparilla and be happy. I have taken eleven bottles and also Hood's Vegetable Pills and can say with all my soul and so God have any rheumatic pains." C. A. Nye, Attorney at Law, Ithaca, Wisconsin.

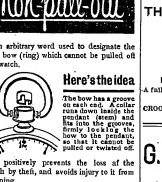
is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.



Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A cutter runs down inside the pendant (stem) and bits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant. The bow cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with the Non Pull-out or other watch cases bearing this trade mark.

All watch dealers sell them without extra cost. A watch case opener will be sent free to any one by the manufacturers.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

(First Publication Thursday, Oct. 18, 1894.)
(Last publication Thursday, Nov. 15, 1894.)

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a mortgage given by Edwin Neill and Catherine Neill, his wife, mortgagors, to F. T. Day, mortgagee, dated November 16, 1886, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the eighteenth day of December, 1886, at 11 o'clock, a. m., in book "G" of mortgages, on page 505, which said mortgage was thereafter duly assigned and duly secured thereby, was duly signed by said F. T. Day, mortgagee, to William Pendelton, by written assignment, dated the first day of April, 1891, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 30th day of August, 1894, at 10 o'clock, a. m., in book H, of mortgages, on page 419, to which reference is hereby made.

The amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date hereof is the sum of ten hundred fifty-four dollars and seventy-seven cents, ($1054.77) principal and interest, besides the sum of one hundred sixteen and 50-100 dollars, for taxes and interest thereon necessarily paid by said mortgagee, and fifty ($50) attorney's fee, also stipulated for in said mortgage.

Notice is hereby given, that the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, viz: The west quarter (west½) of Section thirty-four (34), in township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of Range forty-five (45) west. Containing one hundred sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof, in Polk county and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county, or his deputy, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Crookston, in said county and state, on the seventeenth day of November, 1894, at 10 o'clock, a. m., of that day.

Dated September 24th, A. D., 1894.

FAVORABLE TO LABOR

REPORT OF THE STRIKE COMMISSION TO THE PRESIDENT.

The General Managers Association Shown Up in an Uncomplimentary Way, While the Pullman Company Is Scored For Its Unfair Treatment of Employes.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—The United States government report on the great railway strike in connection with the Pullman trouble was made public during the day. The report, which is signed by the federal labor commissioner, Carroll D. Wright, and his fellow investigators, John D. Kernan of New York and Nicholas E. Worthington of Illinois, is addressed to President Cleveland and abounds in passages which will attract wide attention, particularly the portion referring to the now famous "General Managers' association," the organization of high railway officials that encompassed the memorable defeat of the American Railway Union.

The report says the capitalization of the 24 railroads directly represented in the General Managers' association was $2,108,653,917. The number of employes was 222,007. The commission continues:

As a Strike Fighter.

This voluntary unincorporated association was formed in 1886, but until June, 1894, the association's possibilities as a strike fighter and wage arbitrator lay rather dormant. Its roads fixed a "Chicago scale" for switchmen, covering all lines at Chicago. In March, 1893, the switchmen demanded more pay from each road. The association concluded that they were paid enough—if anything too much. The roads so informed the men. The Switchmen's Mutual Aid Association of North America wrote to Mr. St. John, as chairman, acquiescing. He, as chairman of the General Managers' association, concluded his reply as follows:

"The association approves the course taken by your body and desires to deal fairly with all employes, and believes that our switchmen are receiving due consideration."

Working for a Combine.

This seems to show, the report says, that employes upon association roads are treated as under subjection to the General Managers' association, and the General Managers' association. The commission says that the General Managers' association has no legal standing, and that it has usurped powers not granted by the charters of the roads. It also says that the government should interfere. An extension of this association and the proposed legalization of "pooling" would result in an aggregation of power and capital dangerous to the people and their liberties as well as to employes and their rights. The question would then certainly arise as to which shall control, the government or the railroads, and the end would inevitably be government ownership. Unless ready for that result and all that it implies, the government must restrain corporations within the law, and prevent them from forming unlawful and dangerous combinations.

A Roast For Pullman.

Taking up the subject of the Pullman Palace Car company the report says:

This is a corporation organized in 1867, with a capital of $1,000,000. It has grown until its present paid up capital is $36,000,000. Its property has enabled the company for over 20 years to pay 8 per cent quarterly dividends, and, in addition, to lay up a surplus of nearly $25,000,000 of undivided profits.

Speaking of the town of Pullman, of which the report states the company is owner and landlord, the commission says: The principal church and its parsonage are very attractive structures, but often are not occupied because the rental required is higher than any church society is willing to pay to obtain the gospel privileges to be thereby secured.

As a result of the Pullman system and its growth, when the depression of 1893 came, morally calling for mutual concessions as to wages, rents, etc., we find on the one hand a very and upon the other a multitude of employes of comparatively excellent character and skill, but without local attachments or any interested responsibility in the town, its business investments or surroundings.

Some witnesses swear that at times, for the workmen done in two weeks, they received in checks from 40 cents to $1 over and above their rent. The company has not produced its checks in rebuttal.

No Reduction in Officers' Salaries.

During all of this reduction and its attendant suffering none of the salaries of the officers, managers or superintendents were reduced. Reductions in these would not have been so severely felt, would have shown good faith, would have relieved the harshness of the situation and would have evinced genuine sympathy with labor in the disasters of the times.

In regard to the company's tenements the report says: If we exclude the sanitary features at Pullman, the rents there are from 20 to 25 per cent higher than rents in Chicago or surrounding towns for similar accommodations. The aesthetic features are admired by visitors but have little money value to employes, especially when they lack bread. While reducing wages the company made no reduction in rents. Its position is that the two matters are distinct and that none of the reasons urged as justifying wage reduction are it as an employer can be considered by the company as a landlord.

The commission deems recommendations of specific remedies premature. Such a problem, for instance, as universal government ownership of railroads is too vast, many sided and far away, if attempted, to be considered as an immediate practical remedy. The commission contends that law should make it obligatory upon some public tribunal promptly to intervene by means of investigation and conciliation and to report whenever a difficulty of the character of that occurring during the past season at Chicago arises, and recommends that there be a permanent United States strike commission of three members, with duties and powers of investigation and recommendation as to disputes between railways and their employes, similar to those vested in the interstate commerce commission as to rates, etc.

CHRISTENED BY MRS. CLEVELAND.

The Big Steamer St. Louis Launched at Cramp's Shipyards.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—At 1:09 p. m. the magnificent steamship St. Louis, of the American line, was successfully launched at Cramp's shipyard. The affair was witnessed by fully 50,000 people. Mrs. Cleveland, wife of the president, broke the traditional bottle of champagne on the bow of the noble ship as she glided down the ways, at the same time uttering these words:

"I christen thee St. Louis."

In this instance, and for the first time since the ceremony was inaugurated at Cramp's shipyard, the champagne was of American manufacture. All preparations for the launch had been carefully made, and although the ship is 120 feet longer than any that has ever been launched at the yard, the difficult task of getting a vessel from the ways into the water was accomplished without a hitch.

After the launch the invited guests to the number of 400 were entertained at lunch in the office of the ship builders.

Only Two Bigger Boats.

Charles H. Cramp, in his speech of welcome to President Cleveland, said that with two exceptions the St. Louis is the largest and most powerful ship in the world. He referred to the progress of ship building under the Cleveland administration, and credited to his policy the fact that such wonderful results have been accomplished in America. The St. Louis, he said, is built on American plans, by American workmen and of American material. Twenty-six ships were recommended by Mr. Cleveland and authorized by congress. Concluding, he said that while there may be honest differences on other questions, national approval of Mr. Cleveland's vigorous and patriotic naval policy will always be unanimous.

CHICAGO'S POLICE FORCE.

An Attempt to Be Made to Get a State Investigation.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—The Evening Post says that owing to the lawlessness of the south side districts of the city during the election a strong movement is on foot to secure an investigation of the Chicago police force by state authorities. The civic federation and the Civil Service Reform league, backed by the powerful Union League club and other prominent organizations, will, upon the convening of the state legislature, secure the appointment of an investigating board and its work is expected to result in professional revelations, that of the Lexow committee of New York.

DAKOTA TOWN NEARLY WIPED OUT.

Frederick Swept by Fire, Causing a Loss of Nearly $100,000.

ABERDEEN, S. D., Nov. 13.—Fire in the village of Frederick nearly wiped that town out. Dykstra's large general store, Doty's general store, the City hotel, Simmond's & Howe's bank, Pettingill's drug store, the opera house building, the meat market and a large number of smaller places of business were destroyed. At 7 o'clock this morning word of Aberdeen's department, but no locomotive was available to make the run. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Elected a Democrat.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Contrary to his expectations, the congressman elect of the Sixth district is Finis E. Downing, Democrat. The election of General Rinaker, Republican, was claimed Thursday by his friends on the strength of Mr. Downing's concession that he had lost Cushman by 26 plurality. General Rinaker made a strong fight, but the official count shows he failed of election by the narrow margin of 91 votes.

Colorado, Wyoming and Great Northern.

DENVER, Nov. 12.—The Colorado, Wyoming and Great Northern Railway company has been incorporated by W. T. Carpenter, T. L. Sanford, G. F. Lass, M. Dow, Wm. Thread and J. F. Nesbitt. The proposed route is from Grand Junction through Garfield county, and up the Green river to Green River City, on the Union Pacific railroad in Wyoming. Branches will be built to Provo City, Utah and Meeker.

Nuns May Teach.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 13.—Justice Dean of the state supreme court handed down an opinion in the case of John Hysong et al vs. School District of Gallitzinborough, an appeal from Judge Barker, of the court below, who refused an injunction to prevent nuns teaching in the public schools dressed in the garb of their order. Justice Dean affirms Judge Barker's decision.

A Storm For Lincoln.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—The Times says: At the proper time and at the proper place a senatorial boom will be started for "Bob" Lincoln, which, by those interested in the proposed coup d'etat, is expected to land the son of Abraham Lincoln in the United States senate as the successor of Senator Cullom.

Found Thirteen Smallpox Cases.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Thirteen cases of smallpox were discovered in the vicinity of West Thirty-ninth street. The contagion arose from a case of smallpox recently found at 439 West Thirty-ninth street.

AN AMIABLE HOSTESS.

Mrs. Morton Gained That Reputation In Washington and Paris.

The Mortons of Ellerslie-on-Hudson would be the title of one of New York's most prominent citizens and his family just now if we were only a little more English. As it is, they are credited to Rhinecliff, the station near their beautiful home. It is in politics only that Levi P. Morton entrancks his wife, for as one draws nearer to Rhinecliff he hears less of the statesman and a great deal more of Mrs. Morton. She, as vice president, she made his home noted in Washington, and when he was minister to France La Belle Anne Morton, as the Parisians called her, was one of the social lights of the city. Her beauty and taste in dress, her wit and fluency in the French tongue gave her a social standing no American lady had attained there.

MRS. LEVI P. MORTON.

Her father was William L. Street of Poughkeepsie, and she was married to Mr. Morton in 1873. His first wife died in 1871 without children, but the present Mrs. Morton is blessed with five attractive daughters, ranging in age from 11 to 30. They have been thoroughly taught, especially in languages, their mother being quite a linguist. In Washington they were noted for their general proficiency, and at Ellerslie their studies are continued under a French governess. Especially is their physical welfare looked after. They ride and drive, row and take prescribed exercises in the open air and are in addition taught domestic duties. Mrs. Morton gives minute attention to household affairs.

Flatterers are prone to exaggerate the attractions of ladies whose husbands are high in office, but Mrs. Morton's beauty was noted before her husband became prominent. She is slightly above the medium height, with a figure of great beauty, and her arms and neck are especially well formed. Her complexion is fair, her eyes blue gray, and her light brown hair shows a silver line here and there. She owns to 46 years, but her youthful voice and face, without a wrinkle, would indicate less. In Paris her drawing rooms were the common meeting ground of royalists, republicans and imperialists, Catholics, Protestants and free thinkers, and all were pleased with their hostess.

Statistics prove that not less than 8,000 babies are born every day in United States coil.

A Royal Little Wheelman.

Youthful cyclists may be interested to know that the young king of Servia has just had made for him in Birmingham, England, a beautiful little machine. Needless to say the cycle is of the very best construction and finish and is sure to delight his small though important majesty.

A Great Rattle

Is continually going on in the human system. The demon of impure blood strives to gain victory over the constitution, to rout health, to drag victims to the grave. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the weapon with which to defend one's self, drive the desperate enemy from the field, and restore bodily health for many years.

Hood's pills cure nausea, sickness indigestion and billiousness. 25c

The Toledo Weekly Blade.

Of the now nearly twenty thousand regular publications in the United States, there are but two or three weekly newspapers published for general circulation in every state and territory. And of these the Toledo Weekly Blade is the best and most popular of them all. It is the oldest; best known and has the largest circulation. For more than twenty-five years it has been a regular visitor to every portion of the Union, and it is well known in over one of the sixty thousand odd post offices of the country. It is made especially for family reading. It gives the entire news of the world each week, in such condensed form as will save reading scores of pages of daily papers to get less information. Republican in politics, Democratic in principle, always on the side of justice and right, it is just the paper for the rising generation, and a great educator for the whole family. Serial stories, wit and humor, short stories, Household Question Bureau, Farm department, Crop Fire, Sunday School and Young Folks are a few of the many other prominent features of this grand paper. A specimen copy will be mailed free to any address on application, and the publishers invite any person to send in a long list of addresses to whom they will mail sample copies. They would be glad to mail a couple of hundred specimens to readers of this county. The Weekly Blade is a very large paper, and the price is only one dollar a year. Address The Blade, Toledo, Ohio.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are fairly startling. Mrs. Pinkham has received hundreds and thousands with but one object in years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician, unsuccessfully. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. I felt that I could not live half a day. I had given up hope. I had written to a lady in Boston, Mass., who had been afflicted with bearing down pains, had been cured by the remedy, and had taken a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., of Lynn, Mass., and before taking the first dose I could see no change. I felt no worse, but no better. I had written to Mrs. Pinkham, telling her my case, and received a kind letter from her, telling me what to do. I had not taken one bottle before I felt a change for the better. I felt as though I could sleep. I had taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and one bottle of Blood Purifier, and one box of Liver Pills, and I felt like a new woman. I have taken in all seven bottles of the Compound, four bottles of Blood Purifier, and two boxes of Liver Pills, and I am a well woman. I have gained in flesh from 98 pounds to 140 pounds. I have no pain, no backache, no headache, no nervousness, no sleeplessness, no dizziness, no faintness, no bearing down pains, no neuralgia, no dragging sensation. I have no use for a doctor. I am a well woman. I have no use for a doctor. I am a well woman. I have no use for a doctor. I am a well woman

As his resignation had not been accepted, Gen. Becker resumed his duties as railroad commissioner. And now the Philistines will howl, "I told you so."

Oats took a bit of a slump this week and are selling at 23 cents in this market. Mr. Williamsasays that he has paid 40 cents a bushel all the fall at his stables in Fertile.

Sam Wilkinson spent the Sabbath in the city. Sam is the son of R. A. Wilkinson, who is in the Great Northern right-of-way department in St. Paul, and is well known to oldtimers.

State Hhrnrieo, C. A. Gilman, started for the coast Monday afternoon. After seeing such a rousing republican victory he now feels as though he could take a lay-off with impunity.

Fred Fox has traded his farm on the river for one near St. Hilaire and $4,500 cash difference. It is said that Fred intends to go to Missouri for the winter and if suited down there will locate.

This week Hugh Thompson steps down and out and Capt. T. A. Dunluva takes his place in the land office. Mr. Thompson has made one of the most efficient officers that ever held the position of register and he drops the mantle on worthy shoulders.

Pat Cleary and family go to Stillwater to reside, this week. Pat is one of Crookston's old inhabitants, and he will be missed, especially in the Grand Army Post where he was always a faithful attendant. Hisson Ed. and wife also go.

Burglaries seem to be getting too numerous for comfort. Last week Eli Austin's residence was entered and some things stolen, and one night somebody broke into Pete Stahl's saloon and stole some money out of the till and Monday night of this week the Chinese laundry on Main street was broken into. One of these nights some enterprising burglar will get badly hurt, which will be serving him just right.

One of the rare treats in store for Crookston people is an old folk's concert, to be given Tuesday evening Nov. 27th, under the auspices of the Epworth League. A large chorus under the direction of Mrs. VanAaum will be the leading feature of the concert, although arrangements are being made for solo numbers and other special features. The complete program will appear later.

Mrs. Peter Tihesar died suddenly at her residence on Sampson's addition, early on Monday morning. She had been out of health but was not considered in danger. She complained early in the morning of not feeling well and Mr. Tihesar went after some medicine. On his return she was very much worse and died before a physician could be summoned. She was a sister of Mrs. Adolph Kasch, of this city.

B. J. Williams, the Fertile liveryman, was visiting S. L. Collins on Tuesday afternoon, and someone spoke of Fred Fox's sale and his intention of going to Missouri to live, when Mr. Williams said: "Oh, well, if Fred is going there to look he will be back again by spring. I have been all over that state and several other southern states, and after a man has seen this country once, and lived here as long as Fred has, he can never be satisfied in any southern state. That country, the best of it is not in it with this.

Some of our Populist friends seem to have the idea that because the Democrats did not poll an extremely heavy vote this fall they ought to surrender the position of railroad and warehouse commissioner, now held by Gen. Becker, to the Pops. In fact the rumor has already gone abroad that Gen. Becker is to be retired on January 1st and that the great leader of Populism, Ignatius Donnelly, is slated to succeed him. We do not take any stock in this idea, while it may be that the Pops are entitled to that sort of recognition Ignatius Donnally is hardly the man for the position. He has spent his life warring against the interests of the state, devising plans and schemes to hinder its progress, and working solely for himself in it all; he does not represent the conservative element of his party—the better element; and is not entitled to any consideration from them much less from the Republican party. If the Pops are entitled to that position they should name a man who would be a credit to them and not a wild visionary extremist. We do not believe that Gov. Nelson would ever appoint Ignatius to that position.

R. A. Wilkinson, who was up last week to see to his farming operations, says that next year he shall raise no wheat to speak of, but will make flax his main crop and sow plenty of oats and barley. He also intends to plant forty acres of potatoes, not all on one farm, but 10 to 15 on each. Speaking of potato culture Mr. Wilkinson advanced one excellent idea. Said that he noticed while up here last fall that many crops of potatoes showed signs of having been neglected during the summer and in talking with several farmers they told him: "Why yes, I did neglect to cultivate my potatoes this year as much as I usually do, but then you see the soil was very dry and I was afraid to stir the soil up much for fear of drying it more and thus making it worse." Mr. Wilkinson said: "I believe the farmers made a mistake right there, because my theory is that the more cultivation you get in a drouth the better on the idea that cultivated soil will absorb and retain the dews more readily than if the land remains hard and baked." We believe Mr. Wilkinson's idea will hold water, not only on cultivation, but as regards the crops he intends to raise.

Famous Show of Beauty.

The show of distinguished beauty, unrushed by famous artists, which is now taking place at the academy of Fine Arts in New York, has been anticipated by The Cosmopolitan Magazine in its November issue, in an article by Wm. A. Coffin, with illustrations of some of the most beautiful faces. The "Great Passions of History" series has for this month's subject the romantic career of Agnes Sorel, who fascinated the destitutes of France under Charles VII. "The Art Schools of America," "The Great British North-west Territory," "The Chiefs of the Chicago Press," and the "Public Library Movement," are amongst the Cosmopolitan's table of contents. Survivors of the war and their Children will find intense interest in "The Story of a Thousand," a personal narrative beginning in November by Ahlion W. Tourgee, who tells his graphic way, of a regiment which saw fierce service—of its organization, its marches, its sports, and its death-roll.

Reports of City Justices Holt and Gossman for quarter ending Sept. 30, 1894, referred to the city attorney, were reported back to council as correct and same placed on file.

City attorney reported back to the council city justice report of C. O. Christianson as incomplete, there being no report of the last quarter of his tenure of office, and of fees paid to the city. Report of attorney was accepted and papers placed on file with the clerk.

City engineer makes report of the probable cost of sidewalk to be built along lot 1 block 36 original townsite of Crookston.

The matter was referred to the aldermen of the second ward for their attention.

It was moved and seconded that the city attorney be instructed to commence action forthwith against C. O. Christenson and his bondsmen for balance due from him whilst Justice of the Peace. Motion carried.

Bill of Archy McKinnon for $135.30 same being for earth bought by the city from the excavation of hotel site was allowed for full amount to be paid July 1st, 1895, as per contract.

Bill of Orvis Hinds for $15 for 4½ was rejected as account was settled by another bill.

It was the sense of the council that bonds should be issued by the city for $10,000 be of $1000 each bearing 5 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually for the term of ten years.

It was moved and seconded that an order be issued by the proper authorities to Mrs. Johnson for the amount of sidewalk tax assessed against lot 5 block 2 M. J. Loring's Addition to Crookston; said work having been constructed by owner. Carried.

On motion sidewalks were ordered built by the city where same are not already built on West side of Maple street on C. M. Loring's Addition.

On motion council adjourned to meet at 2 p. m. on Friday, the 16th, inst., for the general purpose and for the purpose of acting on the proposition to issue the bonds of the city to the extent of $10,000 for the purpose of providing a general fund with which to meet and defray the contingent expenses of the city, properly arising out of the municipal matters, and not otherwise.

W. A. LANCTOT, City Clerk.

Political Notes.

Returns so far from North Dakota indicate that the legislature will be, Republicans 70, Democrats 4 senators and 6 representatives, Populists 3 senators and 7 representatives.

A dispatch from Huron, S. D. states that Judge Isaac Hoyt, defeated candidate for governor on the Populist ticket, is rapidly failing. His physicians have abandoned all hope of his recovery, and his death is hourly expected. His friends throughout the state have been advised of his condition, which is attributed to over exertion during the campaign and the disappointment occasioned by his own defeat and that of his party.

The current number of the Illustrated American gives a page to the illustration of Gov. Nelson and his home at Alexandria, together with a short biographical sketch.

Out of 44 states the Republicans now control 27, as follows: Maine, Vermont, Oregon, California, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, South Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Delaware.

Our Girls.

In the November North American Review, Elisabeth Bisland makes a plea for the "higher education" of our girls, which is well worthy of perusal. She contends that while a good college education is decidedly to be desired for our girls, that to stop there, without giving them a thorough training for their life work, which in nine cases out of ten is housewifery, is like taking a boy from school and expecting him to be a sailor, an engineer, or some other sort of craftsman, without any previous special training to fit him for the occupation he desires to follow; and yet that is just what is expected of our girls—to step out of school into the home and be competent wives and mothers, without the knowledge of how to plan or furnish a house, what is wholesome food and how it should be prepared, or how to care for the little ones, who need, more than anything else, a competent mother's care during the first ten or fifteen years of life. She ought to be conversant with the petty ills which lie along childhood's pathway and able to intelligently combat those infantile complaints that wreck so many little barks just launched on the sea of life. Yet she is expected to do this without any special training—by intuition, possibly. No wonder there are so many failures; and the poor young things reap the results of their parents' sins of omission. In conclusion, Mrs. Bisland asks: "Why should our girls after finishing their collegiate course take those trained and developed intelligences back to the higher housewifery schools—as men go to schools of law—and put those powers to their legitimate use, of acquiring with ease and completeness an equipment for their life's work? W y?"

The demand for Ayer's Hair Vigor in such widely-separated regions as South America, Spain, Australia, and India has kept pace with the home consumption, which goes to show that these people know a good thing when they try it.

Dr. Holmes paid as little heed to the dictum of the rhetoricians that a sentence should not end with a preposition or other important word as did the other author of a work on rhetoric who laid down the rule, "A preposition should not be used to end a sentence with." Dr. Holmes called such sentences, but .chapters, with prepositions or other insignificant words. For example, chapter 6 of "Elsie Venner" ends with the words "attend to," and chapter 12 of the same novel ends with the words "die of."—Boston Transcript.

A Husband's Dream.

"What is truly never dies,
But passes into other forms—
Star-dust or sea-foam, flower or winged air.
If this befalls our poor, unworthy flesh,
Think thee what destiny awaits the soul!
What glorious vesture it shall wear at last!"
While thus he spoke, sea-shore and grave and hotel
Vanished and faintly from a neighboring spire
Full-throated solemn strains broke upon my ear.
Then, I awoke with a keen sense
Of a sense of swift, unbreakable law,
And through the darkness reached my hand to touch
Her cheek, soft-pillowed on one restful palm—
To be sure!

BIG BLAZE.

Beltrami Elevator Scroed to Ashes With Lots of Wheat.

Early on Saturday morning fire was discovered in the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator at Beltrami, and the building and its contents were totally destroyed. It is said to have contained 30,000 to 40,000 bushels of wheat, which will be an almost total loss from the fact that the fire could not be put out and the building burned down over it. The origin of the fire is not definitely known but is supposed to be from a heating stove in the office. It was first discovered about 3 o'clock in the morning and burned so quickly that the morning passenger train came along about 5:45, was able to pass all right with but little if any delay. This was an old Red River Valley Elevator company house—one of the first ones there. It was totally destroyed and its contents no doubt, also.

Death of Conductor Cameron.

Saturday night as No. 4 passenger train on the Great Northern, from the west, got into Grand Forks it was discovered that Conductor Edward J. Cameron was missing. He had not been seen since the train left Ojata, and a switch engine was sent back to find him. He was found about three miles west of Emerado, a few feet from the track, with his head crushed and an ugly wound across his forehead. He had evidently fallen from the train while passing from the baggage or mail cars, which have no gates. It is thought he was blown from the train and striking on the frozen ground was instantly killed. There is no suspicion of foul play. The remains were brought to Grand Forward to Waterloo, Iowa, his old home. His wife went on a visit to St. Paul last Wednesday, to be gone a couple of weeks, little expecting what was to happen. They have been stopping at the Palace, and were looking for suitable quarters to commence house-keeping, which they intended to do on the return of Mrs. Cameron from St. Paul. Mr. Cameron has been in the employ of the company for years, and was a trusted and efficient employe. He had a host of friends and was highly esteemed by all who knew him.

The bereaved wife has the heartfelt sympathy of Crookston friends an acquaintances in her distress.

Crookston Loses the Business College.

The JOURNAL is sorry to announce that Prof. R. S. Strawbridge has decided to move the Crookston Business College to Grand Forks. This institution has been one of the prominent features of Crookston since its establishment here and it is a feature of our business life that we can ill afford to lose. Mr. S. has been offered superior inducements to go to Grand Forks and so he has decided to go. Grand Forks is to be congratulated upon securing this excellent institution.

BUSINESS REVIVAL.

Views of Hon. A. B. Stickney, Pres't. of Chicago Great Western Railway.

A Great Exodus From the Over-crowded Cities Imperative.

One of the most interesting meetings ever held in the city of Des Moines, Iowa, was that of the commercial exercises on Wednesday evening, Nov. 14th. The address of the evening was delivered by Hon. A. B. Stickney, president of the Chicago Great Western Railway, and was listened to with marked interest from first to last. His subject was: "The Conditions Precedent to the Revival of Business in the Cities." We regret that space forbids our giving the address entire, but the following extracts will prove of interest, as giving a bold solution of the problem of what to do with our unemployed, and at the same time relieve the burden of personal farmers, and in fact many of them have some experience, as they were country born and bred, and it is these latter ones who will be most benefitted by the change.

He showed how the dreary loneliness of isolated farm life could might be done away by a plan of consolidation, living on small farms and living in farm villages. This was illustrated by the experience of a farm village situated in the middle of pine forest in New Jersey, which he had visited. A broad avenue four miles long, arched by fine trees, with sidewalks and lined with pretty cottages, with churches and school houses, formed this villages.

Let city laborers, artisans and their wives look the problem squarely in the face. What has a man who is earning a salary of $50 or even $100 per month, to look forward to? As to the children reared in the crowded streets of a large city, what have they to look forward to? Where can the green fields and flowers and the lake, the calves, horses, colts, sheep, lambs, hens and chickens, or even the pigs of the farm, are better and more desirable associates for children? The fresh air and wholesome food of the country are better calculated to mature into healthy manhood and womanhood. The thrift and industry of the country will find an early grave if kept in the city. There is a great rush to the cities, and when they become congested there is a rush back again, and the conditions are now ripe for a large increase in rural population.

DIVERSIFIED FARMING.

The Idea Favorably Considered by Cotton Growers.

A dispatch from Montgomery, Alabama, states that the cotton growers' convention there has organized an association national in its scope for the better protection of planters' interests. The resolutions committee submitted a number of resolutions, all of which were adopted by the convention, regarding the following subjects:

First—Reduction of cotton acreage and increased attention to the production of cereals.

Second—Greater attention to stock and cattle raising.

Third—Encouragement of manufacturing in the South; securing of manufactories from taxation for a period of ten years.

Fourth—Encouragement of land gration. Resolutions advise the large plantations be divided into small farms, and the latter be sold to bona fide home-seekers.

Fifth—Recommendations that cotton be withheld from sale by farmers who are not in debt to their factors, and that it be held for a raise—which may reasonably be expected if present heavy receipts are appreciably reduced.

Sixth—The organization of the Cotton Planters' Association of the United States of America, to meet at least twice a year.

Seventh—Cotton seed trusts condemned.

Eighth—Congress petitioned to pass the anti-option bill.

Ninth—Congress to be requested to refund the cotton tax collected in 1866-67.

AS BRITONS SEE US.

Report of the Delegation That Visited Minnesota Last Summer.

All the Delegates Favorably Impressed with Our Soil and Climate.

After considerable delay the report of the British delegation which visited Minnesota last summer in the interests of British farmers has been made public. The delegation represented England, Ireland, and Scotland, as well as Canada. The reports are very lengthy and a great deal of information is given. It is impossible to give only a part of each. Mr. Thos. R. Stephenson, of Carforth England, after discribing the journey minutely, says:

"A more cordial welcome could not have been given. In my opinion there is no doubt of the good feeling toward the old country, even by hundreds that have never seen it, and the time will in fact they will soon be able to come across and see us."

In the course of his story of the trip into the state, he makes frequent reference to individual instances of farmers who have been successful in Minnesota, and what experiences to make plain to the English farmers how prosperity may have contributed to the prosperity of the unemployed. One of these descriptions is as follows:

"I had a long drive with a Mr. Rodgers. His address is Elbow Lake, Grant county, Minn. I give this gentleman's full address because I think he is a very intelligent, good farmer, and will give any information that you may desire. Mr. Rodgers owns a large tract of land, of which he gave me some particulars. He is open to sell land in 160 to 500 lots at $10 to $12 per acre. That is £2 to £2 10s per acre. This land is only five miles from a railway station. He cattle, but this wheat crops this year at 18 bushel per acre, 60 pounds per bushel, price 2s per bushel, or 80s per acre. He puts the cost of producing an acre of wheat at 20s per acre. Thus the farmer leaves him 3ls per acre profit. A few cows are kept on the farm, and some good horses, but feeding hogs he finds to be the most profitable. He makes his pigs weigh 13 to 14 cwts at 9 months old. Those who are in the pig line will find this a good times contracted a large amount of debt for the purpose of buying land in the hundreds of thousands of acres. The land is fine, and a little time will work the cure.

"In closing this report I desire again to thank those who received us in the many districts visited, and who willingly gave us all information within their power; also those who, when we returned from our visits at unexpected periods, put to their homes so that we were enabled to rest and recruit for further work."

She Was Wound Up.

A decidedly pretty young lady, with a penchant for bicycling, had an experience which jarred her, the other day. She quite startled the sedate Long down Mary Place. As she whirled around the corner at Ninth street on her wheel, she ran against a man, who gave a little scream and slackened pace. Slower and slower she went, but in spite of frantic efforts could not dismount. At last there was a sound of tearing cloth. The wheels stopped revolving entirely. The young girl got off, looked for a second, and then toppled over among the dry, rustling leaves by the curbstone. The poor girl's skirts had gradually wound into the bearings of the machine, and before she was aware of it, she was bound and hobbled as tightly to the seat as possible. Horrors! A strange young man with cigarettes were coming to her assistance, and she could hardly move a muscle, to say nothing of screaming for help.

"Ay, I say old man, wint the deuce, eh, I'll be hia-wated if it isn't a girl, don't ye think?"

And it was a girl. And in a very few minutes and a workman position, too, but tried to make the best of a bad bargain. She pulled her pretty little cap down over her eyes and her face flushed a crimson as she stood as steadily as she could.

"I've caught my dress in the wheel, I will say," she said, and then hesitated of standing there with your mouth open?"

This seemed to have an invigorating effect upon the young men and they, appreciating the situation at last, went to work to rescue the young woman in very sensible and business-like fashion. They righted the combination of girl and bicycle, but pull and tug as they would, the flannel shirt had a death grip on the machinery. At last it became evident that there was but one thing to do, and she said so herself. While the young men held the wheel upright the pretty rider, with a deft movement, disengaged herself out of the heavy overskirt and waited on the walk until it was carefully unwound by the rescuers.

In relating the experience afterward to a girl acquaintance, she said:

"You may imagine how I felt as I stood watching those boys unreel my skirt from the wheel. They rolled it up in a handy sort of bundle and handed it to me. They tried in an awful way not to laugh, but I just know they were dying to all the time. I thought I should drop. When they left me and went on, I took that old skirt right under my arm and rode home by my—er—bloomers you know, and went to bed."—Minneapolis Journal.

Died of Grief.

Mrs. Frein Gazette, a German widow about 50 years of age, died suddenly about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the grave of her husband, Jacob Gazette, who was buried last Wednesday in Lakewood cemetery, Minneapolis. The deceased had come out to the cemetery with her sister and another lady about 3 o'clock, and had gone to the grave of Mrs. Gazette's husband, which is situated about 1,000 feet from the Hennepin avenue entrance to the cemetery. Supt. A. W. Eckart, looking out some time later, saw that the woman had fallen over her husband's grave. She was carried into the office, but died almost immediately. Dr. Steele was sent for and after a hasty examination decided that she had died from heart disease, caused by excessive grief.

LOWER FARM PRICES.

ABANDONMENT OF RECIPROCITY REDUCES EXPORTS OF FLOUR.

The Millers of St. Louis Show Their Love of Trade With Cuba—Built Up by Reciprocity, It Is Now Entirely Destroyed.

Mills Built as a Monument to Democracy.

Down with reciprocity is a great cry of the free trader because reciprocity has extended the market for our farm products. The free trader might just as well be brutally honest and cry, "Down with the American farmer!" for that is what he really means, as the following correspondence shows:

Answering your inquiry, would say that from the most careful inquiry of manufacturers, shippers and others, and from the most reliable statistics obtainable, it is estimated that for the 12 months previous to the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty with Cuba and other Spanish-American countries there were shipped from America about 1,000,000 barrels of flour, say equivalent to 15,000,000 bushels of wheat, and that a little more than 1,000,000 barrels of this flour went from St. Louis and mills tributary to St. Louis and largely controlled by St. Louis merchants and manufacturers.

Under the reciprocity treaty the duty on the Cuban markets was about 60 cents per barrel on flour. Since the abrogation of the treaty it is a little over $6 per barrel, and since the passage of the Gorman bill there has been no business in flour between this section of the country and Cuba. And those who speculate of this treaty there has been no corn shipped from the country to these countries because the duty is now placed. Instead the corn and flour commerce before there was annually shipped from this section of immediate neighborhood about 1,000,000 bushels, besides large quantities of oats, hay and bran.

And this business, I am now informed, is entirely abandoned.

A good many of the flouring mills of this section were built for the purpose of doing this from the loss of this trade and from other causes industrial are to-day in a precarious condition. Yours very truly,

R. O. STANARD,
President R. O. Stanard Milling Company.
St. Louis.

Inclosed we hand you a communication from the Kaufman Milling company which you can depend upon as being reliable, as they are in possession of data which justify them in giving expression to the facts contained in their communication.

In keeping with another St. Louis miller he states the St. Louis millers proper have furnished about 500,000 barrels of flour for each experiment alone, to say nothing of the South American furnishings. The loss of this interchanged says his firm alone have been shipping 2,000 barrels per year, and that is so, you will see a very large outlet for breadstuffs has been cut off at one fell swoop. Instead of the American and Cuban trade, much to their dissatisfaction and disgust, they are receiving.

STEPHAN A. BEMIS,
Bemis Bro. Bag Company.
St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS.

MR. S. A. BEMIS, City:

DEAR SIR—Answering your favor, would say we are able to give you some reliable information in reference to the matter, and we are not ashamed to stand our statement to the paper. Our agent, Mr. Pahlke of Havana, is now in the office, and is prepared to substantiate that in round numbers the amount of flour consumed on the island per year would be about 1,000,000 bags per annum. The population of the island is 1,600,000 souls. If we figure about 20 pounds of flour per capita for consumption, bran and shorts not counted, why should they not use 1,000,000 barrels, or 1,000,000 bags of cotton sacks supplied? This brought out the information that Cuba, Spain, Germany, previous to the reciprocity treaty with America, consumed almost all of their flour importations, and Spain, with an even dried meat, salted tongues, and that only to some extent, and Germany and Cuba prior to the reciprocity relations established with the United States would probably not be much over 400,000 bags of flour per annum. This shows that only by the reduced prices the consumption of breadstuffs in the island has been increased, and now again under the retaliation duties the loss of four and one-half millions of the prospects are that consumption will again fall to the figures of 1891, and the benefits before the reciprocity treaty went into effect. Owing to the position of St. Louis in the Mississippi valley the bulk of American flour going to Cuba was shipped from here, and the millers here have felt the loss of this trade to the extent of four and one-half millions, and be confined to shut down entirely or go on half time and seek other outlets. What is said of the island of Cuba may also be said, in a lesser degree, of the island of Porto Rico and those states are affected by the abrogation of the reciprocity relations. Respectfully,

F. E. KAUFFMAN,
Vice President Kauffman Milling Company.

The foregoing correspondence shows very clearly how unfit reform and free trade affect the farmer by checking the demand for American farm products, thus adding to the surplus supply and further cheapening the value on the farm. At the same time the farmer has to purchase more for the sugar that he receives from Cuba.

In confirmation of the foregoing statement we quote the following from The Northwestern Miller: "The flour market was more inactive last week. Sales amounted to 109,000 barrels. There was an appreciable decline in export; export shipments, 46,110 barrels, against 47,760 prev'ous week, 58,090 in 1893 and 85,740 in 1892."

MANIAC'S DEED

Horrible Butchery Committed by a Missouri Youth While Insane.

FOUR OF THE FAMILY DEAD.

Hacked to Pieces With an Ax and Their Bodies Cremated.

MONTGOMERY, Mo., Nov. 20.—A terrible tragedy was committed at 3 a. m. about two miles from Wellsville. At that place lived Thomas Portegchek, his mother, two sisters and a brother, all Bohemians. It appears that Thomas Portercheck complained Sunday evening that his head was hurting him and said that he believed his neck was broken, and refused to go to bed. At 3 o'clock in the morning he secured an ax and killed his widowed mother, his sister and his brother.

While he was murdering his mother, sister and brother his other sister, Mary, made her escape by jumping through the window. She stood on the outside, and looking through the window, saw her maniac brother saturate the room with coal oil, set it on fire and then gash himself with a knife, in the throat. He sank down and all four bodies were consumed in the burning house.

By the time the neighbors got to the unfortunate man the house was all ablaze, too late to rescue the bodies. The mother was an invalid and had been confined to her bed for 12 years.

The murderer was a quiet and inoffensive man, but was not generally supposed to be bright. He was, however, thought to be harmless. His sister noticed nothing unusual with him except that he was irritable and spoke harshly. He complained of a severe pain in the back of his head and said that it felt like someone was boring into his brain behind his ear.

INSURANCE SWINDLERS.

Three Indictments Returned in the Pitzel Case at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—The grand jury has found a true bill against Herman Mudget, alias H. H. Holmes, now a prisoner in Boston; Jeptha D. Howe, the St. Louis lawyer who collected the insurance money on P. F. Pitzel's policy for the latter's widow, and the widow herself. The indictment reads for "conspiracy to cheat and defraud."

Alexander McKnight, vice president of the Fidelity Mutual company, made the following statement to a representative of the Associated Press: "While the suspicion has grown until we are nearly positive that B. F. Pitzel was murdered, the only chance for making the grand jury was that of conspiracy to defraud."

HOWE IS ARRESTED.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 20.—Jeptha D. Howe, an attorney of this city, has been arrested on the charge of conspiring with one H. H. Holmes to defraud the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance company of Philadelphia out of $10,000. Attorney Howe was taken before Chief Harrigan at the four courts. At the conclusion of the conference Howe was released on a $5,000 bond.

ONE OF THE GANG PEACHED.

Plot to Rob a Pay Car Frustrated by Officers.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Nov. 20.—A plot to rob a pay car near this city was discovered in time to prevent the crime. It appears that it was the intention of several strangers and a man living in this city to remove a rail on the Eckhard branch, ditch the train and rob the pay car of about $25,000 which was to be used in paying off the miners. The plan was arranged and everything was in readiness when one of the men weakened and told Superintendent Hamilton. Sheriff King and detectives armed with Winchesters boarded the special train which leaves the city about 10 o'clock, carrying the pay car, and rode to Eckhard without accident. It is thought that the rest of the gang learned of the exposure of the scheme and made good their escape.

Ericsson Failed Again.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 20.—The torpedo boat Ericsson made another attempt to go over the course on her speed trial but found the water too rough and was compelled to return. Everything is in readiness for the trial, and it only requires good weather to have it take place.

THE OFFICIAL VOTE.

Nelson's Plurality 69,314 in a Total Vote of 320,004.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 17.—Official returns have sent the total vote of the state up to 295,001, nearly 40,000 more than were cast for governor in 1892. By the official canvass Nelson is elected governor by a plurality of 69,314, but his majority over all is wiped out and there is an opposition majority of 411. The vote stands: Nelson, 147,326; Owen, 86,981; Becker, 53,360; Hilleboe, 6,775. The other Republican candidates on the state ticket are elected by pluralities ranging from 35,972 for Judge Collins to 78,000 for Lieutenant Governor Clough. The Republican candidates for congress, with the exception of Eddy in the Seventh district are elected by pluralities ranging from 1,200 for Heatwole to nearly 14,000 for McCleary. Eddy is elected by 781.

DEALT A DEATH BLOW

PUGILIST KILLED IN A BOUT WITH FITZSIMMONS.

It Happened in a Syracuse Theatre, and Is Said to Have Been Purely Accidental—Lived Only a Few Hours After the Occurrence.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Riordan, the pugilist, who was knocked unconscious by Fitzsimmons, the coming opponent of Champion Jim Corbett, died at the Candee House at 3:30 a. m. At about 3 o'clock he was in the same state of unconsciousness which he had been in all evening, when his laborious breathing and nervous twitching of the muscles of his face and body warned the physicians that his death was approaching. At 3:15 o'clock his breathing had almost entirely stopped, and at 3:30 Dr. D. M. Totman pronounced him lifeless. At his bedside at the time of his death were three physicians and about 20 members of the local sporting fraternity. Fitzsimmons when informed of his death was much affected and burst into ache. Fitzsimmons was held in $16,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter.

BREAD RIOT.

Unpaid Employes of the City of Chicago Make Things Interesting.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—A large detail of police was called out at noon to quell a bread riot in the city hall. Two hundred and fifty discharged employes of the water department gathered about the comptroller's office demanded the wages due them. The comptroller sent a clerk to inform the men that there was no money in the city treasury to pay them. Instantly the crowd became riotous. Cries for bread and threats of instant vengeance were howled forth by the angry crowd and the comptroller, gathering his clerks, barred the doors to his offices and sent a hurried call for policemen.

Officers Hustled Out.

A half dozen officers appeared, but were promptly rushed out of the corridor by the thoroughly aroused men. A battalion of patrolmen was summoned and after a liberal use of force the rioters were clubbed into submission and driven from the city hall. The large crowd which had been attracted by the disturbance was heartily in sympathy with he ex-employes and threats to compel instant payment of the overdue wages were numerous, until the police succeeded in dispersing the throng.

SURROUNDED BY CHEROKEES.

The Cook Gang Making a Desperate Effort to Escape.

MUSKOGEE, I. T., Nov. 20.—War with the Cooks is going on in the vicinity of Verdigris river, about 20 miles from here. The bandits are massed in force and have more than a match in a squad of Cherokees who have been surrounding them up for several days. No open battle has yet taken place, but there has been a great deal of skirmish fighting, and both sides are preparing for a death struggle. Full 16 of the Cook gang are together, and Bill Cook is leading them in person. The Cherokees would have forced the fighting before now were it not for the fear of running short of ammunition before the battle was over. The Cherokees consequently dispatched Sheriff John Brown to this city for a full supply of ammunition, and he has just arrived here, bringing the information already given. The sheriff will leave here in the morning with all the supplies needed and a strong guard.

BARRED BY DENMARK.

That Country Follows Germany's Example Regarding Our Cattle and Meat.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 20.—The minister of the interior, M. Hoerring, has issued a decree, to take effect immediately, forbidding the import of live cattle and fresh meat from the United States.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Count Reventlow, the Danish minister, first heard of the action of Denmark in excluding American beef and meats through the Associated Press cable from Copenhagen. The count expressed surprise, as no action in that line had been contemplated. He said the action was probably due to a request from Germany, as beef received at Danish ports frequently finds its way into Germany and thus overcomes the German restriction. Count Reventlow says Denmark uses very little American beef or meat product.

Two More Hinckley Victims.

DULUTH, Nov. 19.—Two more victims of the Hinckley forest fires have been discovered. One was Captain LeBrocne, master of the steamboat Cumberland, on Grass lake. The other could not be identified. The bodies were found on Kettle river, near the northern limit of the burned district.

Extending the Civil Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—It is expected that an order will be issued by the president in a day or two making a large number of offices heretofore outside the civil service system subject to examinations under the direction of the civil service commission. It is understood that the extension will include postoffices.

CHINA-JAPAN INCIDENT CLOSED.

Office of the United States to Act as Mediator Not Accepted.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The China-Japan incident, so far as the United States' offer of mediation is concerned, is considered closed, for the present, by the action in question, is understood, the situation. At the state department and at the Chinese and Japanese legations, there is only negative information to the effect that no positive answer to the American suggestion of mediation has been received. While it is believed to be literally true, so far as Japan's answering by a positive acceptance or declination of the suggestion, yet those well informed on the subject say Japan has made her position clear to this government, in such a way to avoid the embarrassment of a positive declination, and yet to show that an acceptance would have to be based on certain definite conditions. It is said that Japan could state this position with such expressions of good will for the kindly motives of the United States and such hopes that the time might come in the future when the good offices of this country would be most acceptable, but would rather increase the good feeling between Japan and this country.

Italy Cash Approves Intervention.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A special dispatch from Rome says that Italy has informed the powers that she cannot approve of any form of intervention between China and Japan.

HIGHEST IN A CENTURY.

English Floods Unprecedented—Great Suffering Among the People.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Stormy weather and floods continue to prevail over the south part of England, and the loss of life and damage to property is increasing greatly. At Bath, Somersetshire, the river Avon has reached the highest point of the century. Thousands of people are homeless and are being fed by the authorities in various schools and other public buildings. Dispatches received here from Dover say that the gale is blowing with renewed violence. Several ships have been washed ashore along that portion of the coast. The floods in Sussex are increasing. Many houses at Windsor and Eaton have been flooded. At Worthing, Sussex, the bodies of seven drowned sailors have been washed ashore.

LAST OF THE DEAD CZAR.

Remains of Alexander III Entombed at St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 20.—The entombment of the remains of the late Czar Alexander III took place in the cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul. The cathedral was packed with people, including representatives of all the imperial and royal families of Europe.

The general services began at 10:30 a. m., and lasted until 4 o'clock. Over thirty members of the royal families of Europe attended by glittering suites were present.

After the long service the czarina, the czar and others present took a last farewell of the remains of Alexander III. The czar then laid the imperial mantle over the body and the coffin was carried by the pall bearers and certain of the princes to its tomb.

Change of Venue Granted.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Judge Gibbons has granted the Pullman Palace Car company a change of venue from his court in its petition filed some weeks ago, to quo warranto proceedings brought by Attorney General Maloney. The suit will probably go before Judge Baker.

CANADIAN EXCURSIONS.

Between November 20th and December 31st, 1894, you can go from points in northern Minnesota, North Dakota and Manitoba on the Northern Pacific railroad, to Montreal and principle points in Ontario for for the round trip. These tickets will be sold from stations as far west as Jamestown, N. D., on the main line, and at all stations on the Jamestown and Northern branch and at all stations between Winnipeg Junction and including Winnipeg, Brandon and Portage La Prairie, and will be good for 90 days from date of sale.

$40.00

Sale of Tickets

From Manitoba points, Nov. 20th, daily to Dec. 31st, inclusive. From northern Minnesota and North Dakota points, Nov. 20th, 27th, Dec. 4th and Dec. 18th, daily to Dec. 31st, inclusive.

Limit of tickets will be extended upon certain conditions, which information you can obtain from your ticket agents.

Special Notice

Is drawn to the fact that on Tuesdays in December the Northern Pacific will run Pullman tourist upholstered sleeping cars from Manitoba to St. Paul, making direct connection with daylight trains having parlor car from St. Paul to Chicago, and making direct connection there for Canadian points. Only $1.00 for a double lower berth in tourist sleeping car.

For more detailed information regarding the above, call on any Northern Pacific ticket agent, or Lamy Mathews, traveling passenger agent Grand Forks, C. E. Lang, traveling passenger agent, Winnipeg, or Chas. S. Fee, general passenger agent, St. Paul, Minn.

McGann a Winner.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Congressman Lawrence E. McGann comes under the wire a winner, the only democrat elected in Chicago. The finish of the official count gave him a plurality of 70 votes over Belknap, Rep., who was supposed to have overwhelmed McGann in the general landslide. McGann's success makes him a dangerous rival of John P. Hopkins for the Democratic mayoralty in the spring.

The New Baseball Association.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—The circuit committee of the new baseball association met during the day, and the season will probably extend through several days. The association will consist of eight clubs, of which seven have been placed in Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, Brooklyn, Milwaukee, Washington and Pittsburg. There are four applications for the vacant franchise—St. Louis, Detroit, Boston and Buffalo.

Deceived the Strangler.

DENVER, Nov. 20.—It is reported in detective circles that the strangler who murdered three women on Market street has been located and will be arrested very soon. He is said to be a man in Denver's employ, but further particulars are obtainable as yet.

Coltns Is Active.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 20.—A sheet of flame from the volcano Colima, reaching to a height of several hundred feet, is lighting the country round for many miles. The inhabitants are terribly frightened.

Indian Flour Contract.

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., Nov. 15.—The Merchants' mill of Mitchell has been awarded a contract to furnish 200,000 pounds of flour to the Indians at Crow Creek and Lower Brule agencies.

Frazee Receives Knighthood.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Knte Field has been made an officer of public instruction by the French government, the highest distinction in the department of public instruction, for services rendered in literature and art.

Japanese Entrenched.

CHE-FOO, Nov. 17, 20.—Fighting occurred on Sunday last 20 miles from Port Arthur. The Japanese retired towards Tallenwan. The Chinese loss was 100. The Japanese loss is reported to have been 200.

An Indian Story.

Especially if it be a good one and full of useful information is always interesting.

I have a book beautifully illustrated, that tells muct about the Indians and the northwest, and the stupendous escape of one man from them in the early days.

It tells also of the Yellowstone Park, the greatest wonder of the natural world.

For only 6 cents in stamps and your address, I will send you the book.

"I Think Very Hard that the Buffet-Smoking Library Conch on the North-Western Limited between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago is the greatest institution in modern luxury travel I ever ran across—in fact rather rode in—and I have traveled a few miles myself since I was able to go it alone. That Conch means solid comfort to a fellow and makes a long journey a delightfully short one. By all odds it is the best feature of the best train I ever rode on."—The Globe-St. Paul.

THE Japs must have got onto Grover's little deal in Hawaii. At least they do not appear in any hurry to accept the mediation of our chief executive in the Chinese matters.

THERE'S to be another wolf hunt in Anoka county, and it is to be by Minneapolis gentlemen, too. We hope they will at least get one pelt to take back with them to the city by the water, and thus in a measure retrieve their lost ground of a year ago.

WE have to be satisfied with little crumbs of comfort in Polk county this fall, and have to one. The official count gives Eddy a gain in this county of 884 over Folz of two years ago, while Boen suffered a loss from his vote of 1892 of 539.

THE WARREN Register thus speaks of the late encounter: "The campaign of instructions waged by Owen, Donnelly, et al, was eminently successful. The people learned their lesson so well that they knew better than to place the state under the rule of the instructors and their destructive policies."

GOV. WAITE, of Colorado, never under a bigger mistake than when he supposed all women would support the Populist ticket. He was quite enthusiastic to have the ladies vote, but as they failed to cast their ballots for him, he now declares they should have some education in citizenship before they are privileged to vote. It looks like a case of "hoist by his own petard."

H. P. LOUGH, a money loaner of Fargo, is quoted by the Argus as saying that Eastern capitalists who had withdrawn their funds from North Dakota while it was under Populist rule, have written to him since election saying: "Now that the Republicans have redeemed your state you may send along your applications for loans as fast as you please." There is a whole political sermon in this brief sentence.

IN another column will be found a summarized report of the British delegates who visited Minnesota last summer. They all agree that mixed or diversified farming is the most profitable, and look for a great future for our fertile lands. They discourage the idea of large farms and suggest a smaller amount of land and better cultivation and attention, citing in support of this the experience of their own farmers and that of our eastern states.

HENRY WATTERSON must surely be jesting when he says in the Atlanta Constitution: "With the overwhelming verdict of the country against them; having been weighed in the balance and found wanting; after being repudiated by Democrats almost everywhere, would it not be the proper thing for the president and his entire cabinet to resign? The country has said in very emphatic tones that it would like to have them get out of the way." To be sure we had such a curiosity in Minnesota—a Democratic resignation—but then it was only done for effect, and in the belief that it would not be accepted.

THE Prison Mirror, a paper published by the inmates of the penitentiary at Stillwater, confines an editorial on the moral and religious training, or education, as they choose to call it, of children. Whether they are competent to speak on such a subject may be a matter of opinion, but that many of them are reaping the results of such neglect, there can be no doubt. The instance of the two boys recently hung in St. Paulis cited thus: "Take the case of the two young boys, just entering upon the threshold of man's estate, who were executed in St. Paul a few days ago, and what do we find; simply that they were ignorant of all that which goes to make the man, a moral education. It is not enough that man should know how to read and write; that he attend to several in science, art, or the many accomplishments that enter into life's employments, but he should be educated in spiritual things, through which a mighty Providence points out to us our destiny." Parents cannot be too careful as to where their children spend their leisure time, and especially evenings. It is only a short step from the street corner to the saloon, and only another step from the saloon to the penitentiary. If you don't know where your children are evenings, it is high time you found out.

THE ARMENIAN MASSACRE.

It seems almost impossible to believe our senses and the dispatches which record such atrocities as have been leuped upon that peaceful people, the Armenians. The inhuman conduct of Hernandez Cortez in Mexico, the barbarious Herod and the fires of the Spanish Inquisition pale before these modern acts of fiendishness. Maidens outraged and then stabbed to the heart; mothers with babes at their breasts turned overto the unfeathers of the bestial soldiery and then left to end with their infants planned to their still warm bodies by gore-stained bayonets; brides, raped and slain with their wedding veils still undoffed; baby girls mutilated by worse than beasts and then, with a sweep of a sword buried headless into the road. The Turks have always been considered as a bloodthirsty, murderous people, capable of almost any lawlessness, but the last act of those nomadic vampires, the Kurds, is what might have been expected of fiends from the bottomless pit; but never of human beings, and in this nineteenth century. And this was done by a lot of religious fanatics because the Armenians preferred their pure and simple worship, peaceful homes, chaste marriage relations and honor of women, to the Mussulman faith, with its degradation of woman, and profanation of the holy ties of home.

It is time the powers of Europe put a stop to the oppression of this people, and one word from them and such outrages would in all probability never occur again. The Turks have a healthy fear of England and would never dare permit such outrages if it was known that they would be visited with the punishment they deserve. In the name of the Christian religion and civilization Americn should protest against this outrage.

STRIKE COMMISSION REPORT.

The commission appointed by President Cleveland to inquire into and report upon the great railroad strike of last summer, known as the Pullman strike, and the causes which led up to it, have made their report.

They have not exercised the statesmanship and impartiality which could have been expected of such a body, and it is a question if they have not tried to please both sides, and pleased neither.

The strikers are set forth in the best possible light, while the General Managers' Association is scored for forming just such a combination as the strikers had formed, by their unions. This part is as might have been expected from the manner of taking evidence. The managers were subjected to a severe cross-examination, while the strikers were allowed to tell their story in pretty much their own way, and enabled to put the best possible face on their testimony. If organization is wrong in one instance, it is wrong in both, and if either, both organizations should have been put on an equal footing.

As to that part of the report dealing with the "moral tone" of railroad man, in which they censure, not only the scheme, but the promoters, we believe they are justified, as such schemes are wrong and un-American in principle, and lead to no end of trouble in their practical workings.

Their report on federal intervention and the maintenance of law and order is wishy-washy, distributing praise and blame, and finally disposing the subject with the simple quotation of the statutes governing such cases.

In the matter of prevention and cure they make some wholesome and judicious recommendations. They dispose of the idea of government ownership of railroads as impracticable, and not to be best interests of the country. A permanent strike commission is suggested, with similar powers to the inter-state commerce commission, and in order that the conclusions of this commission may be enforced it is desired to have the labor organizations incorporated, and in the event of their refusal to abide the mandate of the commission their charter be revoked. But in order to make this scheme operative it will be necessary to have the concurrence of labor organizations, of which there is much doubt. It is proposed that during the discussion of differences the employees be represented on the commission by one of their number, while the railroad be allowed a like representation. So far as this tends to reconciliation, it is all right, but the point they have signally failed to cover is the enforcement of obedience to the conclusions of the commission as regards employes.

Taken as a whole, the report is disappointing, as considerable was expected of this commission.

WE look with horror on the exploits of the Roman amphitheatre, and yet tolerate in this country something equally brutal — prize-fighting. Every little while a "knock out" results in death. This time "Con" Riordan is the victim, and "Bob" Fitzsimmons the murderer. A blow on the jaw sufficient to cause death cannot but be a heavy one, notwithstanding Fitzsimmons claim to the contrary. That it was not premeditated we do not believe, but Riordan is just as dead as though Fitzsimmons had purposely killed him, and any "sport" which affords one man an opportunity to kill another is heathenish and barbarous. Just so long as public sentiment upholds such brutality, just so long will we have "accidents" of this kind, and the law be found inequal to the suppression of it. There is something rotten in our social system which permits such exhibitions.

On Saturday afternoon while going down to the mill, the writer saw a small boy playing on the ice that fringes the bank across the river, while scarce twelve feet from him the river ran clear. The boy appeared to be a lad of 12 or 14 years of age, old enough to have known better, but he was playing about as unconsciously as though he was not in imminent peril, liable at any minute to slip into the water and break through the rotten ice. Had he fallen into the cold stream there would not have been one chance in a hundred for him to have been rescued, and yet for the sake of a few minutes enjoyment he was willing to risk his life. Parents cannot be too careful to see that their children do not venture upon the river while the ice is so unsafe. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" in cases of "accidental drowning," and if the boys will not take heed their parents should compel them to. As yet the ice on the river is utterly unsafe as a play ground.

ABOUT TOBACCO.

Cynical Sentiments as to Its Uses and Abuses and Its Narcotics.

Public sentiment is not unanimous in regard to the healthfulness of using tobacco. Everybody who saw the body of a negro upon whom a bogshead of tobacco fell from the third story of a New Orleans warehouse conceded that tobacco taken in large quantities is injurious.

Tobacco is said by some to have a demoralizing effect. An Indian man taught his dog, a very fine setter, to chew tobacco. Now the dog comes into the house by the back door, never scrapes his feet on the mat, never goes to church, is careless at his meals, and, in short, all goes with a lower grade of dogs and he is beginning to take an interest in politics.

A goat, it is well known, is fond of tobacco, but he freely gives away his butts.

All kinds of troubles and complications are ascribed to tobacco. It is said to cause tobacco blindness. Right we have never found any friends of ours to be afflicted with it when we have indiscriminately left a chobor of cigar exposed in our vest pocket.

Ladies generally object to smoking, but it takes an old smoker to get up on his ear and howl four blacked adjectives at the ruffian who is filling enough to smoke bad tobacco. If a woman's husband smokes, she should not pet him out, but let him down as easy as she would a smoking lamp.

The smoker, on the other hand, has many compensations. He could be a shipwrecked on a cannibal island, he is comforted by the thought that his body will be respected. The cannibals like to relish the flesh of a man who chews or smokes.

The man who smokes is not molested by mosquitoes. They can't stand smoking.—Detroit Free Press.

THE BEAR AND THE BRONCHO.

Tom Buckley Lassoed Brain and Then Boiled From the Right.

Tom Buckley was working on the spring roundup in the employ of one of the large cattle companies in southern Montana. While riding through a clump of bushes one day hunting cattle a full grown silver tip bear suddenly arose and confronted him. The only weapon at hand was his lariat, and with visions of juicy bear steak for the boys at supper around the mess wagon that night and a fine rug for the pretty schoolmarm he quickly loosened his rope and threw it. A few turns over the saddle horn, at the same time spurring his horse, and the shots came thick and very severe, for unluckily the bear's fore leg as well as his head was through the loop of the rope. Tom was afraid to drop the rope like a hot cake when the horse suddenly put his head down and started bucking in true broncho style.

Thomas didn't last long. He suffered when he struck the ground, but he did not linger in the vicinity to count up the extent of his injuries. He started for the top of a butte close at hand, and although an indifferent sprinter he managed to make very fair time.

Looking back from his position of comparative safety, he could see that both animals had become entangled in the rope and were having it out in great style, making frantic efforts to free themselves. The rope finally parted, and away they went in opposite directions, or as he expressed it, "They quit the country, hitting only the high spots."—Chicago Record.

A Woman's Argument.

How—You women have no right to the ballot for the simple reason that in case of a war you would not be able to fight.

She—Then why do you allow a man who is crippled to vote?

He—Why—e—if that isn't just like a woman to ask some such fool question as that.—Indianapolis Journal.

OFFICIAL RETURNS.

In Most Cases They but Swell Republican Majorities.

The Hailer Proprietary Co. challenge the world to produce a better remedy for barb wire cuts, sores galls and wounds of all kinds, than their Barb Wire Liniment. It heals quickly, leaves no scar, does not irritate and keeps away the flies. Their faith in this truly wonderful liniment is so great, and its endorsements from thousands who have used it are so strong, that they absolutely guarantee it. Sold by F. L. Kennett, druggist.

Hniller's Corn Cure gives instant relief. No more limping. It is easily applied. Bought in each bottle to kill forty or more misery-making corns. Ten dollar's worth of comfort for 25c. As a do-corner it has no equal, and if it as one does not benefit you call upon F. L. Kennett and have your money returned.

Money to Loan at Six Per Cent.

To purchase a good, improved farm lying two miles from city limits. A small cash payment secures the farm and the balance may run at six per cent interest per annum. The owner will sell the farm at a sacrifice as he wishes to employ his means in a different business. For full particulars call at the JOURNAL office. [25-tf.]

A Yearly Newspaper.

What would you think of a yearly newspaper—one that is only printed once through the twelvemonth? There is at least two such in the world, and there may be more. One is called The Maritime Bulletin. It is issued every year at Prince of Wales' Cape, Bering strait, on the arrival at that isolated place of the yearly steamer. This brings news from the outer world, and the paper that has something to print besides its local news, that everybody knows at home. The other paper is printed in Paris, and it comes out once a year now, just to preserve its name, The Twentieth Century. Its publishers think that will be a very fine name for a journal when the nineteenth century is actually here, and for fear some one will get ahead of them in it they will issue their paper once a year until 1900, and thus be first in the field.—New York Times.

The Just Fear of God.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust, but if we work upon immortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellow man, we survive on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

To California.

If you are going to California to remain for the winter, take the Northern Pacific and Shasta route, and go comfortably in a warm, double windowed, vestibuled train, having dining cars that remain with the train.

You will see via this line the finest scenery in the United states. No other route to California can compare with it in this respect.—this is fact, not fiction.

Mt. Adams, Mt. Rainier, more than 14,000 feet high. Mt. Hood, Mt. St. Helens, Mt. Shasta, form a group of mountain peaks that can be seen from the cars, and constitute the grandest mountain scenery of the country.

Work For All Is England.

But it is the chemical trade which will benefit mostly from the new tariff, and a remarkable revival therein is anticipated, especially in soda, the duty on which is reduced from $35 to $12.50. The Weldon chemical manufacturers express like opinions. Mr. Morrison, local manager of the United Alkali company, does not expect the improvement immediately. He looks for the advantage to show itself gradually and not much before the end of the year. About 600 men have been stopped of late in the alkali works of Widnes, about 10 per cent of the whole, and most of those employed are working half time. Mr. Morrison anticipates that before long work will be found for all hands.—London Commerce.

Food For Thought.

With a crop of 600,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1891, under McKinley protection, the average price was 88 cents per bushel. With a crop of only 400,000,000 bushels in 1893, under Democracy, it averages only 53 cents. Put this in your pipe, farmers, and think it over.

You Bet It Has.

"What has this Democratic free trade congress done?" asked the rural stump speaker in strident tones of indignation. As he paused for a reply a man with a big double bass voice answered, "It has done the American people."—Washington Star.

A MARTYR TO INDIGESTION

Cured by Using

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Words of Comfort to All who Suffer from Dyspepsia.

"For years, I was a martyr to indigestion, and had about given up all hope of ever finding relief, as the complaint only seemed to grow worse instead of better under ordinary treatment. At last, I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and I here testify that after using only three bottles, I was cured. I can, therefore, confidently recommend this medicine to all similarly afflicted."—S. J. FRANKLIN BECK, Avoca, Ia.

Knute Nerland, who has for some time been attending bar for T. G. Thompson, has resigned his position and goes to Phenix, Arizona. He has been in quite poor health, which is his main reason for wanting a change of climate. His friends wish him a safe journey and restoration to health.

The Grand Forks Daily Herald of Sunday contains the following amusing yet serious item: "Some time ago The Herald made note of the fact that a case of probably genuine Asiatic leprosy had been located in the western part of the county. A few days ago the victim, Chris Olson, a boy of sixteen, was taken to the county poor house at Arvilla. As soon as the inmates discovered that one of their number was a leper it is alleged that seven of them suddenly recovered their health and took a hasty departure from the institution. The county could hardly object to this outcome of the affair, but Supt. Fadden is also mourning the loss of the cook who suddenly discovered a better situation elsewhere."

The editor having reached the JOURNAL that Knute Nerland took a bride away with him, a visit to the clerk of the court's office revealed the fact that he had procured a marriage license at least.

A LEADER OF THE 400

COMMODORE GERRY HAS A UNIQUE AND INTERESTING PERSONALITY.

He Has Many Fads and Is Particularly Interested In Yachting and the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, of Which He Is President.

Commodore Elbridge Thomas Gerry, who has recently figured in many heated encounters over the rights and wrongs of children, is a grandson of that Elbridge Gerry who signed the Declaration of Independence, was governor of Massachusetts and invented the justly oeslaimated "gerrymander." He laid off a congressional district so as to include in it all the strong Federalist sections, and as it bore a ludicrous resemblance to a salamander the wits of that day combined the words and gave us a title only too familiar in these days.

The family has always been hard headed and strong of will, and Governor Gerry's father was a truly obstinate Englishman who came over to Marblehead as a merchant and was a noted man there from the start.

He got rich, however, and the family has been growing richer ever since. The present Gerry printed millions and married millions more, taking one of the richest ladies of the famous Livingston family. In New York he is popularly rated at $30,000,000 and pays over $100,000 taxes yearly on his real estate.

COMMODORE ELBRIDGE T. GERRY.

His favorite diversion is in his famous steam yacht, which cost over $400,000, and he got his title by being elected commodore of the New York Yacht club.

He is a devout Episcopalian and a lawyer, but does not work at it much and devotes most of his activities to the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, of which he has been president since 1879. He began this work as counsel for the Aid society in 1870 and was chief founder of the new society in 1874.

He was born in New York city on Christmas day, 1837, and few men of his age are so vigorous. Since he took charge of it the society has taken over 21,000 children out of the slums or away from cruel parents and guardians and furnished them with good homes, has prosecuted about 1,000 men and women for mistreating children and convicted many. Little tots who could scarcely walk on their emaciated legs were taken from the streets, where their worthless parents had driven them to beg, peddle or sell newspapers, and thousands of these are now healthy, happy and well to do young men and women. But he has had great trouble with his agents, as every man must who undertakes any reform in the slums of New York. Again and again he has found that they were bribed or badly influenced in other ways. Then there would be an explosion, a general reconstruction and a new start.

So far the general public was with him, but when he sought to prevent children from appearing on the stage there was a great difference of opinion. He succeeded in securing the passage of a law prohibiting children from singing or dancing in public unless with the approval of the society. This made him a veritable censor of the stage, and a great fight there has been about it. Many a child which was to sing a song or do a little dance in public had to first go through a rehearsal where the commodore was all the audience, and in many cases he has put a veto on the performance. The mayor has often opposed him, and the police have been unfriendly, but his vote is final. In 1888 he caused Mayor Hewitt to revoke the license of Josef Hoffman, the 11-year-old pianist, and in defense of his action made sweeping charges against the drama generally.

He said that a law legalizing child acting would be a law for the destruction of morals and incidentally added that New York city contained 9,000 saloons and 56,000 varieties of disorderly lives. Then there was a storm. Good judges think, however, that he proved his case. When, however, he followed this with a broadside to the effect that the American people are deteriorating and that the schools in cities are to blame largely the cause of it, he once more had the good people to contend with. He stood up strenuously for his views and explained that the trouble was that the schools were controlled by a political machine, and that the only remedy was to go back to the time honored custom of teaching religion in them.

The commodore is one of the central muscles of the inner ring of the Four Hundred, which is said to contain but 15 families, the Livingstons at the head. The five republicans are descent from a famous colonial or revolutionary family, inherited wealth, culture, intellect and an unbroken family record for honesty, patriotism and morality. The Gerrys have had this record for 164 years and the Livingstons for 260 years in America and 120 years before that in Scotland, and as the commodore married a Livingston his beautiful daughter and only child is properly ranked as a princess royal of the Four Hundred.

GREAT LABOR UNION.

Question of Uniting All Organizations in One Body Discussed at New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 17.—The K. of L. were in session three hours, adjourning just before 1 o'clock. The morning session was consumed in listening to an address by George Howard, vice president of the American Railway union, who had been specially invited to attend the session of the convention. Mr. Howard presented a proposition for the consolidation of all the different labor organizations of the country into one vast body, under a single board of managers and with an amalgamation of interests. He believed that if such a plan were adopted, labor would be benefitted and would be in a position the more completely to have its wrongs redressed and the more speedily to obtain its rights.

Grand Master Sovereign also spoke in favor of the plan proposed by Mr. Howard, which he recommended as possessing elements of advantage that it would not be well to overlook. No business was transacted during the session, but there was a general discussion of views on the proposition of Howard.

Debs' Case Postponed.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—President Debs and Secretary Kelliher of the American Railway union appeared before Judge Grosscup, in the United States district court, to plead to the indictments returned against them for conspiracy in connection with the great railway strike. Owing to the absence of Judge Woods the case was continued to Dec. 4, when arguments of the defense to quash the indictment will be heard. Should the motion to quash be overruled, the hearing will be had on Jan. 5.

MOVING THE CROP.

Vast Quantities of Wheat on the Great Northern Line.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., Nov. 17.—Superintendent C. H. Jonks of the Great Northern says it will take at least 30 days yet to move the immense wheat crop on the Valley lines. The pressure and demand for cars amounts almost to a blockade. In addition to the company's own large equipment and 500 cars leased from the Soo, a large number of cars have just been secured from the Burlington, but the facilities are yet scarcely equal to the demand. Since farming machine has stopped plowing farmers are rushing wheat into market. Another month will see the bulk of the crop in the market. Shipments out of stock are for the most part finished.

NON-PARTISAN COMMISSION.

Mayor Hopkins Will Create One to Look After the Police.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—As a result of the agitation of the question of police reform, Mayor Hopkins has announced his determination to create a non-partisan commission to control the department. Heretofore the department has been under the absolute control of the mayor, and the method adopted is, Mayor Hopkins says, the only one which could effectually force the police force from politics. He will appeal to the legislature for the enactment of laws that will make the change permanent.

News May Touch.

FITZSIMMONS, Nov. 14.—Justice Dean of the state supreme court handed down an opinion in the case of John Hysong et al vs. Sheriff Gallinger of Guilford borough, an appeal from Judge Barker, of the courts below, who refused an injunction to prevent teaching in the public schools dressed in the garb of their order. Justice Dean affirms Judge Barker's decision.

The Childish Voice Too Much.

A good story is told of Signor Foli, the famous basso. Once upon a time he was singing "The Rats." When a child-like voice from somewhere in the stalls suddenly piped in and attempted to organize an impromptu duet. Unfortunately the next line of the song was: "Hark! What sound is that which breaks upon mine ear?" This so tickled the fancy of the great vocalist that he burst into a hearty fit of laughter and left the platform, followed by the pianist. Twice they came back and attempted to proceed, but finally they had to give it up in despair, much to the amusement of the audience.

Teachers Will Strike.

The teachers of cooking in the Boston public schools are paid $45 for their first year's work, with an annual increase of $48 until the maximum of $744 is reached. The director of the cooking schools is paid $1,000.

CELLULOID FASHION PLATES.

You Can Will Them In With a Background of Neat Cloth.

One of the cleverest exhibitions of the fertile Yankee brain which has been put upon the market recently is a set of fashion plates for tailors. These plates are printed upon sheets of celluloid. Each sheet is 19¼ inches long and 7¾ inches wide. Before the printing is made these sheets are as transparent as glass.

There are six sheets in a set. Upon one is a print of a fashionable pair of trousers, and upon the others full length figures of men dressed in the accepted style of clothing. One print shows the single breasted sack suit, another the double breasted sack suit, another the regulation three button cutaway suit, another the one button cutaway suit for stout men, and the last a fashionable overcoat. In each figure the print of a man, and he is hatted and gloved and provided in some with a cane.

The prints seem to be made at first in black outline, with all the proper shades to show the creases and folds as they should be in well fitting garments. All the parts of the figures except the garment or garments which each figure is to display particularly are then filled in with appropriate colors, and the background around the figures is filled in solidly with gold bronze.

Looked at casually, one does not discover the peculiarity of the plates at once. Hold one up to the light, and it will be seen that the parts devoted to garments are as clear as glass, except for the light shading which indicates folds or creases. Lay one of them over a piece of cloth, and the lines of the plates becomes manifest at a glance. The texture of the cloth shows through clearly, and the figure appears to be clothed in perfect fitting garments of the underlying material.

Do you wonder how a suit, an overcoat or a pair of trousers of some certain cloth would appear when made up, you place a plate over it, and, lo, there is the garment in all its perfection. That is the purpose of the novel fashion plates.—New York Sun.

AN ODD WATERING TROUGH.

Whole Generations of Biddies Get Drink From an Indian Mortar.

The notice made by an Indian woman pounding corn in a rock mortar enabled the brave old fighter, Colonel Benjamin Church, to secure the person of Annawan, the right hand man of King Philip, in 1676. There is hardly a town included in the Nipmuc country but has one or more of these crude pills of the red men. Grafton or Harrumanisco holds an immense one on the road to Kitville, not far from the last settlement of that tribe and near the battlefield on Keith hill, where Philip's men came to grief. There were certain places resorted to by the Indians for growing their corn, and as far as their tillage extends they were usually on the hillsides.

Some of the small mortars have no doubt been removed from their original places, but others remain where they were used, their site as unchanged as the soapstone vessels used by the Nipmucs are of various sizes and have been numerously found in Millbury and Sutton. Along the streams, in clefts of rocks and on the highest points of land they have been unearthed, many broken and others in perfect condition. I have in mind one which lies in the virgin forest of Millbury, weighing perhaps 75 pounds and within 50 rods of Ramshorn stream. All that is known of its history is that the occupants of the farm had for generations used it as a watering trough for beasts.—Worcester Gazette.

Hiram Powers' Birthplace.

As beautiful in its small way as any foreign ruin is the birthplace of Hiram Powers, America's first great sculptor. Unlike the relics of prehistoric Europe, it is a "civilized ruin," which shows that young America is growing old. Nestling among the verdant hills of Woodstock, Vt., a ruined foundation and a great chimney, overgrown with wild grape vines, which have also climbed to the top of the old balsam tree that once shaded the homestead doorway, mark the site of "the old Hiram Powers place." It overlooks one of Vermont's most fertile valleys and the winding Ottaquechees, on the other side of which the imaginative genius of the boy Powers was wont to see the splendid and glistening form of a beautiful woman, which he repeatedly tried to reach and which in later years he so materialized in his "Greek Slave."—Boston Commonwealth.

Michael Angelo.

Michael Angelo was equally great as painter, sculptor and architect. In order to paint figures properly he devoted 10 years to the study of anatomy alone. His monument to Pope Julius II. was on so grand a scale that the Church of St. Peter in Rome was altered with a view to affording a suitable place for its reception. The tomb was afterward modified in plan and placed in another church. His "Last Judgment" required seven years to execute and was finished when the artist was 60 years old. A few weeks before his death the aged artist was met one day in the street walking through the snow with great difficulty. When asked where he was going, he replied, "To school to try and learn something."

"There is No Royal Road To public favor any more than to learning. This is true, in all events, in America where intrinsic excellence is necessary to secure and retain the popular favor. The reason The Northwestern Line is one of the most popular railroads is that its service is not only always up to date but away ahead of the date. In our opinion, this is the Best Line between Chicago and The Twin Cities."—The Excursionist, Chicago.

It is the finest train the day of Chicago, the finest train running out of the Twin Cities and is Luxurious Enough for a King!"—The Commercial Bulletin, Minneapolis.

LIARS IN POLITICS.

DEMOCRATS AT WASHINGTON DISSEMINATE FALSEHOODS.

A Complete Exposure of Their Modes and Methods—False Statements Concerning Advances In Wages and the Employment of Labor—A Homecamp.

A dispatch sent out from Washington, dated Sept. 24, by the Democratic congressional committee et the capital shows that it has resorted to the task of circulating lies by the wholesale, though it is certain the circulation is not much of a task for Democratic campaigners, coming more as a natural gift than a task.

Endeavoring to grope their way out of the slough of "perjury and dishonor," into which they are submerged up to their throttles, they grasp at any kind of a weed in their mad endeavor to avoid suffocation in the mire or extinction in the political quicksand that is beneath them.

They are trying to make the workers of the country believe that prosperity exists on every hand; that wages are being advanced just as rapidly as the employers can make out the higher pay rolls; that new factories are being built, old ones enlarged or improved—in fact, that the Gorman tariff is spreading peace, plenty and prosperity throughout the land.

In the statement issued from Washington Sept. 4 is one paragraph which we quote as follows:

"Rawitser Bros. of Stafford Springs, Conn., are mentioned as having satisfied with their dissatisfied weavers, giving them a 26 per cent advance in wages."

It is a very easy matter to find out the truth or falsity of such a statement, and it is rather surprising to know that Democratic campaigners, ordinarily of an average intellect, should descend to such gross perversion of facts, which, upon reflection, they themselves must own can be promptly exposed. Read the reply of Messrs. Rawitser Bros. of Stafford Springs, Conn., as follows:

RAWITSER & BRO., WOOL MANUFACTURERS, } STAFFORD SPRINGS, CONN.

DEAR SIR—We employ about 600 hands at present, and, as stated in trade, we generally employ about 600. From the 1st of July, 1893, to 1st of July, 1894, we have not employed more than 400 at any time, and those not more than half time in the average. During the hard times we were obliged to reduce wages throughout, and some of our weavers were paid 1¾ cents per yard in place of 2½, but when most of the mills in town got orders for some of their product after a long idleness, and a great many families had left town in the meantime, we found it necessary to raise the price for weaving to 2 cents per yard in order to keep our weavers and fill the orders we had accepted. Business is not good, and we think wages will be decidedly lower before a great while. Very truly,

RAWITSER & BRO.

This great Democratic boom of a 26 per cent advance in wages amounts, then, to resolve itself into the fact that the firm in question, instead of employing 800 hands on full time, as it used to do under undistorted protection, has not employed more than 400 at any time, and those not more than half time on the average during the 12 months ending July 1, 1894. It further appears that during the hard times brought about by the threat of free trade through the Democratic party the wages of the 400 weavers who were fortunate enough to be kept at work had been reduced from 2½ to 1¾ cents per yard.

It further appears that the advance that has recently been made was from 1¾ to 2 cents per yard, an advance of one-quarter cent per yard, and by no means a 26 per cent advance. It further appears that where 800 weavers were, under undisturbed protection, receiving 2½ cents per yard for their work at one time, there have been only 400 working for 1¾ cents per yard. Busy hands are now only receiving 2 cents per yard, which is one-quarter of a cent per yard less than they notually did receive before the threat of free trade cast its blight upon the woolen manufacturing industry.

This is a specimen of the deliberate lying and falsification to which the Democratic party is compelled to descend in the efforts to enrapture the people into a belief that the country is prosperous, whereas they themselves know that the reverse is the case, and that under the Democratic party, are the direct cause of the existing industrial depression. They lie by the wholesale.

Lessons From Importers.

"Great reductions on account of new tariff bill."

Yes, great reductions in work and in opportunities of employment, great reductions in wages and inability to buy the cheap things so industriously advertised.

"Great resumption of industry. Our store is crowded daily."

Our industries are not helped when the importer's store is crowded. It is the whir and rattle of the loom and the spindle and the hum of productive machinery that helps our industries. Activity in the importer's shop means activity of industry in Europe, not in America.

When Shall We Three Meet Again?

Democratic Theory Questioned.

If foreign farmers can ship their produce into our markets and undersell the produce of American farms, how will it profit our farmers to ship American produce to those same markets—the markets of the world?

FREE TRADE AND FREE BREAD.

Two Evils That Travel Hand In Hand and Reduce People to Poverty.

Free trade and free bread go hand in hand, but they are precious hard upon the American baker. There have been tens of thousands of people in the United States who have not earned money enough during the past year to buy bread with. There have been tens of thousands fed by charity, who have had the free loaf passed out to them by the New York World, which first urged the people to vote for a policy that would deprive them of work and force them to beg, starve, steal or be the recipients of charity. The next step of the organ of destruction was to seize upon its ruinous handiwork and make capital out of it by inaugurating a great advertising scheme for itself at the expense of the wage earners. People would rather go to the bakery and buy their own bread than have it doled out to them by charity. It would be better for the baker too. The baker cannot sell so many loaves over his counter when his customers are being fed by charity with bread contracted for in large quantities at a cheap price. The men who get free bread are dragged down to their condition of poverty by the great advertising schemers who also help to ruin the business of the retail bakery. Both the baker and the people would rather have the good old days of 1892 than the free trade and free bread days of 1894.

The Grange In Politics.

The tariff policy of the National Grange was announced in 1892 in these words: "The Grange has a tariff policy; it is the principle of equality as found in the Declaration of Independence and guaranteed to us in the constitution. Hence the Grange has unitedly insisted that all tariff laws shall 'protect' the product of the farm as well as the product of the factory." All honor to the Patrons of Husbandry. Let them vote as they teach. In the political campaign in Ohio in 1888 for the election of a governor, etc., the Democratic state executive committee issued a circular saying:

"The wool producing interest has a perfect right to demand of the United States government: 1. That it shall receive at such consideration and encouragement as are shown to any other interest whatsoever. 2. That as protection, by means of taxing importation of raw wool, has thus far proved highly beneficial to the farmers of Ohio, as evidenced by the continuous increase in the numbers and values of their flocks, this protection shall not be withdrawn as long as protective policy is pursued by the United States."

This was good doctrine then for all parties. It is good now.

How Savings Banks Grew.

During 88 years of protection the number of savings banks in the United States has increased by 752, the number of depositors by 4,136,729, the total amount of money deposited by $1,025,870,452, the average amount of money due to each depositor by $154.42, while the average amount of deposits has increased by $21.88 per capita of our population. There could be no surer proof of the progress of the country and of the prosperity of the people under protection than the facts here gleaned from the records of the savings banks.

Costly Democratic "Principles."

It cost "a trifle of £10,000,000 sterling" (£10,000,000) to interpret the German tariff so that goods in bond before its enactment might subsequently be admitted free of duty. "no small sum to pay for a principle." It costs $6,000,000 a year to pay a bounty to Hawaiian sugar producers, while the country contract with American sugar producers is 'repealed. Democratic "principles" are costly to the American people. Need we have them any longer?

About Five Pounds.

A bushel of wheat bought 20 pounds of sugar under McKinley protection. It buys only ten pounds of sugar under the first step toward free trade. How much will it buy with the absolute free trade that is promised to the farmer?

Too Many Good Things.

"Drought and Democracy coming at the same time is an unparalleled calamity," writes a farmer from Farragut, Ia.

RIVER IMPROVEMENT

COMPLETE REVOLUTION LIKELY TO RESULT

From Recent Experiments by the Government on the Lower Mississippi—Successful Dredging of Sandbars May Keep the River Open All Winter.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 17.—A complete revolution of the government system of river improvement is in prospect. Plans to that end have already been made, and some experimental work accomplished, which promises mutual benefit to St. Louis and the entire country.

The subject of dredging the Mississippi river along its whole navigable length is now receiving the earnest consideration of the members of the Mississippi river commission, three members of which are at present on an inspection tour of the big stream from this city to the gulf. Dredging the bars which at this season constitute a is a matter of deep concern to all the commercial interests of the central basin of states, and the announcement that plans are being perfected whereby a regular and continuous system of keeping the Mississippi free from these obstacles will be received with much satisfaction by thousands of people who are vitally interested in uninterrupted navigation at all seasons.

The commissions' committee on dredges and dredging, composed of Colonel Henry Flindt of this city, and Major B. H. Harrod of New Orleans, some time ago authorized and caused to be constructed a dredge for experimental purposes, and for the incidental improvement of the channel.

Two Experiments.

Thus far but two experiments of any consequence have been made. The first was at Cherokee bar, below Cairo, where a new channel was made, affording seven feet of navigable water, where only four and one-third feet had existed before the work began. The second trial of the machine's capacity was made at Devil's island, just above Cape Girardeau, with the same excellent result, although the conditions existing at the latter place were pretty bad.

It may be said, however, that this incidental work is no measure of the dredge's capacity if it were used continuously for the sole purpose of improving navigation.

Prospects Are Excellent.

The dredge now used is the first ever constructed here, although the same machine with some modifications has long been used upon the rivers of Germany with remarkable success. It is said at the office of the commission that the outlook for the establishment of a permanent dredging force with all needed apparatus was encouraging, and that river men could reasonably look forward to a clear channel from St. Louis to the gulf at all seasons, within a period of two years.

OUT OF ALL PROPORTION.

The Bureau of Engraving Takes Exception to the Postage Stamp Contract.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Officials of the bureau of printing and engraving think that the complaint of the inferior quality of the new postage stamps printed by the bureau are disproportionate to the grounds for dissatisfaction. Claude M. Johnson, chief of the bureau, admits that some of the product of the establishment is not up to the standard, but says: "Today we are printing as good stamps after three months' experience in the work as the American Bank Note company did after 20 years. There are naturally more or less difficulty in teaching the new workman all the processes of stamp making, but that a part of the product was more or less experimental, but all difficulties have been overcome. The stamps using the most modern machines, some of them invented here, is putting the best materials into the stamps, and in securing the best results, as we can distinguish to any fair minded person. We have redeemed all stamps which have been returned, and stand ready to exchange any others which do not prove satisfactory."

NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

Twenty-first Annual Convention in Session at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17.—The 21st annual convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union assembled in the Epworth hall shortly after 10 o'clock. Frances Willard presiding. The decorations of the big auditorium were artistic and profuse. After the preliminary work of the convention was completed Miss Willard delivered her annual address, which was received by the delegates, especially her with the two great bodies, the National W. C. T. U. and the Non-Partisan W. C. T. U. would soon come together.

The annual report of Mrs. Helen M. Barker, showed receipts: Dues, $14,704.99; other contributions, $11,824.41; total, $26,019.35; disbursements, $25,980; balance in treasury, $5,681 18. There are no outstanding bills.

W. C. T. U. Officers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The entire morning session of the Non-partisan W. C. T. U. convention was taken up by the election of officers. The results are as follows: National president, Mrs. C. C. Alford, Bernardstown, Mass.; vice president, Mrs. T. B. Walker, Minneapolis; general secretary, Mrs. Theodore C. Porter, Cariboo, Me.; treasurer, Mrs. H. M. Ingham, Cleveland.

Lexow Investigation to Resume.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Senator Lexow, of the senate investigating committee said that the investigation had been positively postponed until Dec. 1. "When we resume it will be just where we left off. We will open again in the city, adjourn at our way and go even keel, I hope."

NO LONGER IN DOUBT.

The Sugar Tax Adds $60,000,000 to the Burdens of the Poor People.

The bounty on raw sugar was 2 cents per pound, and the tariff duty is now 40 per cent ad valorem, or less than 2 cents per pound. Should we not, therefore, have cheaper sugar now than under the McKinley law?

ONE IN DOUBT.

The present duty on raw sugar will average 1.20 cents per pound on a basis of 3 cents as the average value of all raw sugar that we import. This duty must be applied to all the sugar that we consume, because the market value of our domestic sugar will correspond with that of the duty paid imported sugar. Applying this duty of 1.20 cents to the 4,245,209,500 pounds that we consumed last fiscal year we have a total charge to the people of $52,118,514. The bounty of 2 cents per pound was chargeable only on the quantity of domestic sugar produced in this country, being 412,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894.

Where the bounty cost the people only $12,000,000 the new duty will cost $52,000,000 on the basis of our present consumption, making an additional charge for sugar of $40,000,000 to be paid by the people as the result of the Democratic policy on sugar. That is why sugar will now cost the people more money than under the McKinley tariff, and the producers of domestic sugar will also receive less protection to the extent of four-fifths of a cent on every pound of sugar that they produce.

LABOR REAPED THE HARVEST.

Increase In Earnings Over Cost of Materials Nearly $2.40 Per Hand Under Protection.

In 1860, under the free trade policy, $785 of capital and $700 worth of raw material gave employment to one hand; who produced $1,438 in finished goods. The value of products over cost of material was $655. Of this sum labor received $369, or about 44⅘ per cent, while capital had $286, or about 55⅘ per cent for expenses and profits.

In 1890, under the protective policy, it required $1,385 of capital and $1,000 worth of raw material for each hand employed. The finished product amounted to $1,988, or $893 above cost of material. Of this amount labor received $485, or about 54⅘ per cent, while capital had $408, or about 45⅘ per cent, receiving in the interest of labor the division of 108 products.

While the capital required to keep one hand employed had to be increased 76 per cent from 1860, under a free trade policy, to 1890, under protection, and the needed raw material was one-third greater, the product of labor was only increased 55 per cent. The increase in earnings over the cost of material was $243 per hand. Of this increase labor received in increased wages $196, while capital only received $47 as its share of this gain. It will thus be seen that labor has secured the greater portion of the benefits of improved machinery and methods.

Why Real Estate Is Cheap.

A witness in court at Dubuque a few days ago injected some politics into his answers of a cross questioner and exhibited the feelings of a good many Democrats throughout the country. The name of the witness was Ward, and this is the course of the evidence:

"Mr. Ward, did I understand you to say that land is not worth as much now as it was in 1892?"

"Yes, sir. That's what I said."

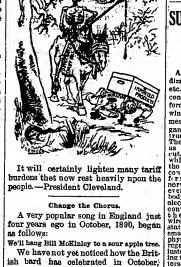
"Will you please tell the court why it is not worth as much now as two years ago?"

"Well, since Cleveland was elected the price of land and everything else has gone to the devil."

This answer brought down the house, and Democrats and Republicans alike in the court grew red in the face trying to keep from laughing outright.

"Are you a Republican, Mr. Ward?"

"No, sir, but if things keep on the way they are now I don't think it will be long before I will be one."—Sioux City (Ia.) Journal.



It will certainly lighten many tariff burdens that now rest heavily upon the people.—President Cleveland.

Change the Chorus.

A very popular song in England just four years ago in October, 1890, began as follows:

We'll hang Bill McKinley to a sour apple tree.
We have got him, and we notice how the British bard has celebrated in October, 1894, the passage of our latest tariff bill, but would suggest the following, beginning:

We'll bamboo Billy Wilson on a bit of British tree.

The chorus might be re-echoed from our own shores by the thousands of wage earners who have been deprived of work during the past 18 months while Billy Wilson was sharpening his appetite for thus British bangnet.

Louisiana Missionary Hymn.

Protection's light is breaking
The darkness disappears.
The Democrats are walking
In the pestilential vapors.
Each breeze which sweeps the cane fields
Brings tidings from "down there"
Of planters in commotion
Prepared for bounty war.
—Monticello (Ills.) Republican.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY!
A Great Mistake.
A recent discovery is that headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion of the mind etc., are due to derangement of the nerve centers which supply the brain with nerve force; that indigestion, dyspepsia, nervousness, biliousness, constipation and derangement of the nerve centers supplying these organs with nerve force. This is the origin of many diseases of the stomach, liver, kidneys, heart, etc., and symptoms such as will be seen by the accompanying cut. The illustration shows white lines running from the nerve centers to every part of the body, but a few of the electric current is conveyed along these lines. The telegraph system of the world is but a small fraction of the nervous system, which fact, this fact: that a disease of the nerve centers is the cause of all diseases arising from derangement of the nervous system, is wonderful to think of. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, paralysis, sexual debility, fits, chorea, epilepsy, etc. It is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee first bottle will benefit, book on Nervous Diseases sent free. Dr. Miles' Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six for $5, express prepaid. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

A brakeman on the St. Vincent line by the name of Endyke had his leg badly crushed Tuesday while coupling. Amputation was necessary.

C. M. Johnson, county attorney of Becker, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. Bradley, returned, accompanied by his wife, Sunday evening.

S. A. Peterson returned Tuesday morning from Colfax, Iowa, where he has been visiting and will resume his duties at the Grent Northern depot.

S. J. Austin, of the firm of S. J. Austin & Co., Minneapolis, has purchased the damaged wheat in the Beltrami elevator, which burned on Saturday last.

During the illness of W. E. Thune, with Mossedh & Lindell, his place is being filled by J. W. Saudberg, a former Polk county boy, but of late a resident of West Superior.

J. G. Dawes is looking up grain shipments for the Van Dusen-Harrington Co., of Minneapolis. He was formerly assistant traffic manager of the Great Northern.

We are pleased to learn that W. E. Thune is recovering from an attack of typhoid fever which has laid him up for some time. He hopes to be around by Thanksgiving.

The court house grounds have been graded up in nice shape and a plank walk laid down to the southwest corner of the ground, which makes it more convenient than formerly.

There seems to be a suspicion that all is not as it should be in the fullness of O. T. Sletto, proprietor of the Columbia Department Store at East Grand Forks. Sletto has left without informing his friends of his whereabouts.

The hunting party consisting of Dr. Dunlop and Messrs. Hoch; Bergquist, Markham and Creighton, returned Saturday evening. They failed to bring any great amount of game home, but have a fund of stories that will last all winter.

Miss May Gile said Forest E. Ash, of Grand Forks, were quietly married at the Commercial hotel here on Saturday evening last; returning to Grand Forks Sunday morning. Judge Goss man tied the nuptial knot and gave them his benediction.

Last week marriage licenses were issued to the following couples: Forest E. Ash to May Gile, John F. Kile to Talbete Thompson, A. J. Abrahamson to Anna Hansdotter, Armede Demers to Agnes Surprenant, Martin Erikson to Lulea Anderson.

It is reported that the hunting party consisting of A. C. schmidt, Larry O'Neill and Jas. Marcott has been arrested by the Indian police for shooting on the reservation. The Indians recent anyone trespassing on their primeval rights, and the boys will probably wish they had not ventured on Louie domain.

James Conley, of this city, a bridge carpenter on the Great Northern, while engaged in repairing a water tank at Bathgate, N. D., last week, slipped and fell to the ground, sustaining a sprained wrist and several bruises which confined him to his bed several days, but he is now able to be out again.

A farmer living near Springfield, Missouri, in writing to his son, now in Crookston, stated that it had cost him $200 this year for manure, which he hauled from the city, and that he considered it like pattling money in the bank to good interest. He makes good living, improves his property, and has something left over at the end of the year, from a farm of 66 acres.

Thief River Falls Press: The death of Jesse Dean occurred at the county hospital in Crookston on last Saturday and the remains were brought here for burial on Monday. The funeral services were held in the M. E. church, Rev. Kennlston officiating, and the interment was made in Greenwood cemetery. Deceased has made his home here for some years, being one of the faithful servants of the Mechan Lumber Company.

Anton Rice was in from Fertile, last Saturday last and made us a pleasant call. He said that he has been here fourteen years, and sold his first hops this fall, but that in future he shall pay more attention to hog raising. He also informed us that his cows had kept them in groceries and helped to buy clothing. He is certainly that diversified farming not only pays, but is the only way to make money out of the farm.

What came near being a serious fire happened at Rosenthal & Falk's tailoring department Monday morning. In filling the tank to a gasoline stove a quantity was spilled and ran over the stove. When the stove was lit the gasoline which had been spilled took fire and in a moment the whole thing was in a blaze, which soon ignited the tank. A carpet was thrown over the burning mass and stove, carpet and all thrown out of the window, which undoubtedly saved the building, though the stove is a wreck.

Union Thanksgiving services at 10 A. M., Nov. 29th, in the Presbyterian church. The service will consist of a symposium by laymen of the various denominations. Mr. W. L. Vannette, of the Congregational church will speak on "Our National Thanksgiving." Mr. J. W. Wheeler, of the First M. E. church, on "Crookston's Reasons for Thanksgiving." Mr. E. D. Childs, of Carmen Baptist, on "Thanksgiving in Adversity." Mr. R. G. Woodham, of the Presbyterian, "Thanksgiving for Things Spiritual." Mr. C. E. Sawyer, of Crookston Baptist, on "How to Express Our Thanksgiving." Each speaker will occupy about ten minutes, and the whole service will occupy about an hour and a quarter. All are invited.

Diversified Farming.

Talking with K. D. Chase, last Friday about the crops in Polk county, Mr. Chase said: "I well remember the close of farmers that went in there at the time I did. Many of them were my old neighbors and friends in southern Minnesota, men who had made themselves poor trying to get rich raising wheat until it had so run down and exhausted their farms that they were glad to get rid of them for a song and with what little means they could scrape together to go up into the Red River Valley and try to wring from the virgin soil another fortune raising wheat. Their success in so doing you well know, and I want to say right here that it can't be done and the sooner your farmers find it out and change to other methods the sooner you will begin to prosper as the southern Minnesota farmer does. Why those very farms that my old neighbors sold out when they went up into Polk county county could not be bought today for less than $20 an acre, and the farmers who then bought them and sung are today able to lend money among themselves, and they do it to such an extent that the banks find their business considerably curtailed. How did they do it? Why by raising stock, by raising all other grains except wheat, and by engaging in diversified husbandry. Possibly their soil is not as good as yours and by pursuing the same methods that they do you could beat them, but you could get far better results than they did even. One thing is too plain to need further talk, however, and that is that you can never succeed in wheat-raising, as other countries can raise it very much cheaper."

THE RENT WAS NOT RAISED.

A Woman Showed Herself Too Smart For Her Landlord.

They met in a street car, and the woman with a golf cape remarked:

"I see you still have the same house."

"Yes, and at the same rent," remarked the woman with the sealskin sacque.

"But I thought your landlord had decided to raise it?"

"He did, but somehow I didn't expect to move, though Tom gave up the house at once. You see, I really can't afford to have any more lines hammashed in moving wagons. I've lost enough already to stock a department store."

"So you have decided not to move?"

"Not quite, dear. You see, I told the landlord that I was sorry to leave, but we really couldn't afford a higher rent and that I myself would gladly show the house to intending tenants. Then I set every room in order and waited."

"Well."

"Well, I really thought that the first woman that came would take it. I praised the closets and told her what swell neighbors we had and"—

"But I thought you didn't want to"—

"No, dear, but just as she was leaving I casually mentioned the fact that two persons had died of typhoid fever in the next house above and one two doors below. She seemed somewhat agitated, and when I called out the landlord's address after her she didn't seem much interested."

"But, Maggie, you know that was"—

"Some time ago? Yes, but I never could remember dates, and the people did die."

"Well, did she"—

"Never went near. The bedrooms were too small for the next year, and the next ones were delighted, but thought the rent rather dear. Then I remarked that immediately after Hamilton I intended to run around and engage that lovely little house in the next square at a lower rent. They carelessly asked which house, and I noticed that they turned that corner.

"How cold you? Well, did she"—

"Well, you know, it was cheaper, and if they had taken our house I should have been obliged to rent that, for it was near enough to have my brio-a-brac carried."

"Your landlord told me that Swallstyles intended to take it."

"They did, but after Mrs. Swallstyles and I had gone over it I said, 'Your children all look so healthy that I think the house will just suit you, but mine, you know, are rather delicate,' and the least hint of sewer gas alarms 'em.' She turned pale, and I knew at once that not even the parlor mantel would induce her to take it."

"And the landlord?"

"Oh, he came around that evening and said that as we were such good tenants he had decided not to raise the rent. Tom was so surprised."

"No wonder," erased her friend. "This is our stopping place. Come that have a cream soda. I feel faint."—Chicago Tribune.

FARMER'S CORNER.

Timely Topics Tersely Treated by Our Exchanges.

Sores on Cows' Teats.

During the cold weather of spring and autumn the teats of cows are liable to become sore. At first a small chafe or crack in the outer skin is noticed. If the weather is raw and disagreeable and the sores are not properly treated, they become very much enlarged and often bleed during the operation of milking. Just as soon as these blemishes are discovered all effort should be made to cure them. If the sores are deep, causing much uneasiness to the cow at milking, the cure is hastened by applying a plaster of some healing salve. This not only excludes the air but hastens the healing. If a common court plaster is cut into a stripe, moistened and pressed over the sore for a moment, it will greatly aid in the cure. At the next milking aim to press the plaster against the hollow of the hand as it will remain longer and not irritate the sore as when the pressure is between the fingers. In absence of plaster use castor oil, lard, mutton tallow, or any heavy oil to keep the sore soft. Do not remove the scab that will form, but soften then every two or three days. The neglected sores are a prolific cause of kicking cows.—The Orange Judd Farmer.

Winter Feeding of Poultry.

Cooked middlings, cut clover hay and vegetables given as hot as possible make a good morning meal. About 1 p. m. a good feed of shelled corn and whole wheat should be given. Corn keeps up the warmth of body, while wheat stimulates egg production. Mix bone meal and charcoal pounded up with the morning meal once a week. Beef cut fine and cooked, not raw, should be given twice a week. Green cabbage, celery, and union tops to come in at intervals to add a change to their regular diet. Observation and reasoning will tell you just what food your hens require to lay steadily through the winter months. There will be some hens in every flock that will not pay their boarding until spring when they will start laying again. Keep them if they are good layers and sooner or later you will find them according to age and size. The time is now here at hand when they are to be bred. It is essential that each should receive its due share of food, and they should be so placed that they may eat quietly, without being in fear of their lives. Large sized sows will generally feed all right two or three at a trough, but to mix the younger with them is simply preposterous. They don't get their due proportion of food, and what they do get they simply swallow and run. As their state of pregnancy increases, it becomes a serious matter to have them abused as they often are. Many a failure of a young sow's breeding may be attributed to this. When fed with older hogs they fail to make the growth and development they should. This season sows should be feed separately, should sleep separately, and make good possible growth and development, if not they will never make it hereafter. Sows are kept for their increase, and the less disturbing element in the quieter we can keep them the greater our success will be. —Farm, Stock and Home.

A Cheap Ice House.

A farmer in South Dakota, writing in the Iowa Homestead, gives the following simple way of building and filling an ice house:

"I have successfully put up enough ice for our own use on the farm for the past thirteen years, and will proceed at once to tell how it is done, and if the plan is carried out to the letter the duties doing so will be rewarded for their pains. Select a dry piece of land as near the well as possible, so it will be handy to wash the ice for use, dig a cellar the desired size (mine is ten feet by twelve feet and about six feet deep), cell the walls with two-inch plank, stone or brick, so it will not cave, put a good roof over the top to keep it dry, and have an open door in such gable so as to give free circulation of air. Now comes the most important part, the floor, for the ice-house has not good drainage the ice packed in it will be gone about as soon as the ice in the mill-pond. Place a two-inch by four-inch scantling edgewise on the bottom for joists, on these place boards with a space of two to four inches between each board; on top of this floor place

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report about four inches of straw when it is pressed, and you are ready to commence filling with ice. The ice should be placed within six or seven inches of the walls and the intervening space filled with chaff. Plan chaff is best, but if it cannot be had finely cut wheat straw or chaff will do. If a man can run his own ice he can cut it in long cakes so they will just fit the space desired, and then divide them into smaller cakes putting each piece in as compact as done the crevices should be well filled with chopped ice. Cover the whole with six inches of chaff."

Beware of Ointments For Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, contains no mercury and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.

The "North Star" Situation.

When the cows come home to roost,
And the hay's fly in the bliss,
When the docks are milked the most
When it isn't milking time,
Then will Populistic frauds
From the North Star win the odds.

When the chickens bark and bite
And the kittens dive and swim,
When the farmers to the right
Find their sauces growing thin,
Then will Populistic frauds
From the North Star win the odds.

When a fat's good as gold,
And free trade our coffee fills,
When the money-lender's told
That he must go after suits,
Then will Populistic frauds
From the North Star win the odds.

When the advertisers find
Profits rich from gross inflation,
By the publisher most kind
Who thus swells his circulation,
Then will Populistic frauds
From the North Star win the odds.

When the farmers editors feels,
That the damagogues assume
Right and proper for their tools,
Hark! What was that thundering boom!
—Then will Populistic frauds
From the North Star win the odds.

Hail my friends, you've heard the news
Of the election. Simply—four
How the farmers said they'd choose
Home protection men once more;
That's why Populistic frauds
To the North Star lose the odds.

Go to meet Gh. the sad cheer;
Hide your heads, the stake is ours;
Lift your heads, ye farmers dear;
Go to work with old-time vigor;
They played and lost wicked heavy odds,
The Pops are gone with other frands.

Mitch cows are in the dairy stalled
And pork is looking higher prices;
And Populistic "reform" balled,
Which they pitchers chaser;
For all the Populistic waddle
Has fallen into the farmer's noodle.

And many a chick is back to roost,
Which fancy politicians chaser;
And many a cat, the clamant roast
Has found in roost of blanket heat;
So that's why Populistic frauds
Have failed to win the "North Star" odds.

FARMER'S CORNER.

Timely Topics Tersely Treated by Our Exchanges.

Get your hen-house ready. The farmer who lives near a stream of water or a lake and who does not pack ice for his dairy and for family use is too shiftless and lazy to keep corn out of his manger. Think of the luxury of ice in July and August—the ice cream, the cold drinks, the cooling applications in sickness.

When the Milk Begine to Fail.

Many women who have only one or two cows find it difficult to make butter in the fall when the milk supply begins to fall that is anywhere near the quality of that made in the summer. The cream rises so slowly and there is so little of it that it must stand to long between churning days.

If the owner of the one-cow dairy will strain the milk into pans and set each pan on the stove or over a kettle of boiling water until the cream begins to rise and crinkles all over the top, then cools the milk as rapidly as possible without removing it from the pan or disturbing the cream, much of the difficulty will be done away with. The milk is then to be set away as usual. The cream rises rapidly and the milk may be skimmed sooner. There is more cream, so it does not have to stand so long between churnings, and the butter comes so quickly that it may be stirred into butter in a crock or large bowl with a butter ladle or wooden spoon.

The cream is delicious. It is in this way that the famous clotted cream of Devonshire is prepared. The butter is above the average in quality, with a fine nutty flavor. It is, of course, some little trouble to scald the milk, but this is amply compensated in the greater ease with which the butter may be churned and in the improved quality of the butter. The milk should not be boiled.—Beth Day, in N. W. Agriculturist.

Hints to Old-Fashioned Butter Makers.

Don't imagine that because you generally make good butter from your shollow-pan setting, that this is the best method. So far as quality is concerned it is all right, but, as a rule, it is not economical, too much cream being wasted. Deep setting is more economical—the separator is still better.

Always use a thermometer to temper the cream before churning. The acid-fashioned theory, which is still so often used, of guessing at it by sticking in the finger, is unreliable—too often widely misleading. A good thermometer is the only safe way.

Although good butter can be made with the old dash churn, it is a laborious one to use, and it is far more inconvenient to operate than the barrel or box churns. In the old dash churn, you skim the butter out—in the others you draw off the milk. The former plan requires so much working of the butter to remove the milk that it becomes salvy —the grain is destroyed and the value decreased. In the box churn, every trace of milk can be removed without any working, by two—sometimes three washings.

Find out how much salt your patrons like in a pound of butter and then weigh it out at every churning. The old guess-work plan is a most vicious one—there is nothing more unreliable, and butter made under it will be found to vary from one to three ounces of salt to the pound.

Partially filled tubs of butter should have an inch of strong brine on the top of the butter, removing it carefully before more butter is added, then returning it. This keeps the air from the butter and prevents any changes. The butter will not absorb any perceptible quantity of salt from the brine.—Orange Judd Farmer.

A Few Words About the Jersey Cow.

What more delightful home could those famous cows have than the green and fertile pastures of the Jersey Island? The Jersey cow seems to tell us by her gentle and satisfied expression that she has come from a land where the climate is mild and equable, and where the first object of the people is to make her comfortable and contented. It is astonishing how much the Jersey has improved during the last fifty years. They were once ill-shaped beasts which knew nothing of warm stables or good food; but the people of Jersey had their ideal, and by careful attention and hard work they brought their imperfect material up to the standard Jersey of to-day. The race improved so rapidly that the scale of points was revised three times during ten years. In 1890 some American of influence became interested in the Jersey and began to make importations, which have been almost constant ever since. This American interest gave a new stimulus to the Jerseymen, and a great increase of cattle has been the result. The American Jersey Cattle Club has advanced the Jersey interest very much by keeping the records and by organizing the official test, by which the Jersey has been seen to surprise her most ardent admirers.

A Jersey cow is known to have produced forty-six pounds twelve and a half ounces of butter in seven days. I might enumerate many extraordinary cases, but doubtless they are all well known to my readers. The Jersey of to-day is the most beautiful of cows. We find in her a variety of colors and shadings; a frame of such delicacy and fineness that even a novice could not help being attracted by her symmetry. In size the Jersey is rather smaller than other breeds, but in America there is a tendency to cultivate an increase. You seldom find a fat Jersey, for she is by nature a dairy cow. She assimilates her food in such a manner as to put her fat into her milk instead of into her body. It is often said that the deep orange lining of her ears is a positive sign that the animal possesses in her butter that beautiful golden tint without the aid of butter coloring. When fed on grass the Jersey imparts that golden tint to her butter to such a degree that it is unsurpassed by any other cow.

Too much cannot be said in praise of these valuable little cows. Like all really good things, she speaks for herself. Whoever has the good fortune to own even one of them will say after reading my poor words of praise, "Ha! ha! I knew it all before." North Western Agricultural.

HOW'S THIS?

The Meehan'e Attorneys Claime victory Over Ray Jones.

(Minneapolis Evening Journal)

John C. Judge, attorney for P. and J. Meehan, in the Moosedrag lease case, received from Washington this morning. He claims a victory for his clients, asserting that Hoke Smith has signed a notice which puts the case in such shape that the must eventually win. Mr. Judge claims that public sentiment has been misplaced in favor of Ray Jones. He said this morning.

"Because a large number of people of Thief River Falls and vicinity have by meetings, banquets, resolutions and petitions, championed the cause of Mr. Jones, the impression seems to have gone abroad that he was in the right and the Meehans in the wrong. The fact was the reverse. The Meehans had on their side the equities as well as the law, and never asked for anything but a fair recognition of their rights. The Meehans, when Mr. Jones sought to have approved embraced land previously leased by the Indians to the Messrs. Meehan in good faith, and on which they had placed valuable improvements. They are ready and have been willing that Mr. Jones should have a mill-site, provided he keeps off of their property. The people took sides with Jones because they thought the establishing of another saw-mill in the village would promote its growth and advance its business interests. Public sentiment is sometimes a powerful thing, but when it runs counter to Hoke Smith's opinion on the law and justice of a case, it has no more effect upon him than water has upon a duck's back."

The Closest Estimate.

Speaking of Capt. H. W. Donald son as a political prophet the Hallock News says:

"Capt. H. W. Donaldson is justly entitled to the championship as the most accurate estimator of political results. To substantiate his claim it is only necessary to state that the day before election he estimated Eddy's plurality at 800 and so noted in Alley & Konzes's office in our presence. The figures are there still to be seen—and now the official count shows exactly 800 plurality!"

He also stated the day before election that it was his candid opinion that Kaute Nelson would have a majority of all votes cast, and now the total vote shows that Nelson has 627 majority.

Tams Bixby ought to have called in Capt. Donaldson before making his anti-section estimate."

KENT FOUND GUILTY.

So Decides the Jury in the North Dakota Murderer Case—A Stay Granted.

The jury in the Kent murder trial at Mandan, N. D., brought in a verdict of guilty, Friday morning last and fixed the punishment at death. He was to have been sentenced Saturday, but a stay of thirty days was asked on the ground that important evidence had just been discovered. The stay was granted. A new trial will be asked for.

The story of his career and crimes are as follows:

Alyron R. Kent was born in Burbank, Ohio, in and spent his boyhood in that place. He studied law in the office of H. G. Blake, at Medina, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar. In 1871 he was elected prosecuting attorney for that county and served one term. He engaged in the banking business, and in 1872 was made bookkeeper of the First National Bank of Medina. He married the beautiful daughter of W. L. Terrill, a prominent citizen of that place but the young wife died inside of two years.

The bank closed its doors May 2, 1874, and an examination showed that its capital had been impaired to 56 percent, by Pinecoast's dishonesty. In the meantime he had made his escape and was never punished for his crimes which are supposed to have aggregated $40,000, consumed in high living.

When Pancoast come to Minneapolis he called himself M. R. Kent and represented himself as an Englishman, and had succeeded in covering up all traces of his past. He managed to ingratiate himself into good society in the Mill City, and, among others, became acquainted with the Lamds.

Shortly after he married Miss Julia Loird, for whose death he will pay the penalty upon the scaffold. The parents of the lady were not pleased with the match, but concluded to take the best of a bad bargain, and Kent was given employment in the lumber business of his father-in-law. It is said he embezzled $25,000 of the firm's money. When discovered he was given $5,000 and told to shift for himself. He and his new wife then separated, Kent going to Chicago and afterward to Mandan. Meantime he corresponded with his wife, and a reconciliation was effected.

On the night of March 12, 1894, Kent went across the river to Bismarck, telling his wife he would return next day. On this night his wife was shot and killed, under what circumstances is not definitely known. However, there was a risk on her life for $24,000, and Kent knew of it. The true story of her death is as follows: On that night Tom Swidenski, the hired man, heard Mrs. Kent on the pretext that someone wished to speak to her. When she appeared at the window a shotgun in the hands of the assassin was discharged, apparently by accident, and she lay dead. Swidenski pretended to be looking for tracks. The shot was heard in Mrs. Kent, killing her instantly. Swidenski gave the same story. Later, however, he confessed that he had been hired by Kent to kill his wife. He received $1,800 for the deed. Detectives were employed on the case, and Kent was brought back to Mandan and tried, with the result above stated.

Youthful Depravity.

Thursday evening last Chief Gonyea arrested a couple of young men named Bucky Hathaway and Harry Haseltine, for insulting some ladies on Main street. On the way to the lockup Haseltine made good his escape, but was subsequently rounded up and put behind the bars. About 11 o'clock Mrs. Hathaway, Bcky's mother, went to the station and gave bail for her son. Haseltine, who had been stopping at her house, had soon stolen property hid in her barn. An investigation it was found that an overcoat, a red blanket and some towels, the latter evidently taken from a clothes line, as they were still damp, belonged to Mrs. Hathaway. On the return of the officers to the station, Haseltine had again escaped by soaking a hole in the wall with a bucket of wood, and his whereabouts been recaptured. Hathaway was arraigned Friday morning and fined $5, but sentence was suspended pending good behavior. After leaving court Hathaway went home and returned with a motley collection of stolen property, among which was some fresh fish, a grubscene and an axe handle. It looks as though they stole anything they could get their hands on, regardless of whether it was of any use to them. The overcoat was identified by A. Chabot, as one that had been stolen from his store. The rest of the booty is at the station awaiting an owner.

NEARLY COMPLETED.

The State Fire Relief Commission Has done about all that can done for the sufferers.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press contains the following account of the labors of the State Fire Relief Commission, which held, what will probably be its last meeting, at Hinckly on Tuesday, Nov. 20th.

There were present at the meeting Messrs. H. H. Hart, M. G. Norton of Winona, Kenneth Clark of St. Paul and Col. C. H. Graves of Duluth were present, C. A. Pillsbury of Minneapolis being absent in Europe. A number of cases were disposed of and the commission closed up its business, so far as Hinckley is concerned. The warehouse will be kept open and filled with provisions, which will be distributed under the direction of George D. Holt of Minneapolis, the agent of the commission, who will remain there several weeks and visit the various bosses to provide for families and persons who are in need of provisions.

The commission has expended all the money in the relief fund, secured from all sources, amounting to something more than $91,000. Mr. Hart's records and the office at Hinckley will be removed Monday. The work at Sandstone will be continued two or three weeks longer, as it was found necessary to build forty houses, instead of ten, as figured on, and the cities were not cleared as readily as those at Hinckley and the other points. More than 2,000,000 feet of lumber has been used in building homes for the sufferers; 276 houses altogether having been built. Completed outfits of furniture, household goods, etc., have been supplied to 450 families, and instead of the 1,600 people, the commission figured on caring for, it has furnished relief to 2,400. About 90 per cent of the people are classified and the 10 per cent is composed of people who would not be satisfied under any circumstances. The commission had planned to provide farmers with cows, wagons, etc., but found that the fund would not permit.

The commission, after all that has been accomplished, finds that it will require in the neighborhood of $20,000 more to care for the destitute people, widows and children, etc., during the winter, and this sum the commission decided to contribute from their own means, trusting that the legislature will not forget the people in the future and reimburse them for their personal expenditure when it meets in January.

Not only the sufferers, but the state itself should be grateful for the work accomplished by the commission. The individual members of the business men—have given their time to the work without a thought of compensation, nor would they accept any if it were offered them. Besides their work they have gone to considerable individual expense. Secretary H. H. Hart, of the society for corrections and charities, has worked early and late in the interests of the state and in caring for the sufferers, as has also J. A. Howard of Duluth, who has done excellent work under Mr. Hart in superintending the construction of houses in the burnt district. These gentlemen have not asked compensation for their work, nor will they do so.

Kenneth Clark, treasurer of the commission, has also interfered yesterday by a Pioneer Press reporter, said that a great majority of the fire sufferers who are able to work will be employed during the winter by the lumbermen. "Mr. Nortou, one of the members of the commission," said Mr. Clark, "owns 150,000,000 feet of pine lumber in Pine county, which must be cut this winter, because, having been killed by the fire, if it remains until next winter, during the spring and summer the timber will be destroyed by worms. Mr. Norton had intended to cut the timber on the rate of 15,000,000 feet per year, and thus enough laborers will have to be employed on Mr. Norton's timber alone this winter to do the work which ordinarily it would take two winter, The Great Northern Railway company is putting in sidetracks for a yard at Sandstone, and about 100 men will be employed all winter on that work. At present there is no one in the burnt district that we know of who is suffering."

The total amount of money received by Treasurer Clark for the fire relief fund from all sources is $91,084.-14, including the following sums received yesterday: Citizens of Lake Andrew, $34.40; from Audubon, $61.65; from Worthington, $38.33.

Who Will Be Senator?

On the Speakership question the Battle Lake Review says:

"The names of several worthy gentlemen have mentioned in connection with the position, among them being: Sam. R. Van Sant, of Winona, John L. Gibbs, of Austin, C. F. Staples, of Mendota and Henry Johns, one of St. Paul's best attorneys. Under the care of any of these gentlemen the business of the next house would be properly attended to, and with either of them in the chair there will be little cause for complaint. But why may of these gentlemen? Why not chose a speaker from among the young Republicans and practical farmers who have been elected to a seat in the house this winter. One of the best parliamentarians in the state will be there. A young, hard fighting Republican, and an actual farmer. A man who two years ago put up the best fight for the Republican party ever made in this state, reducing an eight thousand majority in the 7th congressional district down to eighty-five plurality, and made the election of the Republican candidate in the district a certainty in 1894. We refer to the Hon. Henry Feig, of Kandyohi county. The honor is due him. He has earned it by good faithful work. He has come to the young men in the party. They have been good enough. The honor is due the farming element of the party. They have done good work and are entitled to recognition. Mr. Feig is thoroughly competent to fill the position, and we take pleasure in adding his name to the above list as a candidate for speaker.

The Renville Star Farmer gave a list of the candidates for speaker last week, and then added: "The whole lot will be surprised when they reach the house stretch and find farmer Feig away in the lead, having cut across lots and come in ahead fresh for the finish. If Henry Feig don't eventually land himself in the chair, then we are no good at guessing."

Princess Bismarck Dead.

Princess Bismarck, wife of Prince Bismarck, died at 5 o'clock on Tuesday morning at Varzin, from neuralgia. She had been in poor health for a long time, but her condition was not considered alarming until Monday when she grew rapidly worse. The effect of Prince Bismarck's illness is liable to be serious in his aged and feeble condition.

The Ten Health Commandments.

1. Thou shalt have no other food than at noon time.

2. Thou shalt not make unto thee any pie, or put into the pastry anything that is in the heavens above or in the earth below or that is in the water under the earth; thou shalt not fail to chew it or digest it well, for dyspepsia shall be visited upon the children to the third generation of them that eat pie, and long life and vigor upon those that live prudently and keep the law of health.

3. Remember thy bread to bake it well, for he will not be kept sound that eateth his bread as dough.

4. Thou shalt not indulge sorrow or borrow anxiety in vain.

5. Six days shalt thou wash and keep thyself clean and the seventh day thou shalt take a great bath, thou and thy son, thy daughter and thy maid servant, and the stranger that is within thy gate, for six days man sweats and gathers filth and disease enough for disease, wherefore upon the Lord hath blessed the bathtub and hallowed it.

6. Remember thy sitting-room and bedchamber, for in them shalt thou ventilated, that thy days may be long in the land.

7. Thou shalt not eat hot biscuits.

8. Thou shalt not eat thy meat fried.

9. Thou shalt not swallow thy mouthewed, or highly spiced, or just before very tired after it.

10. Thou shalt not keep late hours in thy neighbor's house, nor with thy neighbor's wife, nor manservant, nor his maid servant, nor his cards, nor his glass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's.

The Tribune announced the publication of a daily on Monday, and the paper, in a spirit of brotherly love, in an editorial cordially welcomed it into the daily field—and a gory grave. Mac's diagnosis of the case is a "survival of the fittest."

THE OTHER SIDE

Bishop McGolrick of Duluth Says a Few Words in Ireland's Defense.

IN NEW YORK ON BUSINESS

And Simply Wrote a Letter Refuting a Campaign Statement.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 27.—Bishop McGolrick was seen at his residence in regard to the Associated Press reports of the sermon of Bishop McQuaid of Rochester concerning Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul for coming to New York and entering upon a political campaign. Bishop McGolrick accompanied Ireland on his Eastern trip and was with him during his whole absence from St. Paul and consequently is in a position to speak understandingly of the matter. In his interview he said: "Bishop McQuaid was entirely wrong in making such an attack on Archbishop Ireland—entirely wrong. He is misinformed as to the facts of the case. Archbishop Ireland went to New York On Business Connected With the Church and had not the slightest idea of taking any part in politics. I accompanied him on his trip and we stopped both in Washington and in New York. While in the latter city a communication from Father Young appeared, in which he stated that the Republican party and the American Protective association were so closely allied that to cast a Republican vote was practically the same thing as a vote for the American Protective association.

"While nothing had been further from Archbishop Ireland's thoughts than to take any part in the campaign, when such a statement as this, which we both knew to be incorrect appeared, he Felt Inclined to Retale It.

We talked the matter over and the very point which is discussed in Bishop McQuaid's sermon—that if Bishop Ireland should speak or write a communication on the subject the charge might be brought that he was in New York for political purposes—was considered by us. However, he felt that it was his duty to do what he could to correct such an erroneous report, and he wrote a letter upon it. He was not in New York for that purpose, however, and the locality would have made no difference. If he had been here, or in any other part of the United States, his action would have been the same."

IRELAND HAS NOTHING TO SAY.

The Attack of Bishop McQuaid Likely to Go Unanswered by Him.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The probabilities are now that the attack made upon Archbishop Ireland made by Bishop McQuaid in his sermon delivered in Rochester Sunday night, will go unanswered. An attempt was made by the Associated Press to see Archbishop Ireland, but he refused to see a reporter. Thomas Cochran, however, in his behalf, stated that Archbishop Ireland had positively nothing to say about the matter, either one way or the other, and that he had not given it any attention whatever. Archbishop Ireland will probably remain in the city for several weeks.

TO SETTLE OWNERSHIP.

Sioux City and Northern Stocks and Bonds in Court.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Nov. 27.—Arguments began before Judge Shiras in the controversy between the Sioux City and Trust company of Sioux City and J. Kennedy Tod & Co. and James J. Hill to establish rival claims to 10,000 shares of Sioux City and Northern railway stock, and $2,500,000 of Sioux City, O'Neil and Western bonds, which Garretson had hypothecated with Tod & Co., and which it is claimed were previously pledged to the trust company to secure $5,000,000 of indorsements. The evidence seems to show that the New York concern was an innocent purchaser and that Garretson hypothecated the securities with the knowledge and consent of his trust company.

Ready to Fight Kolbites.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 27.—A special to The Republic from Boise, Ala., says: The four military companies of this city have received orders from the colonel of the Third regiment to hold themselves in readiness to move to Montgomery at a moment's notice to resist at attack on the state capitol in case the Kolb faction of the Populist party try to take possession and seat Kolb as governor.

Of the Jack the Ripper Order.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A comely woman of the unfortunate class, about 40 years old, was found dead in a frequented thoroughfare near Holland Villas road, Kensington, at about midnight. Her throat was cut from ear to ear and some of the newspapers here intimate that it is another crime of the "Jack the Ripper" order.

Will Not Contest.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 27.—A special to The Bee from Lincoln, Neb., says: After all the talk of contesting the election of Governor-elect Holcomb, he indulged in by the dissatisfied element, the time for filing notice of contest expired at midnight without steps in this direction being taken.

Packers Protest.

OMAHA, Nov. 27.—The meeting of the Missouri river packers in Omaha several weeks since has resulted in the issuance of a vigorous protest against the proposed advance in rates by railroads on packing house products and live hogs to the Missouri river and Chicago.

FADS OF HEIRESSES.

They Hold Views Which are not of Their Parents Instilling.

A bevy of plutocratic heiresses like Gertrude Vanderbilt, daughter of Cornelius, Pauline Whitney, whose father is William C. Whitney, Shepard, Orme Wilson, and four or five other girls, whose families will soon be playing small fortunes annually in income taxes, do not believe in the rights of property, says the Boston Herald.

These heiresses style themselves the "Downtrodden," have an official organized existence and meet regularly for general debate and discussion, which, at times, takes a decidedly inflammatory tone. Were these young ladies to express some of their opinions in certain public parlors they would be in danger of punishment as anarchists.

Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt is probably the leader among her young friends. Ever since she began to think for herself this fair girl has manifested a decidedly original turn of mind. Her papa hardly knows what to make of these tendencies. Nor do the young companions of Miss Gertrude allow her to outdo them in radical notions. A meeting of the "Downtrodden" is something simply awful. The whole organization has long ago reached the conclusion that the conditions of civilization have no ethical sanction. The members have another grievance in the costume of femininity. Women should clothe themselves after the fashion of the ancient Greeks.

The "Downtrodden" do not limit their activity to talk. They make it a rule to go about among their fellow creatures who, like themselves, are overwhelmed by misfortune. One campaign will be in the interest of the poor girls. They are now in her to a number of them in October. They also read to the sick in Hospitals. Another good work is the investigation of conditions of misery and the preparation of reports to be read at the meeting. Minutes are kept in rigid exactness.

Miss Whitney thinks that in time the country should be made to spend two years farming, on the same principles as in foreign countries they put in the same period as soldiers. There would not only enlarge the range of their ideas, but bring them in close touch with nature and add to their healthfulness. It would also tend to relieve the congestion of municipal population, besides subserving a variety of other useful purposes, all of which Miss Whitney elucidates with skill and gracefulness. It is the opinion of Miss Orme Wilson that home would be infinitely pleasanter if they should not be continually hauling heavy wagons about the streets. So on through all the members of the literary club.

The girls often organize expeditions. Not long since they took up the railway question, and made a tour of investigation of two or three days. They have likewise visited factories on Long Island to look into the alleged overworking of children.

The "Downtrodden" are a very close corporation. Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt was refused membership because she is too conservative. The young lady is not in favor of woman suffrage.

The "Downtrodden" meet every month at the houses of those whose convention still obliges them to allow her to do their parents. Amid almost Oriental luxury they denounce the accumulations of wealth that today makes the contrast between rich and poor so pitifully sharp. These young ladies have developed many people who would certainly be astonished could they know the source of their windfalls.

What the parents of these young ladies think of all these doings is probably be surmised. Bishop Potter, who knows all the girls quite well, takes a rather favorable view of their opinions. The wealthy papas have so far been indulgent, because young people are notoriously apt to grow out of pro-tem vex themselves about the universe, man's destiny, the telos of creation and the like, and to go to bed very miserable over these subjects. At any rate the existence of the "Downtrodden" is a most unique fact in the cosmopolitan vortex that now styles itself the American aristocracy.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, executed and delivered by Knut A. Hilleboe, of Crookston, Polk county, Minnesota, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of Minnesota, on the 18th day of September, A. D. 1890, and was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said Polk county, Minnesota, on the 19th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book "O" of mortgages on page 485.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of one certain promissory note of even date with said mortgage, and interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum from date, executed and delivered by said Knut A. Hilleboe to said Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, for the sum of $1,000, payable on the 1st day of November, A. D. 1894, and which said note and mortgage were duly assigned by said Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company to the American Loan and Trust Company, a corporation, by assignment dated the 18th day of September, A. D. 1890, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said Polk county, Minnesota, on the 3d day of October, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book "O" of mortgages on page 486.

And whereas the said Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the American Loan and Trust Company, a corporation, by assignment dated the 18th day of September, A. D. 1890, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said Polk county, Minnesota, on the 3d day of October, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book "O" of mortgages on page 486.

And whereas the said note and mortgage have been duly assigned by the said American Loan and Trust Company to the undersigned, Knut A. Hilleboe, by assignment dated the 15th day of November, A. D. 1894, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said Polk county, Minnesota, on the 15th day of November, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book "O" of mortgages on page 487.

And whereas the said mortgage was given to secure the payment of said note, and interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum from date, and according to the terms of said note and mortgage the principal sum of said note became due and payable on the 1st day of November, A. D. 1894, and the undersigned, Knut A. Hilleboe, the present owner of said mortgage, has elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole of said principal sum and interest thereon immediately due and payable, and has caused the same to be declared due and payable by notice in writing to that effect, served upon the mortgagor, Knut A. Hilleboe, and upon the assignee of said mortgage, the American Loan and Trust Company, a corporation, and has caused a copy of said notice to be filed for record in the office of the register of deeds of said Polk county, Minnesota, and has caused the same to be recorded in said office, and the said mortgagor, Knut A. Hilleboe, has failed and refused to pay the same or any part thereof, and there is now claimed to be due upon said mortgage and note the sum of $1,150, and no action or proceeding has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, to-wit: Lot number one (1) in block number one hundred nine (109) according to the recorded plat of the town (now city) of Crookston, Polk county, Minnesota, and the whole of said lot number one (1) in said block number one hundred nine (109), according to the recorded plat of the town (now city) of Crookston, Polk county, Minnesota, (NW¼) of section number twenty (20) township one hundred fifty-one (151) north of range number forty-four (44) West, containing one hundred sixty (160) acres of land, more or less, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk county, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash, at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston, Polk county, Minnesota, on Tuesday, the 8th day of January, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and note, with interest thereon to the time of such sale, together with the taxes (if any), the costs and disbursements allowed by law, and the sum of fifty dollars ($25) attorney's fee, as in said mortgage stipulated, which amount is to be paid on the day of sale.

ARMENIAN MASSACRE

LATE REPORTS PLACE THE DEAD AT TEN THOUSAND.

Forty-eight Villages Reported to Have Been Entirely Wiped Out—Stench From the Dead Causing Cholera Epidemic, From Which Scores Are Dying Fast.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—Further information as to the massacre of the Armenians near Bitlis, Turkey, has been received by Secretary Gulick of the United Friends of Armenia. One letter dated Bitlis, Sept. 26, gives the information that news has been received from the region back of Mosah that 48 villages are said to have been wholly blotted out.

Another letter dated Bitlas, Oct. 3, states that the day previous a letter from Mosah had been received which told of the outbreak of a virulent form of cholera, which was killing from 20 to 35 persons daily. It is caused, it is said, by the stench of carnage which has taken place not far back in the mountains. The number of massacred will reach between 8,000 and 10,000.

The Czar Refused to Sign.

The government tried to get the people here to sign a petition to the sovereign expressing satisfaction with his rule, and disclaiming sympathy with the Armenians who have "uttered matters re." The people have refused to sign the address.

Another letter, dated Constantinople, Oct. 31, 1894, states that from information received from Bitlas, 27 villages have been annihilated in Sassoun, and 8,000 men, women and children have been massacred by the troops and Kurds. The massacre occurred in the early part of September. The massacre was the result of an affray between some Kurds and Armenian villagers from whom the Kurds had stolen their flocks. The sultan ordered infantry and cavalry to the scene to put down the Armenian rebellion.

NICHOLAS AND ALIX.

Marriage Ceremony of the Czar Duly Celebrated at St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 27.—At 1:12 p. m. the guns from the fortress announced that Czar Nicholas II was married to Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt. As this dispatch is sent, the newly married couple are receiving the congratulations of the wedding guests in the palace.

The czar's manifesto was issued during the evening. His majesty, in honor of his marriage, remits various debts to the crown, including the repayment of the grants made to the peasants on account of families. He also wholly remits arrears of taxes and dues, and mitigates or shortens sentences of imprisonment, public supervision and deportation at hard labor. The prosecution for treason of offenders, who have remained undiscovered for fifteen years, will be abandoned. The investigations to political prisoners will be decided upon after a report has been submitted to the czar by the minister of the interior. Amnesty is granted to the participants of the Polish rebellion of 1863, and they will be permitted to reside anywhere in Russia. Their civil rights, but not their property, will be restored to them.

In honor of the czar's wedding, 40,000 poor people of this city will dine at the expense of the czar. All the schools have been closed for three days to give the children a holiday and enable them to celebrate the imperial marriage.

PRINCESS BISMARCK DEAD.

Wife of the Great German Statesman Passes Away at Varzin.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Princess Bismarck, the wife of Prince Bismarck, died at Varzin at 5 a. m.

The condition of the princess became alarming Monday. It was then announced that the princess had suffered a relapse, and that great anxiety was felt regarding her condition, by the prince and her attendants. All the family were hastily summoned to her bedside. Count Herbert Bismarck arrived during the evening, and was present when his mother passed away.

Although it is feared that the effect of his wife's death upon the prince will be serious, it is satisfactory to add that the great chancellor has been in better health lately that he has been able to resume his daily drives.

DRESDEN, Nov. 27.—At a public meeting held here it was resolved to erect a large monument in honor of Prince Bismarck.

Texas Favor the Excise.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 22.—The official prohibition against the landing of cattle and fresh meat from the United States has been published here. It gives as the reason for this prohibition the discovery of Texas fever among cattle recently brought here from the United States.

Capture of Port Arthur Confirmed.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A dispatch to The Pall Mall Gazette from Chee Foo says that the British warship Porpoise has arrived there and brings a confirmation of the announcement made by the Associated Press that Port Arthur has been captured by the Japanese.

Risks Inquiry Begun.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 27.—The house sub-committee on judiciary, appointed to investigate the charge brought by the Central Labor union against Judge Augustus J. Hickox, has begun its inquiry in the federal building here. The sub-committee consists of Representative Joseph W. Bailey of Texas, chairman; Hon. Edward Lane of Illinois and the Hon. Geo. K. Broderick of Kansas.

Only One Democrat Left.

IPSWICH, S. D., Nov. 27.—In the recount of the Fifth District for representative in this district, Herron, Republican, won by a majority of 20 votes. This leaves no house of representatives in the state with one Democratic member.

WOUND UP ITS WORK.

The State Fire Relief Commission Through for the Present.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 24.—The state relief committee, at its meeting at Hinckley, closed up its work for this year as far as possible. The general warehouse will be closed Saturday, but George D. Holt, the agent at Hinckley, will remain there several weeks to investigate any cases which may arise, and to see that the goods are delivered some to want. The treasury is now empty, but the commission will adopt some means to obtain relief to any person in need until the legislature meets, when that body will be asked to make such appropriations as may appear necessary. The hearing of cases, however, is at an end, and none will be reopened for the present.

The work at Sandstone may not be closed for at least two weeks. The commission has built 40 houses at that place and many of them are not yet completed.

The commission, in furnishing relief to the fire sufferers, has used over 3,000,000 feet of lumber and has built in the neighborhood of 275 houses. Complete outfits of furniture and other household goods have been supplied to over 450 families. Where the commission expected to take care of 1,000 people they have furnished relief for at least 2,400.

W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.

Miss Frances E. Willard Again Chosen President.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 21.—At the W. C. T. U. convention Miss Frances E. Willard was re-elected president, with Mrs. Stevens vice president at large. Mrs. Katherine Lente Stevenson was elected corresponding secretary and Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman recording secretary. Mrs. Helen M. Jarker of South Dakota was unanimously re-elected treasurer.

Western League Schedule.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—The Western League baseball managers at the meeting formally admitted St. Paul to the organization, Sioux City's franchise expiring at noon. Work on the schedule for next year was begun, the schedule as proposed providing for two trips East for the Western clubs and two trips West for the Eastern clubs, instead of three as last year.

Tried to Steal French Gun patterns.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—The Figaro says: An attempt has been made to steal the patterns of the new Deport gun, which were shipped in padlocked cases to Calais and destroyed by the minister of war. The attempt to obtain possession of these patterns is said to have been made on Nov. 10, and it is added that no one except the presidents of the artillery testing committees knew of the shipment.

They Like the New Czar.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A St. Petersburg dispatch to The Standard says that at a meeting of the state council Wednesday the czar created a highly favorable impression after a report of unexpected oratorical fluency and his masterly grasp of the political subjects submitted for his approval. His majesty is winning golden opinions on all sides by showing himself equal to his onerous position.

Catholic Seminar School.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—The committees of clergymen and laymen appointed to perfect arrangements for a Catholic summer school in the West, have met here to arrange the details of the work for the school, which will be held at Madison, Wis., in June or July, 1895.

FINISHED HIS MESSAGE.

President Cleveland Is Guarding the Document With Care.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—President Cleveland's message is all but finished, and within the next 48 hours all finishing touches will have been put on. The document is being guarded with great care and all inquiries as to its contents are only guesses, according to Private Secretary Thurber.

The message will go to the government printing office on Friday and will there be taken in charge by the public printer himself, who will guard it with all possible care.

This message is looked upon by politicians and public men as the most important document of Mr. Cleveland's career, ranking next after his tariff message of 1887. Certain it is that Mr. Cleveland has worked unusually hard upon it, and the supposition is that most of the work has been put on the financial portion.

GOLD COMING IN.

Secretary Carlisle Accepts the Syndicate Offer For Government Bonds.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Secretary Carlisle has acted in the matter of the allotment of the $50,000,000 of gold bonds, bids for which were opened at the treasury department Saturday. He accepted the proposals submitted by the syndicate represented by John Sherman of the United States Trust company of New York and others to take the entire issue at 117.077. It is the expectation of the treasury officials that the deposits of gold for the payment of the bonds will be made very promptly, and as the understanding is that none of the gold is to be taken from the treasury un early restoration of the gold reserve to above the $100,000,000 mark will be the result. The bonds, including premium, will realize to the government about $58,500,000.

IMMIGRATION DECREASING.

A Greater Number of Foreigners Left America in '93 Than Arrived.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The annual report of Superintendent Stump of the immigration bureau for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, shows a very material falling off in the number of immigrants arriving in this country. He estimates that since October, 1893, the exodus of foreign steerage passengers from the United States has been greater than the number arriving at the ports. He concludes that numerically there are now fewer foreigners in the United States who came as steerage passengers than there were at the end of the fiscal year for 1893. From the tables accompanying the report it appears that during the last fiscal year 288,000 immigrants arrived in this country.

THE POPULIST VOTE.

Full Returns Show a Gain of 900,000 in Two Years.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The World publishes a list showing the number of votes cast by the Populist party in each of the states at the last general election as compared with the votes cast in the same party in 1892. The World also states that in 1892 the Populist party polled altogether 1,041,028 votes for president. Between 1892 and 1894 there was no general election, the returns of which can be compared with the year preceding. This year the Populist vote was 1,936,000, a gain of nearly 900,000 in two years.

TRANSMISSISSIPPI CONGRESS.

Seventh Annual Convention in Session at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 27.—With a whole week before them, the delegates of the seventh session of the Trans-Mississippi congress gathered slowly at the Merchants' exchange this morning. Not more than a fourth of the number expected to be in the city were present, though before the welcoming address was concluded, 400 or more were present. As the delegates came in one after another of the prominent men were recognized and given their share of attention.

The delegates were welcomed by Governor Stone and Mayor Walbridge.

SOVEREIGN RE-ELECTED.

Grand Master of the Knights of Labor Will Serve Another Term.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—Grand Master Sovereign was re-elected without any opposition by the Knights of Labor general assembly. Messrs. Bishop of Massachusetts and Merritt of Georgia were nominated for foreman, the latter was elected. Secretary-Treasurer Hayes was re-elected, though there was some opposition.

Dun a Suitable Channel.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—It is officially announced here that Japan recognizes that the United States minister at Tokio, Mr. Dun, is a suitable channel through which China can open up negotiations for peace. The powers will not take any part in the negotiations. They will simply remain spectators. It is considered that China is in a position to pay the Japanese demands if the war cease now, Japan to hold Port Arthur until her demands are satisfied.

Peixoto Will Visit Us.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 24.—The United States will soon be visited by ex-President Peixoto. The ex-president is in bad health, the result of overwork incident to the revolution in the country, and upon the advice of his physician, he contemplates a tour.

Japan Will Receive Proposals.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The Times publishes a dispatch from Yokohama saying that it is officially stated that Japan will allow the American minister at Tokio and Pekin to submit any proposals for peace that China may make.

Fire Destroys Coal Away With $5,000.

SPARTA, Wis., Nov. 27.—The Tichora coal chutes at Cashton, owned by Hall & Buell, were destroyed by fire last night. Loss, $5,000; insurance, $2,000.

THE Fisher Bulletin is very much improved since the change in management. The new proprietors are evidently newspaper men.

CAPT. SAM VAN SANT, who is a candidate for speaker in the House would make a most excellent presiding officer. He has experience, ability and back-bone—a most excellent combination.

UNCLE SAM might buy up a lot of old signs "No tick here" for his postoffices using the new issue of stamps. They could be made useful by simply perforating the letter S to the middle word.

THE St. Paul Globe never seems to like anything Donnelly does. It digs in the ribs, which, as a matter of fact, amounts to about the same as pouring water on a duck's back. Ig's epidermis can never be pierced by anything, save one of Jove's bolts or the scythe of Father Time.

WE stated in our last issue that Japan was in no hurry to accept the mediation of President Cleveland in the Chinese matter. Since then the Japs have formally declined the offer, very courteously, to be sure, but it does not take a very astute politician to read between the lines an intimation that they consider it a piece of gross impertinence on the part of Grover and his Fitzus Achates Gresham.

IN Spain they are very sentimental with regard to families of criminals. A daughter of the late Prim, executed recently for killing some twenty people about a year ago at Barcelona, by a bomb, has had her name changed by the authorities to Libertad, and the Spanish law forbids anyone to call her by her father's name, to the end that innocent children shall not be visited with the odium of their parents' sins.

IF some of the people in this part of the country who are complaining of being so desperately hard up would spend less money for liquor they would not only have more to pay their honest debts with, but would be immensely better citizens. We are not what are commonly termed "temperance people," but we protest against this habit of proceeding to get beastly drunk every time one comes to town.

THE Douglas County Post News says: "Gov. Olson still sticks for government ownership of railroads and says that 'no country that owns its railroads ever thinks for a moment of returning to the old system of private ownership.' How about France and Germany? Is there no difference in these matters also, between countries with huge standing armies, or despotism such as Russia, and free America? November sixth should have taught Mr. Owen that occasional relapses to truth are desirable.

THE Populist leaders are trying to deceive their followers into the belief that the Populist vote in the state is as great as ever. This is a delusion and a snare, from the fact that thousands of Democrats voted for Owen in the effort to defeat the Republican party. Those men are by no means Populists and never will be and cannot be reckoned on as a Populist gain. The vote of Polk county, where the Democratic vote melted away to almost nothing, shows this conclusively and it was the same every where.

TO-DAY is Thanksgiving Day, a day dear to every Yankee heart from the time of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers to the present, and your genuine Simon-pure Yankee will always find something to be thankful for, even under the most untoward circumstances. There is no one, if he but stops to reflect, but can find something for which he can return thanks to the Great Giver of every good and perfect gift. Our surroundings may not seem propitious, but if we have life and health we have much to be thankful for, and however gloomy things may seem it might be far worse. This business man has cause to be thankful that the prospects are beginning to look more encouraging; the farmer that the prospects are good for higher prices for all he raises, and the laboring man that the coming year bids fair to be one wherein he will find abundance of work at better wages. In every station of life one can find something to be thankful for, and to-day is set apart for that purpose.

WHO SHALL SUCCEED WASHBURN?

Since the election it is apparent that the successor to W. D. Washburn in the United States senate will be a Republican, but will it be W. D. Washburn himself? While it is true that Washburn has made a most excellent senator, it is also true that there are other good men in the state who would do credit to their constituents, and there is a growing feeling that a man outside of the Twin Cities should be chosen. Among the names most prominently mentioned none loom up so conspicuously as that of Hon. S. G. Comstock, of Moorhead. Mr. Comstock is the intellectual peer of any man in the state and lives in a portion of the state that has never had a representative in the senate. He is well known all over the state and is a strong man, one who, should the opportunity present itself, would be the most available man that could be found. Mr. Comstock is a man of the people who has worked his way up from the ranks of the laboring classes to the position of the leading lawyer in his town, and he is a man whose head has not been turned by the honors he has won. Should Mr. Comstock be chosen he would prove a worthy successor to an able man and the interests of the people would be in safe hands. In a body composed so overwhelmingly of the representatives of one party as the coming legislature is, it is by no means certain that any one man has the call, and unless Mr. Washburn shows from the start that he has the call decidedly by some man from the country, is liable to carry off the honors. We do not understand that Mr. Comstock is an avowed candidate, but should he be chosen he would, without a doubt, accept, and our interests would be in safe hands.

DESERVE OUR THANKS.

Ever since the devastating fires of last summer, which wiped out the villages of Hinckley, Sandstone, Miss ion Creek, and Pokegama, and destroyed farm houses, buildings and everything that fire could destroy in the surrounding country, a relief committee, appointed by Governor Nelson, has given much time and attention to the sufferers, and the distribution of contributions. This committee is composed of C. A. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis; Col. C. E. Graves, of Duluth; Kenneth Clark, of St. Paul and H. H. Hart and M. G. Norton, of Winona—all business men. They have distributed over $80,000, and in a manner satisfactory to almost ninety per cent. of the sufferers. Of the other ten per cent. could not have been satisfied by anybody—unless they had been given everything they asked, which was impossible. They still will have about $20,000 to provide for the destitute, widows, children, etc., during the winter, and have decided to go down in their own pockets for that amount, trusting to the legislature to re-imburse them. When it is understood that these gentlemen have not had, and will not accept any pay for their services, they should have the thanks of not only the sufferers, but the people of the entire state.

BORN ENDORSED AT LAST.

Congressman Haldor E. Boen, after being repudiated by the people at the polls last fall, found one man in the district who approves of his course in congress, and that man is —himself. After having carefully thought it all over he issues the following address to the people of his district. In the light of events it reads rather funny. The congressman has given up the hope of helping out the present generation and is now going to work for his children's children, trusting to luck that they will receive some benefit from the peculiar doctrines of the Populists. He says:

"Election is over, and I lost. The people lost. But since I, as for as I can now ascertain, received at least 4,000 votes more than I ever had at the last election, I regard it as an approval. When on the 21st of April I returned from the president, where I had been to ask him not to support the Great Northern company in its fight against its employes during the strike, I was told that I would be defeated by Jim Hill. He stepped out. I offended the national banks by my bill to abolish them; and the railways by introducing the first definite bill for a national railway. I was defeated for renomination. I opposed the Sherman law; nor did they like that I proposed that the government should issue $1,000,000,000 full legal tender treasury notes, and put them in circulation by building railways, erecting needed public buildings and improving rivers and harbors. Neither did they like that I voted for reducing the tariff.

"As truly as the truth reached to earth shall rise again, so surely will the People's party principles prevail; in all positions, since I was a boy of 12 years, commenced as a helper on a poor little pond in Norway, till today, I have done my full duty and shall continue to do it. I am used to defeat and disappointment, as well as to victory and success. But I shall not go before no retreat, I know.

"Prospect for crop excellent; a fine July. A big black cloud, a hail storm. Total loss. I do not give up courage, but go ahead and sow again. Perhaps better luck next year."

U. S. SENATORSHIP.

The situation up to date shows W. D. Washburn perfectly confident of being his own successor. The opposition is not united, there being a dozen or more names proposed, while as yet no evidence of centralization. The latest plan is to bring Governor Nelson and Congressman McCleary into the fight. The claim is made that with 40 of the 75 votes necessary to nominate pledged to Governor Nelson he could not or would not refuse to be a candidate. The Winona born man are severely confident, knowing that unless the opposition can unite upon some good, strong candidate, Mr. Washburn has a walk-away and will win hands down. Governor Nelson is in a position where he cannot come out and make an active canvass for the position, neither does he intend to do so. His enemies charged him with underhand work during the campaign, which he emphatically denied and should his friends now force the nomination upon him it would seem to give color to the anti-election charges. Of course that would not make them true, for Mr. Nelson meant just what he said when he said that he was not a candidate and did not intend to be. The St. Paul Dispatch of Monday sums up the situation as follows: "In the meantime the Washburn people are saying little. They may be hampered to some extent by the fact that the Hennepin delegation is going in to capture everything in sight at the coming session, regardless of the fact that they have a candidate for the senate who will need the assistance of the country members, who in turn may want a portion of the good things themselves. Washburn, however, has a good deal of support, and than his enemies are inclined to concede. This is shown by the tone of many of the country papers from different sections of the state which are ridiculing the efforts of the opposition, and declare Washburn's election an assured fact."

THE Princeton Union in an editorial says: "Dr. Thomas McLean, the Democratic candidate for congress in the Seventh congressional district, led a forlorn hope and made a gallant fight to preserve the party organization. If the Seventh district ever sends a Democrat to congress we hope Dr. McLean will be the man."

THE lunatics voted for the Republican party under the assurance that it would bring good times.—Ignatius Donnelly.

Commenting upon the above characteristic excerpt from the representative the Douglas County Post News says:

"According to Ignatius there were 145,000 "lunatics" in Minnesota, but even Ignatius Donnelly, let alone a lunatic, must know that a Republican house of representatives cannot immediately do much partisan law making with a Democratic governor and a Dem-Pop senate, especially as it will not be in existence before next March. The "lunatics" did not so much vote for the Republican party" as against Democrat-fusion and the Ignatius Donnelly."

THE egotism displayed in Congressman's Boen's "address to the people" is something wonderful to behold. One would think from its perusal that Boen was the most important factor in the new party—a man whom the railroads and the banks and corporations would trample down in order to exist a little longer, and that they did so combine—and he felt: "It is no wonder that he ever tardily rebukes. A few days will go right along just the same, that the sun will continue to rise and shine just the same as though this great Napoleon of finance had been elected to go back and regulate the financial affairs of this United States. Verily, Haldor ought to have impressed the voters with his importance before the election and not have waited until this late day! No one knew—no one could have suspected the great importance of sending him back to congress or he would have gone back with a whoop and up that terrible "combine" against him would have been completely annihilated. Now we have got to crawl along two more years as best we may.

Haldor's Corn Cure gives instant relief. No more limping. It is easily applied. Roosegh in each bottle to kill corns. One dollar's worth of corn for 25c. As a corn cure it has no equal. If it fails to do this does not benefit you, drop P. E. Roosegh and you have your money returned.

CANADIAN HAY COMING.

The Foreign Product Is Already Crowding Out the American Farmer.

I have been in Illinois for ten days and passed some time with one of the best farmers at Sugar Grove. Though he is a good protectionist, he has been inclined to doubt whether the McKinley tariff did him any good during the past two years. But he is in doubt no longer.

A few months ago my farmer friend shipped a carload of hogs to Cornwall, Conn., and before returning visited Dalton, Mass. At this point he made a partial bargain with a dealer to ship him several carloads of hay.

His son, having occasion to visit Massachusetts, was instructed by my friend to call on the Dalton man and close the hay deal. He did so, only to find that after the passage of the German hill many hay farms of Illinois lay, because the Dalton dealer was being stocked up from Canada.

Mr. Judd has on his hands 100 tons of as fine timothy hay as was ever mowed away, and he now sees quite plainly how the McKinley bill aided him.

He lives a thousand miles from Dalton; yet, for all that, the effect of a Canadian hay sale in New England has land town is felt at a small way station on the Chicago and Iowa railroad, 50 miles west of Chicago.

B. THINKEN.

Another proof of the foregoing is found in the following business card addressed to a large feed establishment in Jersey City:

MONTREAL, Canada.

DEAR SIR—With the reduction in the tariff I am able to reduce prices on hay No. 1 timothy from $17.50 to $15.50.

How does this strike the American farmer?

The Need of the Hour.

Never before have political affairs more widely challenged attention than at the present time, nor the importance of these matters been more generally felt, involving, as they do, the welfare of the citizen and nation. The capitalist, the investor, the mechanic, the laborer, are alike regarding the situation with anxiety, and watching and waiting for what? For some one to come forward and demonstrate the proper policy to be pursued and assume the responsibility of putting it into execution. Who is responsible for the welfare of a government of the people, by the people, for the people? The people themselves. A properly administered government is to be secured when men, steadily seeking to promote its general welfare, bind themselves together in a united effort to secure that end, adopting as their policy those measures which in their honest opinion are for the benefit of all, and which long experience and care of philosophical comfort. has proved to be attended with prosperity and success. The past history of the country would seem to demonstrate more clearly than theories the principles to be pursued—protection. The events of the past few months clearly indicate the imperative need of a return to sound protective principles.

An English Priest's Opinion.

Rev. Patrick Hickey, a Catholic priest of Leeds, England, whose father is a wealthy manufacturer of woolens, was quite recently in Pittsburg as the guest of Bishop Richard Phelan. He is making a pleasure tour and has just crossed the continent from San Francisco. He says the United States is the greatest country on the face of the globe, and the manufacturers compared with those of European cities, are more progressive in every way.

Father Hickey said he felt that the salvation of American industries rested in full protection for the same, as the manufacturers of this country must depend almost entirely on home consumption; that the talk about entering into competition for the world's trade was all visionary.—Pittsburg Times.

Our Markets Wide Open.

We may now hope to see some revival in a number of the British indus tries which suffered most under the McKinley ban. It is pointed out that on certain classes of woolen dress goods imported to the value of $18,000,000 last year the duties were $8,200,000, but will now be rather less than half of that sum. The value of the goods the United States will continue to buy such goods to the extent of $36,000,000 a year, in which case the duties on such stuff imported would be $24,000,000 and the duties only $12,000,00. Thus on this one class of goods a much wider market should be opened to our manufacturers.—London Financial News.

Travelers Must Be Content.

In some parts of the southern states, where, happily for them, the people are not in such a ceaseless hurry as people are in the newer sections, no one thinks of exacting punctuality from railroad trains. They take them when they come, and arrive when they get there, and are content.

A fateful Yankee drummer, who, on a country railway station, had been fuming because a train had not arrived an hour after schedule time, received a lesson in patience from an elderly countryman who came in with his gripsack and asked the station master:

"What time do the train for Savannah git here, boss?"

"Somewhar 'bout nightfall," answered the stationman.

"An what time do she git ter Savannah?"

"Somewhar 'bout mawnin."

Then the countryman, perfectly satisfied with the information, folded his legs in a corner and settled down to an hour more of philosophical comfort. —Youth's Companion.

The report that he was in quarantine or had been captured and held a close prisoner until a ransom could be effected, proved entirely erroneous. Scott avers that he had a royal good time all the same.

There was a small blaze in the Opera block Thursday night, caused by the overturning of an oil stove. A couple of young men went up to the room and lighted the stove, then filled up on booze, and in their drunken hilarity kicked over the stove. The burning mass was thrown into the street with but little damage, fortunately.

The following officers were chosen at the annual A. O. U. W. election, Thursday evening last, to serve for the coming year: Frank Creamer, master workman; J. L. Laslan, foreman; Frank Page, overseer; Carl Riedsel, financier, C. H. Mix, receiver; Carl Ziebeck, recorder; Chris Eickhoff, guide; Gus Johnson, I. W.; Peter Heidt, O. W.; O. O. Christianson, trustee.

The JOURNAL last week announced that Dr. A. A. Just went down to St. Paul on Tuesday evening but did not announce that he took Miss Aggie McLennan to St. Luke's hospital for an operation for catarrh. Miss McLennan passed the ordeal successfully and at last accounts was doing nicely. Her many friends here are longing to welcome her return fully restored to health.

The irrepressible Henry Kellar was up from Sauk Center last week selling sleds and cutters to our dealers and disposed of a carload or so here. These goods are made by the Kellar manufacturing Co. and are all right in every particular. Henry has just organized a new company at Sauk Center, called the National Syrup and Oil Tank Association from which he expects great things. Henry is nothing if not a hustler.

We are in receipt of the prize list of the North Dakota and Northern Minnesota Poultry Association, for their first annual show to be held at Grand Forks on December 11, 12 and 13, 1894. There are a large number of prizes to be competed for and a good poultry show is promised. Those who wish to compete can obtain entry blanks and all other information by addressing the secretary, G. F. Newton, Detroit, Minn.

Horace W. Brown, a prominent attorney of Argyle, died on Sunday afternoon at his residence in that village. Mr. Brown was a son of Judge Brown, who has occasionally presided over the district court here when Ira B. Mills was judge in this district, and he was a young man well liked by all with whom he came in contact. He attended the district court at Ada last term. He was the county attorney elect of Marshall county.

It takes the fiery ordeal of affliction to try humanity, of what sort it is, and the editor of this paper, during the past few days has had occasion to bless God that humanity was not all sordid and selfish, and he wishes here, in so far as words can do it, to express his thanks to the many true friends whose kindly words of sympathy has helped to lighten the trial that has befallen him on account of the extremely critical condition of his wife since Nov. 7th. We were with her in St. Paul until the crisis was safely passed, and we are assured by her attendant physician that she is doing nicely at this writing, with every prospect of a full recovery. She was taken to St. Paul on Nov. 7th, for the removal of a fibroid tumor.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co. Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

HE IS STILL WAITING

THE STOREKEEPER LOOKS IN VAIN FOR INCREASED SALES.

Ask the Merchant, and He Will Tell You That His Business Does Not Compare With 1892—The Promised Free Trade Boom Switched Off the Track.

The storekeeper is congratulating himself upon a slight improvement in his business, and he needs it badly enough. He is thankful indeed for the little revival that he is now experiencing, but wonders why he is not doing the rushing business that he did in 1892. Those were the good old palmy days when everybody had work and money to spend.

His store was always full then, and he could go home at the end of each week feeling content with himself and the world at large. But how different has his business been this year! He might have discharged all his help, but kept more hands than he needed, partly out of sympathy and partly because he hoped every day that business would improve. Many and many a time has he looked out at his empty store and wondered if he would be able to pay the month's rent and salaries when they became due. He is doing a little better now, but not much. That big boom in business that was to follow the passage of a Democratic free trade tariff bill has not turned up yet. The storekeeper is still waiting for it.

It Was Good For Everybody.

In 1860, after 14 years of free trade, there were 1,312,000 workmen employed in our manufacturing industries. In 1870 they had increased to 2,054,000, a gain of 74,000 a year. In 1880 they numbered 2,740,000, or an increase of 68,600 a year. In 1890 there were 4,712,000 hands employed, an increase of 196,000 a year, and in 1894 there were over 5,300,000 hands at work, a further increase of over 300,000 a year under protection.

In 1860 these workers received $380,000,000 in wages, or $289 per hand. In 1890 the pay roll amounted to $3,382,000,000, equal to $485 for every man, woman and child so employed. In 1890 the wage earners of the country, under protection, had nearly $3,000,000,000 a year more money to spend than in 1860 under free trade. This was good for business, for manufacturers, merchants and storekeepers.

Better Times For All of Them.

There can be no little doubt that our English and Scottish manufacturers will derive considerable benefit from the new tariff. Dundee, the center of the jute trade, where there have been so many failures lately, should also have better times in store, and the same may be said of Leeds, Halifax and Manchester, for there are considerable reductions in cotton manufactures, though to a lesser extent than in woolens. The free trade will also participate in the improvement, and we notice that the United States consul at Glasgow expects that the export trade of Glasgow, which went back $3,000,000 on the passing of the McKinley act, will show an increase of $3,000,000 in 1894 as compared with 1893.—English National Observer.

The climination of sugar bounties saves to the American people nearly $16,000,000 annually.—Senator Hill.

Why not have saved the whole case and added that the imposition of ad valorem tax on raw sugar added $50,000,000 to the "burden of taxation" of the American people, making a net loss to the people of $35,000,000, besides injuring the producers of domestic sugar?

GERMANY'S NEW CHANCELLOR.

He Is Almost as Old as Bismarck Was When That Great Statesman Resigned.

PRINCE HOHENLOHE.

Prince Clodwig von Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst, the new German chancellor, who succeeds General von Caprivi, is 75 years of age and has filled many important diplomatic positions in Bavaria and the empire. He is rather well along in years to bear the difficult burden the kaiser has placed upon his shoulders, but Bismarck was 76 when he resigned the chancellorship owing to differences with the young emperor, and Prince Hohenlohe is as vigorous at 75 as Bismarck was. From early manhood honors have come easily to the new chancellor. When but 27 years of age, he became a hereditary member of the Bavarian parliament, upon the death of his brother Philip, and succeeded to the old family estate of Schillingsfurst. He had held a small office under the Prussian government, but he resigned and again made Bavaria his residence. The Bavarian ministry sent him as ambassador to Athens, Florence and Rome, and his diplomatic career was well begun before he was 30.

In 1840 he married the Princess Seyn-Wittgenstein, and of their five children Philip Ernst, the eldest, is 51 years of age and a cavalry captain in the Prussian army. In 1866 after a ten years' retirement to private life, Prince Hohenlohe again entered upon a parliamentary career, favoring the Hohenzollern programme of a German solidarity, and in 1867 he succeeded Pfordten as Bavarian minister. When France threatened war against Prussia in 1870, he attracted considerable attention by insisting that Bavaria join in the great German movement and assist in fighting the French. In 1871 he was elected a member of the first German reichstag, of which body he at length became vice president. After the scandal that resulted in the recall of Count Arnim in 1874 he was sent as ambassador to France, and while in Paris he did much to bring about a better feeling.

After the death of Marshal Manteuffel in 1885 he was appointed governor of Alsace-Lorraine, the provinces wrested from France in her hour of defeat. He was untiring in his efforts to Germanize those provinces, and the strict passport system, designed to suppress relations between France and Alsace-Lorraine, was rigidly enforced during his regime. In religion the new chancellor is a Catholic.

THE WIFE OF "MAX O'RELL."

Mme. Blouet Translates Her Husband's Books and Is Indeed a Helpmeet.

Mme. Paul Blouet, the wife of the witty Frenchman, "Max O'Rell," who will soon begin his fourth lecture tour in America, is justly entitled to a large share of the credit of her husband's great success in literature and on the lecture platform. She looks like a typical Frenchwoman, but despite this fact she is an Englisb girl, born and bred, and her maiden name was Mary Bartlett. Her father was a well to do shipowner in Devonshire, and very fortunately for her and for the then unknown husband to be, who was coming to her home across the channel, Miss Mary received an excellent education in London and left school with a very thorough knowledge of the French language.

She was 20 years of age when she first met Paul Blouet at the home of some friends in London. Blouet was then unknown, but he had been severely wounded while fighting for France during the commune and had left the French army because of his injuries. His only income was a small pension, which was supplemented by the small sum he made as London correspondent of an unimportant Paris journal. The English girl and the young Frenchman were strongly attracted to each other from their very first meeting, and friendship speedily ripened into love. After a year's courtship they were married Dec. 26, 1874.

Mme. Blouet very sensibly continued her studies in French, her husband always spoke to her in that language, and the young wife soon became so proficient that when her husband's first book, "John Bull and his Island," evoked a roar of laughter in France she added very materially to his success by translating it into English. In the English form the book was so immensely successful in Great Britain and the United States and led Max O'Rell to write other books and lecture. Mme. Blouet has since translated into English every book that has come from her husband's pen but one. She is a model housekeeper, and her much loved husband prefers home to any other place on earth. They have one child, a daughter, who is now about 19 years of age. The latter is Leonie Marie Blouet, and she and her mother are more like sisters than mother and daughter.

PIERCE'S FINE WORK.

Total Steals of the Yankton Banker May Be Over a Million.

YANKTON, S. D., Nov. 24.—The fraudulent practices of John T. M. Pierce of the mythical financial firm of Pierce, Wright & Co. assume a graver aspect as they are unearthed. It is now the opinion that Pierce has floated, not $600,000 of manufactured bonds and other paper, as thought, but double or even three times that amount, as the returns come in. It is the worst case of wholesale swindling ever coming to light in the Dakotas, and is equalled by but few in the history of the West.

The firm of Pierce, Wright & Co., is composed wholly of Pierce, H. C. Wright having withdrawn several years ago, and the "Co." being an unknown quantity. The firm has existed at London, at Yankton, at Spokane and at Holyoke, Colo., and has done business in all those places.

Principal Office at Yankton.

The principal office of issue has been at Yankton, which has also been Mr. Pierce's place of residence. The London office was the place where his various issues of fraudulent and fictitious school bonds and certificates paper were negotiated and turned into cash. He seems to have found a ready market for his bogus paper, probably through the good standing of his London house.

Who is responsible for the various sets of forgery is only matter of conjecture. In his school bond issue he has covered the South Dakota counties of Yankton, Bon Homme, Hutchinson, Turner, Clay and Union, and some others in all probability. The business has been going on many years.

A Dog Habit.

Have you ever thought why it is that a dog turns around and around when he jumps up on his cushion or starts to settle himself anywhere for a nap? Now that you are reminded, you can recall that you have seen a dog do it many times, can't you? This habit is about all that is left to our tame kinds of dogs of the days long ago, when they were a race of wild animals and lived in the woods. Their beds then were made of grass and leaves, and it was to trample enough grass and properly arrange the leaves that the dog always had to make a narrow circle before he would lie down. The dog of today keeps up the same old habit, although there is no longer any need for it, and of course the animal has no notion why he does it.—New York Times.

Holds Good In Other Things.

A jar of foreign made pickles represents and is the product of labor of more than half a dozen skilled foreign workmen, besides of ordinary labor. The American storekeeper who sells these foreign pickles cannot sell a pound of groceries to any one of those skilled or unskilled foreign laborers, but if they were made in this country the storekeeper would be able to employ those men who work in the American pickle factory, thus helping the storekeeper to build up a demand for the products that he has for sale.

A STORY OF THE HOOK

THE LAST OF THE ANNUAL SINGING SCHOOLS IN THAT VILLAGE.

Young William Thompson Was Not Satisfied With Undoubling His Fellow Merchants, but Wanted to Run the Vocal Music of the Place as Well.

It was at about fifty fifth of the year and those vocally inclined who lived in and about the village called The Hook, some 20 or 30 years ago, were wont to talk of the advisability of the annual singing school during the winter months. Old Deacon Tobias, who, despite his years and the fact that he had never been able to keep a tune in his life, was always the prime mover, used to call it a "singin skewl," but all the younger members of the community and most of the middle aged ones were more careful about the sound of the ug and the co.

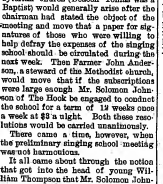
The first move in the direction of stated instruction in vocal music was always made by the deacon. Regularly in the second week of November he would begin to agitate the question among the citizens who used to gather at the village store. Then he would broach the matter to the three pastors of the three churches, and the result would be that each of these good men would give out, after the sermon a few weeks later, that a meeting to consider the matter would be held on Wednesday evening either in one of the churches or the village schoolhouse.

For many years these meetings had been models as to harmony. Deacon Tobias was always chosen chairman. Mr. Jackson, one of the elders of the Presbyterian church (Deacon Tobias was a Baptist) would generally arise after the chairman had stated the object of the meeting and move that a paper for signatures of those who were willing to help defray the expenses of the singing school should be circulated during the next week. Then Farmer John Anderson, a steward of the Methodist church, would move that if the subscriptions were large enough Mr. Solomon Johnson of The Hook be engaged to conduct the school for a term of 12 weeks once a week at $3 a night. Both these resolutions would be carried unanimously.

There came a time, however, when the preliminary singing school meeting was not harmonious.

It all came about through the notion that got into the head of young William Thompson that Mr. Solomon Johnson had outlived his usefulness as a teacher of vocal music. William Thompson was the son of the village miller, whose worldly prosperity had been such as to enable him to give William a college education. After graduation he had become home to the paternal roof and had inflosed his father to set him up as a general merchant. He was now striving to do some business in the other three merchants combined. They had been long established, but were not up to modern tricks of competition. As his goods were better, fresher and cheaper than those of his staid old rivals, he was getting a good deal. Besides his store was cleaner and his stock better displayed, and he did not encourage "setters" to smoke black pipes, chew tobacco, eat peanuts and tell stories. For this reason his place was especially popular with the women.

Now, William Thompson thought it it were worth while to have a singing school at all it was well enough to have a teacher who was as up to date in his methods of instruction as he. Thompson, was in his business, and he knew just the man who, in his opinion, would fill the bill. He did not go about the village accompanied by a cornet player and a bass drummer proclaiming his plans, but he quietly explained them to such of the women, especially the young ones, and such of the young men as he thought he could rely upon. To these he suggested that they should turn out in force and attend the meeting. He would himself propose that Professor



YOUNG WILLIAM THOMPSON.

Lionel Daniels be employed as the teacher, that he give 20 lessons semiweekly for a period of ten weeks at $5 a lesson, and that if not enough money was subscribed the series of schools should be wound up with a grand concert or perhaps a cantata to which an admission fee should be charged. If the proceeds of this entertainment were large enough to afford a surplus after paying the professor for his labors, that surplus should be expended in buying lamps for the streets of the village.

There is not the slightest doubt that young William Thompson's plan would have gone through without serious opposition had information concerning it somehow leaked out. It was never definitely discovered who told Deacon Tobias about it, but that somebody did inform him there was no question whatever. In Mr. Thompson's mind when, accompanied by a large number of the younger and more progressive element he entered the schoolhouse at 7:30. He had expected to see perhaps a dozen of the old standbys. He had 16 or 20 with him and knew he could depend on ten or a dozen more who would come later. But when he went in he saw that the schoolhouse was already more than half full, and that almost all of those present were of the older and less progressive element. It was clear, therefore, that if he would carry his proposition he must hustle around and get more followers.

The situation was critical. To send any one away for the drumming up of recruits meant to lessen the number of his own forces for the time being, but if he did not secure the said recruits it was certain that he would be defeated, for he knew intuitively that no such large number of old citizens would have been present for any other purpose. Then there was a grand hustling. The meeting was called to order. Deacon Tobias took the chair, as usual, and Mr. Jackson and Farmer Anderson made their motions. Mr. Jackson's was carried without dissent, but the moment Farmer Anderson sat down William Thompson was on his feet with an amendment in favor of Professor Lionel Daniels. Thompson had never had any legislative experience, but he knew from the count he had made of uoses that unless he managed to talk long enough to delay the meeting until his lieutenants should come in with re-enforcements defeat was ahead of him. Accordingly he began by explaining at great length that he felt no ill will toward Mr. Solomon Johnson, whose devotion to music and whose ability were both unquestioned. But, he said, this was a progressive world, and there were others perhaps who were more competent to instruct in modern vocal music than Mr. Johnson.

At this point he was interrupted by cries of "No, no!" and "Name the man!" and "Shame!" At first William Thompson was inclined to be indignant because of these interruptions, but in a moment he realized that if he could get into an argument with his opponents it would be much better for his cause, because it would help him in his purpose of delaying action. Then began the most violent discussion that had ever been heard between four walls at The Hook, and while it was going on William Thompson's party struggled into the room. Farmer Anderson led the ranks of those who supported Solomon Johnson conspicuously, but he did not realize what William Thompson's tactics were until, after the lapse of an hour, the young man, who saw that enough of his adherents had arrived to make a majority, called for the question. Deacon Tobias called the attention at that moment and would have been glad to adjourn the meeting, but when all suggestion some one put a motion to that effect it was voted down. Then the vote was taken as to who should be teacher, and Thompson won by a majority of seven.

THE DISCUSSION.

His victory was not yetcomplete, however. In fact, the battle was but just begun, for the older and more conservative element refused to let them the support of the singing school in a body on the ground that Professor Daniels' music was thing to be operatic and not at all suited to such a village as The Hook, the throats of whose inhabitants had hitherto been incapable of anything but psalm tunes, save an occasional patriotic divertisement in the shape of "The Star Spangled Banner," "Columbia Rules the Wave" and a few songs about "Moonlight on the Lake," "The Blue Juniata," etc. It is to the credit of William Thompson that, although he had not looked for this sort of opposition and he and his followers, being young, were ill prepared to bear the expense of the school as conducted by Professor Daniels, the schoms was nevertheless carried through with marked success.

The entertainment with which the series concluded also was eminently successful and packed the Methodist church to the doors. When the receipts were counted, it was found that the surplus was ample to buy the desired street lamps and furnish them with oil for a year. Young William Thompson himself undertook tolhire and pay a boy to light them, and very likely they are burning every night to the present time. It looked for awhile as though his business would suffer because of the feeling that was engendered, but as he continued to give the best goods for the least money he did not suffer long. The next winter, however, he decided that it would not be wise for him to make any more in the direction of the singing school for fear of further ill feeling, and his opponents took the helm then. So the school that was taught by Professor Lionel Daniels was the last ever held in The Hook.

THE BETTER WAY.

Shall we fold the day garments
That our darling used to wear,
Lay aside the half worn dresses,
Put them all away with care?

Brooding o'er them long and often,
Bringing back our grief and pain,
Holding to our hearts our sorrow,
Living o'er our loss again?

Shall we do this while about us
By the hundreds everywhere,
Suffering for the help withholden,
There are children sweet and fair?

Children needing just the garments,
Dresses, shirts and half worn shoes—
Garments that our grief has hoarded,
Garments our hearts dread to lose?

Give them what our child once needed,
Not no longer needs, we know,
She is clothed in lovely garments,
White and pure as drifted snow.

Helping lighten others' burdens,
We of use are to the race,
And we seem to see a glad smile
On our darling's happy face.

STORIES OF DR. HOLMES.

A Young Woman Who Didn't Like His Literary Taste.

The story is recalled of a young Virginia country girl dining in Boston some years ago, in the days when Dr. Holmes went to dinners. Seated next to her was a homely, little old gentleman whose name she did not catch. He began to talk with her and asked her how she passed her time in the country.

"Oh, we read, my father and I!" she said.

"And what do you read?" asked the little man.

"Well, the 'Autocrat of the Breakfast Table' for one thing," she answered.

"I should think you would not care to read that more than once," remarked the little old man with a sign of disappointment in his tones.

"My father and I may not be judges of literature," said Miss Virginia airily and with a faint accent of scorn, "but when we get to the end of the 'Autocrat' we generally turn back to the beginning and read it over again."

The little old man smiled at this and was disposed to be friendly, but Miss Virginia was so displeased with his tone concerning the "Autocrat" that she met him with chilly indifference.

As soon as the guests went into the drawing room her hostess whispered reprochfully to her:

"You didn't seem to find Dr. Holmes an interesting man, I hoped."

"Dr. Holmes!" shrieked Miss Virginia. There were a tableau and an explanation.

Another story of Holmes' wit is told. One day Dr. Peabody was to meet Mm at a certain place. The venerable professor rode in a carriage. When he got there, he was met by Holmes, who had walked. Near by was a statue of Eurydice. And Holmes said:

"Ah, you ride, I see!"

"Capital, capital!" cried Peabody.

That night he went back home and said to his wife:

"Holmes got off a good joke today. His wife asked him what it was.

"Why, I was to meet him down on the statue of Eurydice, and when I arrived, he said quite happily, 'Oh, you came in a carriage!'"

And then the genial professor wondered why his wife didn't laugh.

She Didn't Guess.

Like many other things, an alarm clock is a good thing when confined to its own sphere. But a young man who lives in Hoga had an experience with one the other day which, to say the least, was embarrassing. Being a heavy sleeper, it was not unusual for him to miss his train to the city in the morning, so he resolved to invest in an alarm clock. One experience with it was enough, and that occurred while he was taking his paroxysm home. Walking through the train, he chanced to see a certain young lady sitting in a seat, the other half of which was unoccupied. The young man knew the young lady—in fact, he is said to have had entertained serious hopes before she had got in its little work. He sat down beside her, with his package in his lap, and smiled his sweetest. She smiled back. Just as she was about to venture a fourth guess there was a muffled sound from the interior of the package and then a loud clang that resounded weirdly through the car. The young man blushed, the young lady giggled, and the passengers roared. It seemed as though the thing would never stop, and it didn't until the disgusted youth hurled it to the other end of the car.—Philadelphia Record.

Echo Verses.

Echo verses were sometimes used effectively for epigrams and epitaphs. Thus a critic once wrote:

I'll fain praise your poem—but, tell me, how is it
When I cry out "exquisite," echo cries, "Quite it?"

And when, in 1821, Paganini was drawing crowds to the opera house at extravagant prices, The Sunday Times printed the following lines:

What are they? who pay three guineas
To hear a tune of Paganini's?
Echo—Fack-a'-nanies!
—All the Year Round.

No Difference.

Mrs. Secondwed—You are so unlike my first husband.

Mr. S.—I hope the difference is in my favor, my dear.

Mrs. S.—Oh, it is, very much.

Mr. S.—Thanks. When is it?

Mrs. S.—You're alive.—Newport Mercury.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter Edith is 17 years of age, but is very delicate and ill with consumption. She had lost the entire use of her right lung, and was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. When Dr. Pierce prescribed his remedies we were quite hot for an immediate remedy and would have had little faith in a 'cure.' But he had explored physicians, but she received no benefit. She was then 15 years old, and only weighed 101 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 107 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attended school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her right lung. In addition to Nervine, I have used 'Golden Medical Discovery' and Dr. Pierce's Pellets, and they have brought her to perfect health." Not long since the JOURNAL mentioned the departure of Mrs. A. D. Stephens and her sister, Miss Cameron, for Kansas City, called there by the illness of their father. On Sunday A. D. received a dispatch from his wife announcing the death of her father, which had just occurred.

The Hirschfeld divorce case in Fargo seems to be a case of persecution on the part of a rich old codger who induced a young girl to marry him and then, becoming tired of her, desires to get rid of her. On his own testimony he is a wonderfully simple old fool, but he has succeeded in making people believe that he is also an old villain.

The price of wheat has improved encouragingly since election, at one time reaching 60 cents. While this is not quite all it should be, it is about the average price of last winter, and is pretty good when you consider the cost of production compared with other years. Even the season of 1893 the cost of production was very much higher than this and the average price was about 51 cents.

On Friday night of last week Chas. Bradley, an employe of Larson, Carpenter & Co., with his wife and child, narrowly escaped death from asphyxiation. He was awakened in the night by the crying of the child, and arising to ascertain what was the matter with the child, he discovered the presence of coal gas. He just had strength enough to reach a window and break it out, and thus saved the lives of all, but they were sick from the effects of the gas for some time.

The breaking of a shaft at the power house on Saturday evening caused the city to shut darkness for the space of half an hour, until the steam horse could be harnessed and set to work. The break was quite a serious one and of such a nature as to prevent running the machinery by water power until it is repaired.

Ye Olde Folkes Concerte at the M. E. Church Tuesday evening was an unqualified success, both as to attendance and the manner in which the various selections were rendered. The costumes were quaint and some of them were in fact what they purported to be from "Scenes of long ago." The concert will be repeated Saturday evening at the same place, but with a new collection of songs and recitations.

Almost every farmer who comes to the city these days has from one to half a dozen ice fat porkers in his sleigh for sale. This is better than the old way when they had only wheat to sell. More attention is also given to butter making, to the raising of poultry and sometimes besides wheat. This is as it should be, and will soon have its effect upon the income of our farming population.

On Friday of last week John Rothsten was brought down on the St. Hilaire train and taken to the hospital, suffering with a crushed leg. He had been employed on the section at St. Hilaire, and was recently discharged. On Friday he attempted to steal a ride on the train, and in some way managed to fall off and get under the train. The leg was amputated at the knee on Saturday, Dr. Dampier and Dr. Dennisten performing the operation.

If our subscribers will make an exertion in our behalf this fall it will be highly appreciated, situated as we are with all those extra expenses incident to sickness in the family, on hand. We do not desire to force these matters to extremities, but we must have as much money as we can collect on these subscriptions or we fail. If our friends will be just with us they will not have occasion to regret their efforts. We must have some on every account.

Bro. Osborn, of the Glyndon News is a candidate for enrolling clerk of the House. He has had experience in that line which makes him familiar with the duties and requirements of the office to which he aspires. He is one of the charter members of the Republican party which he helped to originate and then aspirator power of his life in the army trying to convince the people of the United States that the Republican party was worthy of confidence, was the party of the people.

James Fulk was released from the fall last week, but upon consulting the first thermometer he met he found that the weather was rather too raw on the edges to suit. Moreover he found that bonrding-house keepers were exacting their stuff in advance nowadays, so he concluded to go back and finish up winter in the county bastile. So he went through the Minneapolis Brewing Co. for a bottle of beer, and Mike Pat len, catching him in the act, visited him up to police headquarters.

On Sunday Conductor Percy Baker met with an accident that came within an ace of being instant death for him—in fact the report had it abroad that he was dead. He had stepped his train within a mile of Barnesville and the engine ran ahead to the tank for water. Percy and a brakeman were in the caboose when a train came up behind, dashing full speed into the caboose, telescoping it and smashing once or twice the conductor. The brakeman was hurt considerably and Percy was taken out for dead, but revived shortly long enough to be able to walk a little, but he is able to do much in that time and has been laid up ever since, though it is thought he will recover. It was a close call.

Warren Register: "The November term of the district court for this county opened at the Court house and in this city Monday morning. The grand jury completed its labors and was discharged Monday. It is expected that the present term will close today. Only a few jury cases were tried, quite a number being continued to the spring term, and several others settled without trial. In the case of the state vs. William Osmun, indicted for larceny, the jury returned a verdict of guilty; but the court arrested judgment, because the jury dispersed before returning the verdict into court. Osmun was placed under a new bond to appear at the next term of the court. Nearly all the members of the county bar were in attendance, as were also attorneys Miller and Watts, of Crookston."

Proceedings of the County Board.

At the last session of the board that closed its labors last week a much larger grist of bills were allowed than usual, incident to the recent election.

School district No. 121 created upon petition of Paul Ullfunger and others.

Also school district No. 144, upon petition of W. N. Brown and others.

The communication from H. Beauchamp, relating to glandered horses was referred to the county attorney.

Consideration of the Tabor ditch matter was postponed till the January meeting.

The county attorney was authorized to settle the case of the State vs. Estes Greene.

Report of the committee on the Ryglund and Huntsville county road was accepted.

The petition of John S. Fink and others for a new school district was received and a hearing will be had at the next regular meeting of the board.

A petition for a county road referred back for correction, in that it was not in due form.

The sum of $150 was conditionally allowed for a road and bridge in the town of Liberty.

The auditor was instructed to advertise for bids for the county printing for 1895.

Novelties in Ladies Skirts

The portion of the costume which seems to be the leading subject of inquiry at the present moment is the Skirt. While bodices and sleeves have been following some extent the general lines of the former season, skirts are the absorbing theme of interest in the new importations. Great is their variety. The question of choice embraces an extensive field, both of extreme novelties and simple practical designs. Models to suit every taste and occasion are illustrated in the popular "McDowell Fashion Journals," with which we have at hand. One finds, moreover, in these magazines in their coupon patterns, a feature especially convenient for those who desire a cheaper grade of patterns than the more expensive made up models. Among these coupon patterns are seen some artistic and practical skirt designs, filling very appropriately a general demand for the latter. "Le Mode de Paris" and "Paris Album of Fashion" are $3.00 each per annum, or 35 cts. per copy. "The French Dressmaker" is $3.00 a year or 30 cts. a copy. "La Mode," which is the best home magazine of its kind, costs only $1.50 per annum, or 15 cts. a copy. If you are unable to procure any of these journals from your newsdealer, do not take any substitute from him, but apply by mail directly to Messrs. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th street, New York.

Dr. Holmes and the Reporter.

A young newspaper man, just out of the city hall, who since made his way in the world with entire credit to himself and the college, was sent down to interview Dr. Holmes concerning his birthday. The young man, being a gentleman, was a little afraid that he was committing what would be a very unwelcome impertinence, but there was no way out of it, except by a way which would be a lack of hirsutism. So he went with fear and trembling. He found the doctor as gracious as could be, and when the interview was over he congratulated himself drove the young man down to the station, chatting pleasantly all the way.

At the station there was some time to wait, and Dr. Holmes, with a twinkle in his eye, suggested that maybe the young journalist go over to the store and be weighed. The young man was very hearty of the sum-e height and build as the doctor, but at the time was in rather poor health. Dr. Holmes made the journalist get on the scales first. He weighed exactly 130 pounds. Then Dr. Holmes himself got on and tipped the beam at 140 and was very much pleased. It was plain enough that he had "sized up" the young man as about of his own proportions and he guessed that he could outweigh him, and it had tickled his fancy to find himself at the age of 80 a "better man" than the youth.—Boston Transcript.

Knew the Ropes.

Street car conductors are very often inclined to be too independent. Lately this class received a well merited lesson several days ago. A tall, broad shouldered fellow wished to alight, but failed to catch the conductor's eye until the crossing was almost reached. When the conductor did notice his signals, he growled out a surly, "You're too late; wait for the next crossing." Without a word the big fellow jumped to the rear platform, jammed down the brake with a jerk and pulled the trolley from the wire, bringing the car to a stop with unpleasant suddenness. Then as he leisurely stepped off he pleasantly remarked to the discomfited conductor, "You stop the next time an old railroad man tells you to."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Napoleon's Red Velvet Cont.

In the center of the other glass case the light falls on a magnificent coat of red velvet embroidered in gold. This was presented to Napoleon when he was first named by the city of Lyons. A quaint anecdote is attached to it. One morning at St. Helena General Bertrand paid his respects to his exiled master, accompanied by his little granddaughter. "How badly you are dressed, my child!" remarked Napoleon to his juvenile visitor. "But, sire, how can she help it?" replied the general. "Here in St. Helena it is next to impossible to buy anything worth having."

"Wait a moment," said Napoleon to the little girl. "I am going to find you something for a frock." As he spoke he went to a drawer, opened it, took out his own first coronation robe, placed it over the child's shoulders, saying, with a laugh, "There, this is for you." General Bertrand preserved this gift with the greatest care, and it was from Mme. Thayer that the present's late father inherited it by her bequest.—London Quiver.

"A Close Observer will not fail to notice that in each large section of our country some particular railroad will be found always a little in advance of its competitors. In the great Northwest this enviable position belongs to The North Western Line."—The Health and Home, Minneapolis.

There will be a SPECIAL SALE of PIANOS and ORGANS as well as other musical merchandise, sheet music and music books of all kinds, held at the Grand Forks Music House in Grand Forks, N. D., commencing Nov. 29, 1894, and continuing until Jan. 1, 1895. During the time mentioned sweeping reductions will be made in prices, affording a wonderful opportunity for the people of the Northwest to procure musical instruments of the highest standard at prices far below their actual value. In addition to the extensive line of new pianos and organs carried by this house, over 100 second hand and slightly shop worn pianos MUST BE SOLD. Among these are many instruments of high standard that have been used only a few months, which will be sold for less than half of their value. Any person contemplating the purchase of a piano or an organ or anything in the music line, even though not now ready to buy, will certainly find it profitable to attend this GREAT SALE. The cost of round trip railroad tickets for any distance under 250 miles will be REFUNDED to anyone who buys a piano at this sale. A complete list of bargains together with terms of payment required, will be mailed free to anyone who cannot attend the sale and desires to make a purchase through correspondence. Farming that Pays.

David Haggard takes exception to the idea of diversified farming, holding to the idea that this country is better adapted to wheat raising than to any other purpose. There is no question but that we can raise the best wheat in the world, and the JOURNAL has never advised its farmer readers to go out of wheat entirely but we are as fully convinced as ever that no man can profitably raise wheat to the exclusion of everything else, as some have tried to do. A little of everything is better than the one crop idea, whether it be wheat or other grain, or for the matter of that, stock—all of one kind. Many of our farmers in the early days tried to make their fortunes raising wheat, and nothing else, buying everything they wanted to use upon the farm, even to pork and butter. This policy proved suicidal and will do so every time. Southern Minnesota is a good example. In the early days they tried the all-wheat plan, on the idea that nothing else could be profitably done in so cold a country. The people all went bankrupt, until they got cows and hogs and sheep, and how is it now? We are told that farmers are becoming prosperous, many of them having money to loan—in fact so many of them do that the banks find it cuts upon their business very materially. This state of things was certainly brought about by diversified husbandry, and if it will do it there, why not here? We believe it could and would be. We want a direct line to Duluth, however, to help matters out and that will no doubt come in a very short time, and then a far better market will be provided for vegetables, hay and grains raised for feeding purposes, other than wheat. Duluth consumes lots of such stuff, and raises but a small proportion of what she uses.

FARMER'S CORNER.

Timely Topics Tersely Treated by Our Exchanges.

Provide Clean Nests.

One matter, seemingly trifling in itself, yet important when viewed in the right light, is that of providing clean nests for your laying hens. If the material forming the nest is allowed to remain in the nest box for any length of time it naturally follows that it will become more or less befouled. Then the filth is communicated to the new laid egg, and when the latter is yet moist and warm, the filth will cling to it tighter than a poor relation. The consequence is that when the eggs come to market they are usually rated as second grade, even though they may be all right except in appearance. And when one markets any considerable amount of eggs regularly the few cents loat each time will soon mount up to a sum well worth saving. The cost of renewing the nest material is but slight, and it is a matter that should receive the attention of every breeder who wishes to make his egg basket pay.—Farm, Stock and Home.

Clean Drinking Vessels.

During this season of cold and dampness ramp is apt to make its appearance. Care should be taken to at once isolate the sick fowls and thoroughly clean the drinking vessels. The affected and well birds should never be allowed to drink from the same vessels. There is no surer method of spreading the disease than this. Not only roup, but all contagious diseases, are easily spread by allowing the fowls to indiscriminately use the same drinking fountain when an ailment has once appeared.—Farm, Stock and Home.

Tarred Roosts.

It is said that if newly erected roosts are thoroughly covered with hot pine tar and allowed to dry they will never be infested with mites or lice. The idea is a good one. The tar will fill all the cracks and interstices, it never applies, and no hiding place will be left for the vermin. And covered with a hard, smooth, coating of tar, the perches may be much more easily cleaned than if left in the rough to become incrusted with the droppings that are unavoidable in a poultry house.

Profitable Swine Raising.

If a farmer grows but one lot of swine each year, he should grow them with a certain market in view. If two lots, he should so market twice a year. If spring pigs, they should go to market in the early fall, and the fall pigs the last of April, or early in May. The time of marketing a lot of pigs should be determined by the time they are first secounted. When the farmer waits to see what the market promises before he determines when the pigs shall be fattened, he is almost certain to blunder in his time of marketing. As a rule he who gets his pigs to market at the earliest possible time and sells at a given age regardless of the prevailing price, makes the most clear money in the long run. When a farmer plans to have his pigs maturent a certain age, he has made the main point towards having them in prime condition at that age, and when in this condition they should be sold.

Only by a well-managed system can the best results be reached. If two litters are grown a year, spring and fall, of necessity all must go to market at an early age. It will not do to hold them till they are a year old, as it places too many on the farm at once. All careful swine raisers know that with the increase of numbers, the risk from disease is correspondingly increased. The well-fatted hog of 200 lbs. weight always sells well in market. In fact such an animal is the choice of buyers a greater part of the time. The trouble with farmers in producing this hog lies in the fact that they have not yet arrived at the belief that in general farm practice it is possible to reach this weight at six to seven months of age. Greater weights can be made with small numbers, but when a farmer puts off 40 to 60 or 100 head, this is a good weight for the age named.—Ex.

The markets do not call for a hog of this weight at one year old, but for a young pig of this weight at the earliest practical moment. The March or April pig should be on the market not later than Nov. 1st; the Sept. or Oct. pig not later than Dec. 1st, better the middle of May, as prices have ruled for a number of years. Haphazard work will not accomplish this, but a well-laid system followed to the letter will do it. It is a fact that cannot be disputed that misfortune in swine growing comes most frequently to the man that has no definite system. With definite plans he falls into a line of better care and treatment of his swine.—John M. Jamison, Ohio. Orange Judd Farmer.

An Amateur Celery Grower.

I have always been very fond of celery. When I was obliged to get my supplies in the market, much of the time I was obliged to eat a very poor article, or to go without. Since I have become the possessor of a garden, though a small one, I grow all that is used at my home, save a little in the early season before my crop matures. I have tried several kinds, but have finally settled down for a choice to Giant Pascal, and why one of the pink celeries. I tried the White Plume thoroughly and discarded it because of its poor quality. At its best it is not to be mentioned among good celeries. The reasons why I like Giant Pascal are because it is very productive and a vigorous grower. Next, it is of high quality and it is a good keeper. With me it seldom or never rusts. The red celery is a little finer in quality—has more of that rich nutty flavor, but it is, as a rule, not as good a grower nor so productive.

I set it out on well pulverized and well fertilized soil, without trenches, and simply cultivate it through the growing season—never earthing it up at all. I have access to plenty of water from the village water works, and with a garden hose I keep it thoroughly supplied with water, that indispensable requisite for successful growing. Late in the season, when heavy freezing is at hand, I take it up with a spading fork, trim off a few of the worthless outside stalks, leaving roots with a little soil adhering and pack it in barrels and boxes, with two inches of soil on the bottom—pack it close, standing upright. The packages are then put in a dark cellar—cool and if possible a little damp. In two or three weeks it begins to blanch nicely and is soon fit for the table, and I have no trouble in keeping it. I moisten the roots about once in two weeks, pouring the water through a short piece of hose, to avoid wetting the foliage. The method is simple, the success complete, and I have a generous supply.

THE SENATORSHIP.

What the Country Press Has to say in regard to the Matter.

That W. D. Washburn is not the only candidate in the senatorial race who has a fighting chance is thoroughly believed by many politicians in the Twin Cities, and the country press appears of opinion that a more suitable representative of the state in the national senate may be found. Following are a few extracts bearing on the subject:

Sauk City Post: Some persons never tire of saying that there will be no fight on the senator; that Washburn is the logical candidate, and that sort of thing, but we think the Pioneer Press and the other great dailies print several columns a week of clippings from country papers that are averse to Washburn's candidacy in some measure, how the wind is blowing.

Moorhead Independent: St. Paul's favored son has four years more to serve in the senate, and he ought to be able to represent the Twin Cities, and Grant, Comstock, Nelson be some other good Republican should be permitted to represent the country. Washburn has been there long enough, and we don't recollect any great things resulting from his efforts.

Moorhead Independent: There is now a radical change in politics. It us see if the legislature has the sense of right and justice to select a man to represent the people, or will remain in its iniquity of fake and tricks. The desire of the people of Northern Minnesota is Hon. S. G. Comstock.

Pine Island County Register: There seems to be a strong sentiment throughout the state working to oust Washburn and give some man from the country districts a chance to go to Washington and take a hand in shaping the rules and regulations for governing this great commonwealth.

St. Paul Globe: There is considerable speculation in the Seventh congressional district regarding Washburn's successor. Very few people here desire his re-election to the senate. Farmer Bickford will surely support him, but the other two Republican delegates from this county will wait for developments. The two Populists from Otter Tail are certainly anti-Washburn. While Clay and Becker counties combined send three delegates—all Republicans, but all favoring S. G. Comstock, of Moorhead. Foss and Finney, from Clay county, were elected on a Washburn platform, but will support Comstock. Polk county delegates are strongly opposed to Washburn, as are also Pope and Swift counties. The feeling prevails through the entire district that Washburn has no walk-away, with great chances for his defeat. Comstock appears to be the most available man, and, with the feeling that a senator should be elected outside of the Twin Cities, will get the entire support of this upper country.

Northfield Independent: The Hon. Edward G. Rogers of St. Paul will not be the next United States senator from Minnesota. Whoever that fortunate person may be, he will not be a resident of the city which Senator Ignatius Donnelly claims as his home. The next senator ought to be chosen outside of the Twin Cities, and be a man representative, not of the wealth of the state, but of the people of the state.

Slayton Gazette: There is nothing in the constitution to prevent all the members of congress from this state from being elected from St. Paul and Minneapolis. At present they have only four out of nine senators and representatives in congress. If the Twin Cities were not imbued with extreme political boggishness they would be willing to concede to the great agricultural interests of the state one representative in the upper house of congress.

Hokah Chief: Washburn will find a host of opposition in his scramble for the United States senatorship. He hails from the Twin Cities and the local feeling that virtually owns the earth so far as Minnesota goes. Just the thing—as we concede everything just that long will we go unreconciled. Any man in the southern part of the state in justice to his constituents can be doing his duty and support Washburn or any other candidate from the Twin City region.

Hutchinson Democrat: The Minneapolis Tribune generously says to the members of the legislature of other parts of the state that Hennepin county has not any candidate for speaker, and the members from that county will help nay or all candidates for speaker from the country. Of course that quality of magnanimity is not hard to discount. Hennepin county or Minneapolis has a candidate for United States senator, and his friends are ready to soft soap the country members of the legislature, who should not be slow to take the Tribune and Washburn at their word, and all of the friends of the hall-mention candidates for speaker should agree to meet the Hennepin crowd and each of them demand the united aid of the members from that county for their particular candidate before they agree to vote for Washburn for senator, and afterwards compare notes.

Crookston Wins.

Among the recent decisions handed down by the supreme court is that of Joseph Netzer, respondent vs. The City of Crookston, appellant, The Netherlands American Land Co., intervenor-respondent, in which the decision of the lower court is reversed, and a new trial granted.

The case grows out of the breaking of a sewer some two years ago, flooding the Germania hotel property on Third street, owned by Joseph Netzer in a suit for damages against the city he was given a verdict for $500. A new trial was asked for by the city, but refused by Judge Lee J. Aloutagape appeared for the city before the supreme court, H. Steenerson for respondent.

DISTRICT COURT.

Preliminaries Disposed of and the Grind Commenced.

A Large Grist of Cases to be Adjudicated.

MONDAY MORNING, DEC 3.

District court convened. The judge, attorneys, clerk, stenographer, sheriff, grand jury and litigants were on hand, and the wheels of justice were set in motion. Beside the Crookston attorneys there were present, Jos C. Richardson, Thief River Falls; J. Walseth, Fertile; B.S. Bennet, Fosston; E. D. Jackson and T. G. Frost, Minneapolis.

The first number on the program was a selection from the county—calling the grand jury. Several of their number being absent, they were excused until 2 o'clock p. m.

A preliminary call of the calendar was then had. Eighty-five cases appeared, of which number about sixty are for trial by jury. This appears as though there will be considerable grinding before the calendar is cleared. The time until noon was taken up in hearing motions and demurrers argued.

After convening at 2 p. m. the grand jury were sworn in, and the court urged upon them the importance of faithfully performing their duty; explaining specifically that duty. He told them in very plain terms to look after the gamblers, houses of ill fame, and the officers who fail to perform the duties of their offices. The grand jury then retired; and the hearing of motions to amend, to dismiss, demurrers, etc., occupied the attention of the court most of the afternoon. Some cases were set for the balance of the week. The first jury case for trial Tuesday morning is Sarah Swift vs. John Withers, tried before this court a year ago, the jury disagreeing. At the close of the first day 22 civil cases on the calendar. The grand jury brought in an indictment against "Pete" (Louis) Michaud for burglary in the third degree. On the 16th of Sept. last it is alleged he broke into a Great Northern freight car and stole some tobacco to the of $11.75.

TUESDAY.

Court convened at 9 a. m. The petit jury was called to appear at 10 o'clock. A motion for continuance in the case of J. D. Bacon vs. M. C. Gray was argued and the case continued.

A jury was called in the case of Sarah Swift vs. John Withers. When the case came up for trial a jury was duly disagreed. It is an action in replevin. In the spring of '93 the defendant went to the place of plaintiff with some broncos. Plaintiff claims the afterwards bought them. The defendant took them away, claiming no sale had been made. Hence, this action. Several horses and oxen are involved in the suit, amounting to $300. The case will take all day.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Swift-Withers case was concluded, and given to the jury late in the afternoon.

The grand jury brought in three indictments, one against John Stark for grand larceny; the crime alleged is the taking of a pair of pants and about $75 from Dan Patterson, of St. Hilaire, on the 20th of July last. The prisoner was arraigned and plead guilty. James Sanderson was charged with the malicious destruction of property. He let loose a hog on the 11th of Sept. last, jumped on a freight engine standing on the track of the Great Northern railroad, at the station in this city, and reversing the engine, and putting on steam sent the engine flying back into some cars standing on the track. The engine and a car loaded with wheat were pretty badly smashed. The damage claimed to have been done is about $1000. He was arraigned and pleaded guilty.

Wm. Becker was charged with forgery in the second degree; drawing a check on First National Bank, Crookston for $16, perporting to be signed by F. M. Lenman, Defendant has not entered his plea yet.

Peter Michaud entered his plea of not guilty. Wm. Watts will defend him.

WEDNESDAY.

The jury returned its verdict in the case of Sarah Swift vs. John Withers, for the plaintiff, that she is entitled to the return of the property if a return can be had, and in case a return thereof can not be had then the value thereof to-wit. $350.

Defendant asked for 60 days stay of proceedings to make out transcript and make a motion for a new trial. H. Steenerson, Esq. council for plaintiff and Ed. George, Esq council for defendant.

A jury was then called in the case of Ludvig Olson vs. M. Losey, Jr. This is an action in replevin, and was tried a year ago, no objection of defendant to plaintiff attempting to prove usury on a note and mortgage when the same was not pleaded. It appears that plaintiff borrowed some money from the Bank of Fosston, gave his note and chattel mortgage. M. Losey, as deputy sheriff took one cow under and by virtue of this chattel mortgage. Plaintiff replevied the cow and brought suit. Plaintiff claims he borrowed $80 from the Bank and had to give his note for $23; he asked for $30, got $20 and the note was signed for $23. The court allowed the plaintiff to introduce evidence to prove usury. The case consumed the time up to noon. The jury was not charged until after noon.

The grand jury brought in an indictment against Ole Hanson, McIntosh, for Grand larceny in the second degree; the charge being the taking of about two bushels of oats, valued at the sum of fifty cents.

MRS. HERSHFIELD WINS.

The Sensational Divorce Case at Fargo Decided Without Delay in Favor of the Wife.

FARGO, N. D., Dec. 1.—The Hershfield case is ended and the young bride of the Montana millionaire has been declared by a court of equity to be a legal wife. Judge McConnell gave his decision denying the application of Aaron Hershfield for annulment of his marriage contract immediately at the conclusion of arguments of council. The decision was given orally, the court stating it did not care to point out that the testimony was unworthy of credence. Plaintiff claimed, he said, that two urined men forced him to accompany the defendant to the office of a justice of the peace, where they were married under duress. It must be substantiated so clearly that there is little room for doubt, or it must be shown that plaintiff's mental condition was such that he was incapable of making a contract. The first provision he did not think was clearly sustained. He believed Aaron Hershfield was a changed man, but not to the extent that he could be held to be irresponsible. He had taken careful note of the evidence, had followed each witness closely, and was confident he had lost no point that would be of benefit to plaintiff, and saw no other way in justice than to hold the marriage contract valid and to deny a decree. When the judge commenced to deliver his decision not a sound stirred. The spectators leaned forward, anxiety depicted on every countenance. The judge had warned that there was to be no applause, and the crowd respected the command: but when he said "I deny the decree" the sigh of relief that went up swelled to a murmur of approval, which was promptly hushed by the bailiffs scattered throughout the court room. Outside the court house nothing could prevent the jubilation of the crowd. Women who had never seen the plaintiff till she came to Fargo pressed forward to grasp her hand before leaving the room. "I am a happy woman again for the first time in a year," was all she could say.

The case of Mrs. Aaron Hershfield against Mrs. L. H. Hershfield for $75 for alienating her husband's affections is soon to come up in Helena.

ARMENIAN REFUGEES

They Reach Athens After a Journey of Hardship and Suffering.

Horrible Details of the Massacre Confirmed by Eye Witnesses.

ATHENS, Dec. 4.—The Associated Press exclusively has been able to give to the world the facts of the terrible atrocities perpetrated upon Armenian Christians in Asia Minor and Monday a representative of the Associated Press succeeded in obtaining additional details confirming the statements previously made. The representative met 20 Armenian refugees who arrived here from Armenia after a journey full of hardships and suffering. Securing the services of a first class interpreter, he questioned them concerning the terrible events of which they had in a number of cases been eye-witnesses.

This party of Armenians is the first that has escaped from the districts where the massacres occurred, and it is believed that even worse remains to be told as the horrors recorded are understood to have lasted for a long time after this party fled. The number of villages devastated is said to be over 32. The Armenians fled in every direction, but many of them were captured by the Turkish troops before they could get away and were taken to prison.

Two More Smugglers Jailed.

DETROIT, Dec. 4.—Two more arrests of the Turkish goods smuggling gang were made during the day. The culprits are Joseph Lazarus and John Nichols, who were employed as gatekeeper and deckhand by the Detroit and Windsor Ferry company. ...ost part of the job was bringing over bags of the goods, for each of which they received $8 and upwards.

Colonel Fellows on Trial.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The trial of Colonel John R. LIQUOR MEN AT WAR.

Iowa Saloon-keepers After the Medicine Compounders.

DES MOINES, Dec. 4.—This city is having an exceedingly lively contest between the saloon-keepers who pay the usual tax of $1,000 a year and the drug store who sell whisky without paying any revenue to the county or state. Complaints have been made to the county attorney by the saloon men, and that official has been frequently asked to enforce the injunction against the druggists, but has not seen proper to do so. At last the saloon-keepers have taken the matter in their own hands and proceedings have been begun against 20 of the leading druggists of the city, asking that injunctions be issued restraining them from illegally selling any kind of intoxicating liquors. As the law is very plain in regard to the sale of liquor by any except those who have permits under the mulct law, it is evident that the petitions for relief will be issued against the druggists, as the affidavits upon which the petitions are very conclusive as to their guilt.

GRAIN INSPECTION.

Chief Clauson Submits His Annual Report.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 30.—Chief Grain Inspector Clausen has prepared his ninth annual report to the railroad and warehouse commissioners. The volume of business of the inspection department was materially reduced from that of the preceding year, the number of carloads of grain inspected "on arrival" at the terminal points being 30,265 less than during the year previous. The total number of cars inspected "on arrival" was as follows: Wheat, 183,628 carloads, as against 168,137 in season of 1892-3; corn, 9,989 cars, against 4,873; oats, 4,066, against 5,798; rye, 446, against 691; barley, 4,110, against 4,196; flax seed, 2,901, against 2,662, or a total of 196,080 carloads of all kinds, as compared with 226,345 carloads in 1892-3.

Inspection "Out of Store."

The inspections "out of store" during the same period were as follows: Wheat, 32,036 carloads and 20,026,482 bushels "into vessels," against 48,980 carloads and 34,328,818 bushels "into vessels" the preceding season. The total amount of corn, oats, rye, barley and flax seed inspected "out of store" (for local use) was 1,911 in 8,480 carloads and 1,103,887 bushels "into vessels," as against 8,405 carloads and 837,317 bushels "into vessels" in 1892-3.

Revenue Received.

The revenue received during the year from the work of inspection was $57,188.73 from the weighing service, $61,610.72 from interest on deposits, and other sources $602.70, a total of $119,702.15. The disbursements for the same period were $106,884.67, resulting in a surplus from the year's business of $37,042.42. At the beginning of the crop year covered by this report the surplus on hand was $62,764.21, at the close of the season, Aug. 31, 1894; it had been reduced to $6,771.79.

Hall's catarrh cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Destroyed Its Own Identity.

One step from the sublime to the ridiculous. This is an old truism. It might be said also that comedy and tragedy are very near to each other—at least that great prince of good fellows, Nat Goodwin.

Seated in Delmonico's cafe one day recently Nat was entertaining a number of friends with personal reminiscences of a European trip. In a delightfully ingenuous manner he made himself the hutt in each story, and convulsed his auditure with laughter.

Finally Nat said: "I was walking down street the other day—that is, I was or another fellow was, it doesn't make any difference. You don't want to spoil a story on technicalities. Anyhow I or the other fellow was walking down a street and chanced to pass an express office.

"The expressman was loading his wagon preparatory for his afternoon round. Of a sudden the forwarding agent or whatever you call him came out with a small dog.

"'Where's he going?' asked the driver.

"'I don't know.'

"'Don't know?'

"'Naw.'

"'Why the — don't you know?'

"'Now, don't get previona,' said the forwarding agent. 'I don't know, an it don't make any difference. It's ot up its tag, that's the reason.'

His auditors laughed, but Goodwin drew a streak of fire from his cigar and remarked. "Think of the position of that dog. In a thoughtless moment he destroyed his own identity. It's a tragedy in real life."—New York Herald.

The Review will publish in it chapters, beginning with the January number, the Personal History of the Second Empire,

a historical work of unsurpassed importance, which throws a flood of light upon the chequered career of Napoleon III, and the brilliant but ill-fated Empress Eugenie. It will be the gauzable struggle with united Germany, of which Sedan, Metz and Paris were the successive culminating points. The work is recorded in the style of the Memoirs of Napoleon I, and has been written by a member of the Imperial household. It will be published exclusively in the North American Review.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

MR. CLEVELAND PRESENTS HIS VIEWS TO CONGRESS.

Mainly a Review of Department Work and an Endorsement of the Opinions of Cabinet Officers—Plea For the Improvement of the Currency System Elucidated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Congress convened at noon. The first business was of course the reading of the president's message, a very long document, but devoted mostly to a review of the reports of cabinet officers and the approval of their recommendations.

The report of the treasury department shows a deficit for the past year of $70,000,000, and the estimated deficit for this year is $20,000,000.

The three battalion formation is recommended for the army. No increase in the present legal strength is thought necessary, however. An additional judge of the circuit court of appeals for each district is recommended in order to facilitate the business of the courts. Federal prisons are also strongly recommended.

The deficit in the postoffice department is nearly ten millions. The president recommends a change in the law relating to second class matter (periodicals) by which the vast mass of fellow backed literatures shall be made to pay at least as much as standard bound publications. This and a few minor changes would be sufficient to overcome the deficiency.

The recommendations of the secretary of the navy for new battle ships and torpedo boats are approved.

Reviewing the report of the secretary of the interior the president urges the better protection of timber, and n court warns contested land cases be sent for final adjudication. Regarding allotment of lands to the Indians the president says:

In the light of experience, and considering the uncertainty of the Indian situation and its complexities in the future, I am decidly disposed to be very cautious in making allotments, but I incline to agree with the secretary of the interior in the opinion that when allotments are made the issuance of reservation land remaining after allotment, instead of being bought by the government from the Indians and opened for settlement with such scandals and unfair practices as seem unavoidable, should remain for a time at least as common land or be sold by the government on behalf of the Indians in an orderly way and at fixed prices to be determined by its location and desirability, and that the proceeds less expenses should be held in trust for the benefit of the Indian proprietors.

Great progress is reported in the scientific experiments of the department of agriculture, and still greater results are looked for.

The census commission's report is recommended to the careful attention of congress, but no special suggestions are made.

The only suggestions regarding the tariff are that iron ore and coal go on the free list and that the differential on sugar be abolished.

In regard to the currency scheme of which aldrich has been said the president has the following:

The absolute divorcement of the business of banking from the supervision of the government to the circulation of the currency of the country.

This condition cannot be immediately reached, but as a step in that direction and as a means of securing a more elastic currency and obviating other objections to the present system of bank note circulation, the secretary of the treasury presents in his report a scheme modifying present banking laws and providing for the issue of circulating notes by state banks free from taxation under certain limitations.

The secretary explains his plan so plainly and its advantages are developed by him with such remarkable clearness that any effort on my part to present argument in its support would be superfluous. I shall therefore content myself with of the secretary's proposed changes in the law and a brief and imperfect statement of their prominent features. It is proposed to repeal all laws providing for the deposit of United States bonds as security for circulation; to permit national banks to issue circulating notes not exceeding in amount 75 per cent of their paid up and unimpaired capital provided they deposit with the government as a guarantee fund in United States legal tender notes a sum including treasury notes of 1890, a sum equal to one-half of the remaining 75 per cent they desire to issue, this deposit to be maintained at all times; but whenever any bank retires any part of its circulation, a proportionate part of its guarantee fund shall be returned to it; to permit the secretary of treasury to purchase and keep on hand ready for issue, in case on increase in circulation is desired, blank national bank notes for each bank having circulation and to repeal the provisions of the present law imposing limitations and restrictions upon banks desiring to reduce or increase their circulation—thus permitting such increase or reduction within the limit of 75 per cent of capital to be quickly made as emergencies arise.

A Safety Fund.

In addition to the guarantee fund required, it is proposed to provide a safety fund for the immediate redemption of the circulating notes of failed banks by imposing a small annual tax, say one half of 1 per cent, upon the average circulation of each bank until the fund amounts to 5 per cent of the bank circulation outstanding. When a bank fails its guarantee fund is to be paid into this safety fund and its notes are to be redeemed in the first instance from such safety fund thus augmented—any impairment of such fund caused thereby to be made good from the immediately available cash assets of said bank, and if these should be insufficient, such impairment to be made good by pro rata assessment upon the several banks for their contributions constituting a first lien upon the assets of said bank against contributing banks.

As a further security it is contemplated that the existing provision fixing the individual liability of stockholders is to be retained and the bank's indebtedness on account of its circulating notes is to be made a first lien on all its assets.

It is quite likely that this scheme can be usefully amended in some of its details, but I am satisfied it furnishes a basis for a very great improvement in our present banking and currency system.

THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT,

Secretary Smith's Report Deals Largely With Indian Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The annual report of Secretary Hoke Smith of the interior department deals largely with Indian affairs especially, and he presents some practical suggestions for the improvement and civilization of the Sioux. Besides giving a succinct history of the progress of the Indian bureau during the past 12 months the secretary reviews the problem of effective work for the advancement of the Indians. He discusses the subject of education and of allotments of land in severalty, and urges that the scope of action of the Indians should be for the purpose of fitting them to perform the duties and responsibilities of citizenship and to fall to their after lot.

Regarding Pensions.

The report shows that the entire number of pensioners upon the rolls June 30, 1894, was 969,544. The estimate for the fiscal year 1895 is $140,000,000. Pensioners added to the roll during the year, 28,063; number dropped, 27,551. The greater part of the cases now pending in the bureau are old cases. Many of them have been pending for years and have been examined one or more times prior to this administration. Upon examination it has been found in many instances that proof was not sufficient to sustain a pension. The attention of the applicants having been called to the defection, in some cases efforts have been made to supply the needed testimony possible to the analysis of the statistics presented.

NEGOTIATIONS PROCEEDING.

Japan Presents a Counter Peace Proposition to China.

TOKIO, Dec. 3.—Peace negotiations are proceeding. The minister of foreign affairs has handed to United States Minister Dun a counter proposition for transmission to United States Minister Denby. Owing to the impenetrable secrecy surrounding the negotiations it is impossible at this stage to discover the exact nature of the counter proposition, but it is supposed to differ from Minister Denby's original proposition mainly in respect to the amount of the indemnity demanded by Japan, and in addition of the certain rather onerous guarantees for the faithful execution of China's pledges. It is rumored that one of these guarantees is the continuation of Japanese occupation of Port Arthur until the treaty conditions are fulfilled, but it is apprehended that such a demand may involve Great Britain, to which nation such occupation would be obnoxious.

Princess Bismarck's Funeral.

VARZIN, Nov. 30.—The funeral ceremonies over the remains of Princess Bismarck were conducted simply by the local pastor. The body was removed from the chateau and was temporarily deposited in the pavilion in the park, where a specially arranged service was held. The ceremonies were strictly private, only the members of the family being present. The remains will probably be removed later to Schoenhausen.

ARMENIAN MASSACRE.

Late Reports Place the Dead at Over Two Thousand.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Further information as to the massacre of the Armenians near Bittis, Turkey, has been received by Secretary Gulliom of the United Friends of Armenia. One letter dated Bitlas, Sept. 26, gives the information that a messenger has arrived from the region back of Mcosh that 48 villages are said to have been wholly blotted out.

Another letter dated Bitlas, Oct. 3, states that the day previous a letter from Mcosh had been received which told of the outbreak of a virulent form of cholera, which was killing from 25 to 35 persons daily. It is caused, it is said, by the stench of carnage which has taken place on the banks of the mountains. The number of massacred will reach between 2,000 and 10,000.

The People Refused to Sign.

The government tried to get the people here to sign a petition to the sovereign expressing satisfaction with his rule, and disclaiming sympathy with the Armenians who have "stirred matters up." The people have refused to sign the address.

Another letter, dated Constantinople, Oct. 31, 1894, states that from information received from Bitlas, 27 villages have been annihilated in Sassoun, and 6,000 men, women and children have been massacred by the troops and Kurds. The massacre occurred in the early part of September. The massacre was the result of an affray between some Kurds and Armenian villagers from whom the Kurds had stolen their flocks. The sultan ordered infantry and cavalry to the scene to put down the Armenian rebellion.

UNDER GOVERNMENT AUTHORITY

Armenians Confident Their Countryman Were Unfairly Accused.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Chicago Armenians are now positive the recent atrocities in Sassoun, Armenia, were committed under direct governmental authority. The belief is based on private advices from Constantinople, in which it is asserted the Mufti of Mooch, who has control of religious matters in the district of Mooch, which covers Sassoon, has been decorated by the Sultan.

FOR FREE COINAGE.

Advocates of the White Metal Prominent in the Transmississippi Congress.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28.—The developments of the second day's session of the transmississippi congress have not been without interest for the advocates of the free coinage of silver, who have been conspicuous in the absence of discussion from the congress in favor of the white metal.

Not does have the minor features, such as warm applause when free coinage was mentioned, been encouraging, but the organization of the committee on resolutions, with Congressman W. J. Bryan of Nebraska as chairman and R. L. Marshall of Texas as secretary, has been highly delighting. Nevertheless there is no yet no certainty that the matter will go beyond this. In the convention there is a strong element in favor of international free coinage and another opposed to any expression whatever upon the subject by the congress. Whether the Bimetallists will be strong enough to overcome both these elements cannot be told. Yet there is a certainty that the free coinage struggle will be upon a portion of the resolution committee report and the battle will not be of brief duration.

PAY THE POOR FIRST.

Certain Claims Against a Defunct Investment Company Made Preferred.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Nov. 30.—Pay the poor first," is the spirit of the order issued by Judge Shiras to Receiver Allen of the American investment company of Emmetsburg, Ia. June 7, when the receiver was appointed, claims aggregating $100,000 had been filed for collection on the mortgages which President Ormsby had failed to remit to the mortgage holders. Judge Shiras Thursday night heard the complaint of Elias Carroll, whose claim of $600 was invested in one of these mortgages, and he ordered the receiver to prefer all such claims. The assets applicable to this purpose are just about sufficient.

A Schema of Capitalists.

The mortgages held by the Merchants Trust company of New York are to be sold in that city Dec. 14, to redeem the debentures. If Judge Shiras' order not made this order it would have been practicable for New York speculators holding most of the debentures to carry on a plan they had formed to buy these mortgages below their value and present a claim to the receiver for the remainder necessary to satisfy the debentures. Now, however, the resources of the receiver will be used first in paying the preferred claims.

CASH TAKEN.

A Portland Bank Safe Robbed of Twenty-five Hundred.

PORTLAND, Or., Dec. 3.—The Union Savings and Loan association bank was robbed by burglars and the safe blown open and robbed of $2,500 in cash, some time between Thanksgiving night and Friday morning. The robbery was not discovered until the bank opened for business Friday morning, and it was kept secret until now. There is no clue to the robbers.

Christmas Beef For England.

FARM, Ky., Nov. 30.—Ransdell, the banker and cattle raiser, has sold to M. Goldsmith 545 head of Durham cattle, averaging over 1,800 pounds, the lot bringing about $60,000. They will be shipped to Paris, London and Liverpool, and are for the Christmas trade. They are conceded the finest ever shipped from the state.

Japan Will Receive Proposals.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The Times publishes a dispatch from Yokohama saying that it is officially stated that Japan will allow the American minister at Tokio and Public to submit any proposals they may choose to make.

A KANSAS exchange says that of the hundred ladies of Topeka who signed an agreement among themselves to wear trousers on the street only n dozen have had the final courage of their convictions. The rest are probably contenting themselves to wear them at home.

THE Grand Forks Daily Herald says: "The people of Mandan request tint the Standard Oil Company send them oil without being diluted with water, or else send along a supply of brains that will burn water." Mandan is not the only place thus afflicted.

THERE are moments in the lives of mankind when the heart is disposed to rebel at what appears to be the dispensation of Providence, when it's hard to feel and know that He doeth ALL things well; when we are disposed to think that we could have done things more to our liking.

TO THE many kindly letters that have constantly been coming to the editor of the JOURNAL from brethren of the press and others during this trying week, we cannot find time or heart to reply. We can only wish should the dear waters ever go over those our friends, they may also find equally kind friends.

CONGRESS convened on Monday and listened to a long-winded message from the president, who recommends free coal, free iron, and a higher price for the poor man's sugar. Cleveland seems to be harder to learn than the dullest Populist. The most of them have fumbled, but Cleveland dosen't seem to.

THAT a man possessing so brilliant a mind as Ignatius Donnelly should come so far short of fulfilling a brilliant destiny in the cause of toiling humanity, can be accounted for in no better way than in the comment of an honest granger, who had heard one of Donnelly's harangues in the senate. The granger's verdict was: "He looks a balance wheel." And there is a world of significance in this remark, that all who know Donnelly are prepared to appreciate.

THOSE who expected fun at the inauguration of Gov. Oates, of Alabama, Saturday, were doomed to disappointment, as Capt. Kolb, the Populist candidate, who has been claiming that he received a majority of the votes cast, and has been defeated by fraud, failed to materialize with the small war he promised in case he was not inaugurated governor. He and his followers had a little inauguration all to themselves, and will wait until the meeting of the legislature to enforce their demands.

THE East Grand Forks Courier: "The latest county division scheme is to cut up old Polk into five counties, giving a county to each of East Grand Forks, Red Lake Falls, Mcintosh, Thief River Falls and Fosston. Already the ball has been set in motion, and the preparatory work commenced. But as the proposition cannot come up before the people for action until 1896, at the next general election, the supposition now is by people who will oppose such a measure that long before that time the divisionists will have exhausted themselves."

AGAIN justice has triumphed, and the millions of the rich have been counted for naught in the balance. With all their artifices, perjured testimony and wealth the Herschfields have failed in their attempt to blacken the character and ruin the life of an innocent, confiding woman, and today Delia Herschfield stands before the world an honorable, though persecuted wife. One can hardly repress the wish that the Scriptural curse be visited upon the head of the woman, who, to gratify a little family pride, has destroyed a happy family.

THE candidacy of E. G. Rogers, of St. Paul caused a bit of a ripple on the senatorial sea for the nonce, but seems now to be accepted for all it is worth and no more. While there is no doubt of Mr. Rogers' ability, one does not need to be a very astute politician to see at a glance the absurdity of St. Paul asking for both places—better by far be as it is. If then we accept this view of it is the only other motive St. Paul can have is by a protestion of having a candidate of her own, she can knife the Minneapolis candidate then rally to the support of some candidate from the country.

DONNELLY'S RESIGNATION.

Last week Ignatius Donnelly wrote a letter resigning the presidency of the Farmers' Alliance; to which he has hung like grim death ever since to succeeded in getting elected thereto. A number of years ago the Alliance was organized by a number of shrewd farmers as a business organization, intended to benefit the farmers. All his life Ignatius Donnelly has been posing as the friend to the laboring man, with a view to being elected to a position of trust—to some high office "where he might be enabled to work for poor, suffering humanity. Not content with working for suffering humanity in a private capacity, he must needs have some great office to enable him to accomplish great things. Seeing what a mighty power the Alliance could be made, could he swing it into politics, Donnelly took hold of it with vigor, and soon his magnetic influence had made it what he wished—a servile political tool, but not the engine of power that he had fondly hoped, for his peculiar tactics had driven out every sensible farmer who was onto Donnelly'scurves, and those who did stay were men who did not know him and consequently caught on. A number of brilliant attainments, strong mentally, but with an inordinate, and unscrupulous ambition, Mr. Donnelly has always placed self before everything else and played his great stakes for self aggrandizement all his life. Fortunately for the people he has failed in his ambition to secure a seat in the United States senate, and will now probably retire to his books and the pursuits of a literary life, in which he is competent to shine. Had Ignatius Donnelly been really in earnest in his professions of love for the common people, he could have done them lots of good in his literary work, giving them the benefits of his brilliant mind, but his ambitions slew him. Had he been true to his professions of interest in the common people none would have recognized in that lust sower than they, and they would have been quick to reward him with office. The Farmers' Alliance, as a business organization, was all right before Donnelly took hold of it—but he soon wrecked it—and it has wrecked him.

THE latest rumor in the Senatorial field is to the effect that Donald Grant is to be made the opposition candidate against W. D. Washburn. There are reasons why we don't guess so, and later developments will show that this report is simply one of the rumors that get about, one hardly knows why.

THE Fargo Argus says of Hon. S. G. Comstock: "The Moorhead Independent urges Hon. S. G. Comstock for senator in place of Hon W. D. Washburn. If the Forum will permit the Argus would remark that there is no better man for United States senator in any district than Hon. S. G. Comstock. He is familiar with Washington affairs, and splendidly equipped for the position."

IT is said that Mr. Washburn has been an efficient member of the United States senate and for that reason should be returned. The first part of that proposition we do not deny, but as to the last we cannot see where that cuts any material figure, as there are scores of men in the state, fully as able in every way as he, and we do not see any good reason why the Twin Cities should continue to monopolize those two offices. Against Mr. Washburn as a legislator we offer no objection, but we do firmly believe that one of the U. S. senators at least, should come from the country, especially when the country has such excellent material to choose from. We are not hide-bound in the matter, but we believe in fair play—we believe the country is fairly entitled to that position and should have it. In the case of a congressman, they does that he should be allowed another term when he has faithfully served one in all right enough, for his term is only two years, while that of a senator is three times as long and one term gives him six years, so it cannot apply with equal justice here. Let the country have the place.

ANNA Katherine Green has written a novel. "Dr. Izard," which in some respects, if not all, surpasses "The Leavenworth Case" and the other celebrated stories from her pen. This has been secured by the Orange Judd Farmer, the first installment in the issue of November 24. Like all Miss Green's stories, "Dr. Izard" is a mystery, which keeps the reader enthralled and unraveling as here and on to the last chapter. At the same time it is wholesome family reading and free from the objectionable features of other stories of the detective flavor. "Dr. Izard" appears in the Orange Judd Farmer, which is published weekly, at $1 a year, at the Pontiac Building, Chicago, Ill. Now subscribers for 1895 will receive the paper free to January 1, beginning with the issue of November 24, in which the story opens.

OBITUARY.

MARY E. COOKE, wife of the editor of this paper, died at St. Luke's Hospital in St. Paul on Wednesday, Nov. 28th, at 5:40 p. m.

Mary E. Hopkins was born at Concord, Livingston county, Mich., daughter of Truman and Cynthia Hopkins, the youngest child of a family of eight, four of whom survive her. When but a child her parents moved to Vermontville, Eaton county, Mich., where her early life was spent. She united with the Congregational Church while quite young, taking an active part in church work, and for several years was a member of the choir. On Oct. 1st, 1877, she was united in marriage to H. E. Cooke, at South Haven, Mich., coming with him to Crookston in the spring of 1878, where she has since resided up to the time of her death. Being of a genial, loving nature, she endeared herself to all who knew her, and never knew what it was to have an enemy. In her life she exemplified the true Christian character, and in her sickness and death showed the fortitude with which martyrs have gone to the stake—bearing it cheerfully under an extremely dangerous and painful surgical operation, such as might appal the stoutest heart. A short time before the operation she said to her husband: "I do so desire to live through all this and return home with you, but if it is to be otherwise, I am trying to be resigned to His will. I believe that He knoweth best, and I am trusting in Him for strength and fortitude." Her trust was not in vain, for in the hour of trial she manifested a wonderful degree of fortitude, never excelled, and after the terrible ordeal she bore with sweet resignation and cheerfulness the extreme pain, the great torture from three incisions to the operation. For four days her sufferings were intense, yet she never murmured or complained, but on the fifth the pain grew less and she continued until Wednesday morning, the ninth from the operation, when she was seized with a peculiar pain in the top of the head. An opiate was administered to relieve that pain administered, and she appeared to be rapidly on the mend. About 2:30 she sank into a calm, restful sleep, from which until a little after 4:00, when she suddenly heaved a deep sigh, and passed away, in spite of the efforts of the doctors and nurses who were hastily summoned, and who at once commenced the process of artificial respiration, but all of no avail, and at 5:40 her spirit entered into the celestial realms, where is no more pain, no wearying sickness, no death, "and there shall be no night there." She leaves, besides her husband, to mourn her loss, two brothers, Albert and Franklin Hopkins, of Duluth, and two sisters, Mrs. C. T. Parter and Miss Adeline Hopkins, of Vermontville. On this earth she can never come to us, nor would we call her back from those realms of bliss to a life of pain and sickness, but the bright assurance is ours that by the exercise of that simple faith that was her daily life, we may go to her all in His own good time.

WAITE SHOOTS HARD

At Religious Bodies, Which Practically Supported Gambling.

DENNER, Col., Dec. 2.—Gov. Waite has made a reply to a petition from business men of Denver asking that gambling houses be reopened. In his communication the governor attacks those who signed the petition and says that the clergy of Denver were in league with the worst elements before election to defeat him and he had endeavored to suppress gambling. He says:

"The religious sentiment of Denver may be correct in opposing gambling and lewdness in the city, but they have been exceedingly tardy in their manifestations. In the summer of 1893 the war of the governor of the state upon the gamblers commenced. In all preceding state administrations gambling had been practically licensed and protected by the police. No vigorous war had ever been waged against gambling by any governor of the state and fire and police board. The present governor found Messrs. Orr and Martin guilty of malfeasances in office in protecting instead of prohibiting the gambling houses of the city and removed them according to law. The officers had removed refused to vacate their offices, in the interests of the gamblers aroused an insurrection, and by the aid of the sheriff's office, took illegal and forcible possession of the city hall. A district court, in the interest of the gamblers, enjoined the governor from the exercise of his constitutional rights. The issue was sharply defined between the gamblers and the governor, who called out the militia of the state to suppress the insurrection. Now, where was the clergy of Denver, the Y. M. C. A., W. C. T. U. and the Prohibitionists in this fight? They were dead against the governor. The exceptions are very small and insignificant as to be unworthy of notice."

DONNELLY'S RETIREMENT.

The Chicago Tribune Pokes Fun at the Sage of Minnger.

The author of the cryptogram has decided wisely and well, but it is not creditable to his powers of discrimination that he mistakes the decrees of the people of Minnesota for a chastening expression of Divine Providence. It argues an undue estimate of self-importance for Mr. Donnelly to set forward this assumption. He should realize that it was a tired feeling on the part of the people of Minnesota expressed at the ballot box, and a wise decision that they could not endure any longer his cranky notions of reform, that decided them to leave him at home, rather than the decision of the Deity. If Mr. Donnelly were as apt in finding the hidden meanings of a green bonnet movement as he claims to be in reading all sorts of improbable yarns in the written text of a poet he would not have made this serious mistake, and he would not now be afflicted with the personal distress which appears all through his little perennial.

The situation, however, is not without its compensations. The people will have a rest from the antics and the crankeries of the Minnesota Sage. He, too, will have a rest from political ingratitude and party persecutions. He now can devote the remainder of his life, in the quiet which solitude brings, to the invention of some newer and fresher Atlantises, and to further revelations of Baconiana in Shakespeare, for if one play contains such an astonishing cipher, all of them may have ciphers. At least the mechanical ingenuity which he has applied in one case, and the peculiar methods of its application would enable him to astonish the world with yarns of all sorts from all the plays. His retirement will also give him the opportunity to exercise his peculiar system so as to embrace all the poetry of Bacon's time and show that he wrote the whole of it. It probably also has been Mr. Donnelly's discovery that a Detroit cryptogramatist has turned up in comparison with whom he (Donnelly) is a child. He must do that something more than he has done or the Detroiter will drive him out of this cipher business. All things considered, therefore, Mr. Donnelly has done well in stepping down and out and obeying Wasp's timely action to Cromwell to fling away ambition. We shall now look forward with considerable interest to the astonishing revelations which will be sent out from his retreat.

NOT ON THE BILLS.

He Lost His Job, but Made Sure of His Girl.

An actress who has toured in England told me a tale that I thought interesting.

"In a play produced in the provinces there is a scene in which the heroine and villain, who leads away without seeking to defend himself.

"One night in a large manufacturing town the young fellow who played the deep dyed scoundrel remarked to the leading man before the curtain rose:

"I say, old chap, I've got my chances out in front tonight with her father and mother. Now, of course they don't know anything about our business, and I'm afraid it would rather hurt me with them if I received a blow and got away in the usual comedy fashion. So, dear old chap, can't you omit the blow tonight?"

"But, my boy, the management will fine me 2 shillings."

"Well, I'll pay the fine."

"Oh, yes, that's all very well for you. But what do I get out of it? Nothing but a bad name with the powers that be."

"Oh, well, I'll give you 2 shillings extra, or, better yet, you bit me as usual and I'll hit back. I'll fall down as not you, and I'll give you the 2 shillings besides. You see how I'm situated. I shouldn't like the girl to let me up with the character I play. Outsiders are not in my way."

"So the compact was made, and that night when the hero cried, 'Sir Daniel Derwynter'—or something of that sort—'base offspring of a noble race, take that!' Sir Daniel not only took that,' but gave it back with such force that the pit rose at him,' including his relatives to be by marriage, and he walked off the stage in triumph.

"I am sorry to add he lost his situation, but he gained his point."—New York Recorder.

Joseph Bonaparte.

Joseph Bonaparte, died in America after the hundred days and bought a home in Philadelphia, where he lived in water, and a mansion in Jersey City, where he passed his summers. He was much liked in this country, but could not make up his mind to stay here, so returned to Europe, hoping to profit by the changes of government in France. He was always disappointed and found himself an unwelcome guest in every country save England. He finally secured permission to live in Italy and died in Florence in 1844.—Exchange.

To California.

If you are going to California to remain for the winter, take the Northern Pacific and Shasta route, and go comfortably in warm, double windowed, vestibuled trains, having dining cars that remain with the trains.

You will see via this line the finest scenery in the United states. No other route to California can compare with it in this respect.—this is a fact, not description.

Mt. Adams, Mt. Rainier, morethan 14,000 feet high, Mt. Hood, Mt. St. Helens, Mt. Shasta, form a group of mountain peaks that can be seen from the cars, and constitute the grandest mountain scenery of this country.

An Effective Warning.

The train was just ready to start for Boston when a detective from Superintendent Byrnes' office got on one of the smoking cars and said, "Be careful, gentlemen; I believe there are a couple of sharpers inside."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed a very stylish looking gentleman, preparing to get out. "I'd no idea there were such people here. I'm sure I shall get out."

Another, who was sitting in a seat opposite, exclaimed:

"I have a large sum of money with me, and I have no wish to lose it," whereupon he, too, got out.

"All right, gentlemen," the officer calmly remarked, "they are both gone now."—Millard J. Bloomer in Harlem Life.

Bound to Be a Portia.

Miss Isabel Darlington, daughter of ex-Congressman Darlington of West Chester, Pa., is bound to be a lawyer. She has already passed the required preliminary examination and been registered as a law student in the office of Judge Thomas S. Butler. AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral
SAVED HIS LIFE

So says Mr. T. M. Reed, a highly-respected merchant of Middletown, Ill., of a Young Man who was supposed to be in Consumption.

"One of my customers, some years ago, had a son who had all the symptoms of consumption. The usual medicines afforded him no relief, and he steadily failed until he was unable to leave his bed. His mother applied to me for some remedy and I, recommended Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The young man took it according to directions, and soon began to improve until he became well and strong."—T. M. REED, Middletown, Ill.

"Some time ago, I caught a severe cold, my throat and lungs were badly inflamed, and I had a terrible cough. It was supposed that I was a victim of consumption, and my friends had little hope of recovery. But I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, took it, and was entirely cured. To doubt, it saved my life."—I. JONES, Emerts Cove, Tenn.

Andrew Hauke died at his residence on Houston avenue on Sunday of consumption, and was buried on Tuesday. His wife died some time since.

Rev. R. P. Herrick, of Minneapolis, preached at the Congregational church on Sunday morning, and conducted the funeral service in the afternoon.

Geo. Vine took in a load of wheat fed hogs one day last week and says he don't wont better pork in his business. George is a connoisseur in such matter.

R. W. Jones, the man who is trying hard to establish a new sawmill at Thief River Falls was in the city this week. The JOURNAL hopes he may succeed.

Euclid was well represented on our streets Saturday. Geo. Nelson, Wm. Davidson, Theo. Myers, Chas. Cassney, Chas. Solberg and Rebert Teel, being conspicuous.

The guests of the Cleveland house "tripped the light fantastic" until the wee sma' hours of Thanksgiving eve. It was a sort of family affair, but heartily enjoyed by all.

Knute Nerland has been heard from at Phœnix, Arizona, where he has permanently located. He reports everything lovely—perpetual summer with all its concomitants.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Hopkins, of Duluth, were visiting old-time friends in the city this week. Mr. H. returned on Wednesday evening and Mrs. H. will stay for a fortnight's visit.

Court commenced its weary grind on Monday morning. The grand jury was organized and got down to business, and the wheels of justice are supposed to be revolving regularly.

The Congregational people have extended, or will extend, a call to the Rev. Mr. Fisher to act as pastor of that church, which has been without a stated supply since Rev. J. O. Smith retired.

Rev. H. C. Bolsser, conducted services at the Episcopal church on Sabbath day and left Monday morning for a trip to the coast. Mrs. Bolsser remains to visit in the family of her father, Mr. John Cronin.

Tom Murray was over from East Grand Forks this week to see how business is conducted in a well regulated city. Tom is a policeman over there on the banks of the ruby and is naturally anxious to see things kept up there equal to the capital city.

Mrs. A. D. Stephens returned from Kansas City, Saturday, where she had been called by the death of her father. She was met in St. Paul by Mr. Stephens, who accompanied her from that place.

A number of out-of-town visitors attended the Gravel-Scott-Rosenthal party last Friday evening, among which were Mrs. C. F. Page, of McIntosh; Mrs. Geo. Bonney, of St. Paul and Miss Culver, of Janesville, Wis.

We learn that Deputy Sheriff Losey will open a bank at Twin Valley about Jan. 1st. Mr. Losey has been an acceptable officer and made a host of friends, all of whom join in wishing him success in his new enterprise.

The Valley Roller Milsclosed down Saturday night for their semi-annual overhauling. Much of the machinery needs fixing up, and everything will be put in first-class shape. It is expected that the mill will resume about the first of February.

Charles Jefferson's old black mare dropped dead in the harness on 2nd street Sunday. She was owned by J. M. Stephens, whose little son was driving her at the time, and she was one of the oldest inhabitants of this city, well known by all.

G. S. Chesterman will undoubtedly be appointed deputy coroner, The coroner-elect will not take up his residence in Crookston, but is obliged to have a deputy here and he has a petition largely signed, asking for the appointment of Mr. Chesterman. Mr. C. is a man of experience in that line and it will be an excellent appointment.

E. C. Davis gets $610 from the Red River Lumber Co., as damages occasioned by sawdust to his work in constructing the water works. The case was appealed to the supreme court, but the lumber company allowed it to go by default. H. Steenerson appeared for the plaintiff and a Minneapolis firm for defendant.

The society event of the day was the Gravel-Scott-Rosenthal party, at the Fournet block, Friday evening. The corridors were tastefully decorated, as were also the apartments of Messrs. Gravel and Scott. Cards and dancing occupied the evening and all went merrily as a marriage bell. Lunch was served in the Scott apartments at 11:30.

Frank Brown is onto the latest combination in doing up a white shirt. He has a method that makes a shirt front as pliable as a woolen shirt and takes the terrors all out of a newly starched white shirt. Try Frank Brown's laundry if you want to enjoy the pleasure of a starched shirt that is yet as pliable as cotton cloth. Franklins' obtined all of the latest improvements.

Miss Ida Haucock, who has been the efficient Dept. School Superintendent for Polk county went over to Grand Forks to accept a position in the Strawbridge school this week. If the JOURNAL could have had its way she would have been the regularly elected Superintendent of schools for Polk county for the next term. But a majority of the voters thought otherwise.

E. D. Childs received a fine, handsome, three-year-old Clydesdale stallion on Wednesday evening. The animal was brought from Canada by W. L. Ostyeic, who also brought at the same time a car load of Ayrshire cows for the state experimental farm at St. Anthony. Mr. Childs has thus secured one of the best Clyde colts in the state and the stock interests of the county will be the gainer.

Ed. Ralston resigned his position as driver for Ed. Lancaster last week, and the hack looks lonesome without Ed's genial countenance beaming forth from the driver's seat. Ed. has occupied that position so long and faithfully as to become very much a necessary part of the establishment. What he intends to do in the future Ed. saith not, but Dame Rumor informs us that he thinks of seeking his fortune elsewhere.

THE BUTCHER BIRD.

HE KILLS FOR PLEASURE AND PUTS HIS VICTIMS OUT TO DRY.

He Hangs Snakes, Birds and Chipmunks on Thorn Bushes—A Veritable Terror of the Woods—A Born Thief as Well as Murderer—The Half Breed Idea.

No bird native to this country is so little known, and yet has such striking habits of life as the shrike, or butcher bird. He is a member of a family comprising some 300 species, of which only one well defined saltsmily is resident in North America. Bold, daring, handsome, he is at once the braggart and the beau of the woods. At a little distance a southerner would readily mistake him for the mocking bird.

His bluish gray plumage, tail tipped with white and broad black patch across each eye give him a trim, jaunty air quite pleasing to the eye, but, alas, a dreaded object to smaller and weaker birds. His habitat is northern North America, and though he breeds in the high ground of New England and New York he grows more common after the Canadian line is crossed.

The shrike is a born tyrant. Not content with killing and devouring all insects large enough to attract his fancy, he attacks snakes, moles, mice and small birds whenever opportunity offers. His disposition is as unlovable at home as abroad, for seldom are two or more seen together but they are engaged in an ugly family quarrel. They are truly carnivorous, and except for certain weaknesses of bone and muscle would rank as true birds of prey.

There is one strange, uncanny characteristic, however, which separates this woodland bully from all known birds. Naturalists have watched it, studied it, pondered over it and written long pages of inexplicable explanations of it, and common people have doubted in their superstition at times whether it was the doing of a bird or a demon in bird form. Today it remains as deep a mystery as it was 100 years ago.

This is the puzzle: The butcher bird in his riotous love of killing slays many more victims than he has any possible use for. He seems to do it for the mere fun of the thing. Instead of leaving the dead, however, he carries them one by one to some thorny hedge or tree and there impales them on all sorts of fantastic positions in the branches. It gives one a start to come out of a piece of woods when gunning and see a thorn tree laden with a ghastly crop of lizzards, toads, sparrows, grass snakes, lizards and chipmunks.

If the shrike ever returned to feed upon his grim board, there would be an explanation of his conduct, and he would be credited with the epicurean taste of a thoroughbred vulture who likes things "a hit gamy." But such is not the case. The weird fruit hangs for days upon the limbs, and if hawks or crows do not find and steal it it will rot until only a few tiny white skeletons remain to tell of the massacre.

Comparatively few dwellers in the backwoods know this eccentricity of the butcher bird, and hence arise many errors and apparently well authenticated stories of trees that catch birds in their branches and of storms that rained down toads and lizards, so that the trees were full of them.

The butcher bird is a born thief as well as a murderer and often meets his death while hopelessly endeavoring to kill and carry off a tame pet bird from a cage or to rob a hunter's cabin of fresh meat. Any tidbit he finds he will steal, even if apparently it is from a locust bough hard by. The Canadian fur traders and trappers despise him heartily and never lose a chance to kill him. The half breeds call him "Whisky Joe" and claim he is half drunk all the time, and more does these foolish things.

He will spy out the most carefully hidden trap and always manages to partake in the bait without being caught. The wild country north of the great lakes is a favorite haunt of these butchers, and the Indians who hunt and sell furs to the Hudson Bay company complain bitterly of the depredations of "Whisky Joe."

The shrike builds a bulky, somewhat elaborate nest of heavy sticks below, and upon this foundation a warm covering of bark, leaves and grass is laid. It is usually in some low tree, and the eggs, which are somewhat smaller than a pigeon's, are decidedly pretty. They are of a grayish green mottled, speckled and scratched with reddish brown. The young nestlings begin their education by wrangling and fighting as soon as hatched, in which amiable diversion their fond parents set them striking and perpetual examples.—New York World.

GLOBE GIRDLER LENZ LOST.

The Plucky Wheelman Was Last Heard From In Persia.

Frank G. Lenz, the young Pittsburg bicyclist who left New York in June, 1892, on a tour around the world for an American magazine, has not been heard from for several months, and some fear is felt that he has met with foul play or succumbed to disease. Instead of going east, as did the pioneer globe trotter, Thomas Stevens, and his more successful imitators, Thomas G. Allen and William L. Sachtleben, the St. Louis students, Lenz went westward on his world's tour and was last heard from at Tabreez, 607 far from Teheran, the capital of Persia. He had then passed through the dangerous portions of China, where ignorant and hostile natives are inclined to attack any "foreign devil" they see, and there seems no good reason why he would not be safe in Persia. He expected to reach Constantinople by the end of May, but no word has been received from him since May 2.

It is quite possible that he may have temporarily succumbed to disease in some fever stricken region of Persia, but he will doubtless turn up all right in a short time, safe and sound and none the worse for the advertising he has received. In China Lenz narrowly escaped death at the hands of superstitious natives on several occasions. At Nanchwichow, near the hostile province of Hunan, Lenz was attacked by a crowd of farmers, who struck at him with hoes and carrying poles. A blow aimed for the plucky rider's head missed that part of his anatomy, but carried away part of his hat. Better disposed citizens then interfered, and Lenz escaped death.

FRANK G. LENZ.

Lenz was the champion of the Allegheny cyclers of Pittsburg and had ridden from Pittsburg to New York and taken other long trips ere he first started on his globe girdling tour. He carried a camera on his back and took a safety which weighing 27 pounds. If he turns up all right, he will have ridden about 20,000 miles on his wheel.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS A BISHOP.

Dr. Whitaker's Long and Useful Career in the Episcopal Church.

The Right Rev. Ozi William Whitaker, D. D., bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church for the diocese of Pennsylvania, completed his twenty-fifth year in the episcopacy recently, and the occasion was seized upon by his colaborers for commemorative services and the laying of the cornerstone of the new episcopal house. There were present Bishop Potter of New York, Bishop Tuttle of Missouri and many other dignitaries from other states, in addition to the resident clergy and laity. There were services in Holy Trinity church, impressive historical address by Bishop Tuttle, and then came the laying of the cornerstone by Bishop Whitaker and addresses by others.

The bishop was born in New Salem, Mass., May 19, 1830, and was graduated at Middlebury college, Vermont, in 1850. After teaching a few years he took a theological course at the seminary in New York and was ordained in 1853. He proceeded at once to Nevada, and after four years' service was chosen missionary bishop of that state. He was consecrated in New York in October, 1869, and returned at once to Nevada. After 17 years' service in that state he was in 1886 chosen assistant to Bishop Stevens of Pennsylvania, and on the death of the latter the next year was chosen as his successor.

The public mind was somewhat excited in January, 1890, by an attempt to assassinate Bishop Whitaker during an evening confirmation service in St. John's church, Philadelphia. Rev. Dr. George Latimer was reading the Psalter and Bishop Whitaker was standing by the communion table when a lad of 20 years, David Alexander, in the third pew from the front, aimed a pistol at the bishop and fired. He was instantly disarmed and taken out, and beyond a scream from a lady there was no confusion. Bishop Whitaker proceeded with the service without a pause, and till it was concluded did not know he had been shot at. Alexander was a monomaniac on prohibition and thought the bishop should be killed because he had advocated a license law.

WHAT TO DO WITH ONE'S MONEY.

Suggestions For Those Who Do Not "Spend as They Go."

A woman who probably voices the question of a great many other women writes to ask how she shall invest her savings. She is a working woman who has accumulated a small sum, which she naturally wishes to use in accumulating more. The amount she has saved is not large enough for her to invest in real estate or in any large enterprise.

About two years ago this same question was asked, and we put the problem before the leading bankers and financiers. They answered the question almost unanimously. They advocated the saving of the money in savings banks at a small rate of interest until such time as there should be sufficient money to invest in a good first mortgage or in desirable real estate. The reason for this decision was that women are seldom fitted by education and training to take part wisely in ventures. They are likely to be the prey of designing speculators. They are almost unprofitably incapable of taking care of themselves properly in any sort of speculative scheme. The savings banks offer a secure place for depositing money, and the income from them, while small, is certain. Four per cent, assured and safe, is better for most women than larger profits and greater risks.

When the small sum has grown to be a considerable one, "first" mortgages on good property form an admirable investment for women's savings. They yield an income of about 6 per cent in most states and are almost as safe as savings banks. Land has an agreeable quality of remaining where it is, and improvements on land when mortgaged are always insured, so that there is little danger of loss to the holder of a first mortgage. By a first mortgage is meant the one which, in case of failure of the owner of the property to pay the interest or the amount of the loan in due time, will be paid first.

Investment in real estate is not so satisfactory. Property in places where the value of land is not liable to be diminished costs a good deal, in the first place. Then there are taxes, insurance and constant repairs to decrease the profits. Still land has its advantages of other investments in its comparative stability.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Impossible House.

The men and his wife called on the architect, and the architect was glad to see them, for business was extremely dull.

"We want you to build a house for us," said the man by way of introduction.

"Thanks," bowed the architect. "I shall be only too glad to do so, and I am quite sure that I can give entire satisfaction."

"Well, you ought to," remarked the lady. "We don't want anything else."

"What kind of a house did you wish?" inquired the architect.

"We want a good, plain one of about eight rooms," explained the man, "and we will leave the design to you. All we expect is that when you have finished it it will suit my wife and myself. I mean on the inside. We are not so particular about the outside."

The architect heaved a deep sigh.

"I'm very sorry," he said, "but you will have to go to some other architect. We can't design an impossible house in this office."—Detroit Free Press.

A Compliment.

Two old schoolfellows met 15 years after their graduation and fell, figuratively, upon each other's necks.

"Well, well, dear old Smith!" said Green. "How glad I am to see you! What days those were! Ha, ha, Smith, you were the stupidest fellow in the class!"

"Yes, I suppose I was."

"And here you are now! Why," looking him over, "you haven't changed a particle!"—Youth's Companion.

A Last Resort.

The latest story about the weather comes from Pontypool, where an old farmer, exasperated by the falseness of his barometer, which was standing during while the rain as steadily fell, got up solemnly, took down the glass, and carrying it to the door shouted it the weather.—Pick-Me-Up.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Routs Disease and Gives Renewed Health.

"O. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I have used several dozen bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla in my family and know its merits. I had a sore on one of my limbs below the knee which baffled the skill and treatment of several physicians. They were uncertain whether to call it scrofula, cancer, scrofula or blood poisoning. Owing to my age they thought it would not heal. The sore kept spreading. It was badly swollen, inflamed, eating in small size, and was as well as painful, terrible.

TRANSMISSISSIPPI.

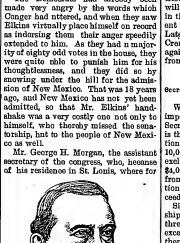
THE IMPORTANT CONVENTION TO BE SHORTLY HELD IN ST. LOUIS.

To Be Attended by Delegates From 32 States and 450 Cities, Representatives of Many Counties and a Lot of Exchanges, Railroads and Transportation Companies.

St. Louis is getting ready to receive the delegates to one of the most important gatherings ever held in that fine old city, the Transmissisippi congress. This meeting, which will probably continue four days, will begin on Monday, Nov. 26. This date has been selected because at that time a large number of United States congressmen from the states west of the Mississippi, and therefore personally interested, will naturally be in the wonderful drama that has been enacted since the opening of the country west of the big river. One of those likely to be present is ex-Governor Bradford L. Prince of New Mexico. He has always been one of the strongest and most determined advocates of the admission of New Mexico as a state, and he sails a rather good story of how, so long ago as 1876, his desire nearly missed consummation at the time Colorado came in. Bills for the admission of the two territories were introduced together as sister propositions—one Democratic and one Republican—to suit the temperament of the two branches of congress, the house being Democratic and the senate Republican. Both bills went through the house and to the senate calendar, but some formal amendment was thought desirable by the senate committee on territories. This amendment was accordingly made to both bills and then both passed by the senate. The Colorado bill was returned to the house for concurrence in little in advance of the other and was promptly put through.

Some session measure came up next, and while it was being discussed Representative Coager, from Michigan, made a speech in which he displayed some bitterness toward the senth, to the great offence of some of the southern men on the other side. Stephen B. Elkins was then delegate from New Mexico. Although then, as now, a Republican, his personal popularity enabled him to represent a close Democratic constituency, and it was his ambition to be one of the senators of the new state. It was Elkins' custom always to shake hands with a speaker who had made a hit immediately after the conclusion of his remarks, and, if possible, before the applause had died away. So saw that Conger had met with great favor in the eyes of the Republicans, and, as usual, rushed to his side. There, his face beaming with good fellowship, Elkins shook Conger's hand right heartily.

The Democrats had already been made very angry by the words which Conger had uttered, and when they saw Elkins virtually range himself on record as indorsing them their anger speedily extended to him. As the vote was a majority of eighty odd votes in the house, they were quite able to punish him for his thoughtlessness, and they did so by mowing under the bill for the admission of New Mexico. That was 18 years ago, and New Mexico has not yet been admitted, so that Mr. Elkins' handshakes was a very costly one not only to himself, who thereby missed the senatorship, but to the people of New Mexico as well.



PRESIDENT HENRY H. WHITMORE.

Gov. George H. Morgan, the assistant secretary of the congress, who, because of his residence in St. Louis, where for nearly 30 years he has been secretary of the Merchants' Exchange, has had much to do in preparing for this meeting, is not only very well known and very well liked in his own city, but in all the great marts of the United States and of Europe. In his official capacity during the last three decades he has of necessity corresponded with men holding similar positions in every other great city of the world. Mr. Morgan is now 56 years of age. He is a native of Plattsburg, N. Y., and went to St. Louis in 1860. There he began life as bookkeeper and cashier for one of the largest and best known commission firms of the city. Five years later, in 1865, he was chosen secretary of the Merchants' Exchange and has continued to fill that office satisfactorily to all concerned ever since. During that time his duties have increased in proportion to the growth of the exchange, which in 1866 had a membership of between 600 and 700, and now has considerably more than 2,000. Since 1872 there has been no opposition candidate, and therefore for 22 consecutive years he has received the unanimous vote of all the members. This is a record of which very few similar executive officers of commercial exchanges anywhere can boast, and it is creditable alike to the exchange and to Mr. Morgan.

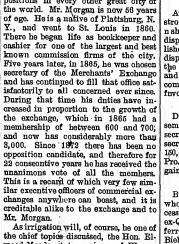
As irrigation will, of course, be one of the chief topics discussed, the Hon. Elwood Mead, state engineer of Wyoming and also president of the national irrigation congress, whose most recent session was held in Denver, will certainly be present. Mr. Meade, as a supporter of measures looking to the most effective method of reclaiming the fertile lands now arid through the lack of water, will be earnestly backed by brainy men from every part of the "rainless district."



EX-GOVERNOR PRINCE.

A feature of the last congress, held in San Francisco, was the presence of many state governors, and this will undoubtedly be repeated at St. Louis. Governor W. J. McConnell of Idaho was president of the last congress, and Governor Pennoyer of Oregon, who made himself famous by his message to President Harrison to the effect that if the chief executive of the nation desired to see the chief executive of Oregon it would be the nation's chief and not that of the state who would do the kangaling, was present and very active. He will also probably be present at St. Louis, and, as will ex-Governor Hogg, who himself an ex-president of the congress.

M. L. DEXTER.

THE NEXT CONGRESS.

UNOFFICIAL LIST OF MEMBERS SENT TO THE PRINTER.

Republicans Will Have Two-thirds of the Whole Number of Seats — Only Thirteen Northern Democrats on the Rolls — Twenty-eight Contests Likely.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Not until now have the officials of the house felt sufficient confidence in their unofficial list of representatives to send it to the printer. As finally prepared the list shows 244 Republicans, 104 Democrats, 8 Populists, 1 silver, and 1 vacancy.

The Republicans will constitute more than two-thirds of the house membership. Sectionally the Republican majority will be divided as follows:

New England states 28, Old Middle states 56, Middle Western states 92, Far Western states 28, Southern states, 32.

Few Northern Democrats.

The Democrats secure only 13 members in the Northern states. California and Massachusetts contribute one each; Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania two each and New York five. The Democrats secure six solid state delegations, those of Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina; the Republicans secure 10 solid delegations, those of Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Indian, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Twenty-eight Contests.

In all 28 contests may be made from the Southern states and a majority of them are to be instituted by Republican candidates against Democrats, but it now appears probable that there will not be so many. Mr. Breckinridge, it was expected would wage a contest for the seat from the Sixth Arkansas district, is now quoted as saying that he will make no effort to secure the seat in the face of the fact that his opponent is credited with a 5,000 majority. Late advices also indicate that Lee Cornehl will abandon the contest against General Wheeler, for the seat from the Eighth Alabama district.

NEW WARSHIPS.

Secretary Herbert Wants Congress to Authorize Three Cruisers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The most important recommendation made by Secretary Herbert in his annual report is that congress authorize the construction of three great battleships of about 10,000 tons displacement each, to cost, exclusive of armament, not exceeding $4,000,000 each, and 12 torpedo boats (of from 105 to 300 tons each), at the discretion of the secretary, to cost not exceeding an average of $170,000 each.

Since his last report five splendid ships have been added to the naval list, three of which are capable of speed in excess of 21 knots, while two of them are the fleetest cruisers in the world. The five vessels are the Marblehead, Columbia, Olympia, Montgomery and Minneapolis. One important change of naval policy is noted in connection with the advertisements for three new torpedo boats, soon to be issued. The secretary says that no speed premiums will be allowed on these boats; that the premium system undoubtedly had its advantages when adopted, but the department is now convinced that the time has arrived when, with the experience gained, it may with profit be abandoned.

In condensing the secretary submits estimates for the next year, aggregating $27,938,914, exceeding the current appropriations by $1,468,191, caused mainly by the necessity of paying for vessels now under contract. He stated that after this year the appropriations on this score will rapidly diminish—falling from $15,326,950 this year, to $760,000 in the following year.

Will Try the Dispensary Scheme.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 28.—There is a strong probability that Georgia will, in a short time, have in full operation a dispensary system similar to that established in South Carolina. The anti-dispensary bill has been pending before the general assembly for several days, and Tuesday the senate temperance committee agreed to report the bill favorably.

Iowa Returns.

DES MOINES, IA., Nov. 28.—Complete semi-official returns received by the secretary of state give McFarland, for secretary of state, 226,147; Hull, Dem., 165,652; Crane, Pop., 24,877; Mitchell, Pro., 7,448. This is a net Republican gain of 9,083 over 1892.

Conferred With Bismarck.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—Judge Woldmann, who has arrived here after his successful mission to England on behalf of ex-Queen Lilinokalani of Hawaii, conferred with Freiherr Marschall von Bieberstein, the imperial secretary of state for foreign affairs.

McKane's Last Hope Gone.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The court of appeals has affirmed the conviction of John Y. McKane. The court was unanimous in its decision. The appeal was from a judgment of conviction for felony.

Murderer Kent Granted a Stay.

MADISON, N. D., Nov. 30.—In the district court Attorney Hildreth moved for a stay of 30 days in the Kent murder case. The date of sentencing the defendant was put off till Dec. 15.

Donnelly Resigns.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 1.—Ignatius Donnelly has sent in his resignation as president of the Minnesota Farmers' Alliance. He will, he says, devote himself to his literary work.

Hay and Horses Burn.

GARY, S. D., Dec. 1.—James Donaldson's barn, together with all his hay and several horses, including Dewey Boss, the a French draft horse. The origin is supposed to be a spark from a passing train.

LOVE IN MASQUERADE.

I dreamed that Love came knocking
At your door one winter night
While the specter trees were rocking
In a blast of savage blight.
"Oh, I perish!" poor Love pleaded,
"Open the door, let Love's door take."
But although you heard and heeded
Still no answer would you make.

Then I dreamed that Love's errand you,
For in tenderness he cried,
"Nay, dear lady, I sadly footed you,
Since I am not Love, but Pride."
And you straightway oped your portals,
With a merry and winning nod,
To that willest of immortals,
To that unsympathizing god.

Ah, you oped your portals rightly,
Not for Love's but Pride's dear sake,
Yet, O lady, if I dreamed rightly,
Love soon caught you your mistake!

DROPPED FROM THE CLOUDS.

How the Race Horse Peytonia Won $800 For Little Miss Lowrey.

The caprices of fortune ever constitute a subject for special wonder, but the glorious uncertainties of the turf afford perhaps a wider scope for reflections on the ups and downs of life than almost any other sphere of action. Earl Lowrey, formerly of Pittsburg, but now of Chicago, tells a story that illustrates this conclusion very well.

On the morning of the day that Rey El Santa Anita won the American Derby at Washington park Lowrey's little girl, while looking over a programme of the events which he had carelessly left about the house, was struck with the name "Peytonia," the name of an entry in the first race of the day. So deeply was she impressed with it that she asked her father to place her savings of small change on Peytonia, the total amount being $3, which he agreed to do. On arrival at the park he at once discovered that Peytonia's chances for victory appeared to be very slim, one bookmaker offering 400 to 1 against her. Lowrey, nothing daunted, placed the $3 per cents, and in doing so provoked a smile from the man on the block, which was settled into that he promptly placed $5 more at 40 to 1 on the place. As has so often happened before, Peytonia fairly "dropped from the clouds" when the horses were fairly straightened out in the stretch, and to the utter amazement of every one won the race with comparative ease. Miss Lowrey's fondness for the name Peytonia therefore netted her $800, while the head of the family was $300 better off for acting as her commissioner.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

My Wife is Nervous

Says many a man and too often he is inclined to blame the poor, tired woman who cannot eat or sleep, whose whole life is filled with misery because her blood has become impoverished and her nervous system exhausted. She needs a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles will enrich and vitalize her blood, tone and strengthen her digestive organs, give her a good appetite, enable her to sleep soundly, banish her nervousness and bring back her smiles. Mr. J., W. Robertson, of Greenfield, Tenn., says: "My wife has been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla about three months ago and she is now taking her third bottle. She has been in poor health for three years. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her more good than any other medicine she has ever taken. Her appetite is better, she looks better and feels better, being improvement in every way."

MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional men and writers in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact little is known generally of the wonderful mechanism of life by which we are endowed in the upper part of the spinal cord and the base of the brain, and of the nervous system that covers the prick of a needle as it does the touch of a finger.

Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are controlled or connected by the nerves, which are found in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are damaged the organs which they supply with nerve force are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the point of injury, and that a shock may be prevented by the tender nerves which control the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, and from a derangement of the kidneys, liver, heart, lungs, stomach, etc., the nervous diseases originate. The great success of Dr. Miles' New Restorative in treating these diseases is thus duly appreciated, for it is to the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

Dr. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for years, and his New Restorative is the result of these researches. It contains no opiate or narcotic poison, but is purely vegetable. Sold by druggists on guarantee, or sent direct by Dr. MILES' MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price: $1 per bottle, 6 bottles for $5, express prepaid. One of the entertainments of Thanksgiving day was a stereopticon show by the Great Northern Scenic Co. After giving views of some of the principal points of interest in the Twin Cities, the audience was regaled with a trip over the Great Northern road to the Pacific coast, being shown the principal points of interest along the line. The views were excellent and a good audience attended both exhibitions.

A short time ago a number of our young men were in their lapels a bright little button inscribed "Girl Wanted," but out of the these buttons have been consummated by the last instance. When questioned on the subject of the buttons the late wearers are mum as an oyster, but from the happy and satisfied expression on their faces, a matrimonial boom is imminent.

From time to time rumors get abroad to the effect that the Sauguetead colony, that left here in the fall with flying colors, and high hopes to found a new home at Bella Coola, were very bitterly disappointed—not having found the land flowing with milk and honey as they had hoped to have done. The JOURNAL intimated at the time they left that something of the sort, but does not feel like gloating over their disappointment, and will welcome their return to Polk county.

The latest scheme in county division is to divide the county into five equal parts—five sets of officials, five times the present expense! This is altogether too modest. If division is a good thing then why not divide? Why not cut up into ten or twenty counties? In that case you would have almost county officials enough to carry the scheme. However there is no danger of so absurd a thing as a five-county scheme ever prevailing, as the people have now had plenty of time to become thoroughly posted.

The editor of the JOURNAL went to St. Paul on last Wednesday evening's belated train on the Great Northern road to bring back the remains of his wife. The funeral occurred at the Congregational church on Thursday at 2 o'clock, the Rev. R. P. Herrick, preaching a most appropriate sermon. The choir, of which she was formerly a member, rendered some choice selections, and the church was filled with sympathizing friends, who joined with reverence in offering the last sad tribute of respect to her who has only gone before. As the impressive sermon began, the sun came out, seeming to fill the edifice with a blaze of glory, as though in illustration of the brightness and the glory of the life into which she has just been ushered. A large procession of friends followed the remains to Oakdale cemetery, where we laid her to rest until that day when He cometh to make up His jewels.

Words fail us at the time to express our appreciation of the kind words of sympathy, the very many little acts of delicate kindness performed to us-ward during the bitter trials of the past week. Cards of thanks are obsolete, yet we should feel less than human, did we not, however feebly to express our appreciation of these things—trifling in themselves yet like drops of water in the vast desert—inexpressibly dear to the wayfarer perishing in the tolerable furnaces. To you who have done these things are spoken the words of Holy Writ: "In as much as ye have done it unto the least of these ye have done unto me." It proves that however little we may recognize the fact there is a bond of sympathy running throughout humanity that belongs to a higher life than their finite existence—it belongs to a higher, a nobler sphere, and teaches us that man is immortal. Creatures who were born to-day, to die to-morrow possess none of these divine attributes.

GIBBON, THE HISTORIAN.

A Plan to Commemorate the Centennial of His Death.

Edward Gibbon died 100 years ago, and the storm which raged so long around his monumental work has subsided into a mild approval of its tone on religious matters, while scholars are unanimous in the opinion that it is the greatest history in the English language, if not in any. The Royal Historical society of England has therefore decided to commemorate his centennial, and the chief feature of the celebration will be a gathering of literary men at the British museum and an exhibition of all the portraits, manuscripts and relics of the great writer. Apropos to this there is a revival of study of Gibbon and along with it a slight renewal of the theological war on his work.

EDWARD GIBBON.

It is scarcely possible to describe to this generation the peculiar furore created just 110 years ago, in December, by the appearance of the first volume of the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." The charm of the style attracted thousands who never read general histories. The wonderful condensation of learning delighted scholars, and the sneer at Christianity, raised a storm of vituperation and allotted replies from many eminent clergymen. The copies were bought almost as fast as they could be issued from the press. On the whole work the publishers cleared £60,000, while Gibbon received £6,000 as his royalty. The last three volumes appeared simultaneously in 1788, on his fifty-first birthday.

Gibbon was born in Putney April 27, 1737, the oldest of a family of seven, of whom all the others died in infancy. His constitution was so delicate that he could pursue no studies regularly till he was 16, after which he rapidly grew robust and vigorous. At 18 he was converted to Catholicism, for which he was expelled from Oxford, and his father sent to Switzerland to be reconverted to Protestantism, which was done. He studied there five years, then travelled in France and Italy and rejected both religions. It was in Rome, Oct. 15, 1764, while musing among the ruins of the capitol, that he planned his great work, to which he devoted the rest of his life.

GEORGIA'S NEW SENATOR.

Major Bacon Has Long Been Prominent in State and Local Politics.

Major Augustus O. Bacon, who has been elected to represent Georgia in the United States senate for the long term beginning March 4, 1895, is like his colleague, Senator Walsh, in favor of free silver coinage on the basis of 16 to 1, and this fact has generated more than ordinary interest to his election. He has been in active candidate for the past 18 months, and it was his friends in the main who secured the election of the present governor, W. J. Atkinson. This coterie put through their candidates in every instance, from justice of the supreme court down, and the election of Major Bacon was the culmination of a series of successes.

The senator elect is a man of 56 and has been prominent in politics nearly all of his life. He was defeated for the governorship once by the late Alexander H. Stephens, again by H. D. McDaniel and again by Senator John B. Gordon. Twice he seemed to have the governor for 1 prize in his hands, but it was taken from him. He was speaker of the state house of representatives for several years ago, but after his defeat by Senator Gordon for the governorship practically retired from politics until he entered the legislature last session with the announced purpose of capturing the senatorship.

Major Bacon is a successful lawyer and a man of fine ability. He at one time was general attorney for the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, but resigned this position and was a pronounced anticorruption legislator at the last session. He is a man of considerable means, comes of an old southern family and probably knows more politicians than any other public man in Georgia.

The United States Is Met Kwa.

In making treaties with China each foreign country has chosen its own name. England is Ying-kwo, the flourishing country; France is Fa-kwo, the law abiding country; the United States, Mei-kwo, the beautiful country; Germany, Je-kwo, the virtuous country; Italy, I-kwo, the country of justice. Japan is Ji-kwo, the land of the sun, but she prefers to be call Ji-pen, the land of the rising sun.

THE ODOR OF PLANTS.

It Comes From the Heart of the Flower Usually, Sometimes From the Leaves.

The various delightful or disagreeable odors of the plant family usually reside in the flower itself, though in some species the scent is in the leaves and stem or even in the root. In either case the odor is due to the presence of volatile essential oils, usually of a resinous nature. The number of these oils is unknown, and their nature is so complex that even a slight variation in the temperature or in the quantity of light falling upon them is sufficient to cause a rearrangement of their component elements, resulting, so far as the smell is concerned at least, in an entirely different compound.

Prophetic ether, which is an example of these unstable compounds, can, by a slightly different arrangement of its elements, be made to yield either the odor of pineapples or that of decaying fish. The reason, therefore, why each species and kind of a plant has a different odor is the ease with which one performs may be transformed into another. Sufficient cause for such transition is often found in the mode of life of each variety of plant and the differences in their chemical constitution.

Whatever in any way affects the life or growth of a plant rapidly shows its effect upon the flower and its perfume. The nature of the soil and its humidity, the variation of temperature or the intensity of the sunlight will sooner or later transform the native nature of a plant, for, as has been fully shown above, one plant, in order to produce exactly the same perfume as another, must not only be of the same species, but live in the same elements, earth, air, etc. It must also absorb in a similar amount of light and breathe the same, which would, of course, necessitate leaves similar in size, color and shape. —New York Advertiser.

A Will on a Canceled Bond.

John Morris, who died in this city leaving an estate valued at $2,800, had written the following upon the back of a canceled bond of the Milestown Building and Loan association, No. 5, which expired April 7, 1890. It was taken as expressing his testamentary desire and was probated accordingly after proper identification:

To Soften Hard Water.

To soften hard water take spirits of wine, a quart; orange flower water, a pint, and castile soap, 1½ pounds. Shave up the soap and put it into the orange flower water, heat till the soap dissolves, then add the spirit. A tablespoonful of this put into the bottom of the basin will completely soften the water that is put into it for washing.

LD SETTLER'S MEETING.

A Large Attendance and an Interesting Program.

The following report of the old settlers meeting that was held in Fargo last week appears in the Grand Forks Herald:

The annual meeting of the Old Settlers' association of the Red River Valley convened at Fargo Friday morning, Jonnee Nolan, of Abercrombie, presiding. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—N. K. Hubbard, Fargo, Vice Presidents—R. M. Probstfield, Clay county, Minnesota; Charles Chevalier, Pembina, W. C. Nash, Polk county, Minnesota; George B. Winship, Grand Forks; Charles W. Morgan, Traill county, James Holes, Cass county; Frank Herrick, Richland county; Ed. Connelly, Wilkin county, Minnesota, and Jacob Rheinhardt, Walsh county.

Secretary—B. F. Mackall Moorhead.

Treasurer—W. H. White, Fargo.

A committee to be known as the historical committee of the Old Settlers' association of the Red River Valley was appointed to gather reminiscences, incidents of early history, biographical sketches and photographs of the old settlers, etc. The committee consists of the following members: Col. C. A. Lounsberry, Fargo Argus; George B. Winship, Grand Forks Herald; R. M. Probstfield, S. G. Roberts, E. S. Fyler, Fargo; David McCauley, McCauleyville, Minn., and Charles Chevalier, of Pembina.

The meeting, which was a very enjoyable gathering throughout, concluded with a banquet at the Hotel Metropole in the evening, which included a fine program. Among the toasts and responses were the following:

"Attorney's Life and Railroading in '71 and 72"—Hon. S. G. Comstock.

"Running a Stage Station"—George B. Winship.

"Fargo in the Timber, by Ite First Postmaster"—G. J. Keeney.

"Early Recollections"— R. M. Probstfield.

"What I Know About Hotel Keeping"—James Nolan.

Evan S. Tyler, 1873, Fargo.

Alex Gamble, 1872, Fargo.

Joseph Prevost, Wolverton.

S. F. Crockett, 1873, Fargo.

Edwin Griffin, 1858, seven miles south of Fargo.

In addition to those named above were many old settlers. Among them J. B. Dinnehard, B. F. Mackall, A. F. Pinkham, G. J. Keeney, N. L. Shuttnck, A. A. White, Ed. Porrit and F. J. Burnham.

There are 289 old settlers on the roll, but when their names were called a second time the following were stricken off, death having claimed them: Capt. Reeves, J. S. Kneiman, William Blair, David Blair, Al Wright, O. S. Freeman, Hugh O'Donnell, Charles A. Brown, Ed. O'Brien, J. W. Tyler, John Kabernegle, J. R. Harris. The society having organized in 1880, these deaths were scattered through these several years.

Profit in Hogs.

Among farmers there is a difference of opinion as to the profitableness of pork-raising in the valley, some arguing that it pays while others as strongly assert that it does not and as an argument for their position they say that if farmers generally have pork to sell in the fall the price is always too low for profit. One reason for the low price of pork seems to have escaped their attention entirely, and that is the fact that there has not been enough pork raised in this country as yet to warrant the establishing and maintaining a good packing house. It seems to be a fact that the annual consumption of pork is and has been greater than home production, which shows that at some time during the year pork will always bring a remunerative price. It seems to be an indisputable fact that if more hogs were raised here pork would bring a better price, as a rule. There is no good reason why hogs will not pay here equally well with any other section of the country.

DISTRICT COURT.

The Usual Weekly Grind as seen by the Journal's Court Reporter.

The Grand Jury Discharged Gets a Hot Roast from His Honor.

Five Thousand Dollars for Judson.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON DEC. 5.

The case of Ludvig Olson vs. M. Losey, Jr., was given to the jury after the noon hour, and a verdict for the plaintiff was returned, that he is entitled to possession of property described in the complaint. Ole J. Vaule for plaintiff and H. Steenerson for defendant.

A jury was then called in the case of Jos. Tichy vs. Marcus Bon. This is an action for damages. The parties live in the town of Grove Park. It is claimed that about the first of June last the defendant set fire to an old straw pile to burn it up. Later it is claimed the wind increased in velocity and carried the fire beyond control and burned up some fence, wood and posts belonging to plaintiff. Plaintiff sued for about $80. A verdict was returned for plaintiff for $85.25. J. Walseth for plaintiff and L. E. Goseman for defendant.

A jury was then called in the case of Edward E. Havik vs. David A. Ray. The parties are from Pontiac. Wm. Watts and Ole J. Vaule appear for plaintiff and B. S. Bennett and R. J. Montague for defendant. This action is brought to recover on a note. It appears that the defendant, who is a merchant at Foseton, had a note against one Frank Vetleson for $121.13, dated March 26, 1890. Fifty dollars of that had been paid. Mr. Havik, on Feb. 15, 1892, came to Mr. Ray and borrowed $23, which the claimed was charged on the books. It is further claimed that at that time a sale of the Vetleson note was made to Havik and Havik gave Ray his note for $90, covering the Vetleson note. Defendant claims that plaintiff was to take the Vetleson note and get it secured and return it to defendant by the 23rd, and plaintiff was to get back his note from defendant. Plaintiff claims he returned it within the time set, and defendant claims he did not return it. Defendant transferred the note to the bank, and plaintiff had to pay. The case will occupy the most of the time tomorrow morning.

Grand jury brought in an indictment against Nils Mateson, the charge being assault in the second degree. On the 5th of September last it is claimed he assaulted Thore Johnson with a pitch fork. The parties live in the town of Tilden. Louis Seager is indicted of the crime of indecent assault on Josephine Guesting. Parties live at Beltrami. Defendant is out on $300 bail. He has not entered his plea yet. Nils Mateson pleaded "not guilty." Wm. Watts is his attorney.

THURSDAY MORNING DEC. 6.

The Havik-Ray case was concluded just before noon to-day. The jury were not instructed until convening at 2 p. m.

AFTERNOON.

The jury were instructed in the last above named case and sent out to deliberate.

The next case on call was Joseph Peterson vs. A. C. Rhinehart. When called counsels answered that it was settled. It was an action wherein the plaintiff claimed defendant was to make good a bill for bed sold by plaintiff to one of defendant's subcontractors on the drainage work.

The case of John K. Sweeds vs. A. O. Holland, et. al., was next on the program for to-day. H. Steenerson counsel for plaintiff and R. J. Montague counsel for defendant. This case was tried once before in this court, the jury disagreeing. It was a dispute about the extension of the time for payment of a chattel mortgage. There was no appearance on the part of the plaintiff this time and the case was dismissed.

The case of Walter A. Woods Mowing and Reaping Machine Co. vs. Larson, Carpenter & Co., was dismissed —no appearance on part of plaintiff. No more cases could be reached for trial to-day. Court adjourned

FRIDAY, DEC. 7, 1894.

The case of Lorenzo H. Judson, administrator, vs. the Great Northern Railway Co. was called. H. Steenerson as council for plaintiff and Cyrus Wellington and A. C. Wilkinson as counsel for the defendant. Considerable care was exercised in selecting a jury. Shortly after 10 o'clock the jury had been secured and the introduction of testimony began. This action was brought to recover damages for the accidental killing of the plaintiff's son by the defendant railroad company, on Oct. 20, 1893, at Kittson station. On that date it appears that the plaintiff's two sons, Willie and Robert Judson, and two neighbors named Hanna, each drove a wagon laden with wheat to the station in question. The Hanna boys unloaded first, Willie Judson following, and having his wagon unloaded by his brother Robert. The elevator is situated on the east side of the main track, some fifty feet distant. To unload they drove upon the driveway of the elevator from the north, and after unloading came off the driveway to the south, turning around to the north again, the road continuing to the north about seventy or eighty feet, where it turns to the west and crosses the railroad tracks. The two Hanna boys had unloaded and were proceeding homeward. Robert was still in the elevator with his team. While Judson was a short distance behind the Hanna boys. He had left the elevator and had proceeded northward to the turn in the road. During this time after leaving the elevator and proceeding northward, it is claimed he was engaged in fixing the sacks in the wagon, so as to sit down on in the meantime his team, being spirited and apparently anxious to catch up with the teams ahead, were trotting along at a brisk gait. He turned to the left to go over the crossing and was caught by the freight train coming from the south; the train striking the wagon between the front and hind wheels. The boy struck upon the pilot of the engine and was killed instantly. The engine, it is claimed, ran from one quarter to one half mile before stopping; the body remaining on the pilot until the train was brought to a standstill. It is claimed that the train was a special and running at about twenty-five miles an hour, and that it gave no signals until about the time it struck the wagon. The boy was fourteen years and seven months old. As the boy was traveling in the same direction after leaving the elevator as the train, the rumbling of his own wagon, his attention being engaged in fixing the sacks in the wagon, it not being the time for any regular trains and the alleged not giving any signals by the train, and the high rate of speed, it is plain to see there were a combination of causes attributable to the accident. The accident occurred about 10 o'clock in the morning and the two Hannas were the principal witnesses, as they saw the train about the time they crossed, and saw Willie Judson when he became aware of it, with no apparent knowledge of the train. The plaintiff sues to recover $5,000.

After plaintiff rested his case defendant moved for a dismissal on the ground that the deceased was guilty of contributory negligence, and it does not show that the defendant, by the exercise of ordinary care could have prevented the accident. The motion was denied. The defendant then submitted the case without introducing any evidence, and moved the court to direct a verdict for the defendant based upon the same ground as the motion to dismiss. The motion was denied. The defendant then submitted the case to the jury on argument. Hon. H. Steenerson then made his plea. The court instructed the jury at some length, after which the case was given to them to decide.

Several indictments were handed down by the grand jury, some of which were not allowed to be made public yet.

Judson Whaley was indicted for assault in the second degree. Delphis Beausolil, grand larceny in the second degree. The crime charged is stealing when, ante and after from (J. W.) deGlaty. Martin O'Brien was appointed to defend him.

SATURDAY MORNING, DEC. 8.

Immediately after convening the jury in the Judson vs. G. N. Ry. Co. case returned a sealed verdict for plaintiff for $5,000. A motion for a new trial was granted defendant. The case will go to the supreme court.

The next cases set for to-day were St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Co. vs. Enchariste Hnot and same plaintiff against Leon Hnot. Jury was waived in each case and both set for the January 1895 adjourned term. That cleaned the slate for the day and the jurors were discharged until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Wm. Becker entered his plea of "not guilty." Indictment was returned against John Falk, grand larceny in the second degree. The defendant is charged with stealing three cases of beer from the Minneapolis brewing Co. Martin O'Brien was appointed to defend him. He entered a plea of "not guilty."

Wm. Davis, Ing. Olson and James Stoble, who were out on bonds, were discharged; the grand jury failed to find anything against them.

A second indictment was found against Judson Whaley. The charge is robbery in the third degree, stealing money from Lars Lothus.

The charges against R. B. Vining and Philip Zeh, of Thief River Falls, for selling liquor to an habitual drunkard were continued until the next term. The wife of the habitual drunkard in question was unable to appear before the grand jury at this time.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Court convened at 3 p. m. Judson Whaley was arraigned on the second indictment found against him, that of robbery in the third degree. It seems that in his scrap he had with Lars Lothus he succeeded in relieving the latter of $9.35 of his wealth, he robbed him of $2.35 E. M. Stanton will defend him. He entered his plea of "not guilty."

Cases were set for Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesday next the criminal calendar will be moved.

The grand jury came before the court and asked for further instructions, especially regarding the duties of city officers, mayor, chief of police, council and justices. He then went on to say that it could easily be seen that the mayor and chief of police are entrusted with the keeping of the law, and it is their duty to see that the laws made by the state and city they represent are kept and enforced, and if they don't do it they violate the law.

He told them it was not possible to break up gambling and bad practices in the manner the slovenly farmer did with the thistle—by cutting off the top. You have got to dig the roots out. If you want to break up bad practices you are to begin with those responsible. If the mayor, the chief of police and police officers are compelled by your action to make men under their charge observe the law, there will be no difficulty in the matter. A good order in the villages and cities of this country. But if the mayor and police officers are remiss in their duty when a party comes to town he finds out about the kind of men in authority. If they are the kind he can get along with—the kind that will allow him to ply his trade, he stays. But if he finds men of integrity of purpose, men who intend that the laws shall be observed, he don't stop here, he goes on somewhere else.

One way to break up bad practices is to compel those who have the laws in their hands to make others observe the laws. I charge you, it is your duty, if you find in this city or any other city or village in this county, that the mayor, who is the chief of police, and his assistant, the nominal chief of police, have permitted those laws to be broken, it is your duty to indict them. I don't think there is any half way ground to go on; you must either do that or violate your oaths.

Adjourned until 9 a. m., Monday.

MONDAY MORNING, DEC. 10.

Court convened at 9 a. m. The first case called was that of James Gaston vs. Robert Gaston. DeForest Buckler attorney for plaintiff and Watts attorney for defendant. This is an action brought to recover $42.50 from defendant for the alleged brother of defendant to keep the $42.50 to pay defendant his share advanced for plaintiff's brother. The only point at issue was, should defendant pay this amount, or should Thos. Gaston, the man to whom defendant left the $42.50 to pay defendant, pay it. The jury brought in a verdict of $54.31 for plaintiff.

A motion was brought before the court for the appointment of a receiver for the firm of Diehl & Carnese, of Argyle. The argument will be heard at Chambers at 7:30 this evening.

A jury was then called in the case of Olof Berglund, of Fosston, vs. Geo. Nye. Wm. Watts, attorney for plaintiff and DeForest Buckler attorney for defendant. It appears that in Jan. '92, the plaintiff bought about $30 worth of fish. Plaintiff claims he has never been paid. The defendant claims he paid part when he got the fish or soon after, and the balance to the plaintiff himself about a month after. The case was given to the jury about 3:30 p. m.

The case of Reeves & Co. vs. W. McLennan was settled. The other case set for to-day, John Casselman vs. Philip Doyle, was continued. This left the court without any more business for the day, consequently the jurors not on the last panel were discharged until Tuesday morning.

The grand jury had returned an indictment against Alexander Perron and Fay Draper for petit larceny. The crime charged is stealing from J. N. Ironmonger, Red Lake Falls, on the 15th of last August, "one pound of Spear Head tobacco, three cigars and a package of cigarettes, all worth and of the value of the sum of seventy-five cents. Perron is out on bonds, and Draper was arraigned and admitted to bonds in the sum of $100.

The jury in the case of Berglund vs. George Vine returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $56.38.

The sensational event of the day was the report of the grand jury that it had completed its labors and no indictments were found against any of the alleged gamblers. The court, as could be seen, was somewhat indignant, and told them he could not thank them as he usually does a grand jury when it finishes its labors, for it seemed to him they had failed to perform their duty. They were discharged and an order issued calling another grand jury to convene Jan. 15th, at the adjourned term. Court then adjourned until 9 a. m. Tuesday.

TUESDAY MORNING, DEC. 11.

Charles Dennison vs. Anna Kretzschmar. A. A. Miller, counsel for plaintiff and Ira C. Hinchman counsel for defendant, was the next case called. No appearance on the part of the defendant. The action is brought to recover on a promissory note. The defendant in Dec. 1890 bought a couple of lots in Red Lake Falls, from C. and D. Cass & Co., of Ohio, giving her note for $251.72 in payment thereof. A verdict was directed for plaintiff for $251.46.

Fay Draper and A. Perron entered a plea of not guilty.

The case of Jos. Mercil vs. M. Brouillette, et al, was continued until the January adjourned term. The case of Adolph Bydal vs. A. D. Stephens, W. E. McKenzie and Amy Grundysen was continued till Jan.

The criminal calendar was then moved. The State of Minnesota vs. Peter Mickand, was the first called. The defendant is charged with burglary in the third degree. Ed. George prosecuting and A. R. Holston opposing. The evidence was all in by noon.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

The jury in the Mickand case was instructed and sent to its room.

A jury was then called in the case of State vs. Alexander Perron and Fay Draper, A. R. Holston prosecuting and H. Steenerson defending. The charge is petty larceny. It is claimed that the goods were taken from the store of J. N. Ironmeger, plug of tobacco, three cigars a package and of cigarettes. It appears that on Aug. 15 last, being a Catholic holiday Mr. Ironmeger celebrated on that day by locking his store and attending church. While absent that morning a watchman was placed over the store where he could look through a hole in the floor and notice any operations going on below. During the morning these two young fellows came up to the front door of the store. Perron produced a key and inserted it in the look of the door. Opened the lock and went into the store, closing the door after him. Draper remained on the outside. Perron supplied Draper with the above named articles, but before he retired, the owner of the store came in and caught him. Perron claimed then he took nothing, but the watchman above, Mr. Andres, told him what he had taken and he then acknowledged the taking. He discovered that he took it for a joke and intended to pay Ironmeger when he came back. When the state rested its case Draper was dismissed, as the evidence failed to connect him with the case.

A verdict of guilty, as charged in the indictment, with a recommendation of the defendant to the mercy of the court, was returned. He closes the case of State vs. Peter Mickand.

The evidence was all introduced in the case against A. Perron, and court adjourned until 9 o'clock, Dec. 12.

JUBJUB TO THE SNARK.

That Is the High Office Held by Thomas Hemmenway Cat.

To the lay observer Thomas Hemmenway Cat looks about like another sleek, well fed, black cat whose lines have fallen in pleasant places, but this is a grave error. Thomas Hemmenway Cat is none other than Jubjub to the Snark and chief honored guest of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo. He has witnessed the initiation of the Snark, Bojum, Bandersnatch, Scrivenoter, Gurdon, Arkanoper and hundreds of ordinary Hoo-Hoo. His nine lives serve as the foundation stone of the mysterious order that meets on the ninth day of the ninth month of every year at 9 o'clock a. m., that has an initiation fee of $9.00 and annual dues of 99 cents, and that always had a membership of 9,999.

This order first saw the light in Gurdon, Ark., in April, 1892, and was organized by Brother Arthur Johnson. Lumberman, newspaper man, railway officials and persons engaged in the sale of saw and planing mill machinery supplies are eligible to membership, providing they are fortunate enough to possess three names. Grover Cleveland will thus be compelled to contest himself with two terms as president of the United States, for he can never become a Snark or even a Hoo-Hoo.

To be a Hoo-Hoo a man must forswear allegiance to wife, children, home and country until Jubjub shall have been honored. As Jubjub outranks a man's wife, Thomas Hemmenway Cat can never hope to be popular among the fair sex. When a member is initiated, he wears a long robe, on the front of which is a white full moon, with a black cat in the center. The cant of the tail in this cat forms the figure 9, a peculiarity borrowed from the distinguished Thomas Hemmenway Cat himself, Jubjub to the Snark.

Hoo-Hoo is the genius of happiness, long life and health and once dwelt in Egypt, the land of the sacred cat. The object of the order is to make its members happy. Its forms are utterly unlike those of any other order. There are no branch lodges, but there is a vicegerent in 24 states, who may install new members. If a member is in distress, the Hoo Hoo sees that he is cared for and supplied with funds. There are nine supreme officers, and the ruler of the order at present is William Eddy Brown of St. Louis, Snark of the universe. Each one Snark or past Snark becomes a member of the house of ancients and has control of the archives of the order. At each annual meeting Thomas Hemmenway Cat, Jubjub to the Snark, is the honored guest.

IRELAND'S POET LAUREATE.

Timothy D. Sullivan, Poet, Lawyer, Newspaper Man, Lecturer and M. P.

Timothy D. Sullivan, poet laureate of the Emerald Isle and author of that stirring Irish national air, "God Save Ireland," is now in America lecturing on "Scenes and Incidents in Irish Political Life." Mr. Sullivan is a jail, sparo man, with white hair and beard, and was born in Bantry 67 years ago. Some 27 years ago three bold Irish revolutionists, who have since been known as the Manchester martyrs, had a slight misplesantness with a police escort conveying some Fenian objects to jail. During the melee one of the officers was killed, and the three patriots were hang ed in front of the jail. This incident, which threw all Ireland into a fever of excitement, inspired Sullivan to write his famous song, "God Save Ireland."

In youth Mr. Sullivan belonged to the "physical force" wing of the Irish party, but he has since become more temperate. He no longer goes armed, but he has served two months in jail for defying Balfour's ideas concerning the Irish press. Mr. Sullivan was for a time the proprietor of The Nation, Weekly News and Young Ireland, three weekly papers published in Dublin. When the land agitation occurred in 1879, Sullivan used his papers to champion the cause of the revolting tenants. In 1880 he was elected a member of parliament and has since remained in the commons, where he has fought for Irish home rule. In 1886 he was elected lord mayor of Dublin.

A SHARP ON BIRDS AND BEASTS.

Professor Daniel G. Elliott, Curator of Zoology at Field Columbian Museum, Chicago.

Professor Daniel G. Elliott, who recently assumed the performance of his duties as curator of zoology in the new Field Columbian museum of Chicago, is a well known authority on zoology, mammalogy and ornithology. He was born in New York city, but his paternal ancestors settled in Connecticut early in the sixteenth century. One of them was named as a patentee in the royal charter granted by Charles II. In 1839 Mr. Elliott prepared to enter Columbia college, but delicate health compelled him to abandon the project and travel. He visited Alaska, the greater portion of North America, the West Indies, South America, Europe and the orient. He studied zoology and ornithology constantly, no matter where he happened to be and such knowledge was re-enforced by visits to the haunts of the birds and beasts of the world.

His first published work on the subject that had now become a passion with him was a monograph on a family of birds and appeared in 1869. It was illustrated by 81 plates, the majority of which were drawn by himself. Two volumes, describing the birds of North America not contained in Audubon's great work, soon followed, and in all Mr. Elliott has published 11 books. He has also written over 100 papers on various zoological subjects and has won wide fame as one of the leading authorities on zoology and ornithology. Mammalogy is one of his specialties, and one of his most interesting and instructive books is devoted to the cats of the world.

His contributions to scientific knowledge have won him many honorable recognitions, and he has been decorated by several European governments.

A BLASTED HICKORY.

It Marks the Last Resting Place of James G. Blaine.

Many visitors every day pay pilgrimage to a blasted hickory tree that stands on a retired slope in Oak Hill cemetery, Washington. They may well regard with mournful interest the bit of ground beneath it, for there repose the mortal remains of James G. Blaine. The blasted hickory is its only monument. A scarcely perceptible mound marks the grave, and at its foot stands a small stone, with the initials "J. G. B." Adjoining are the graves of Walker Blaine and of Mr. Blaine's daughter, Mrs. Alice Stan-wood Coppinger. The grave next to Mr. Blaine's is marked by a plain mound topped slab of marble, with the inscription:

WALKER BLAINE,
Born Augusta, Me., May 20, 1853.
Died Washington, Jan. 15, 1890.

The grave of Mrs. Coppinger has a Celtic cross about four feet high, inscribed as follows:

ALICE STANWOOD,
Daughter of James G. Blaine and wife of Colonel J. J. Coppinger, U. S. A.
Born Augusta, Me., March 18, 1860.
Died Washington, Feb. 8, 1890.

The humble appearance of Mr. Blaine's last resting place is not due to neglect, but in accordance with his expressed wish. When his son, Walker Blaine, died, Mr. Blaine selected a spot in Oak Hill overlooking Rock creek. There Walker and Mrs. Coppinger were buried, and Mr. Blaine expressed a desire to be buried near his favorite son at the foot of the old hickory tree. The tree was struck by lightning some years ago and died at the top, but it was trimmed and revived and now bids fair to reach a green old age.

"Everybody wants to see Blaine's grave," said J. T. Mottet, superintendent of the cemetery. "I point it out and tell them about it till I get tired and worn out. It is more visited than any grave in the cemetery. I don't think the body will ever be moved. I am sure it was the wish of Mrs. Blaine that it should, for when he selected that lot he pointed out the old tree and asked me to see that it was never destroyed, as he wanted it for his only monument."

Three other cabinet officers besides Mr. Blaine were buried at Oak Hill—namely, Edwin M. Stanton, the great war secretary; Secretary of War John H. Eaton and Secretary of the Navy W. H. Hunt. W. W. Corcoran, the founder of the cemetery, is also buried there, as are John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," Lorenzo Dow, the eccentric evangelist, and many others famous in their day. But none of these interesting tombs attracts as many visitors as the blasted hickory that marks the last resting place of James G. Blaine.

NOVELIST ANTHONY HOPE HAWKINS.

His Is the Latest Successful Star In the English Literary Firmament.

It is a dull month when a new novelist of note does not flash into the literary firmament. The latest successful star in London is Anthony Hope Hawkins, whose novels are issued under the name of Anthony Hope. His most successful book is "The Prisoner of Zenda," which has taken the world by storm and is now read by a large public of Great Britain by storm, but "The Indiscretion of the Duchess," "The God In the Car" and "The Dolly Dialogues" are all very bright and readable. Mr. Hawkins, who is a London lawyer, has a cynical style and an epigrammatic manner of saying things that prove very attractive to the average novel reader. "Economy," he says in "The Dolly Dialogues," "is going without something you do want, in case you should some day want something which you probably won't want."

"Alas," he exclaims, "with advancing years wrong loses half its flavor! To be improper ceases, by itself, to satisfy."

"Bourgeois," he remarks, "is an epithet which the riffraff apply to what is respectable and the aristocracy to what is decent."

His dialogues fairly flash with delicate wit.

"Money is the temptation, you see," said Ayeon.

"Mon Dieu, to have none is greater!" and Gustave shook his head solemnly.

Dolly Foster is engaged to be married to Lord Micklehan and is reading her letters of congratulation to a former flame.

"This is from Aunt Georgiana—she's a widow—lives at Cheltenham. 'My dearest Dorothea' "—

"Who?"

"Dorothea's my name, Mr. Carter. It means the gift of heaven, you know."

"Precisely. Pray, proceed, Miss Dolly. I did not at first recognize you."

"'My dearest Dorothea, I have heard the news of your engagement to Lord Micklehan with deep thankfulness. To obtain the love of an honest man is a great prize. I hope you will prove worthy of it. Marriage is a trial and an opportunity.'"

"Tem, hem!" said I. "A trial for the husband and".

These excerpts give very little idea of the sustained brilliancy of Mr. Hawkins' conversations, many of which are so bright as those that materially aided "The Prisoner of Zenda" to score such a success in the literary world.

THE GEORGE ELIOT OF SYRIA.

Mme. Hanna Kuraay, the Young Syrian Author and Lecturer.

Mme. Hanna K. Kuraay, the Syrian woman who represented her country women at the World's fair with dignity and grace, and who has since been lecturing throughout the country on topics of an life, is a charming young woman of the oriental type, with clear, olive complexion, large, dark eyes and black hair. She was born near Beirut, Syria, and was educated at an American college in that city. While yet in her teens she began to take a strong interest in the affairs of Syria and to write on subjects pertaining to her native land. Her first book, "Manners and Customs," attracted widespread attention and was translated into French. In this manner Mrs. Potter Palmer heard of the young Syrian author and invited her to represent Syrian women at the World's fair. She did so and at the same time brought to America an elaborate display of Syrian embroideries that attracted much attention at the fair.

At present the women of Syria have no clubs, as organizations and no conceptions except the domestic duties of the home. With this fact Mme. Kuraay has no quarrel, but she thinks they would be better off if they were not so well satisfied with their lot. The great need of Syria is acosectarian schools, where the children of various creeds may be brought together on equal grounds and be made tolerant of the belief of others. "We are far behind the American women, or, as I might say, the rulers of this country," she says. "I told the ladies in Washington I thought they voted already, for they have great influence with the men. We have several good schools in my country, but they do not teach women to be happy

HOLIDAY ECONOMIES.

MANY GIFTS MADE WITH SMALL OUTLAY OF TIME AND MONEY.

A Pretty Darning Bag That Can Be Completed For 17 1-2 Cents or May Cost More if You Use Expensive Materials. Other Cheap and Easily Made Gifts.

Here are a few points for the girls and women who are bothered about their Christmas gifts. The things I shall describe may be made by any one with just a little bit of skill at needlework and without any great expenditure of time and energy. As to money, the amount needed for each may be very small indeed, though I have seen duplicates of some of the articles hold at fancy prices in the art exchanges and other stores where such things are sold.

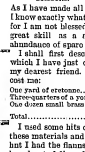
CHATELAINE FOR SCISSORS.

As I have made all these things myself, I know exactly what I am talking about, for I am not blessed with much money, great skill as a needlewoman or an abundance of spare time.

I shall first describe a darning bag which I have just completed to send to my dearest friend. In money this bag cost me:

One yard of cretonne	12½
Three-quarters of a yard of narrow ribbon	2
One dozen small brass rings	2
Total	17½

I need some bits of pasteboard besides those material and some bits of flannel, but I had the flannel and got the pasteboard out of discarded paper boxes. The diagram will show how I cut the cretonne, the pasteboard and the flannel. Besides the pieces shown, I need for the center of the bag a strip of cretonne 1½ yards long and 10 inches wide. Then I covered the three pieces of pasteboard with cretonne. Then I used two of them as the foundation of the main receptacle of the darning bag, shirring the long strip of cretonne and attaching it to the covered pieces of pasteboard as shown in the cut. Then I made a smaller receptacle or pocket by shirring the 12 by 9 inch piece of cretonne to the outside of one of the two pieces of pasteboard, running through the little bag a piece of elastic in order to draw the opening shut. The third piece of pasteboard was used, with the one on the side of the main bag opposite the pocket, to form a needlebook, as shown. The bits of flannel were used as leaves to the needlebook. I used three leaves, but of course you may use as many as you like. The rings I fastened to the mouth of the large bag, running the ribbon through them, in order to hang the whole from a hook fastened in the door of a closet.



If you wish to you may fit up this bag with shoe buttons, darning thread, needles, etc., at a total cost of from 12 to 60 cents, according as you have more or less money to spend and the bargain sales in your vicinity. If you want to use silk or satin in place of the cretonne and embroider the bag, the bag may cost as much as you like, of course.

Another very effective and pretty gift, which will cost a little more than the bag, is a chatelaine for scissors. For this you will need 10 brass rings, each an inch in diameter, 1½ yards of inch wide satin ribbon, four skeins of twisted embroidery silk and the scissors. The cost to me of each of the four I have made lately was:

Rings	4
Ribbon	12
Silk	12
Scissors	12
Total	40

You may not want to buy such cheap scissors, but I was very lucky in my cheap ones. For 35 cents you can get very good ones, with a fine tamper, that will hold an edge indefinitely and long after the ribbon has worn out. I have placed one of the four chatelaines I made in the guest chamber in my home, where it is an ornamental object, swinging from a little hook in the wall. Such chatelaines are very pretty gifts and are very convenient at those gatherings of ladies where there is a little sewing, a little innocent gossip and a little tea drinking. Sometimes the wearer will add a needlebook, a thimble case and an emery bag to the chatelaine, and then she is well accustomed to grapple with the work of the sewing circle.

It seems to me that any one might master the method of making this pretty thing from the cut, but here are detailed directions. First cover each ring with silk, using single crochet stitch. Then fasten one of the rings to one end of the ribbon. Carry the ribbon through one side of the scissors, then back through the ring and down through the other side of the scissors. Then pass the ribbon through the same ring again, so that there is about 3½ inches of ribbon loop between the scissors and the ring. Then take another ring, carry the ribbon up through it from the under side, then back through the under side of the first ring and through the second from its upper side. Take the third ring, fold it a little back of the second and bring the ribbon up through the space between the second and third rings from the other side. From this operation till all the rings have been used, when a few inches of ribbon will be left, and from this make a bow at the end. This bow will hide the safety pin which fastens the chatelaine to the wearer's waist.

It took me one afternoon of leisurely work to make the darning bag, but if I were to hurry I could make two. I do not like making them as well as the chatelaines, for I am not fond of the oversewing that is necessary in covering the bits of pasteboard; but, as you have seen, the bag is the cheaper of the two. A chatelaine for scissors can be made in two hours.

Hemstitched handkerchiefs are favorites with me. They are always pretty, and their chief value lies in the work that is put on them. I have so many gifts to make for young women friends that I rarely pay more than at the rate of from 15 to 20 cents for the small squares of linen that I use. You will know how to hemstitch. I am slow at such work, but I can do a handkerchief in a day, and I have seen hemstitched handkerchiefs sold in the stores at $5 or $6 that I could have done in a day. These had real lace on the edges, however, and this added to their value, of course, but you can buy lace that will add greatly to the effect of a handkerchief—"baby lace," it is called—at from 10 cents to 50 cents a yard. Less than two yards will do for each handkerchief. If you do not want to go to the expense of the lace, you may embroider an initial in the corner of the handkerchief, but that will be slow work for some of you.

A very pretty gift can be made of three such wooden rings as are sometimes used in gymnasiums. My rings cost me nothing, for my brother gave them to me, but they can be bought at the art stores cheaply. However, the cost is trifling, and all that is needed besides the rings to make a substitute for a towel rack that is quite as good as most racks is 2½ yards of 1½ inch ribbon. The ribbon is cut into three pieces, and a ring is fastened to the end of each. Then the free ends are joined, the joining covered with a bow and the whole suspended from the wall. The towels are then drawn through the rings, and if they are pretty towels the whole is ornamental as well as useful. You can get hookaback toweling by the yard at from 16 to 35 cents. Hemstitch the towels at the ends exactly as you would hemstitch a handkerchief all around, then initial it, and you can fit up your rings with three towels for from 45 cents to $1.05. The whole outfit, rings and towels, need not cost more than from $1 to $1.50, and this would include the floss used in embroidering the initials. Such a set of rings and towels can be made into a Christmas present in two days, with time for other duties to spare. If you try this, you will be surprised at the effect both in appearance and the appreciation of the recipient.

While I am writing about the making of pretty things for Christmas presents, the girls who are fond of fancy work will need 10 brass rings, each an inch in diameter, 1½ yards of inch wide satin ribbon, four skeins of twisted embroidery silk and the scissors. The cost to me of each of the four I have made lately was:

A SENSIBLE FIR TREE.

Built a money little Maple
To his cousin, Willow Rose:
"Miss Fir has no new mantle
This spring, like you and me.

"She wears the same old garment
That she's worn since I was born.
I should think she'd feel so shabby
With no new bonnet on."

As she tossed her head and nodded
At the Fir Tree's old style clothes
Willow laughed—she couldn't help it—
All the turned up, pea green nose.

The Fir Tree, staid and modest,
Answered Maple not a word,
Thought to try some other, certain—
Everything was overheard.

She only softly murmured
As she rearranged her clothes,
"I'm glad my friends don't have me
With every wind that blows."

VALUABLE WOODS.

Many of the Finest Kinds In Existence Plentiful, but Almost Unknown.

Many of the finest woods in existence are yet unknown or only slightly known to the manufacturers of wood in the civilized world. The woods of Central and South America are perhaps the most remarkable as well as the best known. In the yet untouched forests of this continent are many woods far finer than any of those now in use. These woods range from pure white to jet black in color, and many of them are most beautifully marked and veined. Some of them are so hard that they turn the edges of axes, chisels and other tools, while the hand saw cuts them only slowly.

In the Columbian exposition there were many displays of little known woods, and the finest of them were those from Argentine Republic, Brazil and other South American countries. Some of these southern woods yielded to the teeth of the hand saw not the ordinary sawdust, but fine powder, fine as the finest flour, as hard were the woods. Some of them burned but slowly. Others possess qualities that keep them free from insects. Some of them seem to be practically indestructible by air and water.

All along the eastern slopes of the Andes, up to the snow line on those great elevations, throughout all the great river valleys and in some of the wide areas of level country in South America are great forests of fine woods that are specially fit for the finest cabinet and furniture work, and also for shipbuilding, carpentry and other industrial arts in which wood is the raw material. These great forests are now an unknown quantity in the commercial world, but they will come rapidly into the knowledge of men and into industrial use when once the railroad has reached them.

Before many years, it is safe to predict, the South American and Central American republics will be threaded by railroads, and then those wonderful woods will be drawn upon to supply the demand for new and fine woods in all civilized countries.—Lumber World.

Overheard In the Restaurant.

She—I want to see a beautiful play while we were in New York.

He—What was it?

She—Well, I can't remember the name exactly. It sounded like "Dr. Dappsty."

He—Who took the leading character?

She—A man of the name of Willard, Francis Willard. Oh, he's just elegant! Magnificent! He doesn't act the part plainly, and he can't sing a little bit; but, oh, he's just perfectly grand.

He—Was it a play or an opera?

She—Oh, something of that sort! I had a quarrel with Herbert about you that night and didn't notice much.

He—Why did you quarrel about me?

She—Well, I told him of my engagement that night before we started for the theater and then asked him if he still wanted to take me out. He laughed and said, "Certainly, I would just as soon take an engaged girl to an entertainment as any kind of a girl," horrid thing!

He—Why was he horrid?

She—I just revenged myself by sitting and thinking of you all the evening. Oh, say, those are actors sitting at that table over there.

He (suspiciously)—How do you know?

She—Why, because they keep looking around to see if people are watching them. Actors always do that to advertise themselves, you know.

And the waiter brought the checks.—Boston Journal.

Hardiness of the Crape Myrtle.

Philadelphia is about as far north as the crape myrtle proves hardy. Though killed to the ground, it will push up and flower like a herbaceous plant. Possibly it would grow as well as to gardens, in this herbaceous way, much farther north than Philadelphia. Several correspondents write that it is not always killed down even so far north as Philadelphia. One at Chestnut Hill, a part of Philadelphia, inclosed a specimen, 5 to 6 feet high, which must have passed several winters unharmed.—Meehan's Monthly.

Act In the Present.

Don't keep mahaster boxes of love and sympathy to break over coffins. Living is none too sweet at best, and flowers on the coffin cost no backward praise.—Granger.

What do the dead care for the tender token,
The love, the praise, the floral offering?
Bad living, palpitating hearts have broken
For the want of just these things.
—Selected.

Alexander the Great, about B. C. 400, made an attempt to introduce many Asiatic plants into Europe. Rice was among the number, but the Greeks did not take kindly to its cultivation, preferring to import it from India and Egypt.

Philip I of France fell out with the queen, turned her out of doors and married the wife of a nobleman, giving the unique reason, "I like her better than I do my wife and can provide for her better than her husband can."

THE INDIAN SUMMER.

WHEN IT COMES AND WHAT IS RESPONSIBLE FOR IT.

Scientists and Other Investigators Differ In Their Views Upon the Subject—How the Season Was Given Its Name—Is the Haze Caused by Smoke?

There is a great difference of opinion among those who are wise in weather lore as to the exact time when Indian summer makes its appearance, some weather prophets declaring that it includes every warm day between Michaelmas day, the 29th of September, and Christmas, while others locate it in the month of October. Indeed, the opinions of scientists do not agree any better than those of ordinary individuals, but seem to be as hazy as the season itself.

After looking up much scientific data on the subject, and making a consensus of popular opinion, the fact seems established that this phenomenon of seasons really belongs to the month of November, although the signal service states say that if Indian summer does not come in October or November it will come in winter, as if it were a sort of moveable season. Neither do scientists agree as to the cause of that hazy atmosphere which accompanies the season, a condition peculiar to North America. It was attributed by early settlers in this country to the smoke from prairie fires kindled by the Indians—hence the name, "Indian summer." But it is now said by scientific investigators that the appearance of smoke is an optical illusion produced by a peculiar condition of the air, which might be compared to ruby fog. Sentimentalists declare that it is this dreamy haze which gives its great charm to the delightful season, when the whole world of nature appears like a beautiful dream. It is the Irish season, the mellow ripeness of autumn, when creation stands still in a lazy, languorous mood, and the picture I will paint is a distinctive likeness of Corot's landscapes. It is the golden sunset of the year, brief and evanescent.

Like a mirage, the Indian summer does not wait to be investigated. It is here—it is gone—before the world he investigator was aware of its presence. It is such a restful, happy time that people are content to enjoy it without asking questions, yet there is much in its phenomena that is worthy the most careful scientific investigation. It has been suggested that the dreamy haze which accompanies the season is composed of animal life of such a minute form as to be invisible to microscopic examination, but of such innumerable quantities that they obscure the atmosphere and render it hazy. If it is also charged to vegetable matter, but these are mere theories which have not yet been proved.

Another token by which this genial Indian summer makes itself known is the absolute silence it seems herself, as if she were taking a vacation from mirth that blew and clouds that shade. There is such a stillness in the air from sunrise to sunset that sound itself seems to have gone asleep. But there is no loneliness in the silence. It is only as if everything were resting, bathed in the golden sunlight. The whistle of the singing birds have flown to their southern climes; the leaves have dropped from the trees; and the Indian summer, comes trailing her white veil to cover the desolation and filling all hearts with the tranquil, happy feeling of her presence. There is a tonic in the air also brings which chemists cannot bottle nor charge communities with. And the days of summers that have been contracted into a few days and gone before we can answer the question of "Is it hahaan, or that is hahn." It is a draft for the gods. The subject of Indian summer was investigated as long ago as 1885, when Dr. Lyman Foot of the United States army in his report says that the Indians gave the season its name by calling it their "fall summer," which occurred in November. The doctor was stationed at Fort Winnebago, Missouri territory, at the time and wrote from observation. He says:

"We arrived at this post the 3d day of last November. We had three weeks of pleasant summer, with all the beautiful redness of the sky in great perfection." He adds that he had long observed the season with curious attention and calls for an expression of opinion on the subject from other observers.

Professor Wilbur advanced the theory in a report made to the government in 1887 that the dry fog is real smoke, not produced by prairie fires, but the product of chimneys. The late Professor Henry of the Smithsonian institution reported that a portion of the haze, filtered, was found to contain the lava of volcanoes and fragments of burned vegetables. Neither of these distinguished scientists added anything to the literature of our Indian summer, so when doctors disagree it is not expected that ordinary observers will be able to formulate any tenable theory of its cause. The next best thing is to enjoy its opportunities, leaving its origin to the unknown source whence it is derived.

New England is especially favored by this after summer guest. In that land of rocks and rills the stillness of the season is more delicious, the haze more poetic and the winds more subdued, as in their passive acquiescence in this meditative mood of nature. Emerson must have spoken of this period:

"Twas one of the charmed days
When the genius of God doth flow.
The wind may alter twenty ways,
A tempest cannot blow.
It may blow north, it still is warm.
Or south, it still is clear,
Or east, it smells like a clover farm.
Or west, no thunder fear.

The caprice of the season is to wait until winter is almost upon us, then to drop unexpectedly like a benediction with sunshine and warmth and a prolonged thaw, sublime, and comforts her fractious children and whisper to them sweet promises of heavenly death.—Detroit Free Press.

The sensational question remains about the same with no active candidates positively in the field against Washburn. The Donald Grant boom that somebody tried to start, resulted, as the JOURNAL predicted it would, in a flat failure. Donald never seriously entertained the idea and now comes out emphatically for Washburn.

The latest developments in the speakership canvass seems to indicate that Farmer Gibbs is in the lead. It is said that Henry Fee has withdrawn in Gibbs' favor which leaves the seventh district without a candidate. Comrade S. R. Van-Sant seems to be bundleaped by his locality—Nicollet county, the impression being that that place has already had honors enough for the present.

Representative-elect W. B. Dongin of Moorhead was at the Windsor Thursday last. "S. G. Comstock is in the race for United States senator, and is in it to stay," said he "I shall vote and work for him, not because I have anything against Senator Washburn, but because I believe Mr. Comstock is a better man and a stronger man.

In view of the great crime by which Catherine Ging was brutally drone to her death, one H. H. Kryer writes to the Minneapolis Times suggesting that the legislature pass a law compelling all scarlet women and all men who patronize them to be branded on the wrist in red and black striped suit. This should go further and include gamblers and sinners of all kinds but who is to be the judge in the matter? It is true that sin abounds in the world but how is it to be reached and cured by an act of legislature?

The brutal murder of Miss Ging in Minneapolis reveals a state of things frightful to contemplate as showing to what lengths the pursuit of money will lead unbalanced minds whose only God is money. In all the annals of crime no more cruel, coldblooded and brutal murder was ever committed. In the contemplation of the horrible details of which the average human mind stands aghast and one is led to wonder what system of education is that which trains a human being to the conclusion of such a crime? How utterly devoid of all humane feelings must be the person who could deliberately plan and execute so heartless a crime. How utterly inadequate seems the severest penalty known to the law as a punishment for such a crime. Well may we pause and ask in all seriousness: "What is this country coming to?"

Better TimesComing.

As blue as times have been there are certain infallible signs that the reign of hard times is at an end or nearly so and that the day is at hand when everybody will be rejoicing in an era of prosperity such as the country has not seen for several years at least. Everything indicates this and we should take courage, having learned wisdom in the past few years we are all the better prepared for the good times coming that are even now at hand. Let us take renewed courage and hope.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's catarrh cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Wheat Fed Hogs.

From the government report it would seem that the feeding of wheat to hogs was becoming universal enough to make a good bit of difference with the surplus. We find the following in the Pioneer Press:

"Washington, Dec. 5.—The returns from the correspondents of the statistical division of the department of agriculture relative to the amounts of wheat fed to stock estimate the quantity already fed, that is to say up to Oct. 30, at 46,030,000 bushels, and the estimated amount to be fed 29,273,000 bushels, making a total of 75,303,000 bushels. The figures on wheat feeding are merely the meager estimates from those states wherein correspondents have complied with the request of the department, and must not be taken as anything more than an attempt at approximation of the total feeding of wheat from present supply. The severity and length of the winter will necessarily influence the final findings upon this question.

Cincinnati, Dec. 5.—The monthly crop report of E. M. Thomas in the Price Current states that the winter wheat area is 34,884,320 acres, against 34,438,940. The condition of the plant is good, being 91.1, against 91.6 last year and 87 in 1893. This condition forecasts a harvest of 395,000,000 bushels. Drouth has affected the plant in Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Kansas and Nebraska, but with rain soon all drawbacks would be overcome. Over the balance of the area the conditions range from good to excellent. Area of winter rye has been increased 5.1 per cent. The condition is 96.8 against 94.6. last December."

There is no excuse for any man to appear in society with a grizzly beard since the introduction of Buckingham's Dye, which colors natural brown or black.

J. B. Ronne reports the result of his experiment in feeding wheat to hogs. He butchered his hogs on Nov. 26th at which time he had fed them 41 bushels of wheat. When he shut them up to fatten he weighed them and when killed they had gained 630 lbs. He sold the pork for 5 cents a pound, which netted him 76 cents per bushel for the wheat or 28 cents per bushel more than the best market price for wheat this fall. The pork so made is as solid as the best corn fed pork, nice and sweet in every way better than barley fed pork. Mr. R. feels well satisfied with the result of his experiment.

BLIXT'S CONFESSION.

HE FIRED THE SHOT THAT KILLED MISS GING.

He Was to Receive For the Murder Two Thousand Dollars From Harry Hayward. Details of One of the Most Horrible Conspiracies—Intended to Kill Several Others.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 10.—Claus Blixt has made a confession that demonstrates beyond refutation that Harry Hayward stands foremost in the annals of crime. He is an arch fiend in the guise of human shape, a man utterly devoid of sensibility, whose heart's blood is like to that of a fish, a veritable monster, and the Hennepin county authorities were wise when they caused him beyond the corporation limits of Minneapolis. Blixt, by his confession, establishes beyond a doubt that Harry Hayward instigated the murder, and that Blixt fired the fatal shot and hurried back to the city.

Blixt confesses that he killed Catherine Ging himself, and that Hayward planned the crime. Several weeks before the murder he says Hayward came to him and broached the matter. It was first proposed that Hayward kill her, and Blixt aboard.

Make Away With the Remains

after the murder. But when the fatal night arrived Hayward's coward heart asserted itself and it was decided that Blixt should kill her. This affair had been carefully discussed, and Hayward had informed the engineer exactly how to fire the shot.

On Monday Blixt took a car on the Hennepin avenue line, getting off at Kenwood boulevard on Lowry hill. Arrangements had been previously made whereby he was to meet Hayward there, and in a short time he heard him whistle. They stopped to converse for a few moments, and, as per arrangement, Catherine Ging drew up in a carriage. Hayward had made the woman believe she was to meet some person who could furnish "green goods," and consequently she Had All Her Money With Her.

When she drove up she asked Hayward if he was ready for a profit, but he remarked that there was a possibility of detection. If he went along with her in the carriage, Blixt, he said, would drive her to the appointed place near Lake Calhoun, and he (Hayward) would take a car and meet them.

Accordingly she acquiesced by driving with the engineer. Hayward left them and went back to the Ging cottage from there to Mr. Eartleson's residence, arranging for his alibi. Blixt rode along until he reached the intersection of Lake street and Excelsior road. Catherine suggested a change and several times asked for Harry. Blixt told her he would soon make his appearance. She then turned her head to look back, at the same time remarking that she thought it queer he did not come. This was the opportunity Blixt was looking for. He had his revolver ready, and under the ear, just as he had been told to do by his master. Death was instantaneous. The murderer drove on for about half a mile, with the dead woman by his side, hidden from view by the buffalo robe, and then turned around and came back, dropping the body out of the carriage where it was afterward found by Eckart. He then returned to the Ozark, arriving there shortly after 10. Blixt was to receive one-fifth of the insurance money, which was $3,000, for his part in the tragedy.

Hayward, he said, discussed the murder with him for fully four weeks before the murder was done. He also referred to the other murders that might occur. He told Blixt that he had killed two men, and before the winter was over. He did not give the names of those he intended to kill, but told the engineer he would let him in on the jobs and pay him well for it.

Hayward, Blixt said, was planning to burn the Ozark some time during the winter. It was to be burned for the insurance, and it did not make any difference if every person in the building was burned, just so that the job was well done. Blixt, of course, was to help do the work and receive pay for it.

The confession as given verbatim was a dreadful affair and caused the blood of the listeners to run cold. It was made in the presence of Mayor Eustis, Assistant County Attorney Lord, Inspector Hoy and Secretary Mannix.

Confirms Adry Hayward.

The confession is in substance a confirmation of the statement previously made by Adry Hayward, Harry's brother, to the effect that Harry had told him of his plan to murder Miss Ging, and had attempted to get him (Adry) to do the job. Adry Hayward informed Elder F. M. Stewart of the plot.

Both Harry and Adry Hayward are now in jail at St. Paul.

HIS LIPS SEALED.

Harry Hayward Not Discussing the Murder of Miss Ging.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 11. — Monday passed without a confession in the Ging murder case, and it looks as if many more days would elapse before Harry Hayward reveals all he knows about the murder of Catherine Ging. It is evident that Harry is reserving his story for the core of the petit jury in which hands his life will fall. What that story is nobody can divine, but Harry said that it would "paralyze the whole galaxy of detectives and criminals." But just now he is maintaining absolute silence regarding the matter.

The murder is still the topic of conversation in the Flour City and Harry Hayward's name is being connected by gossips with all manner of crimes. Numerous murders are laid at his door and arson and burglary are said to be some of his accomplishments.

CAUCUS AGREEMENT.

Democratic Senators Decide on the Measure to Be Pushed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Democratic caucus directed the "steering committee" to prepare an order of business which would present for the consideration of the senate the following subjects of legislation:

A bankruptcy bill; a bill for the construction of the Nicaragua canal; a currency bill; bills for the admission of Arizona and New Mexico; a bill involving the interests of the Indian Territory; for the consideration of the joint resolution of the house of representatives on the election of United States senators by the people, and such other measures, including the appropriation bill, as the "steering committee" may deem important.

Cleveland Discouraged.

The caucus was in session from 3 till 4:30 p. m., and almost the entire time was devoted to the proposition of Senator Daniel—instructing the committee on rules to bring in an amendment for cloture—and the speeches were at times very spirited. Senators Vest, Vilas, Berry and George made speeches favoring the proposition, while Senators Gorman, Morgan, Palmer, Harris, Pugh and others opposed it with vigorous zeal. The final vote was against the adoption of the rule by a good majority.

CHICAGO
1893

Why Was It

that Ayer's Sarsaparilla, out of the great number of similar preparations manufactured throughout the world, was the only medicine of the kind admitted at the World's Fair, Chicago? And why was it that, in spite of the united efforts of the manufacturers of other preparations, its decision of last October was not reversed?

BECAUSE

According to Rule 48—"Articles that are in any way dangerous or offensive, also patent medicines, a nostrum, and empirical preparations, whose ingredients are concealed, will not be admitted to the Exposition," and, therefore—

Because Ayer's Sarsaparilla is not a patent medicine, not a nostrum, and not a secret preparation.

Because its ingredients and nothing to conceal when questioned as to the formula from which it is compounded.

Because it is that and is claimed to be a Compound Concentrated Extract of Sarsaparilla, and in every sense, worthy of the confidence of the most important committee, called together for passing upon the manufactured products of the entire world.

Rev. R. H. Battey was up from Barnsville on Saturday greeting old-time friends and superintending getting out his Message at the JOURNAL office.

The Modern Woodmen have secured Rube Allyn who will appear at the Opera House to-night. A good time is assured. Everybody come.

N. T. Moen was a prominent Norman county attorney in attendance at this term of court. He left for his home in Halstad on Monday evening.

Max Erieson arrived from St. Paul on Tuesday morning for a few days visit of business and pleasure combined. Max does not seem to grow old worth a cent.

Wood seems plentiful and cheap. Besides what the farmers bring in by wagon it is coming by carload principally from points along the Fosston line. That line also brings in trainloads for Dakota points.

The streets present quite a lively appearance, these days, while court is in session. It would seem as though everybody in Polk county was in attendance at court or here for some other reason.

It is no consolation to know that other places are suffering from the financial depression in a greater degree than we in the Red River Valley are doing but it is never the less the fact that the poor in large cities

Wm. Erdmann returned from Hallock last week, while he did not do a job of mason work for Florin & Co., who had a schoolhouse to build up there. He was away over a month.

Bruce Harris was selected to represent the Crookston schools in the declamatory contest at Fergus Falls last week, and, while he did not carry off the first prize he conducted himself in a manner highly creditable to himself and the school.

At the meeting of the K. of H. on Friday evening the annual election occured and the following officers were duly elected:

Ed. Ralston talks of going bull-ronding as soon as the Grand Jury adjourns. Expects to appear before that body to tell all he knows about gambling and such things.

F. M. Brown has secured the services of an expert laundry-man from Minneapolis who arrived last week and at once took charge at the Crookston Steam Laundry. Frank intends to keep up with the procession if he dont lay up a cent.

J. B. Copeland and daughter arrived in the city on Friday morning on their way home to Seattle from a visit to the old home in New York. J. B. continues his journey on Sunday morning but Miss Edith will remain in the city for a good visit with friends.

The farm-house and barn of C. Kreiger, near Euclid took fire on Saturday evening and was burned to the ground. It is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. The buildings were insured for a small amount.

Frank Farnham, who was formerly employed with C. E. Misner in this city writes the JOURNAL that he has located at Viroqua, Wis., and has purchased a half interest in a patent bair-grower—warranted to make hair grow upon the head of an axe, and is making big money. Frank says business is extremely dull in that country and everybody waiting for better times.

Flax Seed for Sale.

We have in our hands for sale about 150 bushels of flax that we will sell at fall prices. The call for flax for seed next spring will no doubt send the price up to $2 or in that vicinity and those who contemplate sowing flax would do well to secure the seed while it can be had at fall prices. Enough have spoken to us for flax for seed to more than exhaust the supply yet on hand. Call at this office and see sample.

At a chattel mortgage sale on Monday two horses were sold, one for $80 and the other for $50. The time was when that team would have been considered cheap at $300, and the price they brought is a large one for these times when plenty have been sold for from $5 to $25 per head. This would seem to be a pretty good year to rig up for farming.

Canadian Excursion.

Commencing Nov. 20th, the Northern Pacific Railroad will sell tickets to Montreal and all points west in Ontario at rate of $40. for the round trip. Good 90 days. For additional information see agent Sunday. [26-tf]

Chris. Greenhalgh sold Theodore's big grey team last week for $210 cash. While it was a fine young team all right enough, an A 1 team for farm work that was also a long price for horses these days when horses are a drug in the market.

Seldom it is that you see a genuine rain-storm in this latitude in the winter but that is just what the citizens of Crookston did see on Friday evening of last week—and the weather has been exceedingly warm ever since.

You dont want to mention "ventriloquism" to Jack McPhee, the jovial manager of the Lockhart farm—unless you have several rods the start and are pretty good on foot. Jack had an "experience" one night recently while going home from Crookston on the Great Northern train—and he is not talking about it much.

Conductor Ditty will run between Grand Forks and Barnesville.

FORDING A CHINESE RIVER.

Pin Dog-In the Stream's Bed by Guides to Trap the Unwary.

Traversing the country from southwest to northeast and in a pouring rain, we visited the villages of Si-kon-ying, Hao-kwei-ying and Seng-yeh. Here the women, dressed in their best clothes, stood watching us on the doorstepe, which would have been quite a pretty sight, with their multicolor jupons and trousers, had the effect not been partly spoiled by the horrible deformity of their feet squeezed into microscopic shoes. I possess a pair of these shoes as worn by a mandarin's wife, and the length of them is only 3 inches. Toward noon we reached Ya-lo-wan, on the banks of the Hung-ho river, a miserable village on a minuscule drill of yellow earth. The river had to be waded.

A Chinaman—a beggar, I thought—volunteered to take animals and men safely across for a sum of money, for he said there were large holes in the river bed, in which our animals would have lost their footing had we crossed by ourselves. I would not employ him, as I hate to be imposed upon by humbugs, and knowing the little way which these gentleman have of digging large holes on purpose in the river bed while dry in summer, so as to extort money from timid travelers, I proceeded to "sell" him.

I guided my mules not right across the water, for the holes are generally dug where most unaware people are likely to cross, but a few yards farther up, therefore landing every one safe on the other side, with the exception of one donkey, who, in strict similarity with all the evil spirits of China, insisted on going on his own account in a straight line in front of his nose, with the result that when he reached the middle of the stream he fell into one of the holes, and with the weight of his load he was carrying disappeared. Only the point of his ears could be seen wriggling out of the water. The boleman, if I may call him so, who had eagerly been watching for this, ran in to the water to his rescue and saved his life, for which act I duly rewarded him.—Fortnightly Review.

SOME PEOPLE'S RELIGION.

Marion Crawford Writes a Pointed Little Lecture on Intolerance.

There are very good and devout men and women who take the world—present and to come—quite literally, as a mere fulfillment of their own limitations; who look upon what they know as being all that need be known, and upon what they believe of God and heaven as the mechanical consequence of what they know, rather than as the cause and goal, respectively, of existence and action; to whom the letter of the law is the arbitrary expression of a despotic power, which somehow must be looked upon as merciful; who answer all questions concerning God's logic with the tremendous assertion of God's will; whose God is a magnified man, and whose devil is a malignant animal, second only to God in understanding, while extremely like God in disposition.

There are good men and women who—to use a natural but not flippant simile—take it for granted that the soul is cast into the troubled waters of life without the power to swim or even the possibility of learning to float, dependent upon the bare chance that some one may throw it the life buoy of ritual religion as its only available means of salvation. And the opponents of each particular form of faith invariably take just such good men and women, with all their limitations, as the only true exponents of that especial creed, which they then proceed to tear in pieces with all the ease such an undue advantage of false premise gives them. None of them has thought of intellectual mercy as being perhaps an integral part of Christian charity. Faith they have in abundance, and hope also not a little, but charity, though it be for men's earthly ills and theoretically, if not always practically, for man's spiritual shortcomings, is rigidly forbidden for the errors of men's minds. Why? No thinking man can help asking the little question which grows great in the unanswering silence that follows it.—Marion Crawford in Century.

The Modern Style.

The prospective purchaser of a city house hulk to sell was consulting with a real estate agent.

"I think I have one to suit you," said the agent. "It is in a good neighborhood and has all the modern conveniences."

"I'd expect that," replied the purchaser. "What I didn't want was one with all the modern inconveniences."—Detroit Free Press.

TYPHOON IN MANILLA

APPROACH OF THE TERRIBLE WIND AND EFFECTS OF ITS VISIT.

The Inhabitants Are Warned by Signals and Have Ample Time For Preparation. Breaks Up With Deadly Squalls and Closes In Devastating Floods.

Early in the eventful week warnings came from our excellent observatory that trouble was brewing down on the Pacific to the south and east, and about Friday the No. 1 typhoon signal was displayed. The news respecting the storm was indefinite, but the villain was supposed to be moving northwest, headed directly for us. Saturday up went signal No. 2, and in the afternoon No. 3, and in the evening No. 4. Still everything was calm and peaceful, and Sunday morning dawned pleasant but for the exception of a haze. Early in the forenoon up went signal No. 5, which is only three from the worst one that can be put up—No. 8, and now everybody began to get ready for the invisible monster. All the steamers and ships in the river put out extra cables, and the former got up steam. No craft of any kind were permitted to go out of the river, and the fleet of ships in the bay appeared to be putting out their spare anchors. Still everything was calm, but the haze thickened, and low sand clouds began to sail in from the China sea.

Just after we finished tiffin, at our little seaside house, our gaze was riveted on a native coming down the street, dressed in a black coat, with shirt hanging out beneath, in true Philippine custom, and wearing white trousers and a tall hat. He carried a sort of decorated cane, marched down the center of the street and gave utterance to solemn sentiments in a deep, musical voice. In short, he was the official sent to herald the coming typhoon, and as he marched along the halls in the old church rang out a wild, warning plea. The natives opposite us hastily began to sling ropes over the roofs of their light nipa shanties, and one of the English fellows who lives just back of us had already stretched good sized cables over the tall, sloping tin roof of his domicile. A sort of hush prevailed, and then sudden gusts began to blow in off the bay. The sand clouds increased and appeared to be in a terrific rush. The roar of the wind began to deepen and louder, and one after another of our oyster shell windows had to be shut. The typhoon was advancing slowly, but its course was sure.

Our 8 o'clock dinner passed, and now the wind began to howl. Before going to bed we moved out of our little parlor such valuables as might be most missed by being carried through the sala, into our roof came off, and went to and amid a terrific din. Sleep was impossible. Our house trembled like a blushing bride before the altar, and for a triumphal exit—wedding march—the tin was suddenly ripped off our secondary unshed roof like so much paper. Great pieces of tin were slapping around and up against the house and would have sawed a head or hand off had one attempted to poke itself outside. At 3:30 a. m. we took a look into the "sala." No glass would have stood the gusts that were pouncing in from the bay, but our oyster shells did not yield, yet the noise outside was deafening. The house trembled under, and we were thankful that we were not off in the bay. The wind lulled in the early morning, and then came some of the most terrible changes of wind, the deadliest squalls and most terrific blowings I ever felt. Then came all the wires in the main street; over went half a dozen nipas on one side of us; crack, bang, broke off some great venerable trees. The street was a mass of wreckage as far as we could see, and few signs of life were visible.

All the rest of the day the winds blew most fiercely, but we could see that the center of the typhoon was passing off to the northwest. I sallied out in the afternoon and managed to keep along behind the houses and reached the Luneta, where all the large trees had their heads, with broken grass, and where the huge waves were flying far up into the air as they dashed against the sea wall. The clumps of fishing and bathing houses were blown to pieces, and those which weren't minus roofs and sides were washed up into the road as mere driftwood. The natives were out grabbing logs, while the fishermen's families were crouching behind a stone wall watching their wrecked "barong" and were sitting on their sampans, their furniture and babies to keep them from sailing skyward. The vessels out in the bay were throwing the surf high over their bows. One of them seemed to be ashore and her stern very near the breakers. A steamer had broken adrift and run into another, losing all her anchors and chain. But all things have an end, and at night the winds and rains subsided. The typhoon was wide in diameter, and so was not as destructive as the one in 1882.

After the typhoon came the floods, and the river overflowed and flooded all the adjacent low country. The water covered the way to the club to the depth of three feet, and two of my friends were nearly drowned by trying to drive when they should have rowed. The poor pony walked off into the field, in the darkness, by mistake, into eight feet of water and was drowned. The boys nearly got stuck inside the trap, but managed to save themselves. As it was, one had to swim the water and has been since presented with a gold watch. C. was giving a dinner dance the next evening when word came that the festivities would be postponed till turns firms appeared. But the show is all over, and business, which has been paralyzed for a week, once more starts up.—Cor. Boston Transcript.

FUN IN BILL POSTING.

HUMOR IN A BUSINESS WHERE YOU WOULDN'T LOOK FOR IT.

Picturesque and Startling Effects Produced With Paste Pot and Brush—Some Angels Are Incongruously Mixed Up. "Poet No Bills" Goes.

All trades have their droll aspects, but that of the billposter is one long vista of fun. He may become an artist comedian of the first order. It does not require much brain weight either. An old fence is his only stock, and his posters are his stock in trade.

His fun is but momentary, but it is potent while it lasts. His accomplishes it by means of the combinations he is forced to make when he finds room but over the old ones. Some of the combinations are very funny. Thus he is forced to become a mirth provoker whether he will or no, but there are some among the men who get their livelihood in this manner who intentionally place the new bills where they will produce the oddest if not unnecessary effects.

The reporter watched one of these knights of the paste pot while he proceeded to cover up a melo-framing picture of his satanic majesty with a bill which portrayed a naval officer in full uniform. The first section up was the officer's head. As it fitted exactly on to Mephisto's shoulders the effect was comical. The next section brought the naval man down to the bottom of his coat. From a short distance it appeared precisely as though he was minus his nether garments and stood unclogged in the rising flames which enveloped him to his knees. The billposter chuckled as he surveyed his work at this point and asked the reporter what he thought of it while he covered the officer's nakedness with a pair of trousers and shoes.

The billposter was quite talkative in his way and spoke of the droll side of his business. "Did it never come to you," said he as he picked out and cursed some flaming colored bills preparatory to pasting them on the fence, "did it never occur to you what an odd and amusing business this is? You saw me put a uniform on the devil. Funny, wasn't it? Well, it wasn't a patch to the effects produced sometimes. These bills have to be changed nearly every week, and the posters get fixed up in the queerest way. I've put angels' heads on devils and devils' heads on angels. I've put a man with a dress coat on where a ballet girl was, so that it looked as though the skirts branched out below where the coat was. Then there's for a moment while I pasted other bills, and quite a crowd gathered around. A policeman came along, and I had to cover it up.

"Once I had a Salvation Army poster to put up, and when I pasted the first portion of it over a bill advertising the play of 'Julius Cæsar' the large blue bonnet of the Salvation Army girl hid Cæsar perfectly. It was too bad I had to spoil it."

"You see that ballet girl on the fence over there? I have got to paste this big cat over it. Now watch me do it."

He took a section of a bill with the head of a grinning feline on it and placed it so that it fitted exactly over the ballet girl's head. A halo surrounded the cat's head, and the whole affair had a piss in boots and shoot it that reminded one of the old fairy tales. Near by on the fence was a heroic size negro minstrel, whose immense teeth showed through lips which stretched form ear to ear.

"Now see how I will fix that fellow," said the man of the brush as he proceeded ready a hill on which a large tiger was represented balanced on a big blue ball. The tiger's position was such that a large part of the poster. The first section fixed the animal's head on the fence, and with the next the body and front were pasted up. Then appeared a curious effect. Where the blue ball was to be pasted the negro's face still grinned, but the tiger was now standing on top of the man's head.

"True," said the billposter, "is what I call a real artistic effect. It isn't often an artist can create a Samson in almost one stroke of his brush."

Following his pasting of the tiger, the man proceeded to put up a bear. On the spot where it was to go an overfed baby held up a package of a compound much advertised of late. The bear was built up from the feet, which rested on a horizontal bar. The bear's neck and the baby's neck touched the same point, and before the bear's head was pasted in there appeared a combination of human and brute anatomy which could hardly be equaled by a monstrosity in a dime museum.

Bill posting has undergone a great change in recent years. It is not the haphazard business it once was—that is, it is not allowable for men to go around pasting bills wherever they could find a fence. Most of the big fences are preempted now by firms who pay rent for the privilege.

The old sign of "Post no bills" is more potent than it was. To infringe-ment now may mean a lawsuit. It used to be very much disregarded. There is record of a way Hazel man who was arrested for infringing a sign which read "post no bills under penalty." When the judge asked him if he had any excuse to offer, he said he had not "posted under penalty. He had posted further along the fence."—New York World.

Blood Purified and Pains Driven Out by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I take pleasure in writing that Praise God for Hood's Sarsaparilla.' Three years ago rheumatism terribly afflicted me in my arms and feet, mostly in the joints. They became inflamed and swollen. The family physician treated me and for a time I was relieved, but the pain returned, intensified. It returned with renewed energy. My heart was affected so that my breathing was suffocating during the attacks of Extreme Agony.

I would be apparently relieved so going to bed but in an hour I would be awakened by shooting pains in the joints, and could not move without increased pain. Anything applied did not give relief until the doctor recommended blistering, which I did, and was relieved somewhat of the pain. During all my troubles I had thought seriously of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Finally I began with the medicine and I simply say that

DENCE THAT SUFFERING ARME- NIA HAS SEEN BETTER DAYS.

Land Now Oppressed by the Unspeak- ble Turk and Harassed by the Cruel urds Was the Birthplace of the Hu- man Race—Its Ancient Religion.

The recent massacre of Christians in menia, the news of which horrified civilized world, is a result of the dent enmity between the Armenians their Kurd neighbors, a feud which apparently been fostered and en- raged by the Turkish officials. The rks claim, in extenuation of the cru- ies for which they are held responsi- , that the Armenians, who are strug- ng for political autonomy, themselves voked the quarrel which led to the assacre, as an outrage was necessary order to enlist the sympathy and in- ference of Christian nations in their half. Whether this theory be correct not, worldwide indignation has been oused, and the intervention of Euro- an powers seems likely to follow. If i also fails, Armenia may look for- rd to Russian annexation as no dis- nt day and to consequent freedom m Mohammedan persecution.

The Kurds, who have in this case ap- rently been the instruments of the litan's displeasure, are largely Mo- mmedans in religion and delight in spoiling and persecuting the Christian rmenians. The Kurds occupy an an-mative and mountainous territory south f Armenia, partly in Asiatic Turkey nd partly in Persia. They lead a no- madic life and are very good horsemen he men are adventurous and warlike nd inclined to brigandage. Of them llis Mary Wright, a returned mission- ry who spent several years in Asia inor, says:

"The Kurds are the supposed descend- nts of an ancient warlike race, and ccordingly they are cruel and barba- ous. They are not afraid of anybody, nt every body is afraid of them. The Mohammedan government winks at heir performances, and they are free to le as they please without fear of inter- erence. Often I have seen the little Armenian girls cry at the sight of a Kurd and remark shrinkingly, Kherde." The word means 'wolf,' and think there is a well named race.

"They don't cultivate their fields nd won't do work of any sort. Almost any other Turk will steal sometimes, ut these live entirely by plundering. It is not common for the Kurds to visit unit the grain is all harvested and then go and reap the results of the hard labor of their neighbors by stripping the fields of everything."

Armenia possesses peculiar historical interest on account of its great antiquity. There is a legend which is not without much confirmatory evidence that Adam was an Armenian, and that in the pic- turesque region near the headwaters of the Euphrates was situated the garden of Eden. Ararat is in Armenia, and as it seems probable that Noah was one of that country's old settlers. The ancient navigator must have landed on a moun- tain unless the climate of that region has greatly changed since that time, for it is now said that the snow has never been known to melt on Ararat, though in the valleys a mild and salubrious climate prevails.

The religion of Armenia is also of great antiquity, and it is said to be the first entire nation to be Christianized. The church of Armenia's traditions claims an older than apostolic founda- tion, but its founder, according to ac- cepted history, was St. Gregory, called the Illuminator, a member of the Ar- menian royal family. St. Gregory's preaching began in the year A. D. 276.

The manner in which this church be- came independent of the church of Rome and also of the Greek church— which it more nearly resembles doctri- nally, is a sort of historical puzzle. But it is a distinct ecclesiastical institution, which has persisted through manifold tribulations and persecutions, perhaps even has been purified by them. It has its own version of the Bible; its own sacraments, baptism, confirmation, the eucharist, penance, ordination, mar- riage and extreme unction; its own li- turgy, said to date from the first century and to have been modeled upon that of the church of Jerusalem.

There is a threefold order of Arme- nian clergy, bishops, priests, deacons. And there are three degrees of episcopal rank, the archbishop, the bishop and the vartabed or doctor of theology, who often has charge of a diocese with episco- pal functions. The priesthood is hered- itary.

The history of Armenia is a long sto- ry of persecution by the Caspian age for the ancient calipahs, and now they mean the tyr- anny of Turkish pashas. The boundar- ies of the country have varied greatly at different periods and now embrace an area of about 120,000 miles, although they are not officially fixed. They touch the Caucasus mountains on the north, run nearly to the Caspian sea on the east and extend west to the Euphrates. It is estimated that 3,000,000 are Turks, 4,000,000 Armenians now remain in their native country, while 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 are scattered in other lands.

FRAUDS EXPOSED.

Some of the Tricks of So Called Mind Readers Solved by Dr. Hyslop.

Dr. Hyslop of Columbia college, says a writer in the Boston Herald, has help- ed to bring down several so called mind readers who have visited New York. The Taylors, a man and woman who gave exhibitions in New York two years ago and convinced nearly every one who saw them of the genuineness of their manifestations, gave a private se- ance for the benefit of this Columbia professor and some of his scientific friends. They found hidden objects, they picked out cards that had been se- lected from a pack and then shuffled in again, and all the other familiar tricks, with more than common success, one of them staying in the room and being in the secret, and the other coming in aft- er all was ready and supposedly read- ing the partner's mind.

All went well until Dr. Hyslop and a confederate took the Taylors aback by announcing that they could do the same things. They had found that the words used by one of the "mind readers" in calling the other into the room were what gave the desired information. It was discovered that by skillful arrange- ment of not more than six words a sur- prising amount of information could be conveyed. This is the first time the fact that the Taylors were not genuine mind readers has been made public.

Another "mind reader" exposed by Dr. Hyslop and coinvestigators was Guibal, who gave exhibitions in New York recently and astonished hundreds of persons, most of whom suppose to this day that his tricks were bona fide psychic phenomena. Guibal's assistant was a woman called Greville, who sat on the stage, and who, so far as could be seen for a long time, gave him abso- lutely no sign of what was in her mind. Guibal apparently read that mind as if it were an open book. The whole thing was found to be a trick, and the expla- nation is now in the archives of the So- ciety for Psychical Research. It is be- lieved that Guibal and Greville were the same persons whose performances had amazed London not long before. The woman breathed very heavily, and the code of signals lay in the manner of her breathing, messages being conveyed by long and short breaths, something like the dots and dashes in the Morse telegraph code.

CURIOUS TEA PARTIES.

The Odd and Eternal Little Functions That Are Held in Pearl Street.

There is an everlasting tea party in function on Pearl street, near Hanover square. An aroma of freshly steeped leaves fills the air all the week, and fol- lowing your nose to the canse you will find it pointing down to little gloomy basements where teacups are perpetual- ly spread. They are all plain white cups, and there is no display of table- cloth or dainty cakes—just plain tea. And the methods of the tea parties that faregather there are just as plain and unceremonious.

They generally consist of old gentlo- men of severely respectable appearance, and when these old parties feel like it they go down the basement steps and take a pinch of tea out of a caddy or saucer, or whatever it may be kept in, and pat it in the cup and pour a little hot water on it, but never any milk or sugar. And then, despite their eminent- ly respectable air, they dip their fingers in the cups and stir the tea leaves about or maybe fish out a leaf and unroll it, sometimes putting it in their months and chewing it.

But, strangest thing of all, they nev- er drink their tea after all the trouble they have taken with it. In fact, they seem to take a strong dislike to the in- fusion as soon as it is before them. Sometimes they look at it, and if ever they take it into their mouths they do but roll it around and spit it out. Moreover, they will do the same things with half a dozen cups in succession until Dr. Johnson—unless he knew the reason—would have cried out at the waste of the cheering but unincbriat- ing beverage.

Meanwhile other gentlemen sit also at the table and anxiously watch all this smiling and spitting, for these are the tea tasters and samplers, and this is where tea is bought and sold not by the pound, but by the carload.—New York Sun.

Lucky and Unlucky Vegetables.

Peas and beans are very important plants in folklore, and there are many superstitions connected with them. Peas were favorite instruments for divi- nation. A pea pod with nine peas was equal to a wishbone when placed above the door. In Northamptonshire it is ac- counted generally lucky to find nine peas in a pod, or kid. In Mecklenburg, Ger- many, it is believed that peas must be sown early on Wednesday or Thursday, or the birds will carry them off. If they are to be boiled, it is said that they will lay well. They must not, however, be eaten during the Christmas holidays nor until after Twelfth day.

Beans were mysterious in antiquity. Pliny says they contain the souls of the dead. The Romans used them in their religious ceremonies. They were used in Greece as ballots, and Pythagoras desir- ed his disciples not to "touch beans"—that is, not interfere with politics. Our phrase, "You don't know beans," prob- ably means you are no politician. Ovid prescribes beans to expel evil spirits.—Philadelphia Press.

The Place For Shoppers.

"Please brother and Brother us! Both- er us!" is the earnest request which ap- pears on the title page of the catalogue and price list of an enterprising dry goods retail grocers in a southern city. 'Tis a bright idea. They can well afford to be bothered with inquiries as to quality, price, etc. The only thing that they prefer is to be let alone.—Merchants' Review.

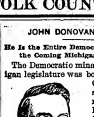
JOHN DONOVAN OF BAY.

He Is the Entire Democratic Minority In the Coming Michigan Legislature.



JOHN DONOVAN.

The Democratic minority in the Mich- igan legislature was born in Hamilton, Ont., 51 years ago and took the name of John Donovan. Dur- ing the coming session he will play a game of legislative soli- taire, for he was the only Demo- cratic member of the legislature elected when the recent Republi- an cyclone swept over the country. He will hold all the party caucuses, dic- tate the party membership of commit- tees and cast the entire party vote for United States senators when successors to the late Senator Stockbridge and Sen- ator James McMillan are chosen. He is all that is left of the noble Democratic six hundred after the recent Michigan Balakirva. Mr. Donovan will credit- ably represent his party, far he is a man of sterling integrity and a level temper- er, although not a prohibitionist.

He crossed to the United States when a small boy and grew to manhood in Youngstown, N. Y., where he obtained a good education and earned a livel- hood as a teacher in the public schools. Twenty-one years ago he married a Jamestown (N. Y.) girl, and their only child died at the age of 8 years. In 1886 Mr. Donovan removed to Michigan, where he taught public and parochial schools for a number of years. He then became a builder in Bay City, did his work conscientiously and has become well off in this world's goods. He is a Catholic and a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Catholic Mutual Benefit association. He is a res- ident of a strong A. P. A. district, but this fact did not prevent his election.

During the recent campaign he con- ducted a canvass that was remarkable for honesty. He refused to donate to strikers and political clubs, and even refrained from "setting up" drinks and cigars for "the boys," declaring that if he could not be elected without buying votes he did not desire to go to Lansing. He promises to make his presence felt in the legislature even if he is a single Democrat among 121 Republicans. The Sweet Singer of Michigan or some other equally gifted poet of the Wolverene State has thus immortalized Donovan in verse:

A green spot in the desert, an inlet in the sea,
A single small green leaflet upon a leafless tree,
A Crusoe minus Friday, a bright spot in a cave,
The man without a party, the boss without a slave,
The chief without an army, an estate without an heir,
A prisoner in a dungeon at a game of solitaire,
The unlit earth with not a single tantalizing ray
Is not by half so lonely as John Donovan of Bay.

WOMEN WHO HOLD OFFICE.

Three Have Been Elected to Colorado Legislature.

The equal suffrage experiment is hav- ing a thorough trial in Colorado, and one of the results of the recent political battle was the election of three women to the legislature, and a fourth was put on the superintendent of public instruction. Mrs. Angenette J. Peavey, the new su- perintendent of public instruction, is a woman of considerable ability and force of character. She was left a widow dur- ing the war and has since supported herself and her daughters by teaching school and doing newspaper work. She has been a resident of Colorado about ten years and was placed on the Republi- can ticket during the recent campaign because of her activity in organizing Republican clubs among the women vot- ers.

Mrs. Clara Cressingham, one of the fair members of the lower branch of the legislature, is a daughter of a prom- inent citizen of Brooklyn. Her husband was compelled to locate in Colorado on account of his health, and since she became a resident of Denver she has been prominent in bettering the condition of the schools in her district. During the campaign she took to the stump and that she made a very favorable impres- sion upon the voters is evidenced by the fact that she was elected.

Mrs. Frances Klock, another member of the legislature, is a native of North Lee, Oneida co. At the age of 18 she start- ed with her parents to Fon du Lac, Wis- consin, and when a few days had passed, before every bit of that craggy footing had left me, and there was not been every one fainted and threw up my hands and said I would as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 127. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Nervine, Nervine on my recommen- dation, and it has been unsatisfactory in their case in every instance. Yours truly, Rev. J. F. How to Sterilize Milk.

Take a tin pail and have made for it a false bottom perforated with holes and having legs half an inch high to allow circulation of the water. The bot- tle of milk to be treated is set on this false bottom, and the pail is filled with water until it reaches the level of the surface of the milk in the bottle. A hole may be punched in the cover of the bot- tle in which a cork is inserted, and the thermometer is put through the cork, so that the bulb dips into the milk, and the temperature can thus be watched without removing the cover. This wa- ter is than heated until the milk reaches

Says many a man and too often he is inclined to blame the poor, tired woman who cannot eat or sleep. Worse while life is filled with misery because her blood has become impover- erished and her nervous system ex- hausted. She needs a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles will enrich and vitalize her blood, tone and strengthen her digestive organs, give her a good ap- petite, enable her to sleep soundly, banish her nervousness and bring back her smiles. Mr. J. W. Rober- son, of Greenfield, Tenn., says: "My wife began taking Hood's Sarsapa- rilla about three months ago and she is now taking her third bottle. She has been in poor health for fifteen years. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her more good than any other medi- cine she has ever taken. Her appe- tite is better, she looks better and there has been improvement in ev- ery way."

"There is No Royal Road" to public favor any more than to learning. This is true, at all events, in America where intrinsic excellence is neces- sary to secure and retain the popu- lar favor. The reason The North- Western Line is one of the most popular railroads is that its service is not only always up to date but away ahead of the date. In our opinion, this is the Best Line between Chicago and the Twin Cities."—The Excursionist, Chicago.

Ed. Schruder: "Speaking about the low price for horses we don't know anything about it compared with Iowa. Why I could go down there and actually get horses by the carload for from $5 to $20 per head! I believe the hard times here have reached the lowest ebb, and from this on we shall see better prices for everything the farmer has to produce.

The usual assassin in the Catherine Olug murder affair, Chas Blixt, has confessed his share in the awful transaction and now it only remains for Hayward the fiend who planned it to own up and then the law can take its course. He, however, seems disposed to put a long front on the affair and deny the whole business.

The question of the hour is "Whom will Prof. McCrillis appoint assistant Supt., since Lew Gooler has absolutely declined to accept?" So far the dwellers in the Red River Valley have been able to procure food at least, and clothing.

FACTS ARE STUBBORN.

And They Tell a Wonderful Truthful Story.

A Plain Statement of a Plain Case.

The proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla have never made a claim concerning this great medicine which was not backed up by absolute and indisputable proof. They claim that the laboratory in which Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared is the largest building in the world devoted to the proprietary medicine business. Is this statement true? Look at the facts. In Lowell, Massachusetts, situated within a few feet of the tracks of the great Boston and Maine railroad system, in plain view of thousands of travelers, stands a brick building five stories high, sixty feet wide, and four hundred feet long, and this entire building is devoted to the business of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Has any one ever expressed a doubt as to the reality of this great laboratory, or has any one who has been in Lowell ever neglected a single statement that has ever been made concerning it? Has any traveller ever set any where upon the face of the earth, the equal of Hood's Sarsaparilla Laboratory? No, it cannot be found. Then what does this fact mean? Simply that the business which has been built up by the demand for Hood's Sarsaparilla is of immense proportions.

The proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla claim that it has the largest sales in the world. The truth of this statement may be verified by any person who will make a fair inquiry of wholesale druggists all over the country.

Again, the proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla claim that Hood's Sarsaparilla cures. Upon the truth of this claim depends the reason for the existence of the mammoth laboratory and the reason for the immense and ever increasing sales. Once more let us examine the facts. Any thoughtful person who has given attention to published testimonials must be convinced of the superiority of those published in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla. They are from living people, who tell in their own words as nearly as possible what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for them. Based upon solid truth, freely given in earnest gratitude, published without the embellishments of professional writers, these testimonials prove beyond a question that when all other prescriptions and medicines fail, Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures. Another point. The cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla are not in distant states or countries, or among people of whom we never hear except in the newspapers, but they are right here in our midst and often among our own friends.

News of Our Neighbors.

This Fisher Bulletin says: The familiar sign which has braved the storms for a number of years in front of the Northern Pacific Hotel has been removed. This practically leaves our city without accomodations for the traveling public. This is a grand opening now for some energetic person to at once enter the hotel business at this point.

While in Crookston several days ago C. U. Webster informed us that it was his intention to return to our city to live as soon as his term expired. Mr. W. will build a residence on one of his lots in the spring, and will, very likely invest in others later on. We are always glad to welcome enterprising men to our city.

A most undesirable property at the present time, is horse flesh. In this section, horses which were cheap at $125, are now a drug at $15, but Iowa can discount Fisher, and then be in the lead for low prices. A few days ago at New Hampton, a fairly good team was offered for $2 and not a buyer could be found. A man, town of Olwein in the same state, a farmer brought a fine horse into town and offered it to any one who would take and treat it kindly. No one would accept it and he offered to give a new buggy with the animal as an inducement, but still could not make a deal. He finally disposed of the horse by giving the latter and treating a large crowd of bystandes.

Hood's Pills are the best after dinner pills, assist digestion, prevent constipation.

The Grand Army boys, those of them who are the recipients of a meagre pittance of a few cents per month from the country they risked their lives to save, are just now receiving a nice little valentine from the pension department suggesting that they are getting all together too much, and unless they at once get some doctor to swear that they are still unable to do a full day's work it will be taken as prima facie evidence that they are well, and stout and young again and they will be cut off in their prime without any more parley. At the first glance this looks rough, but when you come to reflect upon the great expense our Uncle Samuel is put to by sending out his spies and keep them out you will at once become convinced that he can't afford to do both—pension the boys and an army of convicts and caves-drapers to watch them and as this is an impossible stration of ceremony somebody must needs be cut off the pay rolls, and as the boys did not do anything but save such a disgusted country, of course they should be cut off—we found 'em they ought to have known better anyhow! Such actions show plainly that the administration has thoroughly misapprehended the intention of the American people on the pension question and the recent election plainly indicates as much.

At the regular meeting of Col. Cuburn post No. 90 on Friday evening of last week the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Commander, H. E. COOKE.
Senior Vice Com. J. O. SARGENT.
Junior Vice " NELS K. OLSON.
Quarter-master, B. F. ZARBAUGHER.
Chaplain, C. H. MIX.
Surgeon, W. KISTENMACHER
Officer of the day, W. D. CARLTON.
Officer of the guard, Levi LaDuc.

The delegates elected to the annual state encampment in St. Paul were Maj. C. H. Mix and Capt. B. J. Zarbaugher; alternates, J. O. Sargent and Nels K. Olson. A large picture of Comrade Wm. Campbell, who died recently was received from Mrs. Campbell as a gift to the Post, and comrade Lewis Fontaine offered to procure a suitable frame for it, which offer was accepted and the picture will be duly framed and hung on the post room. On the next regular meeting night Senior Vice Commander McKay, of Fergus Falls will be present with the post and it is desired that as many of the boys as can will be present upon that occasion to greet the commander. Great efforts will be made to make the post meetings more than ever interesting the winter, and this can be done if the boys take hold with a spirit and help to make them so.

On Sunday afternoon, Hans Jensen, a blacksmith living at Fisher, committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver. The body was discovered in an outhouse by a boy before life was extinct, and removed to the residence of the unfortunate man, and, although a doctor was hastily summoned, and everything done that could be it was without avail; the deadly deed had been too surely done. The coroner was notified and on Monday morning J. Y. E. Wyatt proceeded to the scene. No cause can be assigned except melancholy brooding over the hard times. Mr. Johnson is said to have been a sober, industrious, hard working man.

Consternation seized upon various and sundry young men about town last week when forty or fifty of them were summoned to appear before the grand jury, probably to divulge what they know about the existence of gambling houses in the city. Of course the majority of them were perfectly willing to go.

Ayer's Pills, being composed of the essential virtues of the best vegetable upe rients, without any of the woody or fibrous material whatever, is the reason why they are so much more effective and valuable than any other cathartice. The best family physic.

It is often a mystery how a cold has been "caught." The fact is, however, that when the blood is poor and the system depressed, one becomes peculiarly liable to diseases. When the appetite or the strength fails, Ayer's Sarsaparilla should be taken without delay.

BRAY ITEMS.

Very pleasant weather for December.

Albert Wickstrom, our postmaster and general leading man of Town of Bray, left Wednesday with his family for Crookston to take up his duties as Register of Deeds at the beginning of the year.

The town board of Bray met Monday Dec. 3d, to appoint assessors to fill the vacancies left by A. Wickstrom.

E. S. Peterson was appointed Town Clerk.

Eric Hanson Justice of the Peace and wife made a visit to C. P. Swanson and family Wednesday evening.

Mike Maude League, our precinct school teacher made a visit to M. Davis and family at Euclid Saturday. Reported having spent a very enjoyable time.

John Olson of Warren is visiting C. C. Carlson.

Adolph Nelson has been appointed Postmaster at Bray to succeed Albert Wickstrom. UNO.

Ringing Noises.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

VOL. XVIII. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1894. NO. 36.

TAMS BIXBY

Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee.

Gives Some Views on some Subjects for Legislation

For the Coming Session.

The Minneapolis Evening Journal interviewed Tams Bixby and gives the interview as follows:

The public mind is much exercised just now over the possibilities of legislation at the coming session. An opportunity is presented to the Republican party, which has complete control of the law-making machinery, to make an enviable record. Minnesota wants no radical changes, no new experiments. The people want peace, with just such action as may tend to improve the conditions under which they live in the respects in which experience has shown them to be faulty or defective. It seems a straight road to travel, because such has as we need have already been pointed out by intelligent public opinion. There is quite a list of them, after all; enough to keep the legislature busy during its 90 days of life, if it deal thoughtfully and wisely with them all.

The whole state asks for a law relating to primary elections. The danger in this direction lies in trying to do too much rather than too little. A great many experiments have been made with primary election laws, but most of them have been disowned by the authors themselves because they were too complicated. To put the primaries in some measure under the Australian system, securing official supervision with severe penalties for illegal voting or counting, and with a penalty also for voting at the primaries of both parties, would be to lay the foundation for the completer system that has not yet been evolved in any state.

The taxation of unsold railroad lands is much desired; and it is desirable, if it can be done without invalidating the taxation of gross earnings of railroad corporations. It is unjust that the companies should be allowed to hold immense quantities of real estate, free of tribute to the state, while waiting for it to be made more valuable by the improvements of others. But the gross earnings tax must not be touched or even endangered. Better no improvements as they are than that. This is a problem which must be approached with great caution.

"Some amendments to the labor laws are desirable. We favor a labor commissioner who has won a wide reputation for ability and integrity of his department. His suggestions will probably cover all that it is desirable to have done.

"The session ought not to pass without a beginning being made for a system of road improvements. There is absolutely no subject to come up as vital to the interests of the state as this. The abolition of the system of paying the road tax in labor, requiring it to be paid in cash, and then employing competent engineers to supervise the work of road construction, are indispensable at the outset. After that the legislature should consider the propriety of authorizing counties to issue bonds to build good roads, and offering a certain percentage of assistance to those who do from the state treasury. This is the system under which splendid results have been achieved, and the value of farm property multiplied many fold, in New Jersey and other states.

"We need a forest law more than almost anything else. A judicious system of protection under state authority would not only help preserve our forests and prevent depredations, but it could be made effective against the recurrence of such a calamity as visited our state a few months ago from forest fires. In connection with this it seems possible to do something toward a stricter enforcement of the game laws. Larger appropriations for this purpose should be made and there is no reason why foresters, appointed by the state, should not also be commissioned as game wardens. They would be on the spot where most infractions of the law are committed and could probably combine the duties of the two offices successfully.

"We ought by means to have a provision of law similar to that recently adopted in New York, requiring a man to have been naturalized at least 20 days before he can vote. That would do injustice to no one and would prevent the present attendant upon the work of the naturalization mills set in operation on our large cities just before each election. It would be a powerful aid in purifying the ballot.

"Minnesota is ready for a comprehensive system of civil service reform. Reports from all the departments show how much their business would be assisted by placing the whole civil service of the state under a system of appointment for fitness and stability of tenure. The Republican party has much to gain by establishing such a system now. And it will gain more votes by that than are to be had by the use of official patronage.

"The best thing to do with the high license law is to let it severely alone. It might not be inadvisable to permit the smaller cities and towns to adopt the Gothenburg system for themselves if they so desire. But better leave that one thing to invite any radical changes in the law that would have.

"We have needed a corrupt practices law, have barely failed to get it at other sessions, and must have it now. The people demand and expect it. Publication of all receipts and expenses of all candidates and all party committees should be required; and that not in block, but itemized in detail. That requirement, with a possible limitation of the total permitted to be expended, and severe penalties, extending to surrender of office, for a violation of the law, would place our elections beyond the reach of the encroachments of the money power in politics.

"It is a hindrance to the administration of justice and a disgrace to the state that we have not a revision of the laws of Minnesota. All propositions to that end heretofore have failed principally because the sum mentioned for the work has been inadequate. To revise the statutes will require the continuous labor for months and probably years, of this best legal talent of the state. A commission should be appointed, named in the bill, to revise the statutes, with compensation approximating that which the men selected to do this important work would receive in the same time from their private practice. This is a duty that cannot be neglected longer without great injury to the people.

"There will be more or less agitation for changes in the laws looking to the relief of the debtor, and possibly for a general moratorium law. This is a subject that should be dealt with most carefully, if at all. Recent developments have shown that investors are not satisfied now with some of the laws, and that much capital has been withdrawn from the state. Any backsliding to the further impairment of security to, postponing of payment would be misunderstood fatal to our credit, and through that, to our material development. It would not be unfair to require mortgagees to exhaust that security represented by the real estate pledged, before being permitted to resort to personal action against the mortgagor. But the confidence of the country, restored by the splendid victory of January over Populism, must not be shaken by anything looking towards the Populistic and communistic ideas that the people have so emphatically rejected.

"In fine, it seems to me, grading as the most important subjects that will profitably engage the attention of the legislature. The election of a United States senator, and the demand of the cities for a general municipal law, will necessarily consume so much time that, if what has been outlined here were to be consummated, it would occupy every working hour. To devote attention to these subjects, with such additions as may be suggested and to put a prompt veto on all the wild ideas that will be sprung for personal interest, or to carry favor with some particular constituency or element among members, ought to be to insure a continuance of the favor with which the people regard the Republican party in Minnesota. It is a great opportunity, and I hope and believe that it will not be neglected."

VAN SANT A WINNER.

A Careful Size-up Gives Him Five More Than a Majority.

Minneapolis Evening Journal

One of the best posted politicians in the state after looking over the field carefully, has arrived at the conclusion that Capt. S. R. Van Sant will carry the Republican caucus for speaker by 53 votes, or five more than the required majority. He allows Gibbs 28 votes, Shell, 16 making 92 votes in all. The remaining three votes he does not figure in, but allows them as a margin upon which to speculate. In the first congressional district he claims that Van Sant will have 12 votes and Gibbs only six. Gibbs has said that he would have all of the First district save Winona county, but investigation is said not to bear him out. In the Second district the 16 votes are given to Van Sant and in the Third district, six are given to Van Sant and seven to Gibbs. Of the seven Republican votes in St. Paul, four are given to Van Sant and three to Gibbs. The 14 votes of Hennepin county are given to Van Sant, and the 12 of the Sixth district, while in the Seventh district Gibbs is given seven and Van Sant three. This makes a total of 28 for Van Sant and of 28 for Gibbs, with 16 for Shell.

The estimate, of course, is speculation, save with reference to the Sixth district, which has declared itself. The Hennepin delegation is credited with being solid for Van Sant, when as a matter of fact it has not taken any action. It is not unfriendly to Shell, and would not refuse to vote for Gibbs, if such a vote were necessary. The estimate is given only for what it is worth as coming from a man who makes politics a business and usually knows what he is talking about.

DISTRICT COURT.

Various and Sundry Cases of More or Less Importance.

SOME CRIMINAL CASES.

Court will Adjourn for the Holidays, to Meet on Tuesday, Jan. 15th., 1895.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 12.

Court convened at 9 a. m. Counsels summed up the Perron case; the court gave his instructions to the jury and that body went to its room about 10 o'clock to deliberate.

Delmin Peruse vs. the receiver of the Northern Pacific Ry. Co. was settled by stipulation for judgment for plaintiff for $300. E. Steenerson, Esq., for plaintiff and J. H. Mitchell, Jr., for defendant.

Williford and Northway Manufacturing Co. vs. Marcus Johnson and James D. Marshall, was settled by stipulation without cost to either party.

A jury was then called in the case of State vs. Jud. Whaley. He is charged with assaulting one Lars Lotfbun in a saloon in Fosston. The case will go to the grand jury about 3.30 this afternoon.

The jury in the Perron case brought in a verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

Immediately after convening Judson Whaley through his attorney E. M. Stanton, withdrew his plea of "not guilty" and pleaded guilty of assault in the third degree. This was accepted by the County Attorney and the jury discharged. The Court passed sentence of $30 fine and in case of default therein stand committed to the county jail for thirty days.

Alexander Perron, was found guilty by the jury, of petty larceny and given the same sentence as Whaley.

John Stark was brought before the court and sentenced to six years at Stillwater. His crime charged is grand larceny in the first degree.

James Sanderson was brought up for sentence. He was asked by the court if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed, replied that he was guilty of getting on that engine and starting it back, that he had no intention of doing anything like that; that he had no animosity against the company, and that he had been working very hard and drinking and must have been half asleep. He did not know what possessed him to do what he did. The sentence of the court was a fine of $100 and in default thereof stand committed to the county jail.

A jury was then called in the case of State of Minnesota vs. Ole Hanson. A. R. Holston for state and J. Westseth for defendant. Defendant is charged with having taken some oats from an elevator at McIntosh. The charge is "grand larceny in the second degree." One sack of oats, about two bushels—worth about 50 cents. Case went to jury about 4 o'clock.

The case of State vs. Nils Mattson was next on call. Wm. Hunt and Fending and A. R. Holston prosecuting. The charge is "assault in the second degree," assaulting one Tory Johnson with a pitchfork. The parties live in the town of Tilden. It appears that defendant had gotten a farm from the complaining witness, and among other things agreed to have a pair of bob sleighs. Johnson left two pair of sleighs on the farm when he left. Mattson claims that Johnson was to do some repairing to his (Mattson's) sleighs before he should have his own sleighs from the place. Johnson went to get the sleighs once or twice, but Mattson would not let him have them until the repairing of the other was done. Johnson and Mr. Gullikson on the 5th of September last went to Mattson's place and succeeded in getting the sleighs on his wagon. Mr. Mattson, his son Peter and Mrs. Mattson appeared on the scene, and a rumpus took place. Peter pulled his shirt off Mr. Johnson, then pulled the sleighs off the wagon. The two old men then faced each other. Mr. Johnson claims that Mattson struck him with the handle of a threshing fork and then stuck the tines in his right arm above the elbow. Mr. Mattson claims that Mr. Johnson, in attempting to break off a piece of rail from the rail pile fell and injured his arm. A small round wound is still on Mr. Johnson's arm.

THURSDAY, DEC. 13, 1894.

The case of State vs. Mattson took up the time of the court until noon.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON DEC. 13, 1894.

The case of State vs. Nils Mattson was finished and turned over to the jury.

The case of John Casselman vs. Phillip Doyle. Hamilton & Wiseman and Montague for plaintiff and Ed. George and Chas. Argall for defendant. The parties to this action are from the town of Grand Forks, and the matter, being short, was heard by the court. It is an action in replevin. The court heard the evidence, and the case is to be submitted on briefs.

A jury was then called in the case of State of Minnesota vs. Delphis Beauvold; the charge being grand larceny in the second degree. Martin O'Brien defending, A. R. Holston prosecuting.

It is claimed that defendant took some oats and wheat from the granary of James W. McGluty, on Sept. 15 or 16. The case occupied the time of the court all the afternoon. A verdict of "Not Guilty" was returned by the jury in the case of State vs. Nils Mattson—a very significant fact, this was the first case this term in which the defendant got a verdict either criminal or civil.

FRIDAY MORNING, DEC. 14, 1894.

The Beauvold case still on tap.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

The last above named case was finished and given to the jury. The verdict was, petty larceny. Sentence, $100 fine, or in default thereof, 90 days in jail.

The case of J. P. Lundin vs. A. C. Rhinehart was next called. H. Steenerson, counsel for plaintiff and J. Montague and A. A. Miller counsel for defendant. The action was brought to recover something over $300 for supplies plaintiff furnished to one of Mr. Rhinehart's sub-contractors on the State ditch near Stephen, last October. Plaintiff claims that before he sold the supplies to Mr. Flinn, any goods the defendant guaranteed or promised, or said that he would see that he was paid. Flinn got over $800 worth of goods. Defendant claims he never guaranteed, promised or said he would see plaintiff paid; but that on the other hand plaintiff solicited him to give him all the trade he could; got the contract over to trade with plaintiff. About the time of closing up the work Flinn, Mr. Lundin sent Mr. Flinn's bill to the office of defendant and defendant gave plaintiff $125, the amount then due Flinn, which was credited on the Flinn account. The plaintiff took the matter before the State Drainage Commission to see if he could get satisfaction. The board decided that as supplies was not included in the State's contract it could not compel Mr. Rhinehart to pay the claim by keeping that amount from that due him.

The case went to the jury at 6:15.

SATURDAY MORNING, DEC. 15, 1894.

The jury in the Lundin-Rhinehart case, sleepy-eyed, stern-faced and hungry-looking, appeared in court in response to a summons from his Honor; and upon being asked if they had agreed, replied that they had not. After a few more questions as to the prospects of agreement if kept together a while longer, and being assured that no agreement could be arrived at, they were discharged.

The county attorney then moved the case of State of Minnesota vs. John Doyle. Martin O'Brien counsel for defendant.

Defendant is charged by the grand jury of grand larceny in the second degree. He is charged with having broken into the house of the Minneapolis Brewing Co., and stole some beer. The evidence was not very conclusive that he did the breaking in. He just got out of jail the day before, and he claims that some fellows with whom he slept in the second house had told him that they would take him to the early in the morning to go to the woods one of the fellows got him onto the "racket" and advised him to take a few bottles along in his pocket, and steered him to the beer house. Fair had just got in and had one bottle in his pocket when M. Paien came in and caught him. He denies having broken the window of the beer house.

The case went to the jury about eleven o'clock.

Wm. Becker charged with forgery in the second degree, through his attorney, A. A. Miller, entered a plea of guilty of forgery in the third degree. A plea was made for leniency by the court in imposing sentence. He was sentenced to six months at Stillwater.

A verdict of guilty of grand larceny in the second degree was returned in the case of State vs. James Falk; court passed sentence of five years at Stillwater.

The cleared the criminal calendar of. Only one acquittal out of the list of indicted.

Court adjourned until 2 p. m.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Ames Iron Works vs. Lee Dubne and N. Brossean was next tried, A. A. Miller for plaintiff and Wm. Watts for defendant. Plaintiff sold to defendant a threshing machine, took their notes in payment. Defendant at different times made payments on same, which payments were endorsed on said notes. The plaintiff claims that by error $120 85 was endorsed twice when it should not have been endorsed but once; consequently sue to recover that amount.

It was late in the afternoon when the case was given to the jury, and they were instructed to bring in a sealed verdict Monday morning.

Court then adjourned.

MONDAY MORNING DEC. 17, 1894.

Court convened at 9 a. m. The first thing in order was to hear the verdict in the last named case, which was for defendants.

The case of Michael Tleton vs. Thos Murray and M. F. Murphy was next called. A. R. Holston, counsel for plaintiff and R. J. Montague counsel for defendant.

This is an action in replevin, brought up on appeal from justice of the peace from East Grand Forks. Defendant had a chattel mortgage on some stuff of plaintiff's, among which was a roan cow. Plaintiff claims the roan cow covered by the mortgage was drowned and the one taken was not in the mortgage. Case went to jury about 11:30. A jury was called in the case of Tessler vs. Isiah Marcheldon, A. R. Holston for plaintiff and H. Steenerson for defendant. Adjournment.

MONDAY.

The case called immediately before noon, Xnver Tessler vs. Isaiah Marcheldon, was an action brought by plaintiff to recover on something like $100 value of wheat and some barley which plaintiff claims defendant wrongfully took from him. Plaintiff has been cropping defendant's farm for the past three years, up to '94. The third year, according to the written contract introduced in evidence, the defendant had a right to hold grain enough to carry for whatever advances he may have made the plaintiff. It appears that plaintiff hauled off some of the wheat, and defendant learning of this came and stopped him, and hauled all the grain away himself. Plaintiff at once replevined the grain, being defendant had no right to take all the wheat, and plaintiff further claims that this contract in evidence is not the one he was willing to make. Plaintiff also claims that he got only 105 bushel of the 1200 bushel wheat raised, and that defendant got the balance, when he should have had one-half. Defendant claims to have hauled 747 bushels.

The case occupied the attention of the court all afternoon and forenoon of Tuesday, and was given to the jury about 2:30 p. m.

The McIntosh Convention.

A. W. Foss, of the Thirteen Towns, with commendable enterprise, sent a special reporter to do the McIntosh division convention and gives the following succinct report of it which is as clear as mud:

Chairman Larson—The Convention will now proceed to convene.

W. G. Hunt—Mr. Chairman, I understand—

Chirman Larson—The gentleman is out of order. Only one can hold the floor at a time. You are not supposed to understand anything. You are supposed to be deaf.

W. G. Hunt—Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

Chairman—So does a pancake. The gentlemen is overruled, and will please sit down.

W. G. Hunt—Mr. Chairman, may I ask who has the floor?

Chairman—Yes sir. I have that honor myself. The gentleman will please sit down. I will now proceed to state the object of this meeting, which as I understand is to see if the people from Fosston and Reading cannot be lined up for Columbia county, with Poplar River added. I may say at the start that it can't be did. The only way to harmonize our differences is for McIntosh and the farmers to take all the county offices, while Fosston takes the county seat of Nelson county. Nelson county, gentlemen, is the solution of the whole problem, and I propose that some gentleman moves to make Nelson county the unanimous choice of this convention. I propose this for several reasons, which I will proceed to state under seventeen different headings, to-wit; namely, i. e., as follows: First—Columbia county is not in it, for a number of reasons, which I will state as fast as they occur to me, but chiefly for 12 very urgent ones, as follows: 1st,—

A. Trovatou—Mr. Chairman, I rise to a new point of order.

Chairman—This gentleman will state his point.

A. Trovatou—This convention was called by the farmers of Winger town. Will the chair listen to an argument why one of the farmers should be heard on this question?

Chairman—The chair will listen to any argument after it has briefly stated the objects of the convention under the seventeen slug headings and 12 sub-headings named. In the meantime, the gentleman is out of order and must be seated. The first of the 12 points I was about to state to the convention in order that it might act with intelligence, is as follows,—Columbia county is not in it because Nelson county—

Trovatou—Mr. Chairman, is a motion to adjourn in order?

Chairman—Yes, sir.

Trovatou—If we adjourn, can us farmers go out into the street and drink?

Chairman—The gentleman is out of order again, and the sergeant at arms will cause his arrest if he again attempts one wise to occupying the floor under the general housecleaning act.

Trovatou—I move we adjourn.

Chairman—The motion is put and seconded that we adjourn. The motion is carried. Adjourned to meet in Crookston at the call of Mr. Hunt and Tucker Johnson, two of the well and favorably known farmers of Columbia county. Let's go home, boys,

MONDAY.

No Money in Pork.

Andrew Steenerson takes the ground that there is no money in pork, the way the farmers have been raising it in this county. He says: "You show me the man who is going extensively into hog raising, or a herd of 100 hogs and upwards and I will show you a man who will go bankrupt in a short time, that is if he does it like we always have in this country—feed grain all the year around. I believe, however, that if a man would change it as to have clover for summer pasture and will raise corn to fatten on that he can make a fair thing raising a few hogs every year. I don't believe I will do, however, to try to make a big business out of it. If the JOURNAL would, I would like to have it explain to me how it can be done."

The JOURNAL does not believe in the idea of a man's putting his eggs all into one basket, either in stock-raising or grain raising—never did and never advocated that plan. We have urged farmers, however, to diversify—to raise as much as possible of those things as they need to live upon. A little stock, enough cows to supply the table with butter and a little to spare for groceries; a few hens, enough to supply the family with eggs and a few now and then for market, also a few fowls to sell; some turkeys and such other fowls as will sell well; some sheep for mutton when needed, also now and then for sale in the market; some pork, enough for home use if need be, and if possible, now and then a fat hog to turn off when the market is right. In fact a hundred and one other articles that enter into the economy of life upon the farm. We do not believe that any man can make a good success in life by confining his attention wholly to one thing, to the neglect of all the rest. In the present condition of things a farmer should make his business a close study in order to always have such things as the market demands. If our farmers had always done this there is no doubt that the most of them would have been in far better shape than they have been. There has been altogether too many things bought that should have been raised upon the farms such as pork, horse feed, etc., etc., etc. This is not so much the case now as it used to be, however.

A genuine ghost story has yet to be attested, but not so with a genuine blood purifier. Over and over again it has been proved that Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands alone among medicines as the most reliable tonic alterative in pharmacy. It stood alone at the world's fair.

THIRTY YEARS AFTER

Under this head the National Tribune, the official paper of the Grand Army, gives the following terse review of the pension situation, which is well worthy of perusal by all patriotic citizens. The Tribune says:

"Let those who are clamoring so loudly for a reduction of the pension roll "because it is thirty years after the war," consider a few patent facts.

We will take as an illustration an average boy of 18, who enlisted in the Fall of 1861 in one of the regiments which afterward formed the Army of the Tennessee.

He was then in the first flush of youthful strength, in the dawn of a glorious manhood. The keen examination of the surgeons discovered no physical blemish in him anywhere. Heart, head, stomach lungs, limbs, ears and eyes were sound and healthy. A life insurance company would have considered him "a first-class risk," and given him a policy at a very low rate, calculating with reasonable certainty that he would go on paying premiums for 50 or 60 years before it would be called on to cash his policy.

This boy leaves a comfortable, home, where he has been well fed, well clothed, well sheltered from the storms and goes to Calvo. Ill., where he is initiated into army life, as it was found in the barracks and tents of that low-lying town of Mississippi logs and Ohio back-water. In mid-winter he is called out of what shelter and comfort he has had to make the campaign against Forts Henry and Donelson. For a month his regiment, founders through the mud and icy streams of the peninsula between the Tennessee and the Cumberland. The streams he has to wade are winter cold; the mud in which he lies down at night freezes to his blanket; he is oftener without food than with; he is much oftener chilled to the marrow than warm and comfortable; and without tent or other shelter he endures the fiercest storms of hail and sleet ever known in that region. It is amazing that he lives through it all, but he does, nevertheless, and in the midst of all assaults a powerful fort, manned by determined men, and compels them to surrender.

The next few weeks brings warmer skies but continuous and drenching rains, and find him making the best home he can on the muddy and fateful field of Shiloh. There he meets the enemy in a deadly carnage, where one-third of his comrades are killed, wounded or missing.

Following this come 30 days of intensely exciting, and fearfully laborious marching, digging and fighting in the advance upon Corinth. When that place falls he has had overfour months of as arduous campaigning as ever fell to the lot of a soldier. It is a miracle that his constitution has not been permanently wrecked. This has actually been the case with thousands of his companions who have been sent home to die, or to linger for years with increasing decrepitude.

A few weeks of fitful rest, broken by rapid marches hither and yon, over the hot, dry tablelands of Northern Mississippi, and he is off with Sherman on the ill-fated expedition to Chickasaw Bayou. It is the Fort Donelson campaign over again, except that the mud is deeper and the assault on the enemy's works a bloody failure.

Undamaged he marches against Arkansas Post and wins a victory to partly compensate for the failure to take Vicksburg. Then for four weary, deadly months he camps on the sodden levee at Young's point ploods sadly over the soaked soil, digs useless canals to get around Vicksburg, makes endless marches through the dreary swamps, with not enough dry ground anywhere to make fitting grave for the comrades who daily succumb to the deadly fevers.

The gloomy winter at last ends, and sad and chastened, but still resolute, he marches away to open the ground, final campaign against Vicksburg. Three months follow of excited, perilous marches, of sharp, sanguinary battles, of arduous labor under a burning sun by day and of weary watches by night in the rank miasma of the fever-smitten lowlands, of hourly danger in the deadly proximity of a siege, and at last Vicksburg falls. By this time four out of five of the comrades who started with him from Cairo are dead or disabled. But his work is scarcely half done.

A little later he is 1,000 miles away, following his old leader in the battles Sherman, in a bloody assault on Mission ridge, or marching with shotless feet over the frozen roads of East Tennessee to the relief of Knoxville.

Then came the Atlanta campaign—100 days of incessant marching, building of works and desperate fighting—not a day of rest, not a day of freedom from deadly conflict from May 4 to Sept. 3.. A brief rest around the captured city, and then the glorious sweep to Savannah. Another brief rest, and then three months of toiling and fighting through the swamps of the Carolinas.

The boy who went through all this—who crowded into four momentous years, fatigues, trials, hardships, soul-wearing excitements and perils more than the usual totals of the lifetimes of 100 ordinary men—was 22 when he marched proudly up Pennsylvania avenue in the grand review nearly 30 years ago. He is now, by the calendar of years, 52, but far older by that calendar upon whose dial the marks are made by bodily and mental strains.

He has now reached the point in life when he needs help, and needs it urgently and immediately. If he is a time when in spite of all his indomitable courage, his strong will, his failing physical powers throw him out of the battle of life. Had it not been for the awful drain upon his vitality by those four trying years he would be to-day in the prime of life and vigor, full of hope and ability. He would be a leader among his fellows, in whatever vocation he followed. Instead, he is like some ship which has had a perilous trip through the icebergs and rocks in a terrible storm, in which she has repeatedly escaped destruction by the narrowest chances. Her joints are strained almost to separation, her cordage is frayed until it is liable to part at any moment, every plank and timber is bruised and scarred and shattered, and to save her at all she must be kept in tranquil waters.

What is true of the typical soldier in the Army of the Tennessee, is equally true of those in the Army of the Potomac, the Army of the Cumberland, the Army of the Gulf and all the rest of the armies that the Republic put in the field against its enemies. The service every where was of the same protracted, arduous, exhausting nature. Everywhere the enemies of the nation had to be overcome by greater exertion and fighting than theirs, and the men who did this for the country inevitably and infallibly, wore themselves out in doing it.

They are now falling by the way, side of life, and now is the time of all others when the pension roll should be expanded with the utmost rapidity to take them all in, and maintain in his fair fame all the survivors, providing that not a man who stood not resist the severe trials that comes with the coming of fall and winter weather.

Of course the remedy for these ailments, and the prevention, if they have not already made their encroachments, consists in a course of treatment which will build up and strengthen the physical system. In the first place the blood must be purified and invigorated so that it can carry health and vitality to all the organs of the body, enabling the heart and lungs, the liver, bowels and skin to perform their proper functions. The digestive organs must then be strengthened and made to do their part in supplying the wasted and much needed strength to the system.

For the purpose of purifying the blood and giving strength and vitality to the system, nothing has yet been found equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. The burning of the midnight oil from people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla is that it purifies their blood, removes pimples, boils and all similar eruptions, creates an appetite and makes them feel strong. This is just what is needed to fortify the system against that condition for which this great general have no better name than a "cold." A few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla taken at this season would be sufficient to give that tone and stimulus to the organs of the body which are indispensable to health, especially in trying weather, and certainly, a few dollars expended now in taking measures to prevent sickness or even the discomforts of a long continued "cold" would be better than a fit of sickness or heavy doctor's bills later on. In buying medicine, as in buying anything else, it is well to see that you get an honest article, and such Hood's Sarsarilla is every where recognized to be.

The Farmers Opportunity.

Minneapolis evening Journal.

That was a very stimulating address which John L. Gibbs delivered before the State Dairy Association at Owatonna.

He did not sing the praises of diversified farming in too positive notes. The keynote of the talk was that the great necessity of the farmers is to give their laborious efforts right direction in order to remove the load of poverty. Instead of spending much time in lamentation over the decadence of farming, the farmer should intelligently seek the causes of the evil and use his own best practical judgment rather than borrow opinions from professional agitators. Orderly, systematic work on a farm in the right direction will leave no cause for complaint.

One phase of the right direction policy is the imputation to dairying and Mr. Gibbs brought out very forcibly the practical benefits of the co-operative creamery, which is becoming a conspicuous feature of southern Minnesota industry, with monthly dividend paying and producing cities within easy reach which furnish an ever-broadening market for the farmer. Mr. Gibbs showed very emphatically that there is no reason for country antagonism to the cities for "the cities cannot grow too fast in wealth or population to suit the dairyman." And a further argument might be made that with the growth of cities there is an increased demand for intelligent producers in the country to utilize the ground to meet the requirements of urban consumers. If a man has $1,000 he can do infinitely better by investing it in good cows in the country and giving his attention to dairying than by constituting himself a hanger-on in cities. If he doesn't want dairying let him see how much small fruit he can raise on an acre of ground; or let him see how satisfactory is poultry raising on 10 acres of land with judicious handling and feeding his own feed. Poultry raising has paid far better than wheat this year, and the diversification methods employed in the state now have fully established the safety and profitable quality of the process. In the southern counties wheat raising is no longer the objective. It is incidental, not paramount. Stock raising and the dairy are receiving more and more the attention of farmers. If diversified farming requires more time and closer attention to wheat growing, it pays better and is fully worth all the time and care given to it. The farmer who has grasped most firmly the results of scientific experimentation is the best and most successful farmer. The youngesters who are running away from farm life to the cities should remember this. Far more dignified, useful, responsive and exalted is the life of the educated farmer on his acres than that of a farmer boy turned into a city hanger-on with no future before him, and merged in a large element of dull mediocrity.

FOR VAN SANT.

Members of Legislature From Sixth District Meet in His Favor.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 13.—The members elect of the next legislature from the Sixth district, met in a meeting at the Merchants this evening to discuss needed legislation, and the speakership and the senatorial question. The members present by electing J. D. Jones, Long Prairie, chairman, and A. N. Dure, Elk River, secretary. Twelve members elect to the house, voted to support S. R. Van Sant for speaker, only two members being absent, and they, it is understood, will also be for Van Sant. No action on the election of United States senator was taken.

ALSO HENNEPIN COUNTY.

At a meeting of the legislature elect for Hennepin county it was agreed to vote for S. R. Van Sant for speaker. This gives Van Sant 14 more votes.

The Common Cold.

Medical writers have recently called attention to the fact that the common cold, which most people suppose they "catch" by undue exposure, though they cannot, for the life of them tell how or when, is frequently the result of a debilitated condition of the body, and that the head-ache, catarrhal trouble, sore throat and other accompaniments of a cold are signs of an impure condition of the blood. This explanation is at least reasonable, and it is desirable that it should be understood, as it points to the proper and only method by which this annoyance, so frequently recurring in many instances, dangerous condition may be avoided or overcome. It is not uncommon to hear people remark that they suffer constantly with "a cold" from early fall until the warm weather returns in the spring. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that the system is weakened, that it lacks vitality, is poorly nourished and can not resist the severer trials that come with the coming of fall and winter weather.

Of course the remedy for these ailments, and the prevention, if they have not already made their encroachments, consists in a course of treatment which will build up and strengthen the physical system. In the first place the blood must be purified and invigorated so that it can carry health and vitality to all the organs of the body, enabling the heart and lungs, the liver, bowels and skin to perform their proper functions. The digestive organs must then be strengthened and made to do their part in supplying the wasted and much needed strength to the system.

MINNESOTA RAILROADS.

Construction Has Been the Lightest Since 1866—Earnings Decreased.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 10.—The railroad and warehouse commission has submitted its annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894. The report contains many interesting facts regarding the decrease in mileage of new lines constructed during the year, as compared with that of other years; the great falling off in earnings and net income; the statement of the different roads as to surpluses and deficits, in showing surpluses and nine a deficit; the number of people killed by railway accidents, and the wages of employes. Following is the report:

Mileage and Construction.

The total number of miles of railroad operated in the state of Minnesota on June 30, 1894, was 5,913.64, being an increase over the previous year of 48.56 miles, of which 40.80 was added by the Duluth, Missabe and Northern railway, 4.38 miles by the Duluth and Iron Range railroad.

The increase in railroad mileage in Minnesota has not been so small since the early years of the history since 1866 and 1867, when the increase was 47 and 48 miles respectively.

Earnings and Expenses.

The amount of gross earnings in Minnesota for the year ending June 30, 1894, was $30,686,594; for the previous year the gross earnings were $37,097,203, showing a decrease for 1894 of $6,410,609.

CANADIAN EXCURSIONS.

The Burlington Route, the favorite line with people of the Northwest, has arranged with the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railways for the annual Holiday Excursions to Canada via St. Paul and Chicago. Tickets will be sold at all stations in Northern Minnesota, North Dakota and Manitoba on the following dates, in Manitoba every day from November 26th to December 31st, 1894, and in Northern Minnesota and North Dakota on November 27th; December 4th, and every day from December 10th to 31st, inclusive, at the following rate:

$40.00 for the round trip to Montreal and points west in Quebec and Ontario. To points east of Montreal tickets will be sold at slightly increased rates. These tickets will be good for return at any time within three months after the date of sale.

Trains from Northern Minnesota, North Dakota and Manitoba arrive in Minneapolis and St. Paul, each in the morning in ample leave at convenient hours in the morning and evening. The magnificent scenery of the Upper Mississippi can be enjoyed by those who take our "Scenic Express" in the morning, while those who wish to see the attractions of the Twin Cities for a day, will find our "Vestibuled Limited" with its Pullman Compartment and Standard Sleepers, Reclining Chair Cars (seats free), and Peerless Dining Cars, the acme of luxurious railroad equipment. Be sure and ask your home ticket agent to give you tickets via "The Burlington." Our line has been so largely patronized for former excursions that it needs no introduction or recomendation except the mention of its name. For maps and folders of the line, or any information, apply to your home agent, or address.

Poor Digestion

Leads to nervousness, restlessness, peevishness, chronic Dyspepsia and great misery. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the remedy. It tones the stomach, creates an appetite, and gives a relish to food. It rallies the blood and gives healthy action to all the organs of the body. Take Hood's for Hood's Sarsaparilla cures.

Common Sense

Should be used in attempting to cure that very disagreeable disease, catarrh. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local application can do no permanent good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

She Listened.

Miss C.'s parents keep on the wall at the exhibition. Miss C. hung around her portrait. Miss C. had lips that an unblessed man would die for a chance to kiss. Her eyes were twin stars. Upon her forehead hung two beautiful curls —twin curls. Miss C. was delightful to behold.

She was immersed in the study of her features. She wonder if it's true to life?

"I don't know. It's awfully pretty anyway."

"It is pretty. The features are perfect, but I don't think she looks very intelligent."

Miss C., with a crimson face, slapped her book shut and walked away.—New York World.

It Beats Acting.

They had just escaped from the telephone exchange where they were employed.

"Sometimes," said one of them, "I think that I would like to be famous; that I would like to go on the stage and act in a big lecture platform. Then, again, I think not."

"I think not all the time," was the positively unanimous rejoinder.

"Still it must be nice to play upon the emotions of the multitude."

"Emotions in your eye! What makes it so jolly in the telephone exchange. When we talk sweetly to some man through the phone, I can tell by the way he coos back that he is smirking in the most absurd manner. And if I want to get rid of him, and tell him to ring line's busy and ring in his ear. I tell you, my dear, when it comes to playing on the emotions of the multitude Sarah Bernhardt will have to give extra matinees if she wants to surpass us in opportunity."—Kate Field's Washington.

The Donkey Vanished.

In general we may say that the donkeys belong to a vanishing state of human culture, to the time before carriage ways existed. Now that civilization goes on wheels they seem likely to have the same fortune. Formerly, not long ago they were almost everywhere in common use. At the present time there are probably millions of people in the United States to whom the animal is known only by description. In a word, the donkey, market & stage is in the development of our industries which is passing away as rapidly as that in which the spinning wheel and the loom have played a part.—Professor N. S. Shaler in Century.

An Indian Story.

Especially if it be a good one and full of useful information is always interesting.

I have a book beautifully illustrated, that tells much about the Indians and the northwest, and the miraculous escape of one man from them in the early days.

It tells also of the Yellowstone Park, the greatest wonder of the natural world.

For only 8 cents in stamps and your address, I will send you the book.

GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

VERDICT OF JUDGE WOODS IN THE A. R. U. CASES.

Debs Sentenced to Six Months in Jail and the Other Leaders to Three Months Each—Debs Says He Will Serve His Sentence.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—"Guilty as charged" was the finding announced by Federal Judge William A. Woods against President Eugene V. Debs of the American Railway union. The same finding was reached against the other American Railway union leaders in trial with Debs.

The crowded courtroom was crowded to overflowing when Judge Woods first entered the courtroom and took his seat upon the bench. President Debs and the other defendants were present and in various attitudes of anxious interest listened to the reading of the decision. With Judge Woods, Judge Jenkins occupied the bench and many prominent attorneys were present to hear the outcome of the proceedings against the leaders of the great railway strike of last summer.

Defendants Guilty of Contempt.

The finding of the court is that the defendants are guilty of contempt but that any punishment instigated would not be cumulative. In other words there were two cases before the court, one for contempt and the other for violation of the federal statute. The latter cause is merged into the former.

After announcing that the defendants were found guilty as charged the judge said it was not in accordance with procedure in such cases to permit the defendants to say why sentence should not be passed, but in this case the court would allow it.

Fussing of Sentence.

In sentencing the several defendants Judge Woods said punishment should be neither vindictive or trivial. "These men were in willful contempt, under what legal advice I should like very much to know. These men were the leaders in a great measure of law breakers, and are responsible as leaders. Ignorant men who followed them have been punished. Mr. Debs is more responsible than my other. He is a man of marked ability and power over men. I feel inclined to discriminate between him and the others. The punishment against all defendants except Debs is three months in jail and against Debs six months."

Give a Time to Appeal.

After the murmur of excitement over the sentence had subsided the court announced that the punishment was not to take effect for 10 days, in which time the defendants' attorneys will prepare an appeal. The prospective prisoners after a short consultation with their attorneys left the court room.

The defendants with their official positions in the A. R. U. are President Debs, Vice President Howard, Secretary Kelliher, Treasurer Rogers, Directors Elliott, Burns, McVean, Hogan and Gillian.

MIGHT AS WELL DISBAND.

If Judge Woods's Decision Is Law Unions May as Well Quit.

CHICAGO, 16.—Eugene V. Debs said regarding Judge Woods' decision:

"I am a law-abiding man, and I will abide by the law as construed by the judges. But if Judge Woods' decision is the law all labor organizations may as well disband. According to him, every strike is a conspiracy and is unlawful. Even if our wages are reduced 10 per cent and two or more of us decide to quit rather than to submit to the reduction, we are guilty of conspiracy. Of course he says strikes are all right if they are peaceful, but who can tell a strike? In the strike of last summer every effort was made by the leaders to prevent violence. We warned the men to respect property rights and even to keep off the right of way of the railway companies. Judge Woods intimates that this advice was given for the effect it would have on the public, and that the strikers were not expected to heed it. What right has he to draw such an inference? There is nothing in the evidence to support it."

When Violence Will Follow

VAN LEUVEN PLEADS GUILTY.

Sudden and Unexpected End of the Noted Case.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Dec. 17.—The Van Leuven pension fraud case has come to a sudden end. The jury for the trial of the Leuven case was sworn in this morning, and the taking of testimony was to begin at 2 o'clock. At this hour, counsel for the defense and government were in consultation, and did not come into court until after 3 o'clock. Van Leuven then pleaded guilty before the jury waiting to try him, and they returned a verdict accordingly. Following this the motion for a new trial and arrest of judgment in the Rankin case was withdrawn. Guilty was the plea to three other indictments. The scene was an affecting one, and during Senator Smith's plea, for mercy Van Leuven was in tears and a deathlike silence prevailed. Judge Shiras spoke briefly and sentenced Van Leuven to two years in the penitentiary for each offense and also to pay a fine of $1,000 in each of the four cases. Imprisonment was fixed to begin on the same day in all four cases, so Van Leuven will serve but two years.

Carl Schurz Re-Elected.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Carl Schurz was re-elected president of the National Civil Service Reform league. George McAnany of New York was elected secretary, and Silas W. Burling treasurer.

Lynchers Not Guilty.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 15.—The jury in the lynching case brought in a verdict of not guilty in the cases of Richardson and Smith, and holds pressed the text of the case.

SPANIARDS WARNED.

EXCESSIVE DUTIES ON OUR GOODS MUST BE STOPPED.

If a Policy of Retaliation Will Be Inaugurated—That Same Policy Will Be Put in Force Against All Other Nations Which Discriminate—Germany on the List.

MADRID, Dec. 18.—Mr. Taylor, the United States minister, had an important conference with Senor Griensar, minister of foreign affairs, relative to the imposition of excessive duties upon imports from Cuba from the United States. He informed the senor that he had been directed by his government to inform the government of Spain that if it persisted in exacting these discriminating duties the action could be regarded by the president only as inviting the exercise by him of the power of retaliation conferred by the act of 1890. This threat has caused a commotion in ministerial circles.

GERMANY NEXT.

Her Restrictions on American Products Will Not Be Tolerated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The action of the state department, indicated in the cablegram from Madrid, in warning the Spanish government of its intention to resort to retaliation should Spain continue its present policy with respect to American exports to Cuba, will doubtless have the effect to bring at once to a focus the long drawnout negotiations which have been in progress with unsatisfactory results. The Spanish government has two tariff schedules—one the minimum tariff permitted to countries with which Spain is upon amicable trade relations; the other the maximum tariff imposed upon countries which do not in the matter of duties. The maximum tariff being imposed upon American exports had the effect to almost altogether cut them off and so exactly fulfilled its purpose. We had for years supplied Spanish West Indies with their flour, but the duty upon this product was prohibitory. To make the situation more unbearable Canadians were favored with the minimum tariff and in an incredibly short space of time assumed the entire flour trade with Cuba which had so long been enjoyed by our own millers. Having reasoned in vain with the Spanish minister at Washington, and, through Minister Taylor, with the Spanish foreign office, Secretary Gresham, in casting about for a remedy, hit upon the act of Aug. 30, 1890. This act, while primarily intended to provide for the inspection of meats for exportation and to prevent the importation of harmful articles of food, also included in its fifth section a grant of power to the president

Yield to Spanish Demands

Probably Unequaled in Any Extent

by any legislation in the history of congress. Plainly stated, it authorized an actual embargo to be declared at the discretion of the president. The secretary of state has refrained from the assertion of the power conferred by this law as long as there was reasonable expectation that the Spanish government would yield to ordinary methods of diplomacy. But our commerce is being menaced in a new quarter, namely, in Germany, where the government has begun the imposition of a system of most galling restrictions upon American imports that are scarcely he longer disguised, and it is felt to be necessary to begin the assertion of the reserve power of retaliation lodging in the president, and of course this necessitates the beginning with Spain, the first offender.

ANDY BOWEN DEAD.

The Fugilist Receives a Fatal Blow in a Prize Fight.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 16.—Andy Bowen, pugilist, died shortly after 7 a. m. from the effects of the blow received in his prize fight Friday night with George Lavigne, the "Saginaw Kid." Bowen did not recover consciousness from the time his helpless body was sent to the floor by the blows over the heart and on the chin. All efforts to restore physical consciousness revive him were in vain, and he breathed his last amid the sobs of his mother and wife and the prayers of Father Delaney.

Lavigne, who struck the fatal blow, was arrested and assigned on the charge of murder, the seconds and Referee Duffy also being held as accessories. All were released on heavy bail.

HIRSHFIELD SETTLES.

The Montana Millionaire Buys Off His Wife For $31,000.

FARGO, N. D., Dec. 17.—Aaron Hirshfield, the Helena banker made famous by the recent trial in Fargo, where his wife and all of his relatives figured in the case, has made a settlement with Mrs. Hirshfield which will eventually give him his freedom. It is understood he is to pay her $31,000 and she is to drop all further claims against him. The payment of the money contains with it the provision that all expenses incurred by Mrs. Hirshfield during the trial are to be borne by her. It is expected that Judge McConnell will now grant the divorce separating the Hirshfield's original claim against the banker was $76,000.

Sodalitie Flack Dropped.

DENVER, Dec. 17.—The Federation of Labor convention has organized. That part of the platform known as the socialist plank was voted down by a good majority.

Seeley Fined Guilty.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Samuel C. Seeley, the former bookkeeper of the Shoe and Leather National bank charged with aiding the late Frederick Baker in robbing the bank of $500,000, was arraigned in the United States circuit court and pleaded guilty. He was remanded until Friday for sentence.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Dec. 11.

The struggle over the bill to authorize railroad pooling was terminated in the house by the passage of the bill by the decisive vote of 166 to 110. The Cooper substitute, which placed the entire control of the conditions of pooling in the hands of the interstate commerce commission, was defeated, as were also all subsequent efforts to amend and recommit it, and the bill passed as reported from the committee. Several attempts were made to defeat the bill by filibustering, but they, also, were unsuccessful.

The consideration of the Nicaragua canal bill was continued in the senate. Dolph made a long speech in favor of the bill, in the course of which he advocated the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Mr. Morrill of Vermont made some remarks, in which he criticised the currency inflation bills reported adversely from the finance committee.

Wednesday, Dec. 12.

The house entered upon the consideration of the urgent deficiency bill. The motion to strike out the appropriation for the collection of the income tax was defeated by a vote of 54 to 197.

In the senate an unsuccessful attempt was made by Senator Gray to have taken up the bill to strike out all differential duties in favor of refined sugar. Senator Vest moved to take up the cloture resolution, but his motion was lost 34 to 34.

Thursday, Dec. 13.

The house passed three appropriation bills—the urgent deficiency, fortifications and military academy—and made fair progress on the pension bill. Mr. Cockran secured a record making vote on the appropriation for the collection of the income tax by moving to recommit the bill with instructions to strike it out, but the motion was defeated by 130 majority, the vote standing 49 to 169. The fortifications bill as passed carried $1,979,057, $5,479,645 less than the estimates. The pension bill carries $141,381,570, $200,000 less than the estimates, and $10,200,000 less than the appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Practically all the time of the senate was consumed in the discussion of the bill to establish a national university at Washington and the Nicaragua canal bill.

Friday, Dec. 14.

The time of the house was consumed with debate on the pension appropriation bill. The bill was passed without amendment. The Hitt resolution of inquiry calling on the secretary of state for the correspondence relating to the payment of $425,000 to Great Britain in connection with the fur seal controversy was adopted. The evening session was devoted to the consideration of private pension bills.

The senate was not in session.

Monday, Dec. 17.

The bill to protect forest reservations, which has been a bone of contention in the house for some time, passed by a good majority. The balance of the time was spent on the army appropriation bill.

The senate spent most of the day discussing the Nicaragua canal bill.

HAYWARD AND BLIXT.

Suspected Murderers of Miss Ging in Court at Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 18.—Claus A. Blixt plead not guilty to the charge of murdering Catherine Ging. His defense will be temporary insanity, brought on by alcoholic stimulants. This will, however, tell all he knows of the matter on the stand.

Later in the day Harry Hayward was brought over from St. Paul and arraigned. His attorney asked for further time to plead and the court allowed him until Saturday next. Hayward was then placed in the Minneapolis jail.

Ole Erickson has been discharged from the custody of the police. Constable has proved at Iowa Falls was sufficient to give him his release, and the police have no further use for him.

IS the speaker-ship contest Gibbs appears to be in the lead at present but—keep your eye on Van Sant. He will come pretty near being a winner at the slow down.

CHIEF JUSTICE GILFILLAN died on Sunday after a brief illness. He had not been in the very best of health during the past fall. He was one of the leading minds of the age and will be missed in our state.

ONE candidate for engrossing clerk of the house, N. H. Ingersoll, of the Brainard Dispatch, ought to get there. No more faithful worker in the cratt than he, and no one more deserving of consideration from the party. However, the most deserving do not always get the loaves and fishes. We trust, however, that in this case N. H. will make the riffle.

A RED HOT ROAST.

That was a red hot roast that W. W. Erwin administered to the Cleveland administration, while summing up for the defense in the Van Leuven pension case. Mr. Erwin is a master of invective, and he roasted to the queen's taste Cleveland's spy system, which costs the government more to carry on than it would to pay all the pensions that are justly due.

THE speakership situation this week seems to indicate that ex-senator Van Sant has made substantial gains and seems to have an excellent fighting chance. While Gibbs would without a doubt make a good speaker, he is no better man than Van-Sant, and has already been honored with that position. Capt. Van Sant is a hustler from way back, one of the best men in the legislative body to convene next month, and should he be chosen, would at once take rank among the very best that has ever served in that capacity. No better man could be found in that body than Sam R. Van Sant.

He Did Right.

There has been some kicking on the action of Gov. Nelson in the following case, and the Pioneer Press has the following explanation which shows that Governor Nelson was in the right of it:

"Gov. Nelson says with reference to the pardoning of George Miller, of Otter Tail county, who was convicted of violating the game law in killing a deer out of season, that after careful inquiry he found that Miller was an old soldier in destitute circumstances and ignorant of the law of the state. In view of these circumstances and the fact that he killed the deer only a few days after the closing of the season, the governor thinks he was justified in granting the pardon."

Of the new McIntosh movement for county division the Fertile Journal says:

"The latest division movement is being made by the McIntosh town boomers. Their latest scheme is to have a county of 24 townships cut off and of course with McIntosh as the county seat. Fertile is counted in with the new county. This division would not have the remotest show of carrying and is only throwing chaff to the wind. The people of McIntosh should profit by their past experience and get together and work on the only plan that will carry. A word to the wise is sufficient."

The following interesting item concerning a Crookston minister appears in the Moorhead News of Thursday: Rev. H. W. Fraser left last evening for Crookston, his brother wiring him to come last night without fail. Mr. Fraser had intended to leave here this morning at 4 o'clock for his old home, as previously stated in the News, and this urgent call somewhat disconcerted him and will delay him at least a day. His brother is pastor of the Presbyterian church at Crookston and is engaged to Miss Estelle Demars. It is surmised that the call has some connection with this interesting event of the near future. Miss Demars has been teaching school at Fergus Falls, and has been offered to give it up on account of the serious illness of her mother, who lives at Hallock.

OUR PROSPECTS.

THE JOURNAL has it upon undoubted authority that a large colony of Dunkards are headed this way, to arrive next spring to purchase land and make their homes in Polk county. There is already a colony of these people in North Dakota and they are said to be a very desirable class of people, sober, industrious and upright—just the people that will add to the wealth and importance of a country; just the class this country needs. These people are said to be financially able to buy farms and pay the cash for them, also able to provide for themselves until they can raise a crop and will not have to run in debt for machinery and such things, nor depend upon some store-keeper to supply them with groceries and provisions "until after I thresh." Aside from this sign of the times, there has been quite a good many transfers of farms to people who have come to make their home here during the past fall and winter so far. While there has not been a great flourish of arms about this, many sales have been quietly made. And then, too, the prospects all point unquestionably to a far better year next year for farmers and laboring men, so that as a whole the prospects for the coming year are better this year than they were a year ago at this time. Notwithstanding the extremely hard times of the year of 1894, collectors report a better average of collections than before for several years, and many farmers whom we know are able to say this fall for the first time in years: "I am entirely out of debt." Everything considered, we have every reason to be hopeful—more so than in sometime before.

Start a Pork Factory.

While we are figuring on how to build up a city we should not lose sight of the fact that a pork packing industry would go a long way toward furnishing a market that would be of great benefit to farmers in this vicinity. Such an industry should be encouraged, even if it should require a bit of a bonus to do it. Crookston ought to find a ready market for all the pork that can be raised in this vicinity.

THE TARIFF OUTLOOK.

It is urged in some high quarters of Democratic influence that, while their brief term of authority remains, the Democrats should make haste to enact a severer specific reform in the tariff which they have just put into operation. These amendments would be in the main take the form of separate bills adding various articles of raw material to the free list, and would deal particularly with sugar, coal and lumber. It is argued that if this could be accomplished, the tariff would be left in a position which neither party could well alter for a period of years. The principal argument against such a reopening of tariff legislation lies in the sensitiveness of the long-suffering business community. Consumers and trade are shaping themselves to the new order of things, and do not want to be disturbed even in the slightest measure by further tariff changes. It is to be believed that Congress will respect this unanimous sentiment that pervades the business world, and will not attempt to alter the existing tariff except as regards a few typographical errors and other minor inadvertances.—From "The Progress of the World," December Review of Reviews.

The Review of Reviews for December brings to the attention of its readers a remarkable state of things in South American international relations. It has been known for years that Great Britain has persistently encroached on territory belonging to the little republic of Venezuela; but few Americans have been aware of the extent of these encroachments. The editor of the Review of Reviews asserts that England is now occupying a vast region which only a few years ago she acknowledged to belong to Venezuela, and that in fact she has no lawful claim to any territory whatever west of the Essequibo River, although she has acquired the coast line as far west as the Orinoco. The editor's charges seem to be supported by the statements of reliable English publications; the Cyclopedia of Geography, for example, computed the area of British Guinea a few years ago as 60,000 square miles, while the present area is given as 109,000 square miles by all British statistical works, although there have been no cessions to England in that region. As Great Britain has refused arbitration of the points in dispute, the Review of Reviews advocates the appointment of a joint commission by the United States, Mexico and the South American republics to investigate Venezuela's claims, and that such as may appear well founded be sustained by the United American powers against England.

ANY GOOD MAN.

Will be Supported by Mr. McInnes in Preference to Washburn.

(St. Paul Dispatch.)

"If they will bring up some good man besides Washburn for the senate I must certainly support him," said Representative-elect Neil McInnes, of Duluth, at the Merchants this morning. "Washburn may be a good man and I have nothing personal against him, but we have a number of good men in this state who would like to be senator, and if I looks to me as though six years was long enough for one man. If we are to give all our senators from twelve to eighteen years we will cut off the ambitions of many man just about fitted for the position and just as deserving of it as the one who holds it."

It seems after all that John J. Furlong will not sit in the next legislature. On the face of the returns he was supposed to be elected by a majority of one or two, but a recount shows that his opponent got there by 13 majority. This gives the Republicans one more in the house and the Pops one less—though Furlong is a simon pure Democrat all right enough.

The following from the Wadena Journal has our hearty approval: "The Journal is only too glad to say a word in commendation of David Ramaley, of St. Paul, expert state printer, who is a candidate for reappointment. Mr. Ramaley's most competent; he is a veteran in the printing trade, and is a gentleman whom it is a delight to know. We hope he may continue in the office, for he cannot be surpassed."

THE GRAND ARMY.

The Grand Army of the Republic occupies the most unique position of any society now in existence in that its ranks can never be recruited except by enlisting some old soldier who for some reason or other has never joined and when, in a few years, that noble band whose efforts preserved the nation created by Washington and his noble army of patriots has passed away the Grand Army will cease to exist. But its work can be taken up and carried on by the Sons of Veterans, an organization no less honorable, no less useful. In view of the fact of the rapid decadence of the Grand Army, the Sons should redouble their efforts to recruit their ranks because it will not be many years now when their order will be all there is left of the Grand Army. Every young man who is eligible should take just pride in this matter and enroll his name on the muster roll of the order and all who have done so should awake to renewed vigor in the great work their fathers began.

WHOLESOME RESULTS.

Blunders and misfortunes followed one another thick and fast. Organized labor to some extent declared that it bore a grudge against the Democratic administration on the ground of its policy in the great railroad strikes. The independent voters of the east had various causes of their own for believing that the defeat of the Democrats would be salutary. So there arose a great tidal wave which swept the whole country, excepting only some portions of the South where the action and reaction of public opinion are never sensitively registered by means of the ballot box. The result as a whole is encouraging, because it has demonstrated in a hundred ways a revival of intelligent interest in politics, and a capacity on the part of the American people to recognize moral issues and to demand higher and better things in public life and affairs. And this clear verdict for purer politics has been expressed in such a manner that no one has mistaken it as merely the victory of one party over another. The effect will be to put both parties on their good behavior. The Republicans are not boastful, for they have learned by very recent experience that their use of power will be held to strict account.—From "The Progress of the World." THE NEW YEAR.

Upon the threshold of the year which divides the old from the new it is well to pause and ask ourselves: "What have we accomplished for good during the year that has past and gone? Has the world been better for my having lived in it and wherein has it been so?" The merchant, the business man carefully looks over his books to ascertain his financial standing—to see if he has made a loss or a gain and how much? It was never the intention of that wise Creator that mankind should be wholly absorbed with the financial side of life. His is a higher, nobler destiny, capable of higher enjoyments than wealth alone can give, and his duties are not circumscribed within the narrow limits of moneygetting. As man is immortal he should not allow the cares of this life to rob him of the joys that pertain to the higher—the better life. He is surrounded in this world with the sorrows and the distress incident to humanity, and it is a part of that higher life to do all in his power to alleviate as much of it as he may. Man is also a social animal and owes a debt to his fellow man that in order to fulfill his higher nature it is incumbent upon him to pay. Every man born into this world has a duty to perform, has a mission to fulfill and he must true to his high destiny if the year that has passed and gone into history has no noble deed to credit up to him, no act of self-denial by which a fellow being was made happier, was made better. Sometimes it is very little that we may do yet that little a vast deal more than we will spend the time from the all-absorbing money-getting habit to do. Earthly joys, earthly honors are few and transitory and as nothing compared with the great eternity that just beyond this life. Happy we if we can realize this and live for it.

Limit of tickets will be extended upon certain conditions, which information you can obtain from your ticket agents.

Flax Seed for Sale.

We have in our hands for sale about 150 bushels of flax that we will sell at full prices. The call for flax seed next spring will no doubt send the price up to $2 or in that vicinity and those who contemplate sowing flax would do well to secure the seed while it can be had at full prices. Enough for an acre or two of flax for seed to more than exhaust the supply yet on hand. Call at this office and see sample.

K. C. Latta & Co., druggists of Paton, Iowa, write the Heller Proprietary Co., of Blair, Neb., as follows: "Gents—For several years we have been selling your Haller's Sure Cure Cough Syrup upon a guarantee to refund money in all cases where it failed to benefit. Your claims for this excellent remedy have been fully verified, for I have yet to receive the first complaint." F. L. Kermott, Crookston, and guarantees it. We hereby promise to refund all money paid us for Haller's remedies if you are not benefitted by their use. These remedies consist of Sure Cure Cough Syrup, Australian Salve, Pain Paralyzer, Sarsaparilla and Burdock, Condition Powders, Barb Wire Liniment, Corn Cure and Little Germ Pills, and are absolutely guaranteed by us. You take no chances. F. L. Kermott, Druggist.

PROGRESS OF CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

The preserves of the spoilsmen grow narrower from time to time, and the civil service reformers have never had better reason for encouragement and for renewed effort than they find in the existing situation. The election in New York is destined to result in the introduction of business-like methods into most of the departments of state administration while the overwhelming defeat of Tammany in New York City, means a complete reorganization of the whole municipal service in strict accordance with the merit system and the principles of a sound and economical municipal administration. In other parts of the country the elections have tended to promote the views of those who are severe critics of our pernicious American system of using public offices as private and party spoils. The public temper so displayed in this election will strengthen the hands of all workers for a sound public service.—From "The Progress of the World," December Review of Revies.

To California.

If you are going to California to remain for the winter, take the Northern Pacific and Shasta route, and go comfortably in warm, double windowed, vestibuled trains, having dining cars that remain with the trains.

You will see via this line the finest scenery in the United states. No other route to California can compare with it in this respect.—this is fact, not fiction.

Mt. Adams, Mt. Rainier, more than 14,000 feet high, Mt. Hood, Mt. St. Helens, Mt. Shasta, form a group of mountain peaks that can be seen from the cars, and constitute the grandest mountain scenery of this country.

Call on any Northern Pacific agent of Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba or write for rates and particulars to Chas S. Fee, Gen. Pass. Ag't., St. Paul, Minn. [31-38]

You Should Get It.

Should get what? Why, The Rev. Irl R. Hicks' splendid Almanac for 1895. He has kindly sent to this office a copy of the same, and we speak advisedly in saying that it is a rare publication—the very latest and best of all that has emanated from the pen and brain and heart of this well-known friend of the public. The history of this man's work—now an open book to all America—and a casual glance at his Almanac for 1895, convinces us that this vitally useful and instructive book ought to find its way into every shop, store, office and home in the land. The price of the book—only 25 cents—would not to us mean knowledge believed for any one thing more profitably. It contains 84 pages, printed on fine book paper, with elegant covers in colors. It is for sale by all newsdealers. This fine Almanac is given as a premium to every yearly subscriber to the Rev. Irl R. Hicks' well-known and deservedly popular paper, Word and Works. This unique journal is a peerless educator of the masses, and is fast becoming a household guardian and necessity in the homes of America. Those who want to keep up with all the advanced thought of the age in science, religion and all social, commercial, industrial and domestic subjects, should subscribe for Word and Works. Subscription only $1.00 a year. You can send for both direct to Word and Works Publishing Co., St. Louis, Mo.

R. G. Woodman offers a bed room set to any couple who will get married in his show window.

Senator H. Burkhardt came up from Wabasha last week on a business trip of a week's duration.

H. C. Misner and wife came down from Euclid, last Thursday, to attend the entertainment at the opera house.

Miss Sarah Brevick is up from Minneapolis visiting her sisters, Mrs. Fred Anderson and Miss Bessie Brevick.

So far this winter we have had no very cold weather to speak of. December weather has been especially very fine

Asst. chief engineer Hoagland was in the city on Friday looking at the work on the new steel bridge over Sixth street.

Sheriff Grundysen went to Stillwater last week with James Stark, who was sentenced to a term in the prison for larceny.

Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Brown, of Cleveland, Ohio, visited Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mix, last week, on their way back from a visit to Hallock.

Chief Ryan was over from Grand Forks last week looking for a sneak thief named Andrew Peterson. He found his man and took him back to the Forks.

The daughter of Osmund Osmundson, Miss Carrie, was married at the family residence at Mallory, on Wednesday evening, of last week, to John Groshang.

The remaining child of John Olstad, a four months old babe, died at Mentor last Wednesday. He lost his wife and a child only a few months previously. Mr. Olstad is indeed bereft.

Conductor Henry Murray rejoices in the arrival of a bright little girl at his house on Thursday of last week. Mother and child are doing nicely and Henry is as well as could be expected.

A. G. Gallasch, president of the Thief River Falls bank, is attending to business in the city this week.

Mr. Hubert Ward, who came up from Ada not long since to bury his wife has been very ill ever since he returned home, so much so that his life has been despared of.

The revival meetings that were held at the Baptist church every evening last week were so successful that it was concluded to continue them this week; Rev. McDermid conducts them.

From tillage to market, Farm, Stock and Home suggests, directs, cautions and aids the farmer more than any other agricultural paper we know of. We send it and the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL one year for only $1.50. [36-40]

Comrade H. C. Bovilck was up from Fertile last week. He had been on a trip to Red River and came in by way of Fisher. He is in the collection business and finds collections better than he would think they could be after such a season's crop and prices.

Rube Allyn did not have a very large audience at the opera house on Thursday evening, but the entertainment is said to have been one of the finest that has been given in this city for some time. Mr. Allyn is especially fine in his specialty work and the audience were well pleased.

Hugh Thompson was the successful bidder for the city bonds, the council, at the adjourned meeting on Wednesday evening, accepting his bid, which was par less a commission of $50. This is as it should be, according well with the principle of patronizing home industry every time.

If any of our readers have failed to get satisfactory profits from horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, bees, fruits, grain or vegetables, they should commence at once and read every number of the Farm, Stock & Home during the coming year. If ordered in connection with this paper its cost will not be felt. [36-40]

The most sanguine expectations of all who predicted snow for Saturday night were doomed to disappointment. Every indication pointed to it and yet it did not snow. The first winter month almost gone and still no snow—no cold weather to speak of. It is tough upon the clothing men and upon the wood and coal dealer, but the poor man can stand the racket pretty well, thank you. He feels as though he could stand this sort of thing all winter very well.

Wm. Hooper went out to the town of Knute last week to get a car-load of iron-wood poles for fire-wood.

Our combination offer with Farm, Stock and Home should not be overlooked. A year's subscription to the grand agricultural paper means a 384 page volume, size 11½ by 15 inches, that to any farmer is well worth $5.00, yet we give it and this paper one year for only $1.50. [36-40]

Deputy Sheriff Marvin Losey, together with A. Buckingham, will start a bank at Twin Valley, in Norman county, as soon as Losey's term expires, Jan. 1st. The boys are A 1 business men and no doubt will do well down there, as Twin Valley is a thriving point, with a good country around it. The JOURNAL wishes them success.

S. B. Palmer was up from Lockheart last week chatting with friends and attending to other business. S. B. is very much interested in hog-raising and is trying to find out how to raise them without any expense, as he thinks that in order to make pork at a profit that is about what will have to be done. His idea is a clover patch in the summer for hogs and the slaughter house before cold weather sets down too heavy.

Andrew Thoraldson, one of the crowd that left last fall with Rev. Sangstad for Bella Coola, arrived in the city last week, glad to get back to civilization. He gives a dismal account of the condition of things at New Norway, and from his story one would infer that all who went would be glad to get back if they were able to do so, and no doubt many will succeed in doing so. It seems that they did not find such an Eden as they thought they would.

No farmer in this country should fail to take his local paper and at least one agricultural journal. No matter how many papers he is now getting his list should not be considered complete if it does not contain the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and that excellent agricultural paper, the Farm, Stock and Home published at Minneapolis, Minn., both of which can be had one year for the small sum of $1.50. Sheriff-elect Andrew Steenerson has appointed Arthur Tooplis, of Red Lake Falls, his deputy. Mr. Tooplis is competent to fill the position creditably and he will undoubtedly do so.

The Ada Post will indulge in a campfire next Saturday evening, to which the boys of the Col. Cobham Post are invited, as many of them as can make it convenient to attend. The department commander and the junior vice commander are expected, and all who go can expect to have a grand, good time.

Sheriff-elect Andrew Steenerson will have his office at No. 6 north Main street, in the building that has been so long occupied by Eli with his insurance business, just as soon as he is inaugurated on Jan. 1st. He has his office nicely papered up and painted and seems determined to give unto the sheriff's office as cheerful an aspect as the circumstances will admit.

The Columbia Desk Calendar.

For ten years the desk calendar issued by the Pope Manufacturing Company has held a unique place among business helpers. Each daily leaf during that time has taught its quiet lesson of the value of better roads and outdoors exercise, and especially the benefits of bicycling. The calendar for 1895, which is just issued, is even brighter than its predecessors in appearance, as clever artists have added dainty silhouette and sketch to the usual wise and witty contributions that have before give this popular calendar its charm. It can be had for five 2-cent stamps from the Pope Manufacturing Company, Hartford, Conn., or from any Columbia bicycle agency.

GILFILLAN DEAD.

Minnesota's Chief Justice Passes Away at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 17.—James Gilfillan, chief justice of the state supreme court, died Sunday morning at 6:04. He was in his 65th year. He had been confined to his house for about two months. For a long time it was supposed that his indisposition was but temporary, and the result of overwork. During the last few weeks, however, a serious disease of the liver became apparent to his physician, the true nature of which seems to be a mystery. The presence of all his family consoled his latter days.

Judge Gilfillan was born in Bannockburn, Scotland, Nov. 9, 1829. His parents removed with him to New York in 1830, and there he received an academic education. In 1853 he was admitted to the bar. The same year he began the practice of law in Buffalo. In January, 1857, he arrived in St. Paul. He has been chief justice since 1875.

SIR JOHN THOMPSON.

The Canadian Premier Expired at Windsor Castle After a Privy Council Meeting.

WINDSOR, Eng., Dec. 14.—Sir John Thompson, the Canadian prime minister, expired at Windsor after the meeting of the privy council, at which he was sworn in as a member.

After the privy council meeting Sir John adjourned with the minister and others to luncheon. Shortly after this he became suddenly ill and expired almost immediately.

It transpired during the evening that Sir John has long been a sufferer from heart disease, and to his fatty degeneration. Among his colonial friends in London his death did not come with as much surprise as it did elsewhere, as among his friends his heart trouble was known.

CHIEF GALL DEAD.

He Was a Leading Participant of the Custer Massacre.

PIERRE, S. D., Dec. 14.—The death of Gall, one of the noted Sioux chiefs, is reported from Standing Rock. He was next to Sitting Bull in rank of chiefs. His death resulted from a general breaking down. Gall was an active chief in command of the Indians in the Custer massacre, 20 years ago, and was quite old at the time of his death.

CRADLED ACHILLES.

THE TINY RIVULET THAT DEVELOPS INTO THE MIGHTY MISSISSIPPI.

Dr. Elliott Cones' Recent Observations on the True Source of the Father of Waters—Six Miles From Lake Itasca the Great River Rises From the Ground.

Dr. Elliott Cones, the somewhat eccentric ornithologist, scientist and theorophist, recently visited the headwaters of the Mississippi river and confirmed the previous report of Nicollet and Brower that the real source of the Father of Waters is the Cradled Achilles, a small stream that rises from springs about six miles from Lake Itasca and flows into the lake. An attempt was recently made by Captain Glazier to show that the real source of the Mississippi was a small lake he modestly named Lake Glazier, but Dr. Cones has verified in the minutest particulars the observations of Nicollet and Brower.

Starting at Deer lake, Itasca county, Minn., Dr. Cones proceeded up the river to Lake Itasca in a birch bark canoe. He rounded the lake after his days' paddling through an unbroken wilderness, and camping at Schoolcraft island in the lake he made a thorough exploration of the vicinity. Lake Itasca is a beautiful sheet of water in the very heart of the primeval forest and some 1,470 feet above the sea level. The whole Itascan basin, comprising some 35 square miles, has been set apart as a public park by the state of Minnesota, and game and timber are both protected from depredations. The lake is about three miles long, is shaped like the head of an elk and was once called Elk lake by the Indians. Dr. Cones found where the Ojibwa Indians entered the lake and followed the stream until it was so narrow he could step across it.

Lake Itasca was discovered about 1820 by William Morrison, a fur trader who was little interested in the subject. In 1832 Henry R. Schoolcraft, the historian, and his party were guided to the lake by an Indian, and Schoolcraft named it Lake Itasca from parts of the Latin words "Veritas caput," signifying in very poor Latin the "true head" of the Mississippi. Schoolcraft and his party were satisfied that they had found the true source of the great river, but four years later the French explorer, J. N. Nicollet, found the still source which he called the Cradled Achilles and which he declared was the real infant Mississippi. He also mapped the entire Itascan basin with such accuracy that the observations of subsequent explorers merely confirmed ever point he made concerning the region. One of the oldest facts concerning the source of the great river is that the Mississippi flows due north for 50 miles before beginning its general rush southward the gulf of Mexico, some 2,655 miles distant.

Not many years ago another complete survey of the Itascan region was made by Hon. J. V. Brower under the auspices of the Minnesota State Historical society, and through the efforts of the society the state was induced to preserve the interesting region in its natural state by reserving it for a state park.

"The whole subject," says Dr. Cones, "was befogged and thrown into confusion by a certain Captain Glazier, who, apparently for no other purpose than to advertise himself, published his alleged discovery of a new and true source of the Mississippi. By reducing the size of Lake Itasca, ignoring Nicollet's Cradled Achilles, magnifying a small side lake, which he called Lake Glazier, and by stretching out one of the feeders of the latter he produced a distorted map which certainly imposed on the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain. My recent investigations have verified the observations of Nicollet and Brower, and I walked along the bed of the stream termed the infant Mississippi by Captain Glazier and walked dry shod, for the stream was dried up."

Dr. Cones' statements carry decided weight for the reason that he ranks high among the scientists of the United States. He was born in Pennsylvania, N. H., Sept. 9, 1843, and was graduated from Columbian university an A. B. in 1861 and an M. D. in 1863. He then served a year in hospital work in Washington. He was appointed an assistant surgeon in the United States army, and while on duty in Arizona made valuable researches concerning the natural history of the region. In 1872 he did valuable work as surgeon and naturalist of the United States northern boundary survey commission, and in 1875 he was secretary and naturalist of the geological and geographical survey of the territories. He was elected to the National Academy of Sciences in 1877, and belongs to nearly all the important scientific societies of the United States and Europe. He has written many books on ornithology, zoology and kindred subjects, contributed 40,000 words and six years' work to the Century Dictionary and at last year's meeting of the American Ornithologists'

Profoundly Grateful

Symptoms of Cancer Removed—Rheumatism Cured

A Chicago Clergyman's Faith in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"O. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Dear Sirs: I am profoundly impressed with the medical virtues of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was threatened with cancer, and disagreeable eruptions on my body and other places. The cancer was appearing on my lip. Providentially I obtained a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and by the time it was gone, the bad symptoms had nearly disappeared. I have used four bottles, and I believe it has cured me.

Saved Me From Premature Death.

I am now almost 79 years of age and I work like a tiger. And I know that Hood's Sarsaparilla has had much to do with my vigor and strength. I recommended it to my wife, who had suffered so much with rheumatic troubles, Dislikes the Bicycle.

The latest opposition to the bicycle comes from an utterly unexpected quarter—the Thames boatmen. "Shiver them bicycles; they've ruined my business! Instead of a hundred boats out on a fine Sunday, each with a young lass in the stern sheets and her beau at the oars, not 20 put out from the river. My old customers wheel over the bridges instead of rowing under them."—St. Stephen's Review.

The report of the Minnesota fish commission to the governor makes a very favorable showing for the year. The total number of fry distributed in 1894 was 32,812,500, and the cost of maintaining hatcheries was $4,868.04, or the rate of .15 cents per 1,000. In some states the cost has been as high as 30 cents.

ALLOWED TO INTERVENE.

Northern Pacific Made a Party in the Grain Rate Case.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 18.—Judge Kerr has handed down an important decision in the matter of the petition of the Northern Pacific Railroad company to be allowed to intervene on the appeal of the Great Northern road from an order of the State Railroad and Warehouse commission, establishing a certain freight rate for grain carried by the Great Northern. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul and the Minneapolis and Omaha roads were also petitioners to be allowed to intervene.

Judge Kerr grants the petition of the Northern Pacific road to intervene, and denies the petition of the Milwaukee and St. Paul and the Omaha road to be accorded the same privilege. Judge Kerr's reason for discriminating in behalf of the Northern Pacific is set forth at some length in his decision, but briefly it is because the Northern Pacific is more nearly the competitor of the Great Northern road, and therefore is interested fully as much in the establishing of a grain rate in Minnesota as the Great Northern road itself.

DOUBLE DROWNING.

Prominent Young People Skate Into a Hole in the Ice.

LITCHFIELD, Minn., Dec. 17.—While skating on Casey's lake in the town of Darwin, five miles from Litchfield, Miss Ellen C. Nelson, a very prominent and estimable young lady, and a young gentleman named James McRaith, were drowned by skating into a hole in the ice.

The Cruiser Ball.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 18.—The social event of the season in Minneapolis was the cruiser ball, the proceeds of which go toward the purchase of a silver service for presentation to the cruiser Minneapolis. Besides the Minneapolis ball, a large number of St. Paul society people were present. The guests included Governor Nelson and staff.

VESSELS LOST.

Steamers Montserrat and Kewenaah Long Overdue at San Francisco.

THE CREWS NUMBERED FIFTY.

At Least Four Other Vessels Wrecked During the Recent Gale.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 18.—That the steam colliers Montserrat and Kewenaw have been lost at sea with all on board is now considered almost a certainty. The Montserrat, from Nanaimo, and the Kewenaw, from Comox, B. C., are both seven days overdue at this port. For several days tugs and coasting steamers all along the northern coast have kept a sharp look out, but no tidings of them have been received. Both vessels were heavily loaded and the prevailing opinion is that they were lost almost together in the terrific gale that raged off Cape Flattery the night they put to sea. The Montserrat, Captain Blackburn, carried a crew of 20 men, and the Kewenaw, Captain Jenkins, also a crew of 20 men.

Other Vessels Missing.

Anxiety is also felt for the barks Germania and Columbia. The Germania, laden with coal, has been out 15 days, and the Columbia, with a cargo of lumber, sailed from Port Blakely 16 days ago. From reports received during the day it is positively known that at least four vessels were wrecked during the gale. The British ship Scottish Dales was dismasted off Cape Flattery, but was picked up by a steamer and towed into Port Townsend. The bark John Wooster was lost off Grays harbor, on the Washington coast. The schooner Garcia was wrecked off Tillamook Rock, and seven of six men are still missing. The schooner W. T. Reid was wrecked in the breakers in an attempt to cross the San Francisco bar. All the steamers and sailing craft that have reached port since the storm report terrible experiences in the gale which prevailed all along the coast north of San Francisco.

THREE WAYS TO GET OUT.

Debs and His Confreres Decide on a Course to Pursue.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—At a conference between President Debs and other American Railway union officials and their attorneys it was decided to make three separate efforts to provide escape for the ex-strike leaders from the jail sentences pronounced by Judge Woods in the contempt proceedings last Friday. The attorneys will ask a writ to secure an appeal to the supreme court, and a writ of error, and will also apply for a writ of habeas corpus. It was believed by American Railway union people here that the defendants' attorneys would meet success in at least one of three attempts to stay execution of the sentence and the opinion was freely expressed that Debs and his associates would not go to jail.

Noted Prospector Dead.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 18.—Jeff Hildreth, the prospector and promoter through whose efforts the Rainy Lake gold regions came into prominence, died at 11:30 o. m. Mr. Jeff Hildreth was 67 years of age and for 20 years had been actively engaged in mining and prospecting. He was the proprietor of the Little American mine at Rainy Lake, and was the man who located the famous Honestake mine in the Black Hills years ago.

To Improve Municipal Morals.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 18.—The clergymen of this city are arranging for the organization of a movement in this city similar to the Lexow plan for the improvement of municipal morals. A union movement has been inaugurated by the local organizations of Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist ministers to take concerted action.

Credited to the Illinois Central.

STOCK CITY, Ia., Dec. 18.—The Illinois Central is believed to be backing a local company that has been organized in Monona county with the avowed purpose of building a railroad from Onawa, the terminus of the Central, to Rever Sioux, Ia., by way from there to Omaha. The Central has for a year been working quietly in this direction.

Double Drowning.

LITCHFIELD, Minn., Dec. 18.—While skating on Casey's lake in the town of Darwin, five miles from Litchfield, Miss Ellen C. Nelson, a very prominent and estimable young lady, and a young gentleman named James McRaith, were drowned by skating into a hole in the ice.

Funeral of Andy Bowen.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18.—The funeral of Andy Bowen, the local lightweight pugilist, who met his death in his fight with George Levigne Friday night was conducted from his late residence at 3 o'clock p. m. It was one of the largest funerals seen in the city for some time.

Earthquake in New York State.

ALBANY, Dec. 18.—Telegraphic communication from Cooymans, 19 miles south of here, tells of a shock of earthquake coming to life in the inmates in that vicinity at 8 a. m. Windows were shaken and doors rattled, but no damage is reported.

Three People Cremated.

GARDINER, Me., Dec. 18.—Amos Martin's house in Windsor, this county, was destroyed by fire and three inmates burned to death. Mrs. William Ready, Millie Foleon, aged 7, and George Foleon, aged 4, were the victims.

THE FIRST LADY OF CALIFORNIA.

Mrs. Budd Dislikes Society, but Loves Study, Photography and Politics.

Husband, home and study are the chief interests in life of Mrs. James H.

MRS. J. H. BUDD.

Budd, wife of the Democratic governor elected governor of California after a long, close and interesting fight. Her husband she says properly considers the greatest man on earth, and she is in thorough sympathy with his political ambition. When he conducted a buckboard campaign through his congressional district some years ago and painted "Vote for Budd" all over the district, she was with him, and she was also with him when he went to Washington later. The couple have no children, and Mrs. Budd takes entire care of their small but cosy home in Stockton. The house is a model of comfort and neatness, and there is no speck of dust in sight anywhere. As a student she is deeply engrossed in electricity, hygiene and the chemistry of food.

Before her marriage to Mr. Budd, over 20 years ago, she was Miss Ione Merrill of Stockton, and the interesting event took place immediately after Mr. Budd's graduation from the University of California. Mrs. Budd is thoroughly posted on parliamentary law, conventions and politics in general, and she is subject to political intuitions that have thus far proved well founded. Long before her husband was endeavoring to secure the gubernatorial nomination she had a presentiment that he would get it, and he got it. She also felt sure that he would be elected, and he did manage to win by a narrow margin.

In personal appearance Mrs. Budd is petite and slender, with big gray eyes, high, intelligent forehead and a mass of brown hair that she does up in the simplest possible way. She has unconventional ideas of dress, and she delights gowns she saw in Washington shocked her very much. She dresses exactly as she pleases in defiance of the mode, abhors social pomp and limits her calling list to her very intimate friends. She is very fond of amateur photography and life in the woods and is a good shot with rifle and shotgun.

LIKE LONDON'S PEOPLE'S PALACE.

Chicago's Proposed Resort Where the Poor May Be Amused and Taught.

Chicago philanthropists who are interested in the welfare of the poor are working hard to raise $100,000 for the purpose of erecting a People's palace, resembling the great London affair that Walter Besant has described in his novels. No definite plans for a building have yet been formulated, but the structure will doubtless be erected on the lines of the London People's palace. The building will be at least three stories high, will contain a library, reading room, amusement hall, chambers etc., and will probably be erected on the West Side of Chicago. The place will be unsectarian and will be under the Young Men's Christian association without the rules and bylaws having a tendency to keep the rougher element away.

REV. JOHN RUSK.

Rev. Dr. John Rusk of the Fullerton Avenue church is one of the strong partisans of the proposed People's palace. "The palace," he says, "is not intended for poor people of both sexes who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows, but who are American citizens, against the insult of rules so common to our so called charitable institutions rules that reduce them in the minds of suspects. Membership will cost but $1 a year, and no entertainment will have an admission fee above 5 cents. At the free school boys and young men will be taught trades, and girls and women will be instructed in cooking, dressmaking, physical culture and home nursing."

One of the features of the palace will be an amusement hall capable of seating 8,000 persons. Here concerts, amateur theatricals, lectures and readings will be given at the nominal admission fee of 5 cents, which will be charged for the purpose of defraying charges. The hall will also be used for dances, and Chimmie and his best girl can enjoy terpsichorean delights to their hearts' content without being subjected to the demoralizing effects of drink and questionable company. In the People's palace no drinks stronger than milk will be sold.

Three Families Murdered by People.

L. L. Hunt, a member of the Missouri legislature, says that while campaigning in St. Lawrence county he just three brothers, Canadian Frenchmen, of the name of Moss, who, with their wives and children, had just left Canada for Benson's mines and stopped over night at a hotel at Russell. The children of the three families numbered 21. It was a sight amusing to read on the hotel register: "Mr. Moss, wife and 8 children; Mr. Moss, wife and 7 children; Mr. Moss, wife and 6 children."

WHERE COTTON REIGNS.

Interesting Exhibit of the Texas Cotton Palace in Hustling Waco.

The mammoth Texas cotton palace was recently thrown open to the public in Waco, and cotton now reigns as king in the Lone Star State. He is rather a cheap king just now and is doing business on a 5 cent basis, but nevertheless thousands of his subjects are flocking to Waco daily to see him. Waco is a hustling young city in the heart of the cotton growing region of Texas. In 1888 20,000 acres in McLennan county, of which Waco is county seat, produced 20,726 bales of cotton, valued at $983,712.

The cotton palace is the creation of Waco's enterprising citizens, who built it at an expense of $250,000. The building is 400 feet long and 500 feet broad and is filled with one of the most interesting cotton, agricultural and manufacturing exhibits ever displayed. The interior decorations, pictures and statuary are nearly all constructed of the natural products of the state, and some of the pictures made of leaves and grain are works of art.

Texas has now become one of the greatest cotton growing states in the

THE WACO COTTON PALACE.

Union. Upward of 5,000,000 acres of cotton land are under cultivation, and the 1,900,000 bales raised in 1893 sold for $66,500,000, while the 900,000 tons of cotton seed, the product that enters so largely into the construction of the "pure olive oil" we use, brought $16,200,000. The cotton crop of 1893 was the worst in years, and yet Texas alone exceeded in value by the cattle interest, which was valued at $84,000,000.

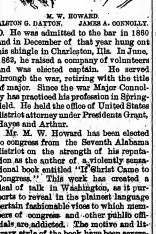
Waco is not only a great cotton growing center, but it is also a railroad center of much importance. Eight railroad lines, the Houston and Texas Central, the St. Louis, Arkansas and Texas, and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, enter the city, and there are other important railroads. Waco's growth in population has been very rapid. In 1880 the city had but 7,886 people, and in 1890 the population had doubled. When the cotton palace opened recently, there were 80,000 people in the building or on the grounds. The palace is owned by a company of Waco business men, and the intention is to hold a cotton exposition within its walls every year.

NOTABLE NEW CONGRESSMEN.

Three Members Elect Who Are Interested in Fat Stock Shows.

The recent political upheaval will bring many new and striking figures into public life, while many "old political faces" will disappear from their accustomed places in the national capitol. Of the new men some already have distinguished themselves, while others are chiefly interesting as having defeated eminent statesmen whose position in public office was regarded as impregnable. Of the latter class Benjamin Alston G. Drayton, who surprised the country by defeating Chairman William L. Wilson of the ways and means committee in the Second West Virginia district. Mr. Dayton is new to national politics, and his success in congress will be watched with interest.

William M. Springer, who has been conspicuous in Washington for 14 years, is another of the Democratic leaders who will be missed from the Fifty-fourth congress. He will be succeeded by Major James A. Connolly, a Springfield lawyer. Major Connolly was born in Newark, N. J., in 1849, and was educated at the academy in Chesterville,



M. W. HOWARD. ALSTON G. DAYTON. JAMES A. CONNOLLY.

O. He was admitted to the bar in 1880 and married a daughter of that pure and upright statesman, Lyman Trumbull.

Mr. Howard is only 31 years old, is over 6 feet tall and powerfully built. He is an orator and lives at Fort Payne, Ala. He was a member of the Democratic national convention of 1892, but is now a Populist.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is so especially characteristic department of science, as it exerts so material an influence on the health of the organs of the body. The nerve force is the motive power of the heart and every other organ of the nerves as the motive organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the energy necessary to assure their health. The importance, therefore, of the nerves, and many organs of the bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the following nerve specialists, the nerve system is the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels into immunocentric, while the numerous lifesustaining supply the heart, lungs and stomach. Dr. Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. D., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries and theories of his life are embodied in his new work on "The Nervous System," which contains a large amount of valuable brain and nerve food, impressed on the reader's mind all concerning and many organic difficulties arising from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these diseases is testified to by thousands in all parts of the country.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the symptoms instead of the cause of disease. The noted specialists, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. Mr. Wilson is a valuable acquisition to any community and we trust he will locate here.

East Grand Forks Circle: T. J. McAdam is looking after collections for the Weber Brewery. Tom, besides looking after lucre, keeps an eye open for empties—both in the case and keg line. At Plack, N. D., of Bohemian settlement, he found six kegs of malt which had not been tapped. The malt had been ordered for a Fourth of July picnic, but owing to the stringent prohibition laws the malt was not used, but piled up in the rear of a meat market, and from exposure to the sun and inclement weather the malt became stale. In the yard were half a dozen pigs. Tommy wanted the kegs and a puppy thought struck him. He poured the contents of the kegs into a trough, and the pigs fought each other in an effort to get the malt. Tom says inside of twenty minutes the pigs were beastly drunk, and their actions were amusing. The proprietor of the meat market is expecting to come out and seeing the condition of his hogs decided that they had an attack of cholera, and calling his assistant decided to kill them before they died. Tom says the entire population turned out to see the pigs, and if he had not explained the situation the hogs would have been killed. Tom's description of the hogs as they tried to walk is amusing. Several of the Bohemians present threatened to kill Tom, but when he explained that he was from East Grand Forks they overlooked everything, and actually left upon his neck.

Judge Ives and The Grand Jury.

Ament Judge Ives' redhot roast of the grand jury, the Novman County Herald says:—Wintever the legal aspect of Judge Ives' action in discharging the grand jury at Crookston last Monday for failing to return indictments against keepers of gambling houses and houses of ill fame at Crookston and East Grand Forks and against the officers of these cities for allowing the same to exist, the judge merits the praise of all law abiding citizens for his firmness and courage in taking the stand he did. If the jury had sufficient evidence to indict as averred by the judge and failed to do so their disregard was most proper and the rebuke which the judge admulstered was well deserved.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

WARLIKE.

Such Seems the Situation at Thief River Falls in Re The Jones-Meehan Mill Imbroglio.

Sweet-winged peace does not seem to be brooding doveslike over the village of Thief River Falls, if we can piece any dependance in the following report in the Minneapolis Evening Journal of Monday. The Journal says:

"The fight between the Jones Lumber Company, of Minneapolis, and the Meehan Boom Company, of Thief River Falls, is heating up to a pitch where blood-shed is momentarily expected. The woodmen and workmen of both companies are sleeping on their arms in momentary expectation of an assault.

Ray P. Jones was seen in his office in the Lumber Exchange this afternoon and admitted that there was considerable feeling against his company up there. It seems that in spite of the fact that the Meehans have no documents or reliable proof to establish their ownership of the land in question they are pushing their claim at Washington through a Minneapolis lawyer. Mr. Jones said:

"Their object is evidently to delay our entrance, or the entrance of any other concern, into that territory as long as possible. The transaction by which the land was purchased from Mooneday, the Indian chief, by our company, has been ratified by the government, and only a technical point in law has yet to be settled by the attorney-general before our title to the land in dispute will be established. The federal authorities have simply requested us to wait for a few days before assuming possession, in order that the government may ascertain just how far its jurisdiction goes in the matter."

The latest development at Thief River is the erection of a house by the Meehan lumber people, directly between the Jones mill and the river, in such a position that, in order to run logs down to the mill, it would have to pass directly through the house. This will bring the issue, if it comes.

Mr. Jones stated that there was plenty of room for four companies to do profitable business in that district. As matters now stand the settlers who have logs on their land in the vicinity have but one market to which they can sell and that is the Meehan company. They say just what the Meehan company sees fit to pay and naturally the monopoly stands in the way who is to have such a snap as this spoiled by competition.

Mr. Jones received a telegram from Senator Washburn Saturday evening in which he stated that the crisis was being put through speedily and that Congressmen Hoen, Pitcher and Senator Washburn were looking after it and he did not doubt that the confirmation of the Jones title would be granted.

Gen. Merritt, at army headquarters, St. Paul, has not heard a word of any trouble at Thief River Falls, and does not anticipate a call for troops there.

A Big Railroad Project With One Terminus on the Red River.

Duluth, Mesaba & Northern Road Building This Way —Lively Fight.

A Line of Whale Back Barges For the Red River in Connection.

(Grand Forks Herald.)

DULUTH, Minn., Dec. 17.—Owners of the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern railroad have in process of completion a plan for the extension of the main line in two branches, which will probably be the biggest thing in the railroad construction in the state for some time to come. As it now stands the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern is practically the iron ore road, although it handles some small amount of east bound lumber and togs to this city, but the new project will introduce a new figure in the transportation routes of the northwest, and means the locking of ores by the three great hubs—Hill, Van Horne and Rockefeller—in the struggle for territory, the like of which this section has never witnessed. The plan calls for two great branches of the road, reaching out into different sections of the northwest, and will make the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern road a wheat and lumber road of no small pretensions. It means the construction of approximately 400 miles of road within the borders of Minnesota, the northern division reaching the northern boundary of the state at the southeast corner of Lake of the Woods, and the western division resting on Red River of the North near East Grand Forks. The northern division will be met at the boundary by a Canadian company, to be called the Winnipeg & Southern, but in reality a part of the harmonious whole, for the main line is in the Saskatchewan country, which will invade alike the dominions of Hill and Van Horne. Besides tapping the greatest tracts of virgin white pine now on the American continent south of the boundary, the western division will ultimately push on northwestward through Dakota but the Red River is its present objective point. Upon the Red River still a third company will place a lot of light tow barges of the whaleback type. Plans and specifications for the boats have already been prepared and they will be in readiness by the time the road is ready to receive cargoes, perhaps even before. It can be stated upon excellent authority that the plans have been decided upon, a portion of the surveys made and financial arrangements perfected. That part of the project which relates to the northern division is in reality the carrying out of the plans which were laid out for the Duluth & Winnipeg by W. H. Fisher, but which were cast aside peremptorily when the Canadian Pacific management assumed control. Several years ago before the present management of the Duluth & Iron Range was in power, some of the officials asked of the directorate authority to run a preliminary or exploration survey from the St. Louis river northward into the northwest corner of the state, but permission was not granted and the field was left for occupancy by others.

The Bal Masque.

The masquerade ball given by a number of our young society people at G. A. R. hall on Tuesday evening, was a nice affair in every way. The costumes were unique and tasty and so perfect were the disguises of most of 'em that a fellow might be talking to his own grandmother and not once suspect it. There were lords and ladies of high degree, shepherds and shepherdesses, jolly Tuck tars and lubberly landsmen, a Topsy, a Goddess of Liberty, and various and sundry other personages too numerous to mention. Both socially and financially the event was a great succeee.

At the regular meeting of Crookeston Lodge, No. 141, A. F. and A. M., on Monday evening, the following brethren were duly elected: W. M., Tom Morris; S. W., A. C. Cowing; J. W., W. G. Lytle; Treas., E. M. Walsh; Sec., H. R. Robertson.

NEW MONEY MEASURE

SUBSTITUTE FOR THE CARLISLE BILL IN THE HOUSE.

Changes Made to Meet the Objections of Its Many Opponents—Two Important Features, One of Which Allows National Banks to Continue as at Present.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—After conference between the Democratic members of the house committee on banking and currency and with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, Mr. Springer introduced a substitute for the Carlisle currency bill. It is substantially a new measure, although some of the sections of the original measure are retained in the new bill. Two very important features appear for the first time in the substitute. The main one will have the effect of allowing the national banking system to run along, without an arbitrary provision that the banks must organize under the new system. The original Carlisle bill contemplated that all national banks must reorganize under the new plan. This would have required them to surrender the government bonds which now constitute the base of their circulation; but the substitute does away with the imperative change. If national banks wish to continue to hold their United States bonds and issue circulation thereon, they may do so. But the fair that they will soon discover the advantages of the new system, and will therefore adopt it voluntarily.

Unknown Liability Eliminated.

The other important feature of the substitute is that it does away with the unknown liability of banks to guarantee the notes of all other banks. This feature of the original bill has been much criticized. It contemplated that if a national bank failed, its notes would be paid out of its assets, and the general "safety fund" made up by all the banks. But if the assets and safety fund were insufficient to pay the notes of the failed bank then the comptroller of the currency was to make a pro rata assessment on all the banks of the country. The banks said this prospective assessment shouldered them with an unknown risk. In effect it made them supply insurance on all of the notes of banks in which they had no concern.

In view of these criticisms the substitute will do away with the assessment plan. The "safety plan" will be the limit of the joint liability of all the banks for the failure of individual banks. They will, however, be compelled to keep up the safety fund by more rigid provisions than appeared in the original bill.

Besides these two main changes, there are many lesser ones which have been offered as amendments, but which have now been incorporated as a part of the substitute.

Decree Condemning Certain Secret Societies Has the Pope's Signature.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Archbishop Corrigan denied himself to reporters who sought to obtain his views regarding the condemnation of members of secret societies promulgated by Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn to a conference of priests in that diocese. Vicar General Farley admitted the truth of the statement that such an order had been promulgated.

"The Odd Fellows, the Sons of Temperance and the Knights of Pythias have been intended," he said. "The movement against secret societies was determined upon by the council of the archbishops of the Roman Catholic church in the United States held in Chicago in September, 1893. That council formulated recommendations which were forwarded to the pope who in turn laid them before a conference of cardinals which endorsed them, the pope thereupon affixing his seal to a decree of condemnation. Bishop McDonnell is the first to give the decree publicity and his course will be quickly followed by other prelates throughout the country."

ELECTION FRAUDS.

Eight Indictments Voted by a Chicago Grand Jury.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—Eight indictments were voted by the grand jury against men alleged to be guilty of election frauds Nov. 6, in the Thirtieth precinct of the Thirty-fourth ward. Three of the individuals are policemen. The action is the first fruit of the Civic Federation.

The accused are charged with intimidating and otherwise interfering with voters. Sufficient testimony, it is said, was heard by the grand jury which would lead to indictments of many others.

Sanipaugh Promised Marriage But Has Changed His Mind.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Dec. 25.—The jury in the Stein-Sanipaugh $50,000 breach of promise case was out six hours and awarded the plaintiff a judgment for $1 and costs. The jury decided that there was a promise of marriage, but here the obligation ended, for, in the minds of the jurymen, the plaintiff did not lead a proper life in St. Paul while under her agreement to the defendant.

DISTRICT COURT.

Various and Sundry Cases of More or Less Importance

As Seen by the Journal Court Reporter.

ADJOURNED TO JAN. 15, 1895.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

Osmund K. Knudson vs. E. M. Duffy et al. was the next case called. Wm. Watts for plaintiff and A. A. Miller for defendant. The parties live in Town of Huntsville and plaintiff brings suit against the road supervisor to recover damages on account of opening a road through plaintiff's land. A recess was taken shortly after the plaintiff began the introduction of evidence, and during that recess the case was settled by stipulation, allowing plaintiff $25 and costs.

Another damage case from the same town, an appeal from an order of the supervisors laying out a road was then taken up. W. Brink vs. town of Huntsville, is the title. Same attorneys as in the last case. Plaintiff claims that the proposed road will cut his farm in two, running between his farm house and barn, almost completely destroying a grove north and west of his house; damaging him to the extent of four or five hundred dollars, and of course, no benefit to him, and that it would be better to lay it out somewhere else. The case will not be completed until Wednesday.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The case of W. Brink vs. town of Huntsville, was completed and given to the jury at 3 p. m.

A sealed verdict was returned this morning in the Tessler-Marcheldon case for the plaintiff for $177.19.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The case of John Hawley vs. Campbell Soderberg was next called. Messrs. Calkins, Sharpe, and A. A. Miller for plaintiff and J. Walseth and R. J. Montague for defendant. Plaintiff lives in Ada and defendant at Fosston. This is an action in replevin; to recover a double seated surry, claimed to have been taken from plaintiff by defendant. Plaintiff and one John Peterson had been in partnership in the livery business at Fertile. Plaintiff sold his interest in the business to Peterson, Peterson afterwards sold out to defendant. After plaintiff sold to Peterson he rented to him (Peterson) the buggy in question. Then plaintiff came to Fertile with replevin papers and demanded the possession of the property, defendant hurried it off to Fosston, and have had the property since. The verdict was returned in favor of the plaintiff, for the return of the property if a return can be had; and in case a return can not be had, $40; and $25 damages if property can be returned.

The jury in the case of W. Brink, vs Town of Huntsville returned a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $500. The Board of Supervisors have decided to abandon the road through plaintiff's, and Osmund K. Knutson's land. Knutson has a spit against the Town for damage to the amount of $1000. It has been stipulated by and between the parties that the road order be vacated, and the two plaintiffs Brink and Knutson, be allowed costs not to exceed $70.

John H. Lee vs. Jacob Hinseon, was the next case to receive attention; A. A. Miller appearing for plaintiff and J. Walseth and R. J. Montague for defendant. This is an action on two promissory notes for $100 each, given by defendant to plaintiff. Plaintiff sold defendant some land, it appears that he represented to defendant that all the incumbrance on said land was one mortgage of $500 which defendant was to assume in addition to the two notes. It appears that there was another mortgage of $97.50 on the land at that time which was afterward foreclosed. Defendant after finding out about the second mortgage ignored the deal,

THURSDAY MORNING DEC. 20.

The Lee vs. Hinseon case was finished and given to the jury which body soon returned a verdict for defendant.

A jury was then impanelled in the case of Samuel Marin vs. The Garfield Elevator Co. J. Walseth and E. M. Stanton attorneys. This is an action in replevin. It appears that a little over a year ago plaintiff was the owner of a blind horse. That one Thomas Newby came to him representing himself to be the agent of the Elevator Co. and desired to purchase the blind horse; the agreement being made that if the horse suited after three days trial the plaintiff was to receive a check from the company for $60, or the horse should be returned. Newby took the horse to the Elevator Co. and sold him for $75, receiving an order to be paid some time later—when they had the money. The defendant claimed to be an innocent purchaser; that they did not know Newby or that he got the horse from plaintiff. The horse nor the check was not returned to plaintiff within the same specified, nor for a long time thereafter. Mr. Marin went to the Elevator Co. and demanded payment. They refused saying they had given an order to Newby for the pay and that order would have to be paid. Plaintiff replevined the horse and brought the suit to determine the ownership. A verdict for the plaintiff, declaring him to be the owner of the horse and allowing him $30, damages for the retention thereof.

The motion for a new trial in the case of M. Liston vs. Murray and Murphy was denied.

A jury was then called in the case of C. P. Hanson vs. N. P. Hansen, L. E. Gossman and E. M. Stanton, counsels. This was an action in replevin. It appears that in the fall of 1893 the plaintiff's son purchased a pair of horses, wagon and harness from defendant and took them to his father, the plaintiff, and left them there a short while and went to the pineries to get a job of work for himself and team and a couple of other men and teams. He did not return as his trip turned out contrary to expectations and his father had to take care of the property. A friend loaned young Hansen $100 to make a payment on the property, taking Hansens' note, and this note was endorsed by Hanson. In the following summer the horses were taken by Hansen, afterwards replevined by plaintiff and again rebonded and taken by defendant. Plaintiff claims a lien on the horses for their board and keep while in his possession. The case went to the jury about 4 o'clock.

An appeal from the justice court in a garnishee proceeding, John Merbride vs. C. E. Clark, defendant and Polk and Norman County Fair association, was taken up and argued. Garnishee's counsel moved to release the garnishee and dismiss the appeal. Motion granted. L. E. Gessman appeared for plaintiff and J. Walseth, for garnishee.

The morning Peter Mieland replevin suit was continued—one year in the state prison at Stillwater.

FRIDAY MORNING, DEC. 21.

A sealed verdict in the case of Baarnas vs. Johnson was handed in for plaintiff, that he is entitled to the possession of the property, in case a return can be had, and in case a return cannot be had, the value thereof, $150.

The Bank of Fosston vs. Ludvig Olson, was the title of the next case. H. Steenerson, for plaintiff and Ole J. Vaule, for defendant. It was an action on two promissory note for $160. The defense is "usury"; defendant claiming that he gave his note for $160 and received in cash but $150. The case went to the jury at 2 p. m., and upon convening at 2 p. m., a sealed verdict was handed in for plaintiff for $236.65.

The next case was exactly of the same nature, but the amount was $425. The title, Bank of Fosston vs. Even O. Onstad. Defendant claims he got $400 for the $425 note given. Same attorneys as in the last case. The case was finished and given to the jury about 5 p. m., with instructions to bring in a sealed verdict.

Those jurors who found it more convenient to go home over one or the other lines of road Saturday morning were excused and allowed to go. Euonah jurors were retained to try one case Saturday.

SATURDAY MORNING DEC. 22, 1894.

A jury was called in the case of M. M. Schroder vs. Matthias Beach, R. J. Montague for plaintiff and E. M. Stanton and DeForest Buckin for defendant. Plaintiff sues to recover $60, which she claims is due her from defendant on a rent note. In November 1892 defendant rented plaintiff's house at $8 per month, for the winter—six months. Defendant moved into the house and after five days moved out; paying one month's rent and delivering key. He claimed he could no longer stay there on account of the general unhealthy condition of the house, the damp walls and bad smell—noxious gases from the cellar. The jury returned a verdict for $6 for plaintiff.

A verdict for $420 for plaintiff was the result of the jury's deliberations in the case of Bank of Fosston vs. Even O. Onstad.

All the jury was then discharged until Jan. 15, 1895, and given an opportunity to go home and Christmas with their families.

In the afternoon at Chambers a motion to open judgment in the case of E. C. Davies vs. Red River Lumber Co. was heard. Motion was denied.

Motion for a new trial was made in the case of the Bank of Fosston vs. Ludvig Olson and Even Onstad. Briefs are to be submitted and decisions rendered later.

Court then adjourned until Jan. 15, 1895, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Ninety and 22 court cases remain to be disposed of. 32 jury cases have been tried thus far.

Those Court House yard steps make your humble reporter tired—in one leg, thanks to the ingenious design of our County "Dads."

Goes to Jail.

Minor Rood was brought down from Maple Lake last week, having been convicted of unlawfully fishing in the lake, and fined $5.00 or 20 days in the county jail. As sir prefers leg as it seems, he chose to go to jail rather than to pay his fine, and now languishes in that institution. He should have recognized the fact that he had done wrong and paid his fine like a man.

He is Not Crazy.

Word was received from Ada last week that "little Joe" Netzer was stranded at that place and acting rather queerly. He had been canvassing for some kind of an electric belt business and not doing very well, financially. His father went down there and brought the boy home, which seems to have restored his mental equilibrium somewhat.

Waked Up.

The announcement of his candidacy by Hon. S. G. Comstock seems to have caused a stirring up among the dry bones in Minneapolis, and the Evening Journal of that city indulges in the following wail in hope to head him off:

"Perhaps Mr. Comstock may be a little too confident in obtaining the support of the members of the Seventh district for the United States senate. It will be remembered that he was a candidate for congress last summer, but did not get the nomination because the Republicans didn't believe they could elect him. There would seem to be room for doubt whether after having turned him down for congress, they would be likely now to flock to him as a candidate for the senate."

Now the Journal should know, if it knows anything about Seventh district politics, that Mr. Comstock was not a candidate for congress last summer. It is true that he had many friends who were desirous to have him enter the lists, but Mr. Comstock did not consent to the use of his name in the congressional convention. The statement of the Journal that he was "turned down" is absolutely and unqualifiedly false and only made with a view to injuring his chances at election. The Journal is awfully afraid that the country will wrest the coveted senatorial plum from Minneapolis and take such a seasoning, understand way to accomplish its object. It seems to think it presumptions for the country to even try to get the senatorship away from Minneapolis.

HIS PLATFORM.

Hon. S. G. Comstock Decides to Enter the Senatorial Race.

HAS OPENED HEADQUARTERS

At The Merchants' in St. Paul and will Try Conclusions With W. D.

The request of the Minneapolis Times for an instantaneous photograph of the opposition to W. D. Washburn, which we answered in our issue of Dec. 6th, with the photograph of Hon. S. G. Comstock, has now been answered by the gentleman himself, who in the Saturday issue of the Minneapolis Evening Journal announces that he will make the race. The Journal says:

"The candidacy of ex-Congressman Comstock, of Moorhead, for the United States senate was announced last night. Mr. Comstock left for home last night, but will return Monday and will probably open headquarters at the Merchant's hotel, St. Paul, with Representative Dougins in charge.

"After looking the field over," said Mr. Comstock, "I am satisfied that there is room for another candidate and have decided to enter the senatorial contest. I am not fighting any other candidate, but have entered the race, believing my chances of success to be as good as those of any other man. I do not claim that either the state or Republican party owes me anything. As far as my canvass is concerned I shall make as clean and strong a fight as it is possible to make.

"I expect a hearty support from northern Minnesota—in fact, my strongest support. Then I have those in scattered localities who will favor me and give me their votes. I have received strong assurances of support from a number whom I believed to be Washburn men. The outlook is now very encouraging for me.

"I find a general feeling that the senator should come from outside of the cities, and I concluded to take the field. I have no bitter fight to make against Mr. Washburn, but if my services are desired in that position they can be secured, and I shall do my best to win. I do not enter the race as anyone's cat's-paw, but shall do my best to win, and I believe I can."

Stole a Sleigh-ride.

One individual, living not over 9,000 miles from the city, was hunting for the police on Monday, with a large chunk of carnestness in his countenance—bigger'n a claw of gum, all because he found when he took his horse where his team was it was not there—somebody had stole 'em. While he stood in open-eyed wonder at the goneness displayed where that team (ought to) was, but wasn't, he heard a jolly laugh tumbling out of an approaching sleigh, and a sweet voice came wafting through the air, "Hello! Joe, be this your team?" The while a pair of blue eyes were twinkling roguishly. He couldn't stay mad.

Yum Yum.

"Say, May-rye-ah," said he as the love-light beamed forth from his merry-Christmas, black-and-tan eye, as he gazed upon his best girl Monday evening, just before he took his hat—and his departure. "Say, Mi-Hah, I hope you will have a jolly Christmas," whereat sound like the popping of a champagne bottle caused our reporter to melt and run away.

MINNESOTA PINE LANDS.

State Investigating Committee Reports What It Learned to Gov. Nelson.

THERE WAS MUCH AMISS

According to Their View of Testimony—Their Recommendations.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 22.—The report of the pine land investigation committee has been filed with Governor Nelson. It is an exhaustive document, covering some 200 typewritten pages and embraces 16 chapters, treating of the following subjects:

1. Sale of stumpage.
2. Sale of hardwood stumpage.
3. Mineral lands.
4. Approval of estimates and appraisals.
5. Duties of surveyor general.
6. State scalers.
7. State auditor's office.
8. Estimates and appraisals.
9. Estimators and appraisers.
10. State treasurer.
11. Stumpage thieves.
12. Matthew Clark's relation to state auditor's office.
13. Frauds; who is responsible.
14. Work of the committee. Its results.
15. Financial statement.
16. Recommendations.

The vital features of the report are herewith given:

CHAPTER 1.

Sale of Stumpage.

The first chapter of the report covers 32 pages. In the outset the committee declares that from an extensive research the committee is satisfied that the sales, as a general rule, are conducted in the interests of the buyers of stumpage and rarely in the interests of the state. The committee charges no intentional defects in the laws, but nevertheless the committee believes that the state officers have been guilty of criminal negligence for the past twenty years in the enforcement of the provisions of the laws calculated to protect the interests of the state from the depredations of unjust sales.

The committee further states in this introductory chapter that it is in evidence that sales have been conducted in a manner to shut out honest bidders by allowing some to run up the figures, and, after filing their bond, allow it to expire by limitation without cutting any timber. Afterwards the same tract would again be put up for sale, when the honest bidder was not present. At the subsequent sale the purchase price would be at a greatly reduced figure.

The committee finds that all provisions of the permits to cut timber have been totally neglected and that Matthew Clark, chief of that department, failed to make proper report to his chief on the state of affairs, believing that the sales, where there was competition, had not been conducted fairly and honestly.

CHAPTER 2.

Sale of Hardwood Stumpage.

The committee has been unable to find any law under which the state auditor is required to sell hardwood timber from the school lands of the state. Auditor Braterman, when asked under what provision of the statute he was making such sales, replied: "I am afraid there are none, and have discontinued the sale of hardwood stumpage completely."

The committee finds that thousands of acres of school lands, valuable for farming, whose value was greatly enhanced by a thirty growth of hardwood, have been stripped of their timber without authority of law. That no estimates have been made, and that in but rare instances have the state officers attempted to estimate the true value of the timber. When a sale of hardwood stumpage was made an arbitrary entry was made in the log record in the auditor's office of "sale of the remainder of legality. By these reprehensible and ingratiating practices the school fund of the state has suffered the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars, and in the localities where these sales have occurred many settlers have suffered loss of taxable property.

The committee believes that the officials who have been guilty of these unlawful practices should be held to strict accountability, and suggest whether they should be prosecuted under the official bond.

CHAPTER 3.

Leasing Mineral Lands.

This subject receives a passing notice. In most instances covered by these leases contain a large quantity of valuable timber, which, under the present system, is either entirely lost to the state or disposed of at a price little short of a voluntary gift.

Under the mineral lease system the state is powerless to prevent its being robbed of all the timber on the land. Besides a species of blackmail is being fostered under it, leaving any one to take out a minor lease, even if no mineral exists, just to compel some one to buy him off in order to secure the stumpage.

CHAPTER 4.

Approval of Estimates and Appraisals.

The committee found that prior to Jan. 1, 1891, the law requiring that the appraisals and estimates should be approved by the board all sales of pine stumpage upon the school lands of the state, shall be submitted to the governor, auditor and treasurer, and such sale recommended by a majority of them, was entirely disregarded in the state auditor's office. For this reason the committee does not hesitate to say that, to their opinion, there was not one legal or valid approval of an appraisal or estimate and not one legal or valid sale of stumpage.

This conclusion is arrived at on the testimony of State Auditor Bierman and Matthew Clark, the clerk in charge of the stumpage record. Mr. Bierman, when asked if Governor Merriam had ever stated to approved any of the appraisals, said he did not remember and that this law would have been complied with so long as he and the state treasurer had signed them. Mr. Bierman further testified that, judging from the papers on file in the office the law in this matter had been ignored prior to the time that he became auditor. He admitted that he only knew from hearsay that Governor Merriam had stated to Mr. Braden that he knew nothing of the matter, and, since two constitute a majority of three, he had not presented or caused to be presented to the governor any appraisals for his signature. Mr. Clark also gave it as his opinion that the law of stumpage had not been complied with. The testimony of Auditor Bierman and Clerk Clark was brought up in the committee's room and the committee is of the opinion that the governor's attorney general should be prosecuted for failure to perform his duty in the premises.

Mr. Bierman, when asked if he had any number of estimates for those years had received the signature of Colonel Bolsford as a later date. He said that he was led to believe the matter was one of mere form only. Therefore the committee concludes that false in one thing, false in all, should cover this case. In view of this fact found the committee finds as a conclusion that not one of the sales of pine stumpage made by Auditors Braden and Bierman between March 7, 1888, and Jan. 1, 1890, was a legal sale, for the reason legal or valid approval of any estimate has been made by the governor, auditor and treasurer embraced in these dates.

CHAPTER 5.

Duties of Surveyor General and How Discharged.

The committee, after quoting the law relating to the duties of the surveyor general of logs and timber, says that, although the duties are so plainly laid down by the letter of the law as to admit of no misconception, yet it finds from the records in the offices and the testimony of officials made under oath that the provisions of the law have been uniformly ignored and that the state has suffered by the loss of thousands of dollars thereby. The committee found that the reports were badly mixed, and that the surveyor general, when asked to explain one of them, stated that he could not do it. The report did not show whether any thefts had been committed or not. The testimony developed that the deputies relied entirely upon the information furnished by the parties hauling logs, and that the marks on the logs had not "usually" been examined by the officials. Deputy Surveyor General Sinclair admitted as a witness that during the years he had been a common practice where the marks had been left off stumpage cut from state lands. He further admitted that the state had no protection against trespass, as far as the employes of the surveyor general's office were concerned. Several scalers testified that when they took the word of lumbermen to ascertain the number of logs cut state logs are not. They received no instructions from the office of the surveyor general.

As conclusions, the committee finds that "the surveyor general of the Fifth district is in every way grossly incompetent and unfitted to fill the important office he now holds. The committee reports that they were been able to find the surveyor general in his office, and were informed that he was seldom in the office. The committee believes that unless honest, intelligent persons are appointed to these important positions the interests of the offices are abolished the better it would be.

CHAPTER 6.

State Scalers.

State scalers are persons appointed by the surveyor general to scale timber cut from state lands.

Speaking of this subject, the committee finds that the practice of allowing employes of state officers to act as scalers of these positions is pernicious, and invites fraud and dishonesty. The committee suggests that the scalers should be paid for their honesty, and their terms of office depend solely on the character of their work. Deputies are a necessity, but should be required to give a small bond to the state, conditioned upon the faithful performance of their duties, and a penalty for the making of a false return therefor cut four years of hard labor none would dare to violate its provisions.

CHAPTER 7.

State Auditor's Office.

To the State Auditor—the land commissioner, as he is called—says the committee, we should look for the protection of the state's interests. The honest administration of the laws and a proper appreciation of the great responsibility are placed upon him. It is here more than in any other department, that we should have the right to expect that condition of affairs that marks the faithful, intelligent servant of the people.

On the contrary, we are compelled to say that here we find the most palpable neglect of duty to the least regard for the welfare of the state's interests, the most careless and unpermissible conduct of the business of the state, and the greatest display of either unpardonable ignorance or the duties of the office upon record, or downright official dishonesty.

It is in justice to all concerned that the committee says that this state of affairs is confined to no particular period in the history of the state auditor's office, but, so far as the committee has been able to determine, has been uniform and uninterrupted for many years.

"Matthew Clark's relations to the auditor's office, we believe, above a condition of affairs that no fair person can question should be called, and which, if not remedied at once, in the present time, should be taken up by you in your message to the legislature and the passage of a law recommended to punish the commission of such offenses in the future. We believe, through the failure of Mr. Bierman to comprehend the situation, Clark has been allowed to retain his situation in the auditor's office as a vantage point to the furtherance of his own real estate business. Mr. Bierman confessed his ignorance of the duties of the office upon his coming into office for four years, knowing all the time that he was there for the purpose of gaining information as to the duties of the office. The committee have seen no indication, however slight, and do not believe that Mr. Bierman was directly or indirectly interested in Clark's speculations, or that he received any pecuniary benefits therefrom. The committee believes that Bierman has for these reasons placed upon, and, as a proof, cite the appointments of one Wade as a state appraiser, who was totally unfit for the position, and who so after serving four years.

The committee further declares that the appointment of a stumpage clerk is neither necessary nor authorized by law, and should be discontinued at once.

CHAPTER 8.

Estimates and Appraisals.

After quoting the law and, giving a dr tailed statement of some witnesses, the committee finds that the work of estimating and appraising of state timber has been done in a manner which is practically of no value. Estimates were signed in black and filled out later in the office of the state auditor. Appraisers were sent out who saw or examined the lands only a brief while—they were to estimate. The committee states that half has never been sold, and there are grand doubts as to whether it ever will be. Carelessness is the iniquity of the whole matter.

The estimates are insufficient, and yet all the pieces of land were sold the same fall, when the worthless estimates were entered. In addition the committee charges that Sinclair was engaged privately by Clark, that the latter did not even put in the amounts reported to him by Sinclair, but much smaller ones, and that in this matter in relation to these fraudulent estimates was a deep laid scheme to defraud the state, which in reality has defrauded out of a large sum of money. The guilty parties should be punished, and the committee believes that the incoming legislature would be derelict in its duties if it fails to provide for the continuance of the investigation. The committee concludes by saying that Clark's testimony was unsatisfactory and vacillating, and that the ways of Clark, in the matter of false estimates and appraisals, are such as to merit the unqualified condemnation of the committee.

CHAPTER 9.

State Appraisers and Estimators.

Speaking of those important officers the committee says that instead of finding them to be men noted for their honesty and efficiency, the reverse has been found to be the case. And this condition of affairs has been the rule in the auditor's office for years. The committee finds little to commend in the work of these men, and much to condemn, and is of the opinion that they are able to injure citizens rather than protector of the state's interests.

The committee believe that estimators should be required to take oath of office, and give a bond for the faithful performance of their duties, and that no sale should be passed making it a crime to turn false estimates and appraisals of timber growing on state lands, punishable by long imprisonment in the state's prison.

CHAPTER 10.

The State Treasurer and His Collection of Stumpage Drafts.

The committee find that this disregard of law, so far as the handling of business connected with pine stumpage is concerned, pervades every department of the state government through which it passes.

The law provides that "if a party owning stumpage shall not pay the amount of draft within ten days after the said draft has been placed in the hands of the treasurer, the treasurer shall take possession of the logs in question and sell them, or, in lieu thereof, turn the draft over to the attorney general, who shall immediately proceed to collect the same."

The committee finds that this provision has been ignored. In pursuit of this finding the committee cites the fact that in a report by the treasurer made in October, 1895, there were $64,980.55 uncollected stumpage drafts, some of which had been placed in the office as far back as 1890 and 1892. This is loaning the state's money to the lumbermen for the use of their business, and the committee adds that it is rare that interest is collected by the state treasurer upon these overdue drafts. As a result, logs cut are manufactured into lumber long before the state receives its money for the stumpage, and, coupled with the fact is added the opinion that that the so-called bonds furnished to secure payment of the drafts, are grossly and notoriously worthless.

CHAPTER 11.

Stumpage Thieves.

"The option of this subject is a phrase that, so far as the state of Minnesota is concerned, should pass into history. It means the committee. What shall be said of the stumpage thieves, when public sentiment in every instance is child robbery and to whom falsehood is a stimulant and perjury a pastime! Some of these characters have already been arrested, others will soon be compelled to pass through the ordeal, and once in cases already in court and those about to be commenced.

In the accomplishments of these thefts these persons resort to various ways and means. The first step is to impose upon and to bribe the state estimators, and secure false estimates.

Then at the sale is stifled by the aid of their confederates in these transactions who combine for that purpose, and the section is purchased at a low quarter or one-third of its value. The next step is to get the surveyor general and get one of their own employes to scale the timber. Or, in lieu thereof, some one who will keep his eyes and mouth closed. The scaler does not scan on the landing. Then a small patch of timber, 40 acres or so, is purchased adjoining the school section, and party then proceeds to cut and haul from both pieces of land at the same time. Not one 6,000,000 feet from the school section and 300,000 from the other. The former is reported as coming from his own land and the latter amount is generously credited to the state. The committee has not yet collected yet the amount received by the blind scaler for his share in the steal, but his source of office depends upon the degree of blindness. We even remember that the insurance companies will not be charged that the timber thieves in the prosecution of their business generally were the cause of the great fire that swept over Hinckley and the surrounding country, burning up some 600 people, and destroying over a million of property; that in setting fire to burn the underbrush for the purpose of covering up their tracks and prevent the discovery of their thefts they committed a still greater one, that of taking the lives of 200 men, women and children, we are moved to say that during our investigations we have had this matter brought before us many times, and we have the testimony of one witness who swears positively that he was approached by a prominent lumberman to go and set fire to a section from which 6,000,000 feet of logs had been stolen and "make a good job of it." We may add that three different attempts were made before the section was satisfactorily burned.

CHAPTER 12.

Matt Clark's Relation.

Chapter 12 is devoted to Matt Clark's relation to the state auditor's office. The committee scoring Clark, who had charge of the stumpage records in the auditor's office and had also a private land business. The committee gives many pages of testimony, and adds that "in the judgment of the committee, the foregoing state ment of facts, which is substantiated in part by the with the testimony quoted, shows a lamentable condition of affairs in the state auditor's office and a very low estimate on the part of that official of what constitutes the duty of the clerks in the office to the people of the state."

CHAPTER 13.

Frauds—Who Is Responsible?

This chapter opens by stating that an investigation is started by the incoming legislature, and that at once in the investigation conducted by this committee the fraudulent acts of a short period of the work, viz., that every step taken, every contract entered, every leaf unfolded, has revealed new and unexpected depravity, until we may say that the whole investigations have only disturbed the slime that covers the pool, of crimes."

As an instance, the committee cited the alleged forgery of Clark's signature. It has been made by Auditor Braden on the line opposite his name of office to one S. Wedills, paid to this gentleman. It was discovered that the signature on the back of the voucher was a forgery. The committee further says that there was nothing less than a conspiracy to defraud the state out of this amount and that Matt Clark received the warrant and deposited the same in the bank to the credit of his wife.

Auditor Braden and Mr. Clark's testimony is partially quoted, and proves beyond question the charges of the previous sections. The committee believes the wrongful issuing and cashing of the individual check has been discovered so warrant a closer and further investigation into the matter. In conclusion the committee says:

"If the state auditor himself is to use the state funds for the purpose of paying his favorite clerk $600 for a worthless slip of paper, and the state's attorney of the state can, by such nefarious schemes as that put upon the state such rubbish and abstract the money therefor, or if the clerks of the state or private parties can by acting in concert, rob the state with impunity and no one punished for it, then may the honest law abiding citizens of Minnesota hang their heads in shame, and say to the world that we have come back the school fund you gave us, we have not taken care of it. The state auditor should be sifted to the dregs, the guilty parties punished, wherever they may be, compelled to refund their ill-gotten gains, and, if they property belongs to the state,

CHAPTER 14.

Results of the Work of the Committee.

As a result of the work of the committee the state is gainer by a very large sum of money. The following cash was already collected:

Minn. Logging Co.	$30,000 00
Staples & Miller Co.	2,000 00
Staples & Foley	7,500 00
Total	$39,500 00

In addition there are now suits pending in the courts as follows:

Rum River Boom Co., 4 suits, aggregating	$ 39,364 88
Smith, Carpenter Co., 3 suits, aggregating	47,938 68
D. Reynolds, 1 suit, aggregating	2,000 00
Wm. Livingstone, 1 suit, aggregating	20,351 23
F. C. Webber, 1 suit, aggregating	1,140 10
Powers & Dwyer, 1 suit, aggregating	40,000 00
Total	$187,284 88

In addition to these tables there are seventeen suits under way, in which the amounts involved will be large, and the amount involved in these are in the aggregate $395,076.64. This will bring the grand total of money recovered to the state, as the result of the investigations to the figure of $699,061.88.

As a result of the committee's work many who have been guilty of stumpage thieves all their lives have commenced to make true reports, and in stopping the sale of hardwood timber the committee has done a great service which will amply compensate the state for the money put out in the work of prosecuting the investigations. The committee finds that the robber has extended into every county in the state, not barring territory where townships are supposedly still untouched.

CHAPTER 16.

Recommendations.

We make the following recommendations, which we trust will meet with approval, and request that you will forward the same to the next legislature with favorable comments.

That there shall be but one surveyor general for the state, who shall be appointed by the governor, to be paid a salary, and all fees received by the state treasury, and all necessary deputies and assistants be appointed by him, and that all deputy surveyors general shall be required to make oath and give bond conditioned upon the faithful performance of their duties; that the neglect of the surveyor general to report the failure of any parties in complying with the provisions of law to cut, or failure of the state auditor to report the same to the attorney general for prosecution, shall be punished by heavy penalties; that the surveyor general, or treasurer and land commissioner be prohibited from receiving any fee or other consideration of the approval of estimates and appraisals, and recommendations of sales; that they shall keep a separate account of each, and that no stumpage shall be sold unless the same be recommended by the governor and one other member of said commission, that the governor have a sufficient appropriation to enable him to properly investigate the correctness of such estimates by the employment of his own to examine any of the lands proposed to be sold, or cut from, at any time he may deem it necessary to do so; that all estimates made by the state auditor's office, upon which valid permits may be issued, be cancelled; that the notice of sale be published as at present, and that it shall contain a provision that the official copy of the list of lands from which the sale is to be made, will be open to all applicants, by the state auditor at any time after the publication of said list; that there be but one sale each year, to be held prior to the first May 10; that a list of the lands from which the stumpage is to be sold shall be compiled by the land commissioner at least one month prior to the date of sale, and shall thereafter be published at least once a week for three successive weeks prior to the date of sale; that no description shall be added to such list after said date, and no stumpage shall be sold unless contained in said list; that each list shall contain a description of each tract to be offered, together with the official estimate of the amount of timber thereon; that copies of such list be furnished to any party applying for the same, with additional copies to be compulsorily posted in the auditor's county auditor in each county in which timber is offered for sale is situated.

That no permits shall be given to cover more than one logging season, nor more than one description of land, and on no one description of timber shall be made, and a separate log mark shall be used on each description. That the value of the worthless character of many of the bonds given as security for the fulfillment of the conditions of the permit, render legislation should be had regarding the same. That in case of the refusal of a permit a new bond shall be required from the assignee, the forfeiture not to be released. That no permit shall be issued except to the party in whose name the stumpage is purchased at the sale. That actions shall be instituted against all parties who have taken out valid permits for cutting timber on state lands and who have failed to comply with the provisions thereof, for the recovery of stumpage at the rates may have sustained by reason of such failure. That applicants be required to verify by affidavits an estimate of such cord-measurement, or less, if trees contains less, as now provided by law; that no cash to be taken before the scenery of state, or some, notary public in his office; that all such matets shall be signed, filled out and dated by the appraiser from the original notes made while upon the land described; that it shall show the days when he was actually upon the ground, and when it was filled up in the office of the land commissioner; and, that the appraisers be required to take and subscribe an oath and give a sufficient bond conditioned upon the proper discharge of his duties. That such estimates shall be bound in book form, with the date of filing of the auditor's office indorsed thereon; and all estimates of the stumpage shall be filed in the auditor's office. That no informational sale or appraisal in respect to standing timber upon lands in the state, furnished by any person other than an employe of the state, shall be paid for out of the state funds. That the state treasurer be required to see that the provisions of the statute in regard to the collection of stumpage drafts. That in the execution of all mineral leases the timber upon the lands leased shall be reserved to the state, and that pending action of the legislature, in order to prevent the wholesale leasing of land for the purpose of holding such timber, the state auditor decline the issuance of any mineral leases for mineral purposes. That the incoming legislature pass a stringent law to prevent the kindling of fires where cuttings of pine have been made, even by the owner of the land, under heavy and safe guards are established to prevent its spreading to surrounding property.

That all reports of the surveyor general as to the quantity of timber taken from state lands shall be based upon actual scale on the land, instead of upon a bank scale, as is now the prevailing custom. That the scale used by the surveyor general shall be the same as that used by the state as the full scale, making no deduction on account of rot or other defect in the timber.

That the land commissioner shall cause all permits, and the bonds accompanying the same, together with any assignments thereof, to be filed in the public office, and recorded in a book provided for that purpose. That the land commissioner shall keep a record of all instruments, documents and papers filed in his office, showing the date of filing and the place of record. All papers, documents and instruments coming into the hands of the land commissioner shall be filed by him, and, together with copies of all papers filed in him, shall be preserved as a part of the records of his office. That the land commissioner shall keep a stumpage book in which he shall state the number of the permit, the date of issuance, date of expiration thereof, date of sale, date of approval of sale, description of the land upon which the timber was located, date of appraisal or estimate, amount of timber on the land as shown by the estimate, value of the same, the name of the person making the appraisal or estimate, the price to be paid for the same, amount of cash paid, bonds taking, name of purchaser, amounts paid by purchaser, date of payments, log mark, date of making scale of timber cut and the name of person making the same, with reference to all correspondence respecting the description, name or address, date of assignment, names of bondsmen and date of execution and bond. That a form of permit, estimate and appraisal be established by law.

All of which, is respectfully submitted.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY,
Chairman.

M. J. McGRATH.
C. F. STAPLES.
H. W. LEAVITT.
A. V. EATON.
J. F. JACOBSON.

Mr. Donnelly adds on his own account that a law should be passed forbidding the sale of pine because of being in danger of fire and recommends that the state should be bonded to enable it to purchase the stumpage of its land under any and all circumstances.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW.

Unseasonable Weather in Many Localities a Check to Business.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Bradstreet's Review says: The volume of business continues small, as expected from avoidance of shrinkage within the month. Unseasonable weather continues to check distribution of coal, heavy clothing, shoes and rubber goods in the Northwest, South and throughout the interior. Western and Southern states, although at larger cities the favorable reports as to holiday goods business continue. For the great part the outcome of trade for the month will be regarded as at present weather.

Improvement in prices is recorded in only a few leading lines—wheat, copper and lower grades of shoes, which have been sold at depressed figures. There are nine important staples which are steady or firm—leather, hides, lumber, wool, print cloths, naval stores, cotton and pig iron. When one considers the list of staples for which it is found nearly equal to those in which advances and steadiness in price are given. Speculation is dormant, and sales of moniant are made only at small lots.

Business in wool is dull still and will continue so until after Jan. 1, when the new tariff goes into effect.

Jobbers and other wholesalers as a rule report commercial travelers off the road and that little is doing except to take account of stock. The outlook for trade after the holidays is fair, although larger Chicago dealers report more demand than for the corresponding time last year, especial, except among jewelers who have unexpectedly enjoyed a heavy trade.

An Indian Story.

Especially if it be a good one and full of useful information is always interesting.

I have a book beautifully illustrated, that tells most about the Indians and the northwest, and the miscellaneous scrap of one man from them in the country down.

It tells tales of the Yellowstone Park, the greatest wonder of the natural world.

For only 6 cents in stamps, and your address, I will send you the book.

My Wife is Nervous

Says many a man and too often he is inclined to blame the poor, tired woman who cannot ent or sleep, whose whole life is filled with misery because her system is deranged, unnourished and her nervous system exhausted. She needs a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles will enrich and vitalize her blood, tone and strengthen her digestive organs, give her a good appetite, induce her to sleep soundly, banish her nervousness and bring back her smiles. Mr. J. W. Robertson, of Greenfield, Tenn., says: "My wife began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla about three months ago and she is now taking her third bottle. She has been in poor health for fifteen years. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her more good than any other medicine she has ever taken. Her appetite is better, she looks better and there has been improvement in every way."

THE CHRIST SANKEY—You are hereby notified that on the 5th day of May, A. D. 1890, in proceedings in an action in the District Court for said county, pursuant to that certain real estate mortgage executed and delivered by the defendants Christ Sankey and Christina Sankey, his wife, to the said plaintiff, bearing date the 1st day of March, 1890, the following described piece and parcel of land, which is situated in Polk county, in the state of Minnesota, to-wit: Sec. 26, Twp. 149, R. 45, was sold by the sheriff of said county, at public auction, to the said plaintiff, the highest bidder for cash, for the sum of twenty-eight dollars and seventy-seven cents, and interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of May, 1890, such sale being made in pursuance of the power of sale contained in said mortgage upon the notice and sheriff's fees in twenty-seven Wholesale Shooting by a Negro Murderer in Attempting to Escape.

ONE OF THE VICTIMS DEAD.

Citizens of the Town Gather for a Lynching, But Are Disappointed.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 24.—Hon. William H. Fleming, speaker of the Georgia house, and Judge William F. Eve of the county court, have finished addresses to a mob of 300 citizens that are gathered around the county jail with the intention of lynching Jake Wiggins. If is believed the bolter counsel will prevail and there will be no assaults on the jail. Saturday night Wiggins killed a negro named Anderson Williams across the river in Carolina; he was tracked to Augusta by a negro posse and the Augusta police were told of his whereabouts. A posse of police surrounded the house in the upper part of Augusta and broke in the door. Wiggins with a pistols. Detective Joe Murray was shot in the head and is lying at the hospital, hardly wounded. Policeman Stringer was also shot in the head and can probably not recover. Policeman Wrona was shot in the leg. Mr. John Davis, a spectator, was shot in the region of the heart and died in less than an hour. The negro escaped, but a little later was held up by a youth named Jordan and finally arrested. During the melee at the house and the flight of the negro, when the fugitive was under fire from many persons, over 150 shots were fired and the man was slightly wounded in the left side.

RESULT OF DRINK.

A Vancouver (B. C.) Man Attempts to Annihilate His Family—Two Killed.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 24.—The most horrible tragedy ever perpetrated in this city occurred during the morning, resulting in the death of two, if not three persons. George Ashford, a laborer in the employ of the Canadian Pacific railroad, has been a resident here for the past two years, living with his wife and five children in the East End of the city. For some time past he has been drinking heavily. He returned home late at night and going upstairs woke his wife, telling her that her end had come, and before she was half awake he shot her in the head. Then the 3-year-old child was killed in a similar manner and the 9-year-old child was shot. The two boys were awakened by the shooting and escaped, giving the alarm to the neighbors. The fiend was captured.

ROBBERS THROW A BOMB.

Two Men Commit a Burglary and Make a Desperate Effort to Escape.

MUSCATINE, Ia., Dec. 24.—Two burglars who had blown open a safe at West Liberty made a desperate attempt to escape, but in vain. Immediately after the burglary they jumped on a westbound train, coming back at once on an eastbound train. West Liberty officers were waiting for them and hoarded the train. The desperadoes refused to be searched or arrested, and afood of the officers, the trainmen and the passengers. They finally stopped the train, did some promiscuous firing, threw a bomb at the side of the car and disappeared. A posse later surprised them in the woods, and they were arrested.

FOR LO'S BENEFIT.

Indian Agents Will Hold a Conference at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—A conference of the agents of the Sioux Indian reservations in the Dakotas of the Chippewa Indian agent and of several army officers in charge of agencies with the secretary of the interior, and the commissioner of Indian affairs will be held here during the first week of January. The object is a general conference on Indian matters and a discussion of needed changes and improvements in the Indian service.

Drove Quickly and Thoroughly.

STONE CITY, Ia., Dec. 24.—When the Milwaukee passenger from South Dakota came in four men went into one of the coaches, some distance from the depot. They used no revolvers, but had masks on, and they took each side of the car, which they worked in about four minutes. Nearly every passenger was relieved of a watch or pocketbook.

And He Met the Same Fate.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Dec. 24.—In Mcdowell county Charles Buffalo was shot and killed by C. J. Updyke, a prominent coal dealer. Three years ago Buffalo killed an Englishman named Maitland within a few yards of the same place where he met his death now.

Guests Narrowly Rescued.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 24.—The Hot Sulphur Wells hotel and natatorium near here were destroyed by fire at 3 a. m. Several guests had their row escapes and none saved any of their personal effects.

Boy Drowns Himself.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—An unverified report is current that Captain Dreyfus, who was Saturday sentenced to imprisonment for life for revealing French military secrets to foreign powers, had committed suicide in prison.

Photographed the Victim's Eyes.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 24.—In connection with the hunt for the murderer of Mrs. Manning, it has been proposed to photograph the victim's eyes as at that possible means of finding a clue.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

STORM IN THE BRITISH ISLES WAS VERY SEVERE.

At Least a Hundred Lives Were Lost and Heavy Damage Done to Property Both on Land and at Sea—Three Boats Swamped Off Stornoway.

LONDON, Dec. 25.—Reports received from various parts of Great Britain show that the gale is abating. The storm raged with the greatest fury all day Saturday. Telegraphic communication with Scotland is completely interrupted (while the wires to the Midland counties and Ireland are more or less damaged. There is hardly a town of any size but reports personal casualties and damage to property. Manufacturing towns in the north and west suffered badly. Roofs were torn off and chimney stacks collapsed, crashing through adjoining buildings and killing and injuring a number of working people. In many places the residents were during the prevalence of the storm. A number of fishing boats are missing. Three boats were swamped off Stornoway and all on board were drowned. Much damage was done to houses in Dublin and its suburbs. People in the fashionable suburbs are reported to be suffering terribly, their cottages being wrecked and flooded.

Afraid to Venture in the Streets

The ships America and Mary E. Marshall went ashore near Greenock. The Arklow, for Ship Island, was driven ashore in Scalpa bay, and has nine feet of water in her hold. It is expected that she will be a total loss. All around the coast vessels are reported to be Stranded or in Great Danger.

The ship Kirkmichael was wrecked off Holyhead and five of her crew were drowned, and being rescued with much difficulty. The County of Kinross for Hastlepool was seen off that port lying on her beam ends and apparently sinking. Her crew were gathered in the stern with life belts on.

The exact number of deaths is unknown, but it is stated that the list will not be much less than 100.

The American ship Knutsboe from Port Blakely, which had discharged her cargo at Belfast, broke adrift and sank a tug and damaged another vessel.

ENGLISH RAILROAD HORROR.

Thirteen Dead and Fifty Injured in the Accident at Chelford.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The Manchester express on the London and Northwestern railway, which was wrecked at Chelford Saturday night, consisted of two engines and 16 coaches, filled chiefly with people bound from Manchester for London to spend the holidays. The accident was caused by a collision with a freight. Thirteen bodies were taken out of the wreck, some of them badly mutilated. A number of those on the train had narrow escapes. All the officials except the fireman on the first engine escaped death, but most of them were injured. The second engine was derailed and overturned. Its engineer was thrown into a field, but was only slightly hurt. Aid soon arrived from Crewe, and the injured, numbering over 50, were attended to. Several of those injured will die. One carriage that was derailed by the force of the collision struck and completely demolished a signal box beside the line. A special train brought the uninjured to London.

RUSSIAN CONSTITUTION.

Draft of the Document Prepared by the Peoples Rights Party.

BERLIN, Dec. 25.—The Vorwaerts prints what it claims to be a draft of the new Russian constitution, which the people's rights party has prepared for Russia. It provides for an imperial parliament and a diet in each province. Each member of the imperial parliament, it is proposed, is to represent 300,000 peoples and to be elected by universal suffrage. The czar is to remain supreme head of the state.

COMSTOCK A CANDIDATE.

The Moorhead Ex-Congressman Would Like to Succeed Washburn.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 21.—S. G. Comstock has decided that he would be a candidate for the United States senate, and has announced his decision to be a candidate for the seat now held by Senator Washburn. He will open headquarters and make an active campaign.

Terrell Interviewed the Vizier.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 25.—The United States Minister, Alexander W. Terrell, had a long interview with the grand vizier, General Djevad Pasha, during which the question of sending an American delegate with the Turkish commission appointed to locate lots for the reported outrages in Armenia is stated to have been definitely settled. The result of this conference is not obtainable here, but it is believed that Minister Terrell has sent a cable message on the subject to Washington.

Medicine Will Get a Parish.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—The Rev. Dr. Edward Mayhew has made a complete recantation. He is no longer an apostle of the doctrines for preaching which he brought on the ban of excommunication from the Catholic church. His penitential season, which began Dec. 28, 1892, is over, and Archbishop Corrigan will soon put him in charge of a parish.

Maitland's Case Not Settled.

FARGO, N. D., Dec. 19.—A dispatch from here reports the settlement of the Maitland case, plaintiff having agreed to pay $31,000, adding that Judge McConnell will now grant a divorce. The case at Fargo has been dismissed and a divorce granted the defendant. Mrs. Hamilton can only obtain a divorce in the courts of Montana, and it is understood that she declines to do that.

JEFFRIES SECURED A VERDICT.

The Alleged Murderer of Miss Ging Held for Trial.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 25.—Harry Hayward, accused of instigating the murder of Catherine Ging Dec. 8, was arraigned in the district court on the charge of murder in the first degree. He pleaded not guilty, and his case was set for Jan. 21. The case of Claus Blixt, the self-confessed tool of Hayward in the matter of the crime, was taken up again by the court and reset for the same day as the Hayward trial. Hayward had lost none of his strange nonchalance as he came into the courtroom to be arraigned, and entered his plea in a manner which indicated that he considered the whole matter a little more serious than a joke. The arraignment was so planned as to favor a large crowd, which had assembled to see the event, off the trial, this caution having been taken on every occasion when Harry Hayward has been brought out of his cell. The general feeling, however, is more one of curiosity than of sympathy. Attorneys for the two accused men are exhibiting somewhat more of a disposition to get together. It has appeared up to this time that each man would attempt to clear himself at the expense of the other.

Erwin Will Defend.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 21.—W. W. Erwin and John Day Smith will assist Attorney W. E. Hale in the defense of Harry and Adry Hayward in their trial for the murder of Catherine Ging.

CHRISTIE SWUNG OFF.

The St. Paul Boy Murderer Legally Hanged at Hastlepool.

HASTLEPOOL, Mon., Dec. 24.—The hanging of Calvin J. Christie, or Charles J. Black as he was known here, took place at noon. His iron nerve remained to the last. He walked firmly to the gallows and smiled most of the time. He claimed innocence to the last and uttered a prayer, after which the trap was sprung and the execution successfully done. Christie was hanged for criminal assault and murder. His victim was Mrs. Lena Cunningham, wife of a rancher.

Sealey Plead Guilty.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Samuel C. Sealey, the former bookkeeper of the Shoe and Leather National bank, charged with aiding the bank President Baker in robbing the bank of $254,000, was arraigned in the United States circuit court and pleaded guilty.

GOMPERS DEFEATED.

Head of the Federation of Labor Is Now John McBride.

DENVER, Dec. 20.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor held its more business during the day than in any preceding day. There were some surprises in the day's action, the most important of them being the defeat of President Gompers for re-election.

The selection of Indianapolis as the next convention city was also a surprise, as was also the selection of Secretary and John B. Lennon, treasurer.

FOR LO'S BENEFIT.

Indian Agents Will Hold a Conference at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—A conference of the agents of the Sioux Indian reservations in the Dakotas of the Chippewa Indian agent and of several army officers in charge of agencies with the secretary of the interior, and the commissioner of Indian affairs will be held here during the first week of January. The object is a general conference on Indian matters and a discussion of needed changes and improvements in the Indian service.

END OF THE WAR IN SIGHT.

Japan Expected to Send Peace Commissioners to Treat With China.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—Now that China has appointed commissioners to go to Japan to negotiate for peace, it is probable the latter country will appoint commissioners to meet them. It is believed here that Mr. Mutsu, the minister of foreign affairs, will be Japan's chief representative. An intimation will likely be declared pending the peace negotiations.

General Long Defeated.

TOKIO, Dec. 26.—Advices have received here confirm the report of the defeat of General Long after hard fighting that lasted five hours. The Japanese are now about 10 miles from New Chwang.

Russia's Cotton Duty Increased.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 24.—The Novosti says that the council of the empire has sanctioned an increase in the cotton import duty. This has been done probably at the instance of cotton growers of Turkestan, who have complained of the competition of American cotton.

Lesnoff Acquitted.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 21.—Charles Lesnard, the Omaha railroad clerk, accused of murder in the second degree for the killing of Charles J. Leigh, a St. Paul man, during the big strike, has been acquitted. The jury retired at 4:30 p. m. and agreed on a verdict after spending a few minutes before it. Self defense was the defendant's plea.

Ex-Premier Gladstone Ill.

LONDON, Dec. 25.—The London Standard, having on board the remains of Sir John Thompson, premier minister of Canada, sailed from Portsmouth at noon, for Halifax. The gale, which prevailed Saturday has abated.

Dr. Preble Still Ill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The house has decided not to report the railroad pooling bill until after the holidays. Chairman Reed is reported to be very ill indeed. The physicians have given him positive orders to remain in bed for a week without [illegible]

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Monday, Dec. 17.

The bill to protect forest reservations, which has been a bone of contention in the senate for some time, passed by a good majority. The balance of the day was spent on the army appropriation bill.

The senate spent most of the day discussing the Nicaragua canal bill.

Tuesday, Dec. 18.

The discussion of the Cockrell currency bill was the chief topic in the house by Springer in the senate a resolution was introduced favoring the annexation of Canada. Senator Hill delivered a speech in favor of a silver coin, and Mr. Turpie continued his speech against the Nicaragua canal bill.

Wednesday, Dec. 19.

The debate on the currency bill continued uninterruptedly in the house. Messrs. Johnson (Rep., Ind.) and Kilgore (Dem., Ky.) opposed it. Mr. Bland, the silver leader, gave notice that he would offer his free silver bill as a substitute for the one.

Practically all the time of the senate was occupied by speeches on the Nicaragua canal bill.

Thursday, Dec. 20.

The debate on the currency bill was comparatively brief in the house, owing to the speeches in connection with the acceptance of the statutes of Webster and Stark. The speaker laid the Sebring seg. correspondence before the house and then, at 3:00 p. m., the house adjourned.

In the senate the only legislative business of any importance transacted was the passage of a bill making delinquent appropriations for the census bureau and the appointment of justice for the current fiscal year.

Friday, Dec. 21.

The debate on the currency bill continued in the house. The resolution for the holiday adjournment was agreed to early in the afternoon.

The senate was not in session.

Saturday, Dec. 22.

The house spent the day in debate on the currency bill, adjourning for the holidays at 5:0 p. m.

The senate spent most of the day debating the resolution to adjourn for the holidays. It finally passed and debate on the Nicaragua canal bill was resumed. At 1:45 adjournment was taken until Jan. 8.

GRAND ARMY ENCAMPMENT.

The Next One Will Be Held at Louisville, Ky., Sept. 5.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 21.—The executive council of the G. A. R. at its meeting decided that the 28th encampment of the G. A. R. would be held here during the week beginning Sept. 3. The exact date has not been fixed, but the encampment will probably begin about the 11th. This will be decided later.

The review of the Chattanooga battlefields occurs Sept. 9, and many who go down to the encampment will stop to go there also. For this reason it was decided to give the date of the encampment so that the two trips could be taken together.

In the evening the visitors were tendered a reception by the local G. A. R.

Confirm the Japanese Treaty.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The senate committee on foreign relations devoted the entire time of its meeting to the consideration of the commercial treaty with Japan, and at the conclusion of the conference decided to report the treaty to the senate with the resolution that it be confirmed.

Massillon Miners Defeated.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 21.—The Massillon imbitation committee made public its decision on the coal mining dispute between miners and operators. By a majority report the award was in favor of the operators.

Mrs. William Waldorf Astor Dead.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Mrs. William Waldorf Astor died at Cliveden-on-the-Thames.

COMSTOCK FOR THE SENATE.

The announcement made by the Hon. S. G. Comstock last week that he would be a candidate for election to the United States Senate was very gratifying to his many friends in the State who have for some time been urging him to make the race. Mr. Comstock is an altogether too modest a man to enter a scramble for everything in sight upon a moment's notice, so he took plenty of time to look the field over and having done so makes the announcement found elsewhere in this issue. Mr. Comstock is one of the best of men in the State of Minnesota to-day, a man of broad and liberal views and one of the greatest statesmen we have. He has already represented Minnesota in Congress, having been elected in the old Fifth District to succeed the Hon. Knute Nelson and right well did he perform his duties there. There seems to be a great desire upon the part of our legislators to elect a man from the country this time and in all of the state you can not find a cleaner man, a purer man, a better man nor a greater statesman than the Hon. S. G. Comstock. We believe that he will be elected also and we know that in case he does the state will never have occasion to regret its choice.

The speakership question is getting interesting as the time draws night for the legislature to convene. John L. Gibbs seems very confident that he can win hands down. Capt. Van Sant is not doing much brragging but sawing lots of wood, mending Dan Shell, who seems to hold the balance of power don't pull out worth a cent as both the others hoped he would do. Both Gibbs and Van are saying each to himself: "If I could only bust that Shell and save the pieces for myself, I would get there in great shape!"

The Democracy of Minnesota essays to act as push-finder for the national Democracy—that is if we may judge from the action of its committee last week. The committee met in St. Paul and issued an address to the people setting forth the causes of Democratic failure, and urging Democrats everywhere to make free trade, pure and unadulterated, its future rallying cry. Well, they won't have far to go if they do it, but will they do it? There is no question now of this desire, but will they dare to do it? The Globe thinks it would be the boss idea.

Duluth Evening Herald:—Senator Washburn is now hurrying homeward from Washington to look after his campaign. He sees the danger of his position. He knows well that he will be beaten, unless some extraordinary pressure can be brought to bear upon the members of the legislature. He is a past grand unster in the art of influencing members of the legislature, but it is very doubtful if he can employ enough influence this time to elect him. The Herald has not attacked Mr. Washburn personally and it has nothing to say against him. But when it finds that the sentiment of a large portion of the people of Minnesota is opposed to him, and that the prospects are that he will be beaten, it deems it the wisest policy to urge the election of Mr. Kinney.

The relation which price bears to quality in literature is made obscure by the Christmas COSMOPOLITAN. Stories by Rudyard Kipling, Wm. Dean Howells, Mrs. Spencer Trask, Mrs. Burton Harrison Alice W. Younger are interspersed with poetry by Sir Edwin Arnold Edmund Clarence Stedman and James Whitcomb Riley, while through the number are scattered illustrations by such famous artists as Remington, Tochi, Reinhart, Turner, Van Schaick, Gibson and Stevens. A series of portraits of beautiful women of society illustrate an article on The Relation of Photography to Art; a travel article by Napoleon Ney, grandson of the famous Field Marshal; one of the series of Great Pastimes of History, to which Froude and Gosse have already contributed, and half a dozen other equally interesting, go to make up the attractions of the number. The COSMOPOLITAN people say: "We might charge you more for this number, but, all things considered we give you better material, better illustrated, if we charge you a dollar a copy?"

COL. COBHAM POST,

Holds An Open Meeting And Indulges In A JOLLY CAMP-FIRE.

On Friday evening of last week which was regular post meeting, Col. Cobham post, after a short business session, was joined by a delegation from the Woman's Relief Corps, also one from the Sons of Veterans, and proceeded to hold a genuine old-fashioned camp fire. Comrade C. W. McKay, Dept. Junior Vice Commander being present pleasantly assisted his fellow comrades with reminiscences of the war. His talk also showed the importance of the Grand Army of the Republic—a grand army of brethren bound by closer ties than those of blood—showed the importance of the Woman's Relief Corps as a valuable auxiliary and indispensible aid to the Grand Army; also the Sons of Veterans, who will shortly inherit all there is left of the Grand Army of the Republic, and he urged upon the post the importance of fostering these institutions and aiding to build them up. His address was highly enjoyed by all who heard it and should do much to encourage and strengthen the various orders to whom it was addressed. Comrade K. O. Melby, of Ashby who is the commander elect of the post at Ashby related his prison experiences. He was captured and confined in southern prisons with Comrade W. H. Jenulaga, formerly of Col. Cobham post, a brother of Comrade I. U. Jenulaga and these two, with a brother of Mrs. I. U. Jenulaga endured the horrors of a prison pen together for a time, graphically related by Comrade Melby. Comrade O. P. Reene, of Col. George post, of Fertile told how he had picked up a star on a battle-field that had been shot out of a flag and upon call the commander-elect of Col. Cobham post spoke a few words. The post meeting was the most largely attended of any that has been held recently and augurs well for the future as the interest achieved, will, it is hoped deepen and result in a large attendance.

The Bank at Twin Valley.

The Ada Herald seems very much exercised over the fact that Losey & Buckingham, of Crookston, have established a bank at Twin Valley and awhile ago announced with a flourish of trumpets that Ada parties were invited to enter that field, would take the lead from the start, would do all the business in that line necessary and from that fact "the Crookston parties would drop it like a hot cake and not presume to enter the field," etc., etc. ad. lib. But alas, poor Herald, it seems to have reckoned without his host this time and this is what he says in his last issue: "Hans Burgess was down from Crookston, Friday, Tuesday. We learned that the Crookston parties who intend putting in a bank there are determined to go ahead." Well, what of it? Supposed those awful "Crookstun parties" are going to start a bank at Twin Valley. Haven't they a perfect right to do so? Has anybody a patent on that field that our boys will infringe if they "invade" its sacred precincts? From the great interest the Herald has taken in this matter one would infer that something of the sort was troubling Norby. We can assure him that those "Crookston parties" are energetic and able young men and will run a creditable bank—one of which the people of Twin Valley will be proud when they come to know the boys.

Sergeant-at-Arms.

Geo. F. Whitcomb, well known in this paper recently, is a candidate for sergeant at-arms of the House with very flattering prospects of getting there. The Alexandria Post News says of him: "Mr. Whitcomb has announced, to-day, that M. D. Fredenberg has withdrawn from the contest for sergeant-at-arms of the house of representatives. Mr. Fredenberg has many strong friends who will regret this step but he has his own personal reasons for it, and his withdrawal leaves the field to Mr. Geo. F. Whitcomb, who has been actively at work for some time and from all indications will be the winner. Although Mr. Fredenberg expresses no preference, his friends practically without exception are devoted to Mr. Whitcomb and will give him their active support. Mr. Whitcomb is one of Alexandria's oldest settlers, and has hosts of friends all through the state. As Senator Vice Commander and state delegate of the Sons of Veterans as well as in business relations he has met hundreds of politicos who are his friends and who are doing all they can to secure him this legislative plum. He is an active, energetic, keen-witted man, always pleasant and jovial and would make an ideal officer of the house and has the best wishes of Douglas county."

THE NEW YEAR.

Again the cycles of time have brought us to the end of another year and we are about to enter upon a new one. It is a custom nearly as old as time itself for mankind to enter upon a new year with divers and sundry pledges—made, in ninety-nine out of every hundred cases to be broken before this new year has fairly doffed its swaddling clothes. Better by far would it be to try to so live that it would not be necessary to have a swearing off place at the beginning of every year. The New Year! What shall it bring to us? What of joy, what of sorrow? Of all who enter upon the year of 1895, with such high hopes with each fond aspiration, not one can tell whether he or she shall ever see another New Year's day on this earth: and if not on this earth then where? If this life is to us all there is to it then perhaps a happy-go-lucky, live-while-you-do-live style is the proper kind of a life to live for it is true that humanity will find enough of sorrow without seeking it. But every thing in nature, both animate and inanimate teaches us that this life is not all there is to it. That we are not placed upon this earth the mere creatures of chance, simply to enjoy life and have a good time. The intellect with which the Creator has endowned mankind teaches us that man is created for some high and noble purpose, that he has certain duties to perform to his fellowman that the mere animal creation does not share. What kind of a country would this be if every man lived for his own selfish purposes only? Now as we enter upon the New Year is a good time to ponder upon those things and among our good resolutions to live during the coming year that mankind will be the better for our having lived.

Attention Old Soldiers.

If there are any who have not yet joined the post why haven't you done so? You do not realize the pleasures and privileges you are depriving yourselves of and will not fully appreciate it until you have joined the Grand Army of the Republic. Every old soldier should join some post, by all means.

Take Due Notice.

We are preparing a list of subscribers who are long delinquent to place in the hands of a collector on this list, or as soon thereafter as possible. The names we are placing first are of those who do not seem inclined to deal fairly with us. We have frequently said, we do not wish to cause anyone extra expense, but if we have to they alone are to blame, for we have given our friends ample opportunity to square themselves that any reasonable person could expect.

Speaking of Judge Ives' action with the grand jury, the Fergus Falls Journal says: "Judge Ives, of Crookston, has taken actually by the horns and is going to have the law respected in Polk county if such a thing is possible. For years East Grand Forks, which is in Polk county, has been a stench in the nostrils of the state. It is a sink hole for Grand Forks. When anything is so bad that it cannot be tolerated in Grand Forks it moves into Minnesota and has been allowed to go unmolested. We hope that Judge Ives will have the courage to follow this thing to the end. All law abiding people—and they are the great majority—will back him."

The Warren Register pertinently says: "The Democratic party has long boasted that it is the only sectional party in this country, yet it has not since the war dared to nominate a southern or a northern candidate for President or Vice-President. The south has furnished the bulk of the Democracy's majorities, yet it has not in over 30 years been represented on the Democratic national ticket. What will become of Democracy in the south, if the Republicans should nominate a southern Republican for Vice-President in 1896?"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's catarrh cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. How to Elect U. S. Senators.

On this subject the Alexandria Post-News takes direct issue with the idea of election of United States senators by the popular vote and says: "Several newspapers in supporting Mr. Washburn for re-election are advocating the election of United States senators by popular vote. They even claim that he was virtually voted upon at the recent election, or that at least, had he been on the Republican ticket, he would have been elected. The latter proposition is undoubtedly true, and we do not think there will be any eleventh protest on the part of the people whether the legislature sees fit to re-elect or not to re-elect him. Moreover we do not wish to be understood as opposing him; but we do oppose the idea of the popular election of United States senators, and to support it by claiming that Mr. Washburn was in any sense a candidate before the people at the recent election is absurd. Practically no one who went to the polls and cast his vote ever thought of Mr. Washburn as he did so, except his personal friends; he was in no sense better in the election and his candidacy cut no figure whatever except among the professional politicians. The people did not know Mr. Washburn in the campaign and they are perfectly willing to trust the election of his successor to the legislature.

"A favorite argument for the change in the law of the election of senators is the argument of bribery, but does anyone imagine that it is any easier to bribe a legislature than a state convention? If so we will refer them to the political history of our own state for an answer. Moreover it is a ruse to brand that the old codgers who framed the constitution of the United States knew what they were doing. They divided congress into two bodies, one, the house, to elected bi-ennially by the direct vote of the people and responde instituting every wave of popular sentiment and whether the popular movement is right or wrong, has its foundation on the rocks of honesty and good government, or on the sands of dishonesty and temporary expediency, the house is with the people whom it has to rank for re-election, as soon as each act is acted. If it does not so respond or misjudges the popular will the result is of recent illustration. The other part of congress is the senate and its members serve for six years, too long to be affected by temporary conditions, and they represent their state as a whole, not a popular majority but the state as represented by a majority of its legislative districts, their states as entireties and this is a direct recognition of of "states rights," so-called. This congressional adjustment means a great deal in our governmental system and should not be lightly attacked through prejudice. The senate in the past few years has saved us from several evils such as free silver and the original Wilson bill, and it is no more "plutocratic," "corrupt" or "aristocratic" than is the house. Its last nobility—but practice can excuse the senate of any crime worse than partisanship and in that it is not within gunshot of the house."

How to Live a Century.

First.—Live as much as possible out of doors, never letting a day pass without spending at least three or four hours in the open air.

Second.—Keep all the powers of mind and body occupied in congenial work. The muscles should be developed and the mind kept active.

Third.—Avoid excesses of all kinds, whether of food, drink or of whatever nature they may be. Be moderate in all things.

Fourth.—Never despair. Be cheerful at all times. Never give way to anger. Never let the trials of one day pass over to the next.

From 60 to 76 continues some active life and occupation, as the retiring from all this at that age often is the gravest mistake and is suicidal. On the contrary, rest as much as possible from 75 to 100. Avoid exposure to cold, as bronchitis is very frequent at that time of life. Rest abundantly. One onght thus to attain 100 years.

The Cause of Bowen's Death.

To California.

If you are going to California to remain for the winter, take the Northern Pacific and Shasta route, and go comfortably in warm, double windowed, vestibuled trains, having dining cars that remain with the trains.

You will see via this line the finest scenery in the United states. No other route to California can compare with it in this respect.—this is fact, not fiction.

Mt. Adams, Mt. Rainier, more than 14,000 feet high, Mt. Hood, Mt. St. Helens, Mt. Shasta, form a group of mountain peaks that can be seen from the cars, and constitute the grandest mountain scenery of this country.

The Norman county court house came very near going up in smoke last Friday night, by the explosion of a big Rochester lamp. Fortunately, (was it?) the blaze was extinguished and the noble structure still stands, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

The icy going of Friday and Saturday seemed to remind everybody of something—that is everybody who owns a horse and as a result of what they were reminded of the city blacksmiths were kept as busy as bees both days shoeing horses. It was simply impossible to use horses on the roads or anywhere unless they were shod.

Owing to recent unusual heavy expenses it becomes necessary for us to use extraordinary means to raise a little money at an early day. We have it on our books and if all who know themselves indebted to us will simply do by us as they would wish to be dealt by, it will save us needless trouble and expense. We do not ask our friends to deprive themselves of food and clothing to pay us, but we do ask them to imagine themselves placed as we have been and simply do by us as they would wish to be done by. A little money we must and WILL have however.

Capt. B. F. Zarrecher with comrades McKay and Kelly represented Col. Cobbana post at the camp-fire at Ada. Many more would have gone down if the trains run so that they could go and return the same day. As it is they would be obliged to lose more time than they could afford besides being obliged to remain over night.

On Friday Eben Lancaster's back was observed coming up Robert street on the run without a driver. They turned at the corner of Main and kept on toward the stable. At the corner of Second street, however they encountered Ed. Rolston, who seemed to be standing in the street on purpose to have some team run over him, spoke right out in meeting nod the team stopped to argue the point—and were captured and taken back to the cab stand to await the arrival of their regular driver.

The report of the work done by the Women's Relief Corps rendered by that body to the Post at its last meeting shows conclusively the value of that body in the work that the Grand Army of the Republic was organized to accomplish. If any who heard that report have ever regarded the Corps as a sort of a fifth wheel they must have had that idea pretty effectually knocked out of them. The Corps is a very efficient auxiliary to the Grand Army Post, and as such should be fostered and encouraged by the Post in every possible way.

Last season a farmer living near Minneapolis expended over $200 for manure, hauling from the city out to his farm, a distance of five or six miles. What would our farmers think if they were obliged to do that with Red River Valley soil? How many of them ever use what they make on their own farm? That Hennepin county farmer claims to have made money in his deal and if he did, does it not contain a hint to other farmers? It is true that our soil is very fertile naturally and does not require as much coaxing as some but it is also true that it will not stand slip-shod methods of farming and still pay big profits.

No farmer in this country should fail to take his local paper and at least one agricultural journal. No matter how many papers he is now getting his list should not be considered complete if it does not contain the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and that excellent agricultural paper, the Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn., both of which can be had one year for the small sum of $1.50. Of a former Crookston boy the Ada Index says:—"B. F. Ashelmnn, who has conducted the well-known west side jewelry store for the last eleven years, sold his business last Saturday to Fred Lanctot, of Crookston. Mr. Lanctot has been with us for the last six months and during that time has earned the reputation of being a first-class workman and one whom the public may depend upon in every respect. He has a thorough knowledge of the business and in placing orders for new goods, will endeavor to select such as will please and merit your patronage. Mr. Ashelman will devote his time in the future entirely to the cash register business which it now demands owing to the rapid increase in trade of the last two months."

If any of our readers have failed to get satisfactory profits from horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, bees, fruits, grain or vegetables, they should commence at once and read every number of the Farm, Stock & Home during the coming year. If ordered in connection with this paper its cost will not befelt. [36-40]

John Bauman's sorrel team took fright while in front of the postoffice last Saturday morning and made off at a lively run, with empty sleigh, turning the corner at Second street and making west for home. Running around the house, they were apparently unscathed with the length of their run and so started back on the opposite side of the railroad track. Before going much further, however they were held up. Fortunately no damage was done and no one hurt.

AT NIGHT IN A COACH

A SHORT RANGE STUDY OF A CAR LOAD OF RAILROAD PASSENGERS.

The Stout Man Who Would Play Cards. The Talkative Boy Who Cried When Weakened by the Lanky Youth With the Nightmare—Politics En Route.

I know of no better opportunity of studying humanity at short range than is taken in a nocturnal railway ride in a day coach. Not long ago I had occasion to go from a station in the central west to Chicago. Knowing time of trains on the railroad I was to travel over from my starting point to the metropolis of the lake region is about eight hours, and I found it impossible to get away before midnight. When I boarded the train at that hour, I learned that all the lower berths in the sleeping cars were already taken, and as I dislike exceedingly to climb to my roof I decided to make the journey in one of the coaches.

HESSEN IN A TAILOR MADE SUIT.

My fellow passengers were a diversified lot. Among them were four men who were beguiling the miles with cards. Whist was the game, and the players were seated together facing one another, while two of three others were intently watching the play. There was not much talking, and what there was was carried on in undertones, but it was altogether too much for a woman of middle age, dressed in a tailor made suit and wearing a standing collar and four-in-hand tie, who was seated near by. She suddenly arose and stalked up the aisle to the players.

"Gentlemen," she said, "I do not desire to be intrusive, but I do wish to go to sleep, and I'm certain I can't get a single wink of sleep while you continue to play whist. I think card playing in such a place is all wrong anyway, but I can put up with it without a word if it doesn't interfere with my personal comfort. But if you keep on it will interfere, and I must respectfully ask you to stop."

None of the players dropped their hands in amazement, but the fourth, a stout man of an evidently phlegmatic temperament, held his the more firmly in his grasp, and without looking up said:

"Say nothing, boys, but maw wood. Pick up your cards and keep right on."

If in behalf to silence the woman in the tailor made suit that way, he was vastly mistaken, as he found out a moment later. His indifference as to whether she should sleep or not aroused to drive her frantic, and she poured out a perfect flood of indignant eloquence against the practice of train card playing in general and the current game in particular. Finally she paused for breath, and with flashing eyes asked if her protest was going to be heeded, winding up with the fervent declaration that, in her opinion, the stout man was "no gentleman."

"Madam," he said, leaning back and gazing at her as an entomologist would survey a new and interesting bug, "you are the most extraordinary woman I ever met up with. But do not excite yourself over our little game. I might express regret that its continuance would prevent your slumbering, but inasmuch as I feel no such emotion I shall not say any such thing. I shall rather tell the truth, which is that my whole idea in playing cards and talking at this time is to keep you awake. I should have hesitated in saying so in the presence of so many persons if you had not brought the matter to a climax by your protests, but I divine, by the profile of your nose, that you are a confirmed old victim of insomnia, and if you were once allowed to sleep every one else in the train must inevitably be obliged to follow suit. I was therefore in the spirit of self sacrifice that I persuaded my friends to agree to play all night. You see, our talking is so low that it will disturb no one but you, and if you keep awake it will prevent you from snoring, and the effect in the one case should equally. We are willing to sacrifice ourselves somewhat for others, and you ought to do the same, or we are. So I would advise you to calm yourself and cease your fault-finding."

"WON'T YOU BE SO KIND AS TO SMILE?"

Finally all the passengers were deeply interested in the controversy, some of them agreed with the woman and others with the stout man, and the discussion arose all over the car. As for the woman, she seemed to have had enough, for with an angry red spot on each cheek she returned to her seat and smuggled down, to slumber if she might. In this she was eminently successful, and at the same time she vindicated the stout man's judgment as to her nose, for in a half hour or so she began to snore like a low pressure steam engine. Of course there was a general laugh all over the car when this snores were heard.

Considerable interest had been manifested by their fellow travellers all this time in a young man and woman who sat near the center of the car. They looked very much like bride and groom, for she wore a hat trimmed with lavender feathers and carried a pair of white gloves in her hand, while he wore a rather bedraggled knot of flowers in the lapel of his frock coat and sported a white necktie. They had been talking constantly, in low tones at first, as if afraid they would be overheard, but as time passed they grew less and less shy, and at last seemed to forget themselves completely.

"Won't your Uncle John be s'prised to know we're married!" queried the groom loud enough for all the other wakeful passengers to hear just as the train pulled up at a station.

The laugh that greeted this question mortified the loving couple immeasurably and awakened a small boy who had hitherto been unnoticed. He at once awakened his mother.

"What's they all laffin at, ma?" he questioned. "Ma, what is it they're so funny? Tell me."

Of course she couldn't tell him, not knowing, but she tried to hush him, first by coaxing and then by threatening to "tie him up."

"Ho!" said the youngster, "you hain't got no string here. I've got to talk, ma. Where be we now? How soon will we git to Chicago? Be we goin a mile a minute now, ma?"

The poor woman was almost as much mortified over her son's loquacity as the bride and groom had been over their "break," as it had been termed by the stout man, but the man, instead of adding to the mother's discomfiture as he had to those of the newly wedded, set her at ease by giving up his game and devoting himself to the child. By some process known only to the stout man himself the boy was quickly quieted, and it seemed likely that a general silence, broken only by the snores of a half dozen sleepers with noses like that of the woman in the tailor made suit, would soon settle over the car.

Just at this time, however—it was not far from 3 o'clock—two men near the front door got into a wrangle over politics. One of them was satisfied that the recent "landslide" meant the beginning of interminable power on the part of the Republicans, who, he said, would quickly end the hard times and restore business of all sorts to permanently regular activity.

The other was equally confident that the landslide was only another indication of universal insanity, and that it presaged business disasters small as had never before been experienced by the United States. The stout man tried to quiet them, but they were not as tractable as the boy, and they continued to quarrel until both had reached a speech-less stage of indignation.

It was 4 o'clock by this time, and there was a general cessation of conversation, together with an increase of nasal music for the space of half an hour. Suddenly a long and lanky youth, who had been sleeping through it all, straightened up convulsively and gave vent to a blood curdling war whoop. Instantly every eye in the car was shocked. "The small boy began to cry, and the woman in the tailor made suit called loudly for "Help!" and "Water!" Even the lanky youth, whose eyes were staring and who was plainly suffering from what the stout man diagnosed as a nightmare, exerted his lungs to the utmost. Then he awoke with a start, and realizing the situation began to apologize profusely to all the other passengers.

"I know I was a good many kinds of a fool," he said, "when I ate that concentrated rabbit last night."

This restored good nature all round so every one save the woman in the tailor made suit, but she was quickly silenced by a few remarks from the stout man, who, with his friends, began a new game of whist. The last hour of the night, the weather became a general topic of talk, and there was no discussion of opinion between a Chicago kid and a New Yorker as to the relative size of the two cities as far as the United States was two below or Manhattan remaining before the train rolled into the terminal station was slow in coming.

Miss Blanche Clark
Duluth, Minn.

"Seven years ago our daughter Blanche, then four years of age, had a humor break out on her hands and face, which our physician pronounced eczema. Shortened to drive no benefit at all and if the cold air reached her face or hands, they would swell up and look all most purple, and headed blisters would form and break, discharging a watery substance and that attended it would drive the child nearly wild. Unless we excused her little hands she would tear patches of skin from her face and hands. The itching was intense. We tried many doctors and many remedies and at last gave up the case as hopeless. But in the summer of '91 our daughter Cora tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, to cure a boil on her face near the nose

Thursday evening witnessed another one of those midwinter thunder showers—without the thunder, for which Northern Minnesota is becoming noted. Flac refreshing showers fell during the evening turning to snow before morning, but not much snow. Friday morning dawned cold and clear with icy roads and walks.

The Rev. H. P. Fisher will preach to the young men at the Congregational church on Sunday evening. All young men cordially invited.

The holiday trade on Monday beat any yet. Looked like everybody had put off buying until the last minute and then pitched in to make up lost time.

Everybody who could do so seemed to have borrowed, bought or hired a rig on Sunday. If he did not happen to own one, judging by the number of rigs that were flying around all Sunday afternoon.

Christmas trees were indulged in at most of the churches on Monday evening, except the Methodist church and theirs did not get around until Tuesday evening. A jolly, good time is reported.

Santa Claus is a real, living, breathing personage, leastwise the kids—all of them who saw him walking about the streets on Monday evening, distributing presents, know that he is, for didn't they see him? 'Deed did they, and he was jest more than loaded down with presents.

On the 8th day of January the city council will elect a city justice to succeed L. E. Goseman and already there is quite a scramble for his shoes. The candidates so far heard from are John T. Watts, C. U. Webster, the outgoing county auditor; I. U. Jennings and, John McLean. The contest bids fair to rival the one that was had in the attempt to elect a successor to Judge Spendley. As the appointment can only hold until the coming spring election there should not be such a great scramble for it. We think, however, that the man chosen should be a lawyer. There should be at least one lawyer in that office.

In the still hours of yesterday morning, Dec. 20th, Death claimed as a victim Tollf J. Orvik, one who has been identified with this town for a number of years past. His illness was of short duration, he having been taken sick only last Friday, but the disease which carried him away, pleuro-pneumonia, is a swift destroyer. His death is the more to be deplored owing to the sad circumstances identified with the town for as thereby left orphans, none of whom are old enough to care for themselves. A brother of the deceased, John Orvik, of Halstad, Minn., was summoned by telegraph and arrived on the morning of his brother's death, too late however to see him before he died. Deceased leaves a farm, which is located near the Red River, and some village property.

BREAKFAST IN BED.

This Is the Way In Which to Enjoy the Height of Luxury.

There is nothing which gives one quite the same feeling of luxury and affluence as breakfasting in bed—that is, unless one is forced to do it. Then it seems merely an unpleasance. But when the woman whom unkind fate and domestic or business duties usually force to lay with the lark can lie in bed and have a daintily appointed breakfast tray brought up to her she feels that the final joy of existence is here.

Sunday morning is the best time for the daughter of toil to indulge in this luxurious habit. If she is a churchgoing woman, she may manage by having breakfast at 9:45. If she desires to be both pious and lazy, there are those who compromise by reading morning service in bed, and their method is perhaps not to be despised.

The first step toward enjoying this luxury is to have one's warm bath, hair combing and the like. Then slipping on a bath robe or a dressing sack, the sacker after luxury should slip back into bed, adjust her pillows comfortably and proceed to enjoy her breakfast. It should be an unusually dainty one and served with the most appetizing regard for appearances. The tray should be covered with a delicately embroidered cloth. The china pot in which the coffee comes up should be as pretty as coffeepots can be, the sugar basin and cream jug the very perfection of daintiness. There should be a little glass bowl of saigonette or violets, or a couple of carnations, or even some fragrant green geranium stalks. A bunch of grapes, dunkily purple or pink and opal, coffee clear as amber and fragrant as only coffee can be, toast, a slice of bacon and an egg or eggs boiled form a breakfast fit to serve on the pretty tray.

If the woman who breakfasts in bed will proceed to spend the rest of the day there, sleeping when she can, reading a little, entirely undisturbed by the cares of her household, she will ward off the approach of hideous old age half a decade.—Philadelphia Press.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS.

As Culled from our County Exchanges.

Thief River Falls Press: The scene quiet usually enjoyed by our people was disturbed to a considerable degree last Saturday by the turn of affairs in the Jones-Meehan mill site controversy. The Meehans, defeated in every effort from the start, except to delay Mr. Jones' enterprise and retard the prosperity of every citizen in the community, now think to still further postpone competition in their line of business by precipitating a conflict which can only be finally settled by recourse to force or arms. Without the least excuse for a title, except a lease from Chief Moose Dung, now reproduced by him, unapproved by the department or any of its agents and unrecorded anywhere, they have invaded Mr. Jones, premises and made pretended improvements. On Saturday a force of men were put at work building a small shanty at a point between the river and the ground staked out by the Jones syndicate for their new mill and exactly where the log chute leading to the mill from the river will have to pass. They also set posts and strung a wire fence along the entire river front to the junction of the Red Lake and Thief rivers.

At this proceedure our citizens became highly indignant and knots of men were congregated here and there discussing and discussing the situation and expressing their intense cordiality for the persons who are at the bottom of the diabolical conspiracy. Much talk was indulged in as to the advisability of joining strength and numbers and peremptorily removing all semblance of Meehan's improvements from the premises and thus saving the department the expense and trouble of sending a U. S. marshal here for that purpose. Forbearance and better judgment prevailed and the work was allowed to proceed.

Mr. Jones was at once notified of this action and he wired his local representative to take possession of the ground and notify all persons not to trespass upon his premises in carrying ont Mr. Jones' instructions his men was subjected to much abuse by the Meehans and an uprising was narrowly averted when one of the Meehans assaulted Mr. Jones' agent here. It would have required but a word from the Jones men and the Meehans with their improvements would have been pitched into the river.

At this writing everything is quiet on the fraction and the people anxiously await the arrival of Mr. Jones, when things are expected to be settled in short order.

McIntosh Tribune: The 4 year old daughter of Edward Eck, of the town of Chester, met with a very serious accident last Thursday. While the parents were out attending the chores, the little girl had come in contact with a hot stove, so that her clothes caughtfire, and hilirely burned off from her body. The body was so badly burned that it is doubtedful whether the girl can survive. Dr. McEachran was called to treat her, and if medical skill can save her, she will survive.

From the Grand Forks Herald we take the following flattering comment on Comstock's candidacy for U.S. senator: "Hon. S. G. Comstock of Moorhead, has announced himself a candidate for United States senator to succeed Senator Washburn. Mr. Comstock is one of the ablest and most worthy of Minnesota's public men, and his election would be eminently satisfactory to republicans in this state as well as hiroself."

Princeton Union: "Honest, impulsive and fearless J. P. Jacobson, of Lac qui Parle county, is always on the right side. He was in St. Paul the other day and signified his the proposed legislation this winter. he said: 'All this talk about the need of a primary election law is bosh. If the people turned out to the primaries there would be no chance for crooked work. There is no sense in saddling needless expense on a community just because a lot of 'stay-at-homes' failed to get elected delegates to some convention and raised the cry of 'crooked work and fraud.' I have got no time for such child's-play legislation as that, and I will do all I can to defeat it."

Fisher Bulletin:—Molde and Beaudet have sold out their butcher shop and intend to leave the city. We were informed that Mr. Sam Dainard had purchased the stand but the report has not yet been confirmed by Mr. Dainard. We trust this party is the purchaser and that he will soon open up for business, many of our citizens have been patronizing butchers in East Grand Forks and Crookston and if the right parties will take hold of the business here he will receive the support of this class of citizens.

The United States Official Investigation of Baking Powders,

Made under authority of Congress by the Chief Chemist of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., shows the Warren Sheaf:—"Ed. Slee: My brother J. W. Slee, of Spokane Falls, states in a recent letter that Mr. Selheim had shot a man in a saloon, and was to be tried for murder on the 17th inst. Mr. Selheim at one time owned the farm now owned by Jorge Lakia. Since locating at Spokane he is said to have acquired considerable wealth."

East Grand Forks Courier: Wednesday evening between 4 and 5 o'clock Joseph Halvorer, aged 8 years, and a genuine tough, while attempting to walk from the roof of W. R. Elliott's building to that of Sullivan Bros. missed his footing and fell in between the buildings. The space between the buildings at the top is about 12 inches, growing gradually less as you descend, until at the bottom it is less than three inches. Young Joseph shot down at terrific speed until his body became so thoroughly wedged in that he was scarce able to cry ont for help. His cries however were heard by E. J. Sullivan who after satisfying himself that the cries were those of some one in distress, commenced to investigate, and found the little fellow wedged in between the two buildings. After some thirty minutes' time had elapsed Ed. Sullivan succeded in getting ahfetchm thechild's leg with a rope, and he was finally pulled out. Had the little fellow dropped head first when he fell his extrication would have been a serious matter. The experience may prove of some value to him, but we doubt it, and the authorities some time ago should have taken the necessary steps to have placed him in the state reformatory, for he is a genuine Arab, nad apparently is neglected by his parents.

The Thirteen Towns, of Fosston says: We understand that Prof. H. E. Wilson, who has resigned the position of school superintendent at Red Lake agency, which office he has held for the past five years, has been granted a transfer to the superintendentship of the Kick-a-poo Indian Reservation.

Martin County Sentinel: Nearly every state institute is getting ready for an onslaught upon the state treasury this winter. There will need be brakes at both ends of every legislative committee or the great Republican majority will make a record that the other fellows will point to with a sneer.

Wadena Pioneer: Since Judge Rea, of Minneapolis, left the party to become a Democrat, ex-Congressman Comstock seems to have taken his place in the Republican ranks. At least, like Rea, he is now being "mentioned" for about every office under the sun. He has frequently been trotted out as a senator, and now someone has suggested him for governor in 1896.

The residents of Walker Brook met on Dec. 15th and organized their school district, which is No. 3, Beltrami county. Frank Vettiesou is clerk, Ole Jorgenson director and Chas. Johnson treasurer. School will commence on the first Monday in January, at the residence of Frank Vettieson, for a term of one month.

To the aged, with their poor appetite, feeble circulation, and impoverished blood, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a boon beyond price. Its effect is to clock the ravages of time, by invigorating every organ, nerve, and tissue of the body. See Ayers's Almanac for the new year.

There will be a SPECIAL SALE of PIANOS and ORGANS as well as other musical merchandise, sheet music and music books of all kinds, held at the Grand Forks Music House in Grand Forks, N. D., commencing Nov. 20, 1894, and continuing until Jan. 1, 1895. During the time mentioned sweeping reductions will be made in prices, affording a wonderful opportunity for the people of the Northwest to procure musical instruments of the highest standard at prices far below their actual value. In addition to the extensive line of new pianos and organs carried by this house, over 100 second hand and slightly shop worn pianos MUST BE SOLD. Among these are many instruments of high standard that have been used only a few months, which will be sold for less than half of their value. Any person contemplating the purchase of a piano or an organ or anything in the music line, even though not now ready to buy, will certainly find it profitable to attend this GREAT SALE. The cost of round trip railroad tickets for any distance under 250 miles will be REFUNDED to anyone who buys a piano at this sale. A complete list of bargains together with terms of payment required, will be mailed free to anyone who cannot attend the sale and desires to make a purchase through correspondence.
